WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLVII, NO. 50 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JANUARY 4th 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Penslar

Palatable Cod Liver Oil

An ideal Tonic and Builder.
Pleasant to take--no greasy taste. Excellent for children.
50c and $1.00

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

YOU NEED ONE
Hot Water Bottles
$1.00 to $3.50
Cherry Bark Cough Syrup
Cures Colds.
25 & 50c a Bottle
A.P.SIEVERIGHT
The Rexall Store

We Extend to All

The Season's Greetings

McCrum & Co.

Harvard Brown
The new color for women's fine shoes made in Russian Calf, laced 8 in. top, perforation on vamp.
FOR FALL
Price $6.00
Ramsey
The Shoeman

We Are Entering 1917

With a determination to give the best of satisfaction in STYLISH TAILORED CLOTHES.

We are very particular to fit garments to you, that look well on you.

ve us a trial, you'll be satisfied the quality and our little prices. arry a complete line of MEN'S SHINGS.

T. ROURKE
y Tailor and Men's Wear.
186, Walkerton, Ont.

One School That Merits the confidence of the public because of its High Grade work is the ELLIOTT
Business College
Toronto, Ont. We train young women to become skilful and expert stenographers, typists, bookkepers, commercial teachers, clerks, cashiers, or general office assistants in from four to six months and assist them to get positions. Winter Term opens Jan. 2. Catalogue free.
Yonge and Charles Sts. W. J. ELLIOTT, Prin.

SOLDIERS APPRECIATED

The Dandy Treat Sent Them By the K. K. K. Club, Walkerton.

Miss Jessie Patterson, Sec. of the K. K. K. Club, received a gracious acknowledgment this, week of the present of delicious home-made candy, which the young ladies made for the Walkerton boys of the Bruce Battalion. The acknowledgment came from Major McNally, Commanding Officer of "A" Co., on behalf of the Officers and Men. He writes:—

Your welcome letter of Nov. 21st arrived several days ago and two of the boxes arrived this afternoon.

We distributed these as soon as they arrived and it certainly brightened a sluggish, foggy afternoon over here so far from the old town. Everyone from the Colonel to the assistant cook are as pleased to get parcels as young children who dive into their stockings on Christmas morning. Your gift was certainly appreciated as it is very difficult to get home-made candy of any kind here since the sale of sugar is strictly regulated.

Officers and men write to wish the K. K. K. Club every success but not one of us can guess what these mysterious letters stand for. If it is not against the rules of the Order and the High Priestess does not object won't you please tell us.

Thanking you once more for your kindness,

I remain,
Sincerely yours,
A. W. McNally.

Miss Ruby Norrish was a visitor in Shelburne last week.

Mrs. A. G. McLennan attended the funeral of a relative in Fergus, last week.

Miss Kate Crane of Hanover was operated upon at the County Hospital Monday morning.

Mr. Will O'Malley of Buffalo, spent New Years with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Malley.

Miss McKee of Harriston, underwent a serious operation at the County Hospital on Wednesday.

Mr. Martin Krupp, of Con. 8, Carrick, was operated upon at the Bruce County Hospital. Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lindsay of Toronto, visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindsay, over New Years.

Miss Annie Robertson of Southampton, formerly of the Walkerton P. S. staff is at the County Hospital for treatment.

Mr. Hugh Montgomery of Greenock was operated upon by Dr. Hall at the County Hospital, Saturday, for a growth on his neck.

+ + +

Death of Mrs. P. O'Connor

Mr. and Mrs. James O'Connor were called to Preston on Monday owing to the death of their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Peter O'Connor, which occurred on Sunday afternoon. She had been ill over eight months and her death was not unexpected. Previous to her marriage two years ago, Mrs. Connor, who was formerly Miss Arnold, taught school at Chepstow for several years and was well and favorably known here. Deep sympathy is felt for Mr. O'Connor in his sad bereavement.

Hydro Carried By Over Three To One

Russell Elected Reeve

Willoughby is Reeve of Brant and Rowand Deputy Reeve—Phalen wins out in Greenock, Cass in Elderslie, and Case in Culross.

Walkerton spoke out in clear, strong tones on the Hydro question on Monday. By a vote of 274 to 90, over three to one, the rate-payers authorized the Town Council to enter into negotiations with the Hydro Electric Power Commission for a supply of power to Walkerton. The vote shows that the property-owners clearly appreciate the superior advantages that Hydro towns are enjoying and are bound that Walkerton shall be on the map when the Hydro radial project is put through in this northern peninsula.

The initiative now rests with the Hydro Electric Power Commission. They have a clear mandate from the people of Walkerton and it is up to them to lose no time in submitting a proposition to this town. If the Commission can give Walkerton a proposition (and there is no reason why they cannot) which will compare at all favourably with the contracts that Hydro has made with other towns, the result of the next Hydro by-law, the money bylaw, is a foregone conclusion.

The overwhelming majority secured for hydro was obtained in the face of a quiet though strenuous opposition on the platform, by circular, and by personal canvass, under the direction of the manager of the Walkerton Electric Light Co. At the last moment Mr. Rowland placed a personal circular letter in the hands of the electors containing statements which, if the electors had taken at all seriously, might have resulted disastrously for the by-law. The people of Walkerton were too well informed however, to allow dust to be thrown in their eyes at the last moment.

The vote by wards was as follows:—

WALKERTON

HYDRO ENABLING BY-LAW

	For	Against
East	72	21
Centre	79	40
West	79	17
South	44	12
	274	90

FOR REEVE

	Douglas	Lettner	Russell
East	39	37	46
Centre	49	51	62
West	13	41	62
South	14	25	20
	115	157	186

Russell's majority 29.

+ + +

BRANT

David Willoughby was elected Reeve of Brant in an exciting contest with Deputy-Reeve Arch. Weir, by one hundred majority. Elmwood and Malcolm neighborhood went solid for Willoughby and the north has now a representative at the Council. The defeated Candidate is a good man and strong on the "come back" as he demonstrated in last year's election and he will no doubt be heard from by Brant electors again. Mr. Rowand, the finance man of the Council, was elected to the deputy-reeveship, by a very handsome majority.

The figures:—

REEVE

Poll ...	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Weir	56	56	42	54	83	14	13	8	46
Willoughby	38	10	72	29	80	43	72	88	11

Weir 322 Willoughby 422
Majority for Willoughby 100

DEPUTY REEVE

Fisher......	10	0	12	21	16	24	39	55	9
Rowand....	64	81	69	89	47	25	36	20	44
Tanner......	14	18	44	17	10	4	9	7	8

Fisher 180 Rowand 401 Tanner 130
Majority for Rowand 85 over both opponents.

M. A. McCallum, Clerk.

+ + +

GREENOCK

REEVE

Poll No....	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
McNab	24	23	40	13	34	87	23	20
Phalen	46	42	91	90	29	16	24	7

McNab 268 Phalen 291
Phalen's majority—23

COUNCILLORS

Campbell....	19	42	109	38	40	24	19	21
Collison	36	21	46	14	17	18	9	10
Gilchrist.....	19	24	71	84	80	90	40	22
Sawyer......	11	25	40	81	60	03	85	16
Symon.......	51	51	107	23	21	18	7	12

Campbell 315, Collison 170, Gilchrist 364, Sawyer 271, Symon 287, Campbell, Gilchrist, Sawyer and Symon elected.

+ + +

ELDERSLIE

Case re-elected over Fortune by 40 majority.

CULROSS

In Culross: Councillor Cass was elected to the Reeveship over Reeve Kuntz. The Councillors elected were:—Keffer, Armstrong, McPherson, and Thompson.

+ + +

PAISLEY

Steele beat Reeve Ballachey by 98.

A Great Record

The Company Of the People, By the People, For the People, paid to policyholders since organization plus the amount now invested for their security, $1,083,845,123.37, number of policies in force 13,832,883, amount of outstanding insurances, $3,196,491,344.00, amount of insurance issued in 1915, was $592,800,880.00. See the Walkerton Agent, A. H. Stevens, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. He can save you some money.

+ + +

Fourteen Years Service

Reeve Ed. G. Kuntz, who was defeated for the Reeveship of Culross by 84 votes, is a comparatively young man who has given to his township a good many years of good faithful service. It is now 17 years since Mr. Kuntz was elected to the Township Council and he has served continuously from then up to the present time. He was reeve in 1903 and in 1914—15—16. Reeve Kuntz strongly opposed cutting the British Red Cross grant down from a thousand to five hundred dollars but whether or not this was a factor in his defeat is not certain. He is a good loser and has not one hard word to say against his opponents after the election.

+ + +

Former Walkerton Girls

At the Annual Christmas Entertainment of Westside Methodist Church, Owen Sound, a pantomine was given by the Sunbeam Circle when a large cross was placed on the platform and Miss Pearl Ernest entered representing the Sunset of Life, carrying an orange hoop. After a number of hoops had been placed on the cross, Marion Ernest entered carrying a crown which was placed on the top of the cross, and all joined in singing "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." Then all left the platform to the music of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Many compliments on this event of the evening were received by the Chairman, Mr. Logan.

+ + +

Successful Box Social

The box social and community dance held at Otter Creek School on the evening of the 27th, for patriotic purposes, was a most decided success. The merry laughter, bright eyes and smiling faces gave evidence that everybody, even the popular auctioneer, was enjoying himself immensely. From a financial standpoint also it was a great success, the proceeds amounting to over $142.00. The quilt gotten up by the school children netted over $18.00 and went to Mr. Siefert. The Walkerton Electric Light and Power Company did very much in making this gathering a success by gratuitously supplying its current and light.

+ + +

Election Aftermath

After the election Monday night a public meeting was held at the Town Hall, Warden McNab in the chair. We understand that there were less than fifty persons present as the public was not expecting a meeting. Mr. John Rowland spoke at some length, upbraiding the Telescope for its presentation of the hydro case last week. "Libel Lies!" was Mr. Rowland's comment. Mr. Rowland was hurrying out to catch the G. T. R train when Mayor Lippert stopped him and insisted that he keep his seat for a few minutes, while the Mayor dealt point by point with a circular which Mr. Rowland had issued to the ratepayers the day before election. Mayor Lippert said that what was the matter with the Telescope statements was not that they were untrue but that they were only too true to suit Mr. Rowland. He commended the Telescope for its full and fair presentation of Hydro, which was in the public interest. Mayor-Elect Johnston, and Reeve-elect Russell made neat speeches.

BORN

Kells—In Walkerton, on Dec. 29th, to Dr. and Mrs. Kells (nee Martha Baker) a son.

+ + +

MARRIED

Briggs—Young—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Henry Young by the Rev. R. Gale of Pinkerton on January 1st 1917. Miss Agnes Ellen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hy. Young, Greenock, to Mr. Anthony Briggs of Arcola, Sask.

Auction Sale

Auction Sale of Farm Stock and Implements, on lot 24 25, con 2, Brant, Thursday, Jan. 4, at one o'clock sharp. John Purvis, auctioneer, J. Bilger, proprietor.

+ + +

Principal At Tilbury

Mr. Elmwood Lewis B. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lewis, has accepted a lucrative position as principal of the Tilbury Continuation School, and left on Tuesday to take over his new duties.

+ + +

A New Year's Gift

The Bruce County Hospital is the recipient of a New Year's gift from Mr. Duncan McKerracher which is greatly appreciated. Mr. McKerracher has generously offered to furnish a ward in the hospital with white enamelled furniture, the ward to be called the McKerracher Ward.

+ + +

Death of Vesta Lady

Dr. Fortune attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. John Fortune, a well-known and highly respected resident of Vesta on Tuesday. The deceased, whose death occurred on Friday night last had been quite well up to Christmas. Heart failure was the cause of her demise.

+ + +

Old Man Ran Away

An old inmate of the House of Refuge, who left without permission last June, was arrested at Tobermory and brought back on Monday by County Constable Ward. The old man had been passing a miserable existence in an old shack at Tobermory, being supplied with food by various neighbors. He is 82 years of age and a bachelor.

+ + +

Won First Prize

First prize for November in the Young Canada Dept. of the Toronto Globe was won by Charlie McNab, the bright young son of Warden Alex McNab. It was for a military poem. "The Charge". Charlie is only 13 years old and it was the first time he ever contributed. To win the best prize "first crack out of the box" is certainly creditable.

+ + +

A Good Record

Reeve Spence Nesbitt who last week dropped out of municipal affairs in Brant, enjoyed the unusual experience of receiving nothing but bouquets from all sides for his work at the Council. Spence was fair, square and above board at all times, and in relinquishing the reins of office he has the respect and good-will of all Brant people.

+ + +

Moon Eclipse

There will be a total eclipse of the moon, commencing at 26 minutes past 11, on the night of the 7th of January 1917, and at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 8th it will be total and ends at half past 3. During this year there will be 7 Eclipses—the greatest number that can happen in any year. Watch for it, as there will be no postponement on account of the weather.

+ + +

Doing Her Bit

Here is an example of an old lady "doing her bit" which would be certainly hard to equal. Night Watchman Swanson has received a letter from his sister in Guelph stating that his mother, a lady of 83 years, is now knitting her ninetieth pair of socks for the soldiers at the Front. Mrs. Swanson is a wonderful old lady and a mother to be proud of.

+ + +

Masonic Officers Installed

The officers of Saugeen Lodge No. 197 A. F. & A. M. for the coming year were installed last Wednesday night by Installing Master John Douglas, as follows:—I. P. M., P. Bremner; W. M., C. B. Robinson; S. W., J. Jones; J. W., D. George; Secretary, R. H. McKay; Treas., H. G. Hunter; Dir. of Cer., W. H. McBurney; S. D., N. Hiscox; J. D., T. Buss; S. S., John Douglas; J. S., E. Myles; I. G., W. Northgrave; O. G., Guy Henderson.

+ + +

Nominations To-day

Nominations for the five vacant seats at the Walkerton Town Council will be held at the Town Hall, at 12 o'clock noon to-day. Members of the old Council are being urged by citizens to stand for re-election. Messrs Douglas and Lettner are being strongly urged. Mayor Lippert and Reeve McNab, the two best posted men in town on Council affairs, are badly needed. There is a strong feeling that it is a most inopportune moment for Mayor Lippert, the Hydro champion to drop out.

Mr. John Wilhelm spent New Years with friends at Buffalo.

Miss Etta Ernest spent New Years with friends in Hanover.

Miss Greta Leech spent New Years with friends in Hanover.

Mask and help along with the Patriotic Carnival on January 19th.

Get your costume ready for the Patriotic Carnival on January 19th.

Mrs. McCool, Miss Aileen and Mrs. McKirdy spent New Years in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spitzig are in Buffalo attending the funeral of a distant relative.

Pte. Mervyn Brocklebank of the 234th Batt, Toronto, spent Tuesday with his friend, Harry Leach.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sauers of Buffalo, spent New Years with Mrs. Sauers' parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ellinghausen.

Mr. James France of Kinlough, was operated upon for cellulitis of the neck by Dr. Hall, at the Bruce County Hospital.

Miss Marcella Weller of St. Anne's College, Kitchener, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weller.

Mr. A. McEwan, book-keeper at the Hatten works, has been enjoying a visit from his brother, Mr. John McEwan of Woodstock.

Mr. O. E. Klein has been laid up with a serious attack of grippe which settled in his head. He is reported to be very much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Sickle from the West, who have been visiting Mr. D. McKerracher, left this week to visit friends at St. Catherines.

Mr. James H. Hunter went to the Bruce County Hospital yesterday to have an operation on his foot which has been ailing for several years.

Miss L. W. Noecker of Drayton spent New Years with her sister, Mrs. M. G. Dippel. She was accompanied by her nephew, Mr. P. C. Armstrong of Brooking, Sask.

+ + +

Fell Off Ladder

Mrs. Hunt, West Ward, fell off a step-ladder while housecleaning on Tuesday morning and hurt herself rather severely. Her right wrist was sprained and she was badly bruised.

+ + +

Case Again Adjourned

Tony Zuber came up for sentence before Judge Greig on Tuesday, but owing to the illness of his counsel, the judge consented to adjourn the case again to Friday, Jan. 12th.

+ + +

Decorated By King

Switzer Freeborn, formerly of the Agricultural Office, who was awarded the Military Cross some months ago, recently was decorated by King George, his Majesty pinning the Military Cross on his breast.

+ + +

In Convalescent Hospital

Alvin Wilton writes home to his father, Mr. Dan Wilton that he is in a convalescent hospital by the sea recovering from his attack of rheumatism and expects to be sent back to the Front soon.

+ + +

200 In France

Boys of the Bruce Battalion write home that they are getting plenty of work to do at Bramshott Camp. After the musketry course is over shortly, it is expected that 200 of the men will be sent to France.

+ + +

Killed in Action

Mrs. (Rev.) G. C. Rock has received word that her nephew, D. D. Webster of the 13th Mounted Rifles, had been killed in action on the West Front. He was a young man of 18 years, and had shown marked ability in the Bank of Toronto before enlisting.

+ + +

Quiet Wedding

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. Harry Watts, East Ward, on Thursday, Dec 28th when Mrs. Watts' sister, Miss I. Park, was united in marriage to Mr. Richard D. Clarke, both of Artemesia Tp. The ceremony was performed by Rev C. W. Cosens.

+ + +

Walkerton Boy Weds

Mr. E. W. Garner Jr. and bride of Estevan, Sask., arrived here yesterday on a visit to the groom's parents Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Garner. Will is receiving congratulations from his many old friends here. They were married on Christmas Day at Estevan.

SUPPOSE WE OWED YOU
WHAT WOULD YOU WANT US TO DO

?

YOU.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Miss May Poole spent New Years at Ridgetown.

Mrs. John King left last week on a visit to Ottawa.

Mr. Wm Bell left last week for his home at Goderich.

Mrs. E. J. Skelton spent the holiday at Brantford last week.

Mr. W. H. Adams came up from Toronto for New Year's.

Mr. Ambrose Scanlon of Toronto visited friends here last week.

Mr. W. H. Brockelbank of Toronto visited old friends here the past week.

Misses Nellie and May Bryce of Toronto have been home on a two weeks' visit.

A successful wood-bee was held at Mr. Thomas Wilton's, Brant, last Friday.

Miss Donalda McKechnie returned on Tuesday to her school at Shelburne.

Mrs. Roy Todd of Saskatoon visited her grandmother, Mrs. Stevens sr. last week.

Mr. A. B. C. Trainor of Bentinck visited his sister, Mrs. A. Stevens last Thursday.

Mr. Donald Flett, of Toronto, spent spent New Year's with his mother, Mrs. James Flett.

Mrs. John Cain is able to be out again after being laid up for a month with a severe cold.

Mrs Muir and Miss Pearl Steinhoff of Toronto have been visiting at Mrs James Whitehead's.

Miss Vera Norrish B. A. of the Niagara Falls Collegiate Staff, returned to her duties on Tuesday.

Mr. Amos C. Hensel, son-in-law of Mrs. S. J. McKay, has bought a large brewery at Madera, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Walford and family of Kitchener visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Walford, last week.

Miss S. Watts accompanied her little nephew, Hilton Sprarle, who has been visiting here, to his home near Brussels on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sanderson and children of Chesley spent Thursday with Mr. Sanderson's parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Sanderson

Mr. Ralph Oberle of the Stratford Business College spent the holidays at his home here and will return to Stratford on Wednesday.

Miss Ida Fehrenbach and Mrs. John Hertel of Hanover, and Mr. Joseph Fehrenbach of Toronto, visited their mother here over the holidays.

Mr. John Whitehead, Brant has installed an up-to-date carrier system and galvanized metal stanchions in his barn. Mr. Isaac Glntz had the contract.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mosack, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Beingessner and children and Miss Mary Scheele of Formosa, were visitors at Mrs. Frank Oberle's here over New Year's.

We learn that Sergt-Major Carrick, who did much good in organizing and training the Bruce Battalion, has been honorably discharged from the army on account of age.—Lucknow Sentinel.

Mr. Dan Wilton, engineer at the Pumping Station, had a few well-earned holidays last week which he spent visiting his daughter at Toronto. Mr R. K. Sutton was in charge at the pumping plant during his absence.

The Ladies of the Soldiers' Aid Tea Room being desirous of sending parcels to the soldiers from Walkerton and its vicinity, request the relatives and friends of such to send the soldiers' names and addresses to Marion T. Robertson, Walkerton.

Joe Cain writes home from England that he took the signalling and musketry courses with first class honors. As he passed the physical examination successfully, he expects to go to the Front shortly. He states that Ralph Glavs and John Rowland are at the same camp.

Mr. James V. Scanlon who spent the Christmas holidays visiting his father at Beaver Glen Farm, Brant, and other friends, returned to Toronto on Saturday to spend New Years with his brother, J. F. Scanlon, before returning to resume his duties as teacher at the Collegiate in Brantford.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carbert spent the Christmas and New Years holidays with friends at Carlingford, Perth County. Mr. Carbert writes that he found all the old friends well. Needless to say there were many changes since his last visit 52 years ago. There is a fine bit of country around Carlingford.

To enable the farmer to secure larger returns from his labour, greater convenience and comfort, such as he should have is the aim of The Farmer's Weekly Sun, the most helpful farm paper published in Ontario. You can do your part by becoming a subscriber. The Sun is essentially the paper of the Ontario Farmer. He will find its market report invaluable.

Country correspondence on page 2.

Miss Jean McLean has returned home to Durham.

Mrs. Alb. Inglis has been seriously ill with the grippe.

Mr. W. M. Shaw is laid up with a rather severe attack of grippe.

A few $1.25 and $1.50 shirts to clear at 98 cents, at Woodman & Co's.

Mrs. Lou Anderson gave a party for some friends on Tuesday evening.

Mr. John Hanmore has been elected a trustee of Baird's School, Brant.

Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Grant spent New Years at their old home in Durham.

Hats, caps and sweater coats at clearing prices at Woodman & Co's.

One of those raincoats makes a nice New Years gift, at Woodman & Co's.

Mr. Stanley McConnell of Toronto visited his father, Mr. Oliver McConnell last week.

Miss Capple Spence of Southampton spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Mrs. F. G. Eidt.

Miss McLennan of Ripley has been engaged as teacher at Baird's School, Brant, for the coming year.

Owing to the crowded condition of our columns, a number of school reports are held over to next week.

By special request Knox Church choir will repeat its special Christmas music next Sunday morning and evening.

January sale now on at the Central Grocery get our prices on flour sugar, they will interest you.—W. G. Searle.

A meeting of the Brant Farmers Club will be held at Mr. Arthur Izlerson's on Tuesday, Jan. 9th. Ladies welcome.

A nice assortment of suitings, pantings and overcoatings to choose from for your winter suit at Woodman & Co's. Next to Vogan's Hardware.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gress and family of Otter Creek attended the baptism of their little grandson, Norman Klein, near Mildmay on New Years Day.

Mr. John McNab, gaoler of the County gaol, Guelph, visited his daughter, Mrs. Clancy at Chepstow, and his brother Warden McNab this week.

Mrs. Frank Rennie and Jim were in Clifford on Tuesday attending the funeral of Mrs. Graef sr. Mr. Herman Graef, reeve of Clifford, is a son of the deceased.

Dr. Clapp, Clerk of the County Court, has bought Mrs. (Judge) Barrett's residence on Victoria St. The deal was put through by Mr. James Whitehead.

Reeve Wm. Hunter has been seventeen years in the council without a break. Ten years of this time he has represented the town as reeve.—Kincardine Reporter.

We are sorry to report that Mr. R. H. McKay is very ill with grippe. Mr. McKay was laid up a couple of days last week and went out too soon, suffering a severe relapse.

Lieut. Ostic, son of Mr. W. D. Ostic of Toronto, was a visitor in town last week. Mr. Ostic resigned the accountancy of the Bank of Commerce, Collingwood, to go Overseas.

Our January sale is a money saver to every purchaser of Flour and Sugar. These articles are samples of the values we offer in many other lines. The Central Grocery.—W. G. Searle.

Mr. McMaster and daughter, Lucy, of Shelburne; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Ball, of Hanover; Mr. and Mrs. James Garner of Chesley, were New Years visitors with Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Garner.

Signaller Dan McPhail of the 204th Beavers, Toronto, spent New Years at his old home in Carnock. The 204th Battalion is training at Toronto and the boys expect word to go overseas at any moment.

Mr. E. J. Skelton left last week on a ten days' business trip to the Eastern States. He will visit the large granite quarries in Vermont and spend a few days in New York. Mr. John Kerman accompanied him on the trip.

Public meetings of the South Bruce Board of Agriculture and the Women's Institute will be held in the Town Hall, Walkerton, on Friday, January 12th, 1917, at the hours of 1.30 and 8 p. m. Come one, come all and help to make the meetings both pleasant and profitable. W. A. Rowand, Sec.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, Jan. 3)

Hay, per ton 8.00 to 10
Oats,
Wheat
Barle

AN EVIL HERITAGE

Bernard took a turn up and down the room, and then stood still before Miss McCrie.

"If I still was one of the fortunates of the earth, as you put it the other night when you gave it to me so roundly," he said, trying to smile, "nothing would have stopped me from helping you. But one of my objects in coming here to-day was to tell you that my pockets are empty. I see, however, that you know everything. We're in the same boat, Miss McCrie."

"Yes, I know everything," and now the gray eyes were fastened keenly on his face. "But you are not the same person who was here the other night. Do you know that you have grown quite ten years older in these ten days? Tell me, does she know?"

"Of course she does. Mr. Durrant must have got my second cable message long ago."

"And what will she do?"

"Do?" repeated Bernard, impatiently. "Surely she has got no choice in the matter. What else can she do but obey her father?" And he looked at Miss McCrie as though challenging her to declare that there was anything else for Sybil to do.

"Then you don't think she will stick to you?"

"No," said Bernard briefly and almost bitterly this time.

"I feel for you very much," Miss McCrie assured him in a far milder tone. Somehow she felt much more kindly towards Bernard since she knew that he was a free man. "Won't you sit down, Mr. Berrincott," it suddenly occurred to her to ask.

"On what?" asked Bernard, looking round him.

It ended by Miss McCrie and Bernard sitting down side by side on two overturned packing-cases and spending the next hour in a friendly chat, the pauses of which were filled by the stentorian "going—going—gone!" of the auctioneer below, which came bobbing up to the surface with the persistence of a cork.

"I should say that pretty nearly everything must be "gone" by this time," remarked Bernard at last.

"Not quite everything. There is one thing more to come, and that will be the worst of all. I am not sure that I can bear to be so near," and Miss McCrie's eyes filled suddenly with tears.

Bernard got up and looked out of the window. The auctioneer was getting down from the table which had served him as pedestal, while round the corner of the house a negro groom came leading a wicked-looking yellow horse which lifted its feet as though it were stepping on red-hot coals.

Bernard thought he heard a faint rustle behind him, but he did not notice that Miss McCrie was looking [illegible]

"The last object to be disposed of, ladies and gentlemen," announced the mulatto with an introductory wave towards the Mosquito. "Finest horse on the island, never been known to make a stumble, intelligent as a dog, gentle as a lamb—that's only a little natural liveliness," as The Mosquito reared up so straight as all but to capsize his attendant while the more nervous members of the crowd prudently drew back a little.

"Time is too short, ladies and gentlemen for the enumeration of all the virtues possessed by this noble animal. Though capable of carrying the stoutest gentleman on the island over the highest hill that ever was scaled, a child would yet ride him with ease and——"

But what other virtues the noble animal possessed was never clearly known, for at that very moment the first shriek was heard in the crowd. The Mosquito had managed by a skilful wrench to get his head free and was now plunging about at liberty, with an expression of such diabolical wickedness in the whites of his eyes that some of the men and all the women and children flew terror-stricken down the bank, and dispersed precipitately in all directions.

This time it was a sob which Bernard heard behind him. He looked round just in time to see Miss McCrie rushing from the room with her handkerchief held before her eyes.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

It was one day towards the end of March that Mrs. Durrant said to her daughter:

"Don't forget that you are to put on your new pink dress to-night. Sir Norman Vallington is coming to dinner. And if he wants to sing, as he usually does, of course you will accompany him."

"Yes, mamma," said Sybil, and then she hesitated for a moment and actually blushed a little as she bent over her needlework.

"Papa was saying this morning that the telegram from St. Clare was due by this time."

Mrs. Durrant scanned her daughter's face with eyes that looked drowsy, but were not so.

"So it is. But that is no reason for not putting on the pink silk, or not playing Sir Norman's accompaniments. That telegram has not yet been read, you know."

"That is true enough," said Sybil to herself, drooping her beautiful head with the ghost of a sigh.

The last three weeks had been rather trying, even to Sybil's nerves, for she really was fond of Bernard, at least such was her impression, although she would not permit herself even to look in that direction so long as everything was not perfectly cleared up. The position of an engaged young lady, who was yet not engaged, would have been trying enough, even without Sir Norman Vallington, whom as yet Mrs. Durrant kept, indeed at arm's length, though never further off than that, and on whom Sybil thought to see her fix in the event of the news from St. Clare turning out unfavorable. Sir [illegible] physical; her mind was far too well balanced to admit of such disturbances, and yet she could not remember ever having come so near to feeling excited as during these last three weeks. Sybil, to do her justice, would have been quite willing to marry Bernard, even without his name and his fortune, for she was too apathetic to be ambitious, and as for the fortune, she knew that even as the wife of a poor man she could enjoy all the comforts to which she was used, since she had money enough for two. If she looked for that telegram with something that almost resembled eagerness, it was because she knew that she would not have the strength to resist her mother's will. Her three elder sisters had all bowed before that awful will, and she was not stronger, rather weaker, than they were. One of them only, the strongest of them and the third in age, Gertrude, had attempted to resist. The scenes which had preceded Gertrude's engagement still lived in Sybil's memory as one of the most painful reminiscences of her childhood. She had been nine years old at the time, and, though eight years younger than Gertrude, had always been more or less of her elder sister's confidante. When first Lord Mallot had been mentioned as a possible husband for Gertrude, Gertrude had said to her young sister, with a scornful toss of her pretty little head:

"Lord Mallot, indeed! Have you seen him? I'd as soon marry a gorilla."

It was not long after this that on a stormy November day matters came to a crisis. On the evening before, Gertrude, already in her dinner-dress, had slipped off to the old nursery where Sybil still slept.

"Lord Mallot is coming to-morrow," she told her, "and mamma thinks I am going to marry him, but I am not. He is a terrible man." And she tossed her head again, but not with quite as much spirit as last time, and even the nine-years-old Sybil seemed to read something like fear in her black eyes.

Next day the house was in a state of badly suppressed excitement. All day long there had been interviews going on with closed doors, and several times Gertrude was sent for, either to the drawing-room or to the library, and at luncheon all faces were grave, and Gertrude did not appear. All day long, too, the wind howled in the chimneys and moaned round the corners, and whirled clouds of withered leaves past the windows. Once Sybil caught sight of her sister on the staircase with red eyelids, but she was chained to governess and lesson books, and, though she could not help feeling that something of importance was brooding in the air, yet she had no means of keeping pace with events. The storm outside seemed so entirely to be part of the commotion within, that when a door banged anywhere in the house it was a question whether the wind had done it or whether it marked the closing of a peculiarly stormy interview. Sybil never could hear the wind in the chimney without being reminded of that day.

Next morning she was awakened by a hand on her shoulder, and started up to see Gertrude standing beside her bed with her long black hair flowing over her white dressing-gown. She was a beautiful figure all in black and white, for her face, too, was quite white. The only speck of color about her was the ruby in the ring which she wore on her left hand. It was her engagement ring; for she had come to tell her sister that she had got engaged to Lord Mallot last night. At first Sybil had scarcely comprehended what she was saying. She had started out of the deepest sleep, and it seemed to her to be the middle of the night, for, owing to the masses of brown leaves with which the storm had plastered over both windows of the nursery, the room was all but dark now at eight o'clock.

"But you said you would never marry him," she remarked at last, when she had collected her senses. "You said he was a terrible man."

"Yes, but mamma is more terrible," Gertrude had replied in a frightened whisper as she stooped to kiss her little sister, and then swept from the room, leaving Sybil sitting bolt upright in bed in the half-dark nursery, staring after the slender white figure, and trembling at she knew not what.

On the evening of the day on which Mrs. Durrant had reminded her daughter that Sir Norman Vallington was coming to dinner, Sybil put on her pink silk, as she had been told. Sir Norman came, and evidently was of opinion that pink silk was most becoming to Miss Durrant.

During dinner a telegram was brought to Mr. Durrant, but he looked so [illegible] and dignified, both before opening it and after reading it, that Sybil was none the wiser from looking at his face. As the ladies were leaving the dining-room she noticed that her father put a piece of paper into her mother's hand as she passed him, but the chances of learning anything from Mrs. Durrant's expression were, as she knew, simply non-existent. She saw her mother take the paper drowsily, drowsily read it, and drowsily put it into her pocket, after which she continued her drowsy conversation with the lady next her. It was only later on after the gentlemen had joined the ladies, that Sybil had an unexpected chance of enlightenment. As Mrs. Durrant had foreseen, Sir Norman was anxious to sing, and, the question of an accompaniment having arisen, he looked enquiringly towards Miss Durrant. To everyone's astonishment, Mrs. Durrant offered to accompany him herself. Then Sybil knew without fail that the telegram contained the expected "All right."

When the guests were all gone she was told the news in so many words, being informed by her father, in her mother's presence, that she might from this moment forward consider herself engaged to Mr. Berrincott. It was a relief to get to her room at last, for the evening had been a long one, and she was feeling distinctly agitated. Catching sight of herself in her toilet-mirror, she was quite astonished to see how bright her eyes were looking. Yes, now that she came to think of it, she supposed that she must, after all, be what people called "in love." And what a comfort it was to be able to yield to her feeling, with her parents' full consent and approval; and it was an undeniable comfort, too, that Bernard's fortune was all safe, for it stood to reason—to Sybil's reason, at least—that the more money they had the pleasanter their life would be.

During three whole days The Monastery was in a state of high satisfaction. Mr. Durrant walked about, and rubbed his hands a good deal; Mrs. Durrant watched her daughter approvingly, and Sybil looked serene and beautiful; even from Mrs. Durrant's heart the St. Clare telegram had caused a stone to fall—as the Germans put it, for although there was no denying that "Lady Vallington" sounds better than "Mrs. Berrincott," yet, for the sake of seeing Sybil look as serene as this, she was mother enough to sacrifice without a murmur the prospect of one more titled son-in-law, more particularly as in that part of England the name of Berrincott had quite as good a sound as that of Vallington.

"I have been told that the family is even more ancient," she remarked to her daughter on the evening of the third day after the arrival of the telegram.

Mother and daughter were sitting before the fire in the April twilight and waiting for the dressing-gong. Sometimes Sybil asked a question or made a remark at which her mother smiled sleepily but good-naturedly, for Sybil was rather more talkative as well as rather more confidential than usual.

"I think you are happy," said Mrs. Durrant, after a pause, during which she had been continually contemplating her daughter's profile.

"Yes," said Sybil, raising her calm eyes from the fire, "I am happy."

"And so am I," was Mrs. Durrant's inward reflection.

How could either mother or daughter know that at that very moment the telegraph boy was already half way up the avenue, bearing in his hand a yellow envelope exactly similar to the one he had brought to the house three days ago?

Of this Mrs. Durrant was in blissful ignorance. Sybil was the first of her four daughters from whom she had heard the words "I am happy"; and, hearing them, she could not fail to realize how much pleasanter it was that matters should have taken this turn, and what a trouble it would have been to have the episode of Gertrude's engagement repeat itself, though, to be sure, Sybil was much less troublesome to manage than Gertrude had been.

"Of course Miles will go with me to Thornton," was Sybil's next remark, after studying the fire for another few minutes.

"Of course," agreed her mother, "she understands your hair perfectly, and, besides, you are accustomed to her."

If it had not been for some early primroses which the telegraph boy had spied through the twilight, and had just then stopped to gather, the yellow envelope ought by rights to have been in Mr. Durrant's hands by this time. Thanks to those primroses, however, both mother and daughter had gained a few minutes' respite. The sleepy smile was still on Mrs. Durrant's lips; she was saying to herself that now she could die in peace, since her task in the world was accomplished. Four daughters all married to eligible husbands—was it not a work of which any mother might be proud?

She was still saying so to herself, when, in place of the expected gong, there came a ring at the front door.

"Too late for a visitor," she remarked; "it is probably a message from a neighbor."

Five minutes later a step was heard in the gallery which sounded like Mr. Durrant's step, except that it was unusually rapid. He entered the room with an open telegram in his hand, and with a face which seemed not to be quite his own face. Sybil, at least, had never seen his eyes so wide open or his lips so pale.

"This is the end, I suppose," he said, putting the telegram into his wife's hand.

She looked at his face, and then bent forward so that the firelight fell on the paper, for the room was rapidly growing dark.

It took her a long time to read the message, either because of the uncertain light or because she spelled it out several times over.

"Yes, of course, this is the end," she said slowly, when at last she had done.

She looked across at her daughter as she spoke, and Sybil, who had been watching her with a strange feeling of uneasiness, was almost frightened by the change in her expression. That good-natured smile which her face had worn during the last three days had disappeared within a minute, and was replaced by the old hard grooves about the mouth which Sybil knew so well. She did not know yet what had happened, but she felt the blood slowly leaving her face.

To herself Mrs. Durrant was saying: "What a blessing, to be sure, that the engagement has not been made public!"

(To be continued.)

Many Uses for Peat.

Peat has a variety of uses, most of which have been utterly neglected in this country. Peat baths are well established institutions in Germany and Austria. As food for live stock, however, peat seems to have found its most curious use, inasmuch as the kind of peat used is thousands of years old and although it may still be classed as vegetable in character it is only a step removed from low-grade coal. As a stock food it is used in a mixture containing molasses. The results are stated to have been very satisfactory in practice, the peat acting as a tonic and corrective. The peat used is the black, well humified or rotted kind, and is prepared in practically the same way as when used for fertilizing.

VERY SERIOUS.

(Boston Transcript)

"Hobson is facing a serious charge."
"Why, what crime has he committed?"
"No crime. He's gazing at his coal bill which has just come in."

The snowy to[illegible] India is plainly [illegible] of eye from [illegible]

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

December 24, 1916, Lesson XIV.

Christ's Coming and Coming to Christ—Review]—Revelation 22, 6-11.

Summary.—Lesson I. Topic: Defeated conspiracy. Places: Jerusalem; Caesarea. While Paul was under arrest in Jerusalem, the Jews plotted to take his life. His nephew heard of the plot and informed the captain of the guard, who sent Paul with an armed escort to Felix at Caesarea.

II. Topic: Paul as conqueror. Place: Caesarea. After five days Paul's accusers came from Jerusalem to Caesarea to make their charges against him. The charges were presented by the orator Tertullus. Paul made his defence so successfully that Felix saw that he was guilty of no wrong. Felix would have released Paul if he had offered him a bribe, but Paul would not stoop to such an act.

III. Topic: Contrasted forces. Place: Caesarea. When Paul had been a prisoner in Caesarea two years, Festus succeeded Felix in office. The Jews urged Festus to proceed against Paul. They wished him brought to Jerusalem that they might lie in wait and slay him. Paul appealed to Caesar, and was thus saved from being taken back to Jerusalem.

IV. Topic: Paul's life story. Place: Caesarea. King Agrippa and Bernice visited Festus and desired to hear Paul speak after they had heard about him. Festus wished Agrippa's advice as to what to do with Paul. Paul made his defence and Agrippa was convinced of his innocence. The king was much affected by what Paul said and spoke the memorable words, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

V. Topic: Paul's protection in peril. Place: Mediterranean Sea between Caesarea and Melita. Paul and other prisoners were delivered to the centurion Julius to be taken to Rome. They sailed to Myra and thence to Fair Havens. Paul advised the seamen to winter there, but they went on and were caught in a severe storm and drifted for fourteen days.

VI. Topic: Christian activity. Place: Melita, now Malta. On the fourteenth day of the storm the seamen attempted to beach the ship upon an island. The ship was wrecked and all the persons on board escaped safe to land. They were kindly received by the inhabitants of the island. Paul was used by the Lord to do gospel work there.

VII. Topic: Applied Christianity. Place: Written by Paul at Corinth. It is our duty to regard the consciences of others. We should be careful not to cause others to stumble. The lesson of temperance is clearly drawn from the next. We should be helpful to others in every way possible.

VIII. Topic: Arrival at Rome. After remaining three months at Melita, Paul and his companions sailed to Puteoli and went by land to Rome. Paul was met by Christians at Appii Forum and Three Taverns. He was allowed to live in his own hired house under guard, and to receive all who chose to visit him. He thus had an opportunity to continue his labors as a minister.

IX. Topic: Christian consecration. Place: Written at Corinth. Paul exhorts the Romans and all of us to entire consecration to God. It is reasonable for us to be fully devoted to him and live and work for him. We are assured that in God's service all our powers can be employed to advantage.

X. Topic: Revelation. Place: Island of Patmos. The apostle John was banished to Patmos on account of his faithfulness to Jesus. He there had a vision of Jesus who told him to write the things which he should see and hear.

XI. Topic: Divine admonitions. Island of Patmos. Jesus sends messages to the seven churches of proconsular Asia. The lesson contains the messages to Ephesus, Smyrna and Pergamo. In these messages Jesus tells the churches who he is, shows them their condition, gives them counsel and promises rewards.

XII—Topic—Completed redemption. Place: Island of Patmos. John describes his vision of the Holy City. He tells of its joys, its beauties and the character of its inhabitants. God and the Lamb are the light of that city, and they are also its temple. The inhabitants of heaven serve the King, and they themselves are kings and priests unto God.

XIII. Topic: The divinity of Christ. Place: Jerusalem. Isaiah had a view of the coming Christ, and his vision is used for our Christmas lesson. A Son was to be given to Israel and to all the race. He was to bring light and salvation to the world and set up a spiritual kingdom which is to endure forever.

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Concluding History.

I. In the life of the apostle Paul.

II. Of the triumphant churches.

III. Of Christianity in prophecy.

I. In the life of the apostle Paul. In his personal work among the churches and in his epistles addressed to them Paul set the standard of Christian life in an unmistakably clear view. He admitted of no compromise neither provided for any failure. In the studies of this quarter we follow Paul in his constant practice of all he had preached. His missionary tours were changed into travels under guard as a prisoner. He passed under the inspection of the authorities of his nation. They held his teaching and work under suspicion. They sought to make him pay the penalty of his career in the surrender of his life. In every event he sounded the same clear doctrine of the atonement and resurrection of Christ. In every trial he fearlessly proclaimed to his accusers the gospel and his faithful observance of its principles. In the whole course of events, beginning at Jerusalem, until he reached Rome, Paul proved himself a faithful exponent of all he had required of others. Faithfulness in devotion to his Master led to faithfulness to his fellow men whether they were brother Christians or bitter enemies of the gospel. He traced the hand of God so clearly in the experiences of his life that he confidently rehearsed them before rulers, both Jew and Gentile, that they might by his testimony learn their duty and privilege and be constrained to seek redemption in Christ. He made full proof of his ministry, doing good to the souls and bodies of men. Regardless of his chains, he became the recognized leader during the shipwreck. His character shone out so clearly [illegible] him a freedom at Rome [illegible] him to spread the gospel [illegible] verts.

II. Of the triumphant churches. Leaving the study of Paul's history and his care of the churches, we turn to the [illegible] persecuted and banished apostle John upon the Isle of Patmos. Amid the loneliness of his surroundings he was given a vision of the risen and glorified Christ, and from him received a direct message to each of the seven churches of Asia, confirming them in their faith and calling them to faithful obedience to the principles of Christianity. As their head, Christ required loyal service with the promise of future reward. Bridging the dark pictures that followed the letters to the churches, we have one lesson on the completed life of the Christian, in which a glimpse of the radiant glories of the heavenly life is given. Persecution and separation because of sin are shown to be limited to the short duration of earthly life. All sense of distress will be absent because all effects of the curse will be forever removed. The recompense thus afforded to the exiled apostle was sufficient to sustain him until the full realization of his vision should come. His obedience in writing under the direction and inspiration of the Spirit furnished to the church of Christ, in all ages, sufficient understanding of the ultimate triumph of Christianity to encourage faith and obedience through all the shifting scenes of earthly life.

III. Of Christianity in prophecy. The doctrine of Christ's atonement and resurrection has been prominent in the quarter's study. It is fitting to close with the prophetic view of God's plan of redemption for a world under the power of sin. It was the great and vital truth proclaimed by the apostles. It was the claim made by Christ himself. It was the revelation made to the persecuted churches. It is the recorded message to all generations of all nations. The fulfilment of prophecy has been witnessed in the lives of those who believed and acknowledged Christ as the divine Redeemer. Beginning the year with Christ's ascension, we have followed the early Christian church through its varied stages of development. Christianity has proved to be the solution of all the problems in the life of man. It has stood the test of persecution. It has stood the test of prophecy. It has enabled its converts to stand triumphant even unto martyrdom. Its principles have changed the whole world.—T. R. A.

Raiding In A Zeppelin

Those who have seen the gray [illegible] structure of a Zeppelin can form a very clear idea of her fighting methods.

The most curious fact about these machines is perhaps the small number of men carried. The total is only two officers and twenty non-commissioned officers and men. All are volunteers selected for the work, a number from which it appears that some of the more honorable men in the German air service shrink.

A study of the hull throws light on the distribution of the crew. When the vessel is approaching Great Britain and attack by aeroplane is apprehended, all the guns must be manned. There are nine in the Zeppelin—three of half-inch calibre on the top of the structure, and the other six of machine gun calibre in the four gondolas. If one man only be allowed, that absorbs nine men.

The stations of the men at the three platforms on the top of the hull must be intensely cold and lonely. The temperature of the upper air is bitter indeed, and the swift movement generates a cutting wind. The airships, when in the danger zone, appear to fly at about 8,000 feet or 9,000 feet, and in the attack on London of October last year, Mathy was for some minutes at a level of 11,000 feet, or two miles up.

Hence we understand why the Zeppelin crews are clothed so very warmly. They are encased in leather as far like our own valiant airmen, who, however, go forth to fight combatants and not to slay women and children.

The men at the upper gun platforms can only be reached by steep ladders running up through the hull. They are isolated, and it stands to reason that they could not very long maintain their fire, as the quantity of ammunition which can be carried on their little perches is not large, and there is no surplus of men to take up fresh supplies.

The men at the machine guns in the gondolas would have a less dangerous post. They have company near at hand, and the engines in the gondolas must give out a certain amount of warmth. The wireless operator in his little cabin which has no heating arrangements would have an even colder and uncomfortable station. The captain, forward in his aerial conning-house, would also be much exposed to the cold, as he must constantly have his windows wide open to see clearly what is happening.

In ordinary conditions each of the six engines and each of the six dynamos would need a mechanic, giving twelve men. But some of them would be left untended, or it would take more men than figure in the crew to provide each with an attendant. The sum works out thus:

Captain	1
Wireless operator	1
9 guns, 1 man each	9
6 engines, 1 man each	6
6 dynamos, 1 man each	6
	23

Whereas the crew is 22.

Probably, then, there are only three or four instead of six mechanics in the [illegible] gondola, which contains three engines and dynamos. But if the slightest thing goes wrong the difficulties must be great. It is much worse than on a warship, where there is a reserve of men, if a small and scanty one.

In the Zeppelin there is no reserve at all. For that reason every possible effort ought to be made to attack these craft at sea before they reach British air. They fly low at sea when coming here with their heavy load of bombs, petrol and oil, and the infliction of very little damage might result in their destruction and incalculably increase the risks they run.

The greatest blunder in the British naval anti-Zeppelin campaign—which has so far been a deplorably passive and timid defensive—has been the failure to act against these highly vulnerable airships at sea.

The noise in the gondolas when the engines are running at 1,600 revolutions a minute must be terrific. It may be judged by recollecting what an uproar was made by the much smaller engines of the old 100-horse power Mercedes in a motor car when running uncovered. The men in the gondolas can therefore hear little or nothing.

Movement about the airship, when in the danger zone, is possible, but must be difficult, as then all lights, except carefully screened ones in the gondolas, would be extinguished and the crew would have to grope their way in the dark. To proceed in such conditions along the "catwalk" which runs inside the hull would be no very easy matter. It [illegible] narrow, only nine inches wide, he [illegible], the fabric would not support the weight of a man, and he would go through on a swift journey to the next world. Possibly there is a rope [illegible] at the side to hold, though it does not show in L-33.

In the earlier Zeppelins tales were told of men waiting on the top. If there was a gangway on the top of L-33 it was destroyed by the fire and no trace of it remains. But it would be difficult to retain the balance up there while the vessel was whirling through the air and diving or climbing at a steep angle. The three upper gun platforms are tolerably well walled in, but it may have been from them that a couple of the crew fell when L-33 and L-32 dropped to their fearful end, a little distance from the [illegible] tangle of wreckage.

The bombing must be effected entirely at haphazard. At the heights at which these vessels cruise, their captains know perfectly well that they cannot hit any target. Mathy boasted of dropping bombs on London but any fool could do that from a great height when there were practically no guns and no aeroplanes to trouble him.

His hits caused loss of life and damage to property, and these are actual losses which our mandarins choose to overlook, but which must figure in any honest balance-sheet. But in inflicting this damage, he rendered himself and his crew by the laws of war, liable to summary execution.

Miss Bessie E. McKenna, of St. Thomas, Ontario, who has been appointed by the Minister of Labor to be Supervisor of Women Workers throughout the Dominion. She is a Toronto University graduate who specialized in sociological studies, and she has worked for some time in munitions factories.

SUNDAY AT HOME

AT EVENING TIME.

I know not what the long years hold,
Of winter days and summer clime;
But this I know: when life grows old,
It shall be light—at evening time.

I cannot tell what [illegible] awaits
To see [illegible], with the falling night;
But this I know: beyond the gates
At evening-time it shall be light.
—Thomas C. Clark.

INVOCATION.

Gracious Father, Thy needy children invoke Thy [illegible] in words that are spoken, and songs and written and prayed [illegible] breathe [illegible] for Thyself. They [illegible] experience of [illegible] and intimate fellowship of heart which can only be known by those [illegible] whom Thou art in very deed the Father, as the giver of life, as the provider for all need, as the fortune [illegible], and as the [illegible] all [illegible]. [illegible] the One Father of those who have [illegible] their trust in Thee. Help all Thy children to seek to grow like their Elder Brother. Take from their souls all bitterness. Freshen their hearts with Thy love and fill them with Thy Spirit.—Canadian Baptist.

A SIMILITUDE.

My personality is like a ship. It is distinct, individuality, and free. I [illegible] limited, representative and mobile [illegible] a ship is almost a sentient being; she has to be studied, trimmed, educated, adapted; not too high in the water or she will capsize, and not too low in the water, or she will be submerged; not lopsided, not "down by the" head, or down by the stern. She has to be watched, and cared for, and [illegible] to subject to danger, injury and loss.

If life is continuous adaptation to environment, there is no human calling where study is so constant, difficult and [illegible]. The sailor lives in a large world, sails over a wide ocean, is buried in a large grave. In the wideness of the sea your eye stops not till you touch the horizon, [illegible] where heaven touches earth; the life on the ocean wave is free, and yet every moment you are up against same limitation as definite as the everlasting mountains.

I stand on the deck and know myself to be a man. I give wings to my thought, but the situation seems to cramp me. I look ahead, and the horizon seems to bar my progress. I look over the side, the dull, sad music of humanity tingles, but there is a subtler music which appeals to my spirit, "deep calleth unto deep." I, too, have depths which I have not fathomed. There are laws of navigation, of tides, of winds, of being. There are symmetries, harmonies, vibrations, laws of right, requirements of perfection, which are no provincialisms of this planet. They are known among the stars, they reign beyond Orion and the Southern Cross, they are wherever the universal spirit is, and no subject mind, though it fly on one track forever, can escape beyond their bounds.

Do my decks respond to busy feet? Affection, will, impulse, conscience, take their place as part of my crew.

Am I moved upon from without? The winds of heaven keep my crew busy, making sail, taking in sail. They trim, adjust, and fit.

Am I moved from within? Monitions, visions, enthusiasms, chase each other like flying fishes and dolphins leaping in the sun.

Is my commander on board? Yes! ever present, never absent, strong, able, and to those not well acquainted severe, but His anger is only the depth side of His love. Is He responsible? Yes. He is the great gulf of responsibility. He leads, He sustains, He comforts, He arrives! The answer is ever the same!

So He bringeth them unto their desired haven.

"Every hour Thy boundless mind
Holds me in its mighty thought,
And Thy heart, so true and kind,
Heals still for the soul it sought."
H. T. Miller.

Army of Mons Memory Now

What has happened to the old army which fought at Mons? The general public thinks of it as a force now greatly multiplied, but still fighting on, battles on the line from the Yser to the Somme. As a matter of fact the old army, as an army, disappeared long ago. They did not disappear, a worn-out, decimated remnant, utterly exhausted by the retreat and the subsequent thrust of the Marne and Aisne, as those at home seem to think. Instead they have been gradually swallowed up by death and the new armies.

Because the individuals making up the heroic little band of French's command have slipped out of the newspapers and the public eye, it does not follow that they are all dead or out of the service. The casualties suffered by the original British expeditionary force was singularly light as one counts casualties to-day. When trench warfare began a large number of men from Mons were still in line. The greater part of those veterans who have laid their arms aside because of death, sickness or wounds have done so since the deadlock came.

Taken on the whole, a surprisingly large percentage of old army officers and men are still in harness. Where are they? Some are drilling recruits in England. The majority of the rest have finished fighting and are working at the base and in railway stations, supplying centres, ammunition depots, repair shops, offices, canteens and similar places.

The officers, with the exception of a few who still lead men into battle have left the trenches and, rising to big things, occupy the high positions to which their superior knowledge and training entitle them. Those who have remained with the combatant troops have been promoted to ranks of which they never dreamed in days of peace.

The men do odd jobs around the lines. They help the railway transport officers—veterans these—in their work. They superintend the handling of ammunition, guns, rifles, wagons, most of an army in the field. They do orderly room work, and a few of them act as servants to the officers with whom they did duty before the war.

Sometimes the masters and the servants speak of old times together, but very seldom. As the officer dresses a regiment goes by the window of his billet. With his batman (servant) he watches them until the last man has passed and the wail of the fife has died in the distance.

"Well, what do you think of them, Jones?" the officer asks.

"Them?" Jones says. "Oh, they're all right, sir. But," impressively, "they're not the boys as we used to meet on Salisbury Plain!"

"No. They are not."

And then they change the subject, lest it should conjure up sad thoughts.

Those who led the old army are leading the new armies now. They have seen their battalions swell to brigades and their brigades to divisions. They have taken the raw youth of the British Islands and watched them gradually change from ignorant civilians to hard, rough troops, very nearly the equal of the men they used to command. A rightful pride is theirs. Are not the regiments which are smashing the Somme defences the children of their heads and hands?

So, from the headquarters of armies and divisions and brigades, the red-tabbed colonels and majors and captains of to-day guide the offspring of their battalions of yesterday. It is not often that they get an opportunity of looking back and realizing what changes there have been.

A brigade major was conversing with me recently on the subject, and his words are so typical that they are worth repeating.

"I heard that my old lot were to be near here some time ago," he said. "When they came I dropped into their mess to see old friends and talk over old times. Do you know how many familiar faces I saw? None! Not one! They were very nice, the men whom I met, but they were all strangers. It was hell! I came away, I couldn't stick it."

The men are, of course, heroes among heroes. They are a strangely silent crowd, holding themselves aloof from their companions. Letters bind them together, these old soldiers, and they write to each other as though they were the only white men among a nation of natives. Their letters speak largely of the early days. They mention names which have been for months within the German lines.

Sometimes they will unbend and will tell their young comrades something of the first clashes.

"Aye! We was at Nery then— that's where the old L Battery had their show. Great days them was—not like now, when your trench is as safe as England, and you don't 'ave to worry about your flanks or something. Those days you never know where you was or who was on your right or nothing. 'Alf the time you was in touch when you thought you wasn't and left be'ind when you thought you was! Them was real fighting days, them.

"Ah, marche! Lor! When we went through Crecy me boots was off and 'alf the regiment was done in. Me feet were bleeding, all me ammunition was gone, and I'd lost me bayonet. Them were days!"

* * *

They work hard. At night they dream of lying in the open under howitzer fire, of cavalry charges and of departed friends. Smoking their pipes, they meditate on the past. Arguments are usually beneath them, and when they do take a hand in a discussion it is to give the final decision which proves the question.

Their jobs are sometimes extremely odd ones. There is a man in a little village behind the firing line who looks after his regiment's billets when they are away in the trenches. He has done that duty since Neuve Chapelle and expects to do it until the war is over.

And what of the units? As the men who made up the units have gone, the units, though walking under the same titles, are not the same. There is a different style about them—the new style, which is essentially the style of the citizen soldier. All that remains of the old forces are its spirit, its form, its badges, and its traditions. These the Kitchener fellows live up to worthily, as if in recognition of the men who stemmed the first German tide, hurled it back—and disappeared.

What is left of the army itself? The weapons they fought with; the trenches they built; the friendships that they made with the people of Flanders. The marks of their prowess lie unburied in No Man's Land—thousands of corpses in field grey, tokens of countless broken enemy attacks. Numbers of their own men—alas!—lie with them. They have left their glory to shine like fire over the shell-hammered line. Their graves are as thick as the poppies along the fields and roads of France.

But the Old Army itself is one with that of Spain and Waterloo. Only its soul remains—in the bagpipe music, the drums and strains of "Tipperary." —"Three Stars," in the London Daily Mail.

SIRIUS AND DOG DAYS.

Time Has Worn Away the Link That Bound Them Together.

The dog days, when excessive heat is supposed to prevail, begin July 3, according to the ancient reckoning, and continue to Aug. 11. All sorts of traditions and superstitions are connected with this period, and various dates are also given.

In some sections the dog days are said to begin on July 24 and to end on Aug. 24, while still others attribute the malevolent influence of the dog star upon the earth to the period from Aug. 4 to Sept. 4, in accordance with the ancient Egyptian reckoning.

As a matter of fact, the rising of the Dog star, Canis Majoris of Sirius, has nothing to do with the affair at all. The rising of that star has been so accelerated by the procession of the equinoxes during the passage of more than 2,000 years that the corresponding conditions for the ancient dog days no longer exist.

In ancient times in the latitudes of the Mediterranean the period of greatest heat nearly corresponded with that time in which the dog star rose at the same time with the sun. To this conjunction all antiquity and all the later followers of judicial astrology attributed a malignant influence.

Among the modern notions regarding the dog days is the absurd belief that it is during this period that dogs are most likely to go mad.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Romans Dressed for Dinner.

A sartorial authority says that the custom of dressing for dinner began with the Romans. It was a simpler procedure than at present. A loose robe of fine material was donned for the evening meal, preferably at home, but in cases where guests came from a distance to the home of the host he kept a supply of dinner clothes on hand for the use of the guests who came unprovided.

Misery loves company, but the company doesn't always reciprocate.

UNSI[illegible] PIM[illegible]
COVERED HI[illegible]
B.B.B. Cur[illegible]

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, a medicine that has been in use for over 40 years, so you do not experiment when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. My face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B. B. B. so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER
FOR FIVE YEARS.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the soreness of the stomach, belching of wind, heartburn, water brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will clear away all the effete matter which collects in the system and thus do away with constipation and all its allied troubles.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Brittania Bay, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach and liver for the past five years, and have had constipation causing headache, backache and dizzy spells, and sometimes I would almost fall down. I tried all kinds of remedies without obtaining any relief. I commenced using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and they have cured me. I have recommended them to many of my friends, and they are all very much pleased with the results they have obtained from their use."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, 25c. a vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FALL SPRAYING.

(L. Caesar, Provincial Entomologist.

Failure to finish the spraying of their orchards last spring owing to the wet weather and impassable condition of the ground has led a number of fruitgrowers to ask whether it would not be advisable to do at least part of the spraying in the autumn and thus make the task in the spring lighter. There seems no good reason why such a course should not be adopted in peach districts and wherever the San Jose scale is found. In fact the writer suggested this step last winter at the annual fruitgrowers' meetings at Grimsby and St. Catharines.

There is not a great deal of data of an accurate kind on which to get information about the value of fall spraying. It has, however, often been used for the control of San Jose Scale and has frequently given good satisfaction. Cornell authorities have tested it on peaches for Leaf Curl and fee fairly confident that the result justified them in advising them to spray at least part of their orchards in the autumn for this disease. Some Elberta peach trees near Grimsby that were sprayed last autumn, but not this spring, were this spring almost totally free from Leaf Curl, in fact quite as free as those sprayed in the spring. This leads us to hope that we may look for the control of the Leaf Curl by fall spraying as well as if the work were done in the spring. An old apple orchard badly infested with San Jose scale and situated near Grimsby was sprayed well in the autumn, and next spring when I examined it I could find practically no living scale.

Consequently I consider it the part of wisdom for any person who has a large acreage to cover in the spring to do a portion of this in the autumn, and to observe the comparative value of the two times of spraying.

The results will not always be uniform, especially against the scale, because they depend to a very great extent on the weather. If the spraying is done in dry, sunny weather, and if such weather continues for a few days afterwards, the effect will usually be much better than if the work is done on cold days or is followed soon by hot weather. This, of course, holds true also of the spring, but not to the same extent, because the expanding leaves soon help to break the force of driving and washing rains which remove considerable of the spray mixture.

A strong objection to fall spraying is that the trees are not pruned at the time of the year and therefore to do thorough work one must go very slowly and use more of the mixture. This, however, is not so important an objection in the case of small or average size trees, such as peaches, but it is a much more serious objection to the spraying of large apple trees unless they have been kept well pruned. It is well, however, to remind all those who have large apple trees badly infested with scale that the easiest way to destroy the scale on these trees is to give them as thorough a spraying as they can in the autumn, and then, after pruning, and, if necessary, scraping, give them another very good, strong application in the spring; for not more than one man out of five will control a bad case of scale on large trees without giving the double application. It is very difficult to give both of these in the spring, and, therefore, one should be given in the autumn.

In districts where there is no San Jose Scale the best course of procedure would seem to be to omit the fall spraying and to postpone the spraying of apples until the buds have just burst or are bursting so as to give some protection to the young foliage against apple scab, that very destructive and troublesome disease. There is very little danger of burning the foliage on apple trees at such a date even with the regular strength or almost the regular strength of lime-sulphur ordinarily used for a dormant spray.

Where spraying is done in the fall it should not take place until after the leaves are nearly all off the trees and only on bright, sunny days. Such weather as the so-called Indian summer would be ideal for it, and we usually have a week or so of this weather in November. At present I do not feel like advising the spraying of pears, plums or cherries in the fall, because I think that one is a good deal more likely on the average to get better results by spring spraying against the Pear Psylla and the Brown Rot. I do not see how fall spraying could have much effect on either of these, at any rate spraying with lime-sulphur.

The strength of the fall mixture should be the same as for the spring, [illegible] 035 specific gravity, or 1 gallon [illegible] commercial [illegible] 7 gallons of [illegible] an [illegible] present, and [illegible] llon of the [illegible] om [illegible] gallons of [illegible] ter, where there [illegible] no San Jose scale. If rabbits [illegible] troublesome, give the trunks of all younger trees a good drenching, because there is reason to believe that rabbits will not feed on bark covered with lime-sulphur. Of course the mixture will wash off the trunks after a time and should be re-applied when necessary. This may be done with a whitewash brush and a pailful of lime-water.

PRUNING.

Man wants large fruits of color, flavor and marketing qualities, hence his idea is to thin, dispose of the worthless and improve the quality. Left to Nature, many of our fruit trees would produce wood, leaves, flowers, etc., at the expense of fruit. To overcome this tendency the trees must be pruned. The first thing necessary in pruning the tree is to examine it carefully, note the branching; see that the head is open so that it will admit the sunlight; watch for branches that cross and turn into the head; take out dead and diseased branches; watch for laterals that extend too far from the general growth of the tree. In removing branches the cut should be made close to the body of the tree, so that it will callous over readily and the danger of rot fungus will be reduced to a minimum. Cut out no more than is necessary for the sake of the tree. Sharp pruning saws, knives, clippers, etc., are necessary. Before going into the orchard to prune the equipment should be sharpened and in good condition. It is generally advisable to gather up and burn the branches rather than leave them in the orchard very long. If there are diseased specimens and insects in branches they can be destroyed. Often this is the case.

NOTES.

Navel disease, which infects colts soon after foaling, can easily be prevented by providing clean and sanitary stalls for the mares and colts, and keeping the stable well disinfected, according to J. S. Coffo., of the Animal Husbandry Department, Ohio State University. The disease is easily transmitted from old bedding, sawdust or barnyard scrapings. Only clean and new straw should be put in the stall and a strong solution of iodine kept handy for bathing the navel cord of the colt. The first milk of the mare contains colostrum, a natural laxative, and is essential in keeping the young colt in good condition. Therefore, mares should not be milked before or soon after foaling. In a few days both mare and colt can exercise in the pasture lot.

TRAPPERS!
Send your RAW FURS
to JOHN HALLAM
[illegible]
FREE [illegible]
JOHN HALLAM Limited
201 Hallam Building, Toronto.

Cows are naturally quiet, and wish to be milked. Wash your hands before starting to milk. Take the stool in the left hand and the bucket in the right. Keep firm control over both, and do not let the bucket touch the floor. Before sitting down speak to the cow in a kind, firm voice. Never kick her or hit her. Sit well under the cow, so as to get all the teats well over the top of the bucket. Before starting, pass the hand down the teats to remove any pieces of hay or straw that may be on them. Keep all dirt from the bucket. Milk with dry hands. As far as possible, milk the two fore teats first and then the two hind ones. Keep milking with both hands right up to finish. Do not let one hand be idle. Do no laugh, talk or shout in the stable. Be sure to milk the cow out thoroughly. Learn to be thorough; quickness will come with practice.

Experience has proved late fall plowing to be the most effective preventative of cut worm damage. The larvae hatch in the fall and harbor in the soil through the winter. Late fall plowing exposes these to the elements, and in this way they are destroyed. Fall plowing will also assist in the fertilization of the ground, and it will put it in excellent shape for early spring use.

During fall and spring, when temperatures are moderate, pigs drink the right amount of water if they have access to it. In cold weather, when the water is chilly, they will not drink enough for best results. Then it must be fed to them in the form of slop feed. The young pigs and breeding stock need more water than fattening stock.

Balancing the hogs' ration is a very nice problem. They will not thrive on a ration that is low in protein, as, for instance, corn and water. Such a ration, too, is deficient in mineral matter and variety. When fed an excessive amount of protein, on the other hand, pigs will be equally stunted.

A man who depends upon milk or its products as the main source of his income from his live stock must have cows that produce milk much above the average.

Sore Corns Go!
Absolutely Painless
No cutting, no plasters or pads to press the sore spot. Putnam's Extractor makes the corn go without pain. Takes out the sting overnight. Never fails—leaves no scar. Get a 25c bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor to-day.

New British Sea Colonies

To a race of islanders like the British the idea of hoisting the British flag over an enemy isle makes a strong and romantic appeal.

This is intensified by the fact that our Australian cousins have taken and occupied most of the islands captured during the war.

The first islands to be taken were those of the glorious tropical paradise, Samoa, consisting of Upolu and Savaii; the other island of the group, Tutuila, being already an American naval station.

The New Zealanders, under an Australian naval escort, took possession of this group, and the British flag was soon floating in the breeze opposite the residence of Dr. Schultze, the German governor.

Samoa is the most important group in the Pacific, and some miles from the coast, upon a spur of the hills, the Germans had erected at enormous cost a most up-to-date wireless station which can give and take messages to San Francisco. This wireless station and plant were simply put out of commission by the removal (by the Germans) of a few important parts, but was quickly restored to working order by the clever operator who landed with the New Zealand Expeditionary Forces.

Samoa is famous all the world over as the last home of Robert Louis Stevenson, and his resting-place is marked by a gigantic granite stone, the grave being on one of the highest peaks in the island. His old home, Vailima, is now the headquarters of the administrator.

Apia roadstead was the scene of that historical cyclone when H. M. S. Calliope, as she escaped, was cheered by the crews of the sinking American warship and the other doomed vessels.

It was also in Samoa, not long ago, that Americans, Germans and British joined forces in subduing a native rebellion.

The Island of Upolu is one of great beauty, hills rising above hills, all clothed with tropical verdure. The roads all over the island are good, and almost everyone owns a horse or horses and buggies.

British, French, American, and German residents have got many valuable cocoa plantations; besides which there are also cocoanut plantations, bananas, taro, and many other tropical fruits, vegetables, and plants.

The buildings and building places at Apia, the capital, are of an up-to-date and substantial character, and the European habitations all over the island are roomy, well-built, and comfortable.

The natives are a fine race, courtly and intelligent, and essentially a warlike race. Those who have heard the beautiful native melodies that they sing in chorus can never forget the beauty of the scene and setting.

Thousands of Chinese were introduced by the Germans, in order to work the plantations, for the natives are averse to labor; but although the Chinese are splendid workers, they are a menace to white and native alike.

Upola covers an area of 345 square miles, while Savaii boasts 660 (Manono and Opaluma are small tributary islands), the whole population of the latter not exceeding 3,600, of which five hundred are white and a thousand half-caste; the bulk of Europeans and half-castes are on Upolu.

German New Guinea was another valuable capture, Kaiserwilhelmland, as it is called, being taken after a slight resistance.

At Herbershoe, the capital and seat of German Government, the Germans have erected a fine wireless station capable of transmitting messages very long distances.

The verdure of New Guinea is remarkable for its beauty and variety, almost every tropical tree and plant flourishing there, while even forget-me-nots grow on the higher grounds.

In contrast to the magnificent birds of paradise and the many beautiful species of parrots and cockatoos, the islands abound in snakes and poisonous insects.

New Guinea is hardly a health resort, for malaria is very prevalent, and the natives are savage and cruel, and cannibals of the worst type.

Gold, sulphur, iron, copra, mother-of-pearl, tortoise-shell, and other products form the island trade, and the German settlements contain some fine and comfortable buildings, both commercial and residential.

About seven hundred Europeans are included in the population of 110,000, spread over 70,000 square miles. New Guinea, north of Australia, is the second largest island in the world, with enormous commercial possibilities.

The Solomon Islands, including Benjamville and Buka, with an area of 4,200 square miles, and a population of 45,000, have been in the hands of the Germans since 1881. Here again the natives are a cruel and warlike people, inveterate head-hunters and cannibals, though living in one of Nature's most picturesque spots, the scenery being almost without equal. Copra and cocoanut fibre are the chief exports.

TEETH DANGERS.

Hidden Troubles Carry Disease Germs Into Body.

According to many medical authorities many of the ills we suffer from own their origin to diseased or decayed teeth. Such affections as rheumatism, Bright's disease, heart failure and grave joint and muscular conditions are traced to a common starting point—diseased teeth and gums. Unhealthy teeth and gums conceal pus pockets, and as this pus exudes it is swallowed and taken into the system. A prominent dentist says one diseased tooth whose roots are eaten away by the disease known as pyorrhoea contains enough poison in the form of pus to take life. The pus exudated from the gums surrounding teeth affected with pyorrhoea amounts to as much as a teaspoonful a day. All this is unconsciously swallowed and taken into the system, where it acts as a poison, stimulating into activity often times quiescent conditions already created.

Bad teeth conditions are the cause of dyspepsia, headache, neuralgia, intestinal trouble, anaemia and affections of the joints. Even appendicitis, insomnia, melancholia and conditions resembling epilepsy have been traced to root abscesses of the teeth which were not revealed by pain locally. Wherever pus is it makes an effort to work its way out. It cuts its way through bone and muscle relentlessly.

Neglect to entirely fill the root canal in a tooth brings trouble. Probably a tiny bit of dead nerve has been left remaining, and this decomposes and an abscess forms, then pus from this works its way toward the jaw, through the root of the tooth, and necrosis of the bone takes place. Hidden abscesses on the roots of teeth covered up with fillings or gold crowns are a common cause of nervous and mental conditions. The nerve supply to the teeth is in direct touch with the nerves which communicate with the brain. The pain in the tooth is quickly transferred to the brain and the disease of the nerve in the tooth creeps along to the nerves which go to the brain and also to other portions of the body through general nerve distribution.

Almost any systemic disorder can arise from diseased teeth. Rheumatism has again and again been caused by absorption of the pus from diseased teeth and gums. In the majority of cases of rheumatism the heart becomes affected, the valves becoming ulcerated and roughened and permanently injured, so that they cannot close properly, and the patient has what is called a "leakage" in the heart.

X-ray pictures of the teeth should be taken of anyone suffering from an obscure disease or a condition which is not relieved by treatment. Persons who have apparently no existing disease or painful condition of the teeth or jaws have gone to a physician for treatment for a trouble in some other portion of the body and were not relieved until after a dentist was called in and found the cause of trouble to be bad bridge work or unhygienic and irritating crowns. The X-ray picture reveals pockets of pus, impacted teeth, hidden roots and unhealthy conditions of the teeth and jaws, and it would be an admirable way to detect and ward off many systemic diseases if one should elect to have a picture of this portion of his face made every year. If the prevention of so many diseases can be brought about by taking care of the teeth or having existing badly treated or neglected teeth extracted, it becomes the duty of everyone to go to a dentist several times a year to have his teeth examined for a possible trouble, and this is vitally necessary if he should be suffering from rheumatism or any other systemic condition which does not promptly yield to medical treatment.

You never can tell. A man may be absent-minded and still have a good presence.

Do Long Breaths Hurt?

DANGEROUS PLEURISY ALWAYS BEGINS THIS WAY.

Speediest Cure is Nerviline.

Ouch, that stab-like pain in the side is like a hot knife blade in the ribs!

Probably got overheated—cooled too fast—now there is congestion, tightness, such soreness you can't draw a long breath.

This is the beginning of Pleurisy.

Pleurisy is far too serious to neglect a single instant.

Quickest relief will come from a vigorous rubbing with Nerviline. This trusty old pain reliever will fix you up in no time—will take away the congestion—make you well just as it did Mr. Samuel St. Johns, of Stamford, who says: "In running to catch a train last week I became much overheated. I put up the train window and rode that way in order to get cooled off. In an hour my side was so full of pain and my breathing hurt so much that I thought I had pneumonia. I always carry Nerviline in my grip, and at destination I rubbed my side thoroughly three times. The warm penetrating effect was soon noticeable and I quickly got relief. Nerviline I consider saved me from a serious illness."

Any sort of a cold can be quickly broken up with Nerviline, which is a marvel for reducing inflammation, for relieving congestion in the throat and chest, for curing stitch in the side, lumbago, neuralgia, sciatica or rheumatism. Nothing more soothing or powerful. 25c per bottle.

THE CHEMISTRY OF THE WAR

(By Ernest O. Jarvis.)

That chemistry is to decide the issue of the war is now being admitted by the pessimist. Every day passes on to one's lungs something like 450 gallons of nitrogen per 24 hours, this amount of nitrogen would be sufficient to make 30 barrels of trinitrotoluol, or 40 pounds of gun cotton.

At first chemists were wont to regard nitrogen as a singularly uninteresting gas on account of its negative behavior. It did not burn like hydrogen; it did not support combustion like oxygen, and, in short, its presence was generally assumed because of its inactivity and because it did not directly respond to any test, and yet this element is to be the deciding factor of the great war, and when people talk of chemistry and the war they mean one thing only—nitrogen.

This element is the greatest of all munition powers. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that it is nitrogen that it is killing the thousands in the world war of to-day. It is strange to think that you live in an atmosphere containing 80 per cent. of this element which in certain combinations is dealing out death on an appalling scale.

There are practically no useful explosives employed in which the action of nitrogen is not concerned. Without the aid of this element the great ships at sea could not be sunk, innocent victims on land be killed, or property destroyed by aeroplane or dirigibles; while it serves to mow down whole columns of men in the field, for rifles, howitzers, machines, guns, and grenades are all dependent upon it.

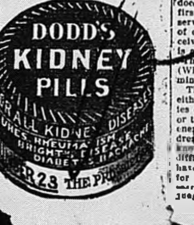
When the eyes of the world were opened by the discovery of that great surgical chemical, carbolic acid, by Runge in 1834, from the part of the coal tar which is given off upon distillation between 150 degrees and 200 degrees, no one ever thought that it would play such a great part in saving lives, and become a thing that today the world couldn't do without, and very few people to-day know that it is this great life saver, carbolic acid, mixed with nitrogen in a certain form that produces picric acid, an explosive used by the British, French and Russians in almost all shells, and that it is nitrogen that gives life, and carbolic acid (which saves it) that, when mixed has become the most terrible destroyer of life ever dreamed of. It is a compound of nitrogen known as laughing gas, which has relieved so many of agony when having their teeth removed.

It is remarkable also that this element, nitrogen, forms the central figure in the protein group or tissue repairing material of our food. To say that without protein we die, means that without nitrogen we die.

Nitrogen's power depends, in the first place, on the fact that it carries in oxygen compounds which are rendered explosive, turning all the elements into a huge volume of gas, itself being set free. The very inertness of nitrogen or its objection to affinity means that on the least provocation it will easily release its partner oxygen, handing this over to the combustion of other elements present with the formation of volumes of gases, the nitrogen returning to what is apparently its congenial condition, the free state in the air. As a fertilizer in the soil nitrogen acts as a stimulant and supplies the necessary food to the plant. In otherwords it is a plant food. Thus the remarkable thing about nitrogen above all other elements is its power to destroy life or to sustain it, according to the associates with which it is in company.

With certain accomplices it forms death-dealing explosives, with others it forms nutritive material, for the human body and the plant life.

It is the essentially romantic element. Devil or God, according to its associates, and this gas, without positive tests, is as necessary in one form for our support as in other forms it is ready to destroy us.



WAS SYMPATHETIC.

Her Attempt to be Chatty Brought Embarrassing Moment.

This is an extract from a letter written by a woman who is willing to share a good joke, even if the laugh is at her own expense:

"It was a damp, windy day—the sort of day that turns straight straggly blond hair like mine into a mass of strings and ends that stick out about the face and neck with frightful effect. I was downtown on a shopping expedition that was exceptionally trying, and I knew I looked so bad that I carefully avoided all chance of glances into mirrors, for I was sure I could not, under the circumstances, improve my appearance much. Recklessly I entered a tearoom with a friend whom I happened to meet.

"As I placed my shopping bag on the floor near the table at which we were to sit, another bag, exactly like my own, was put beside it. Quite naturally my glance followed the hand and arm up to my neighbor, and as I met her look I said to myself, 'She has hair just like mine—sticking out in every direction—and she looks even worse than I do, poor thing!'

"Naturally, my heart went out to her in a great wave of sympathy. We smiled simultaneously as our troubled eyes met, and I said aloud and quite distinctly, 'If we are not careful we shall get our shopping bags mixed!'

"The moment the words were out of my mouth I wished very earnestly that the floor would mercifully open and let me through. It did not require the subdued snicker from the nearby tables to awaken me to the realization that I had been addressing the image of myself in the mirror of which the entire side of the shop was formed. Do you get the picture!"—Youth's Companion.

PILES CURED at HOME By New Absorption Method

If you suffer from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles, send me your address, and I will tell you how to cure yourself at home by the new absorption treatment; and will also send some of this home treatment free for trial, with references from your own locality if requested. Immediate relief and permanent cure assured. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Write today to Mrs. M. Summers, Box P 8, Windsor, Ont.

Wounded Huns Show Kultur

(By One Who Nurses Them, Writing in the London Daily Mail.)

In a remote corner of England, nestling in the fold of downs that in pre-war days saw nothing more warlike than a flock of sheep and their shepherd, is to be found a group of tin huts. Very small and unimportant they look in the distance; almost like some stranded farm buildings. On closer inspection they appear more spacious, and are found to be surrounded with a high, unfamiliar fence of barbed wire.

Outside the fence is a constant guard. For this is a war hospital—not such as is familiar, too familiar, to all British mothers and sisters, but one to which wounded prisoners of war are brought and where they are nursed back into such health and well-being as can remain to them.

They come in convoys of one or two hundred, brought hither by train and ambulance from a seaport some miles away.

Sometimes they arrive in their German uniforms, with the clay of the trenches thick upon them. More often they come sweet and clean and in the kit provided at the base hospital.

In the early days, when we were first notified that we were to look after the Huns, the whole staff was somewhat horrified. Later, when the stretchers arrived with their mutilated burdens, the most censorious became the most pitiful, and the gentleness with which the gallant hearted members of the R.A.M.C. handled those stretchers, the untiring zeal with which they tended these wounded enemies, is to me one of the wonders of the war. I am afraid that the Germans, and the officers in particular, attribute our kindness to fear of them.

Quickly the long wards of thirty-four beds are filled, stretcher following stretcher in quiet orderliness; and in an incredibly short time each Hun is fed and washed and his wounds dressed, until by midnight the place assumes the normal appearance of a hospital ward.

TWO PICTURES.

These men sleep in beds as soft as our own men have, between sheets as snowy as we can keep them, and are given the same food as the regulation military hospital diet. No matter how short-handed the staff may be, their wounds are dressed as often as they require. They can write home twice a week, and in all respects are well cared for. They are treated with the greatest tenderness and care.

Wounded, and in captivity, how does the soul of the Hun appear? The first impression is that of an almost servile gratefulness—the gratefulness of one who, expecting the lash, is received with the greatest kindness. It is a gratitude tinged with suspicion. This kindness is the ambush for——? (Who knows the horrors that the Hun mind can conceive?)

The attitude tells one of two stories; either they have been filled with stories of British cruelty to the wounded, or their own treatment of wounded enemies is such that they themselves dread the like. Presently one gets to know them, in spite of the language difficulty (few "sisters" or orderlies have a great knowledge of German), for one quickly gets quite clever at carrying on a conversation in the language which is neither German nor English, but a weird mixture of both, and no matter how one hates the German nation one cannot move and dress individual Germans without getting to know little personal traits about them.

GILLETT'S LYE
MADE IN CANADA
For making soap.
For softening water.
For removing paint.
For disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, closets, drains and for 500 other purposes.
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.
GILLETT'S
LYE

There is a boy of sixteen, a Prussian, who on his arrival seemed frightened out of his life of the "English," and who later followed "sister" everywhere, his watchful eyes anticipating a hundred little services she might require, and who was heard to remark: "English sisters good! English people kind, nix bad!"

Another Prussian, after the first grateful feeling wore off, forgot he was a prisoner, forgot Englishwomen were not Germans, and thought to display his Prussian arrogance in an English ward. The eyes of the guard are ever watchful, but one was horrified at this revelation of the brutal soul.

Many of the men are peasants from little northern villages, with little or no idea of why they fought, their greatest anxiety being if they could correspond with their people. These, when questioned, repeated with blind faith the story of England's aggression, trying meanwhile, one could see, to reconcile the England of which they had heard with the England they were beginning to know. One of these wished to give "sister" his Iron Cross, and when she refused was so hurt that she had to compromise by accepting the ribbon thereof! A souvenir!

A HUN "JOKE."

One finds these peasants the most courageous under the suffering which dressing often entails. The urban lower middle class is by far the most truculent, bearing pain badly, full of petty complaints, and with a good idea of his own importance. His manners are appalling, and on the whole he is the complete Hun.

One man, a Hanoverian, wounded nigh unto death, lies in a special ward enduring tortures beyond the conception of even the most pitiful. The vibration, although it is deadened by means of blankets spread upon the floor, is agony to him, and the footsteps of his comrades in the corridor without bring forth heart-rending moans. This man is quiet and grateful, gazing with weeping eyes into what unknown? A tragedy of loneliness, homesickness and pain.

On the whole, however, one is forcibly reminded that these Huns are of a lower race, nearer the ape on the tree. They have very little tenderness to one another, and the sight of a comrade's pain finds and leaves them callous. I have known them to call a blind comrade across the war, putting an obstacle in his path, and yell with delight when he fell over it!

They are often amusing when they least know it. Their attempts to gain information about our army and navy are particularly funny, for they invariably forget that a woman may have brains and may see the trend of all those questions. When they were forced to believe the news of the Cuffley Zeppelin their rage was almost comical. They got together and talked it over, most excitedly, and then viciously shook their fists at one of our machines which just then was passing overhead. If wishes could make aeroplanes drop, that machine and its pilot would have stood no chance. One returned with an ever-increasing gratitude to the thought of our own men. Their gaiety (no German knows the meaning of that word), their courage, and their bigness of soul contrast so strongly with the ways of the Huns, who are pitiless, stupid and small.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.
Please Mention This Paper.

And the Fool Had It.

A chemistry professor at the University of Kansas tells this story of a seedy looking man who stole aimlessly into a chemist's office and closed the door softly behind him.

"Kin anybody hear what I say in here?" he asked, anxiously.

"Not a soul," the chemist assured him.

Whereupon the man produced a package, carefully wrapped, and handed it to the chemist with the query: "What is this stuff, anyway?"

After examining the contents the chemist replied: "Why, that is iron pyrites, commonly known as fool's gold."

"What is it worth?" asked the seedy fellow.

"Oh, about $4 a ton in carload lots."

"Just my luck," exclaimed the questioner. "Blest if I ain't the biggest fool in the world. I found a lot of that stuff on a widder's farm and I went an' married the widder."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Beading in Colors.

Beading to match and contrast with the bright colors of wool and silk jersey [illegible] is the latest [illegible]. Conventional designs, old fashioned sampler patterns and stiff squares of circle inclosed flowers are chosen for the bead work which appears on the left side of the coat, at the sash ends and on the pockets of coats and skirts alike.

ESCAPE FROM A LOST SUB.

This is no fanciful narrative, something imagined in order to give scope for realism to paint a thrilling picture with broad sweeps of a lurid brush.

Quite the contrary, it is the story of one of those rare, very rare, victories which a man obtains over an apparently inevitable fate, of courage put to the supreme test and winning triumphantly through.

The facts of it are of such compelling interest that they would lose by being over-embroidered with words, wherefore the tale shall be told in a simple, straightforward way, as all really great stories should be.

Something had gone wrong with the submarine, and losing her stability, she sank swiftly to the bottom, a broken and helpless thing. Her steel-nerved crew had quickly been aware of the disaster. With them thought and action were simultaneous. Only seconds were left them for escape, and they wasted none of these precious jewels of time in aimless flurry. The conning-tower hatch was forced open, the commanding officer stationed himself at the foot of it, one by one the crew sprang up the ladder and shot safely to the surface. They were driven through the water like bolts from a catapult by the force of air in the boat.

ALL ESCAPE BUT ONE.

Once disaster almost supervened. A man's clothing caught some projecting machinery and a block in the tower seemed imminent. In a twinkling the clothes were torn free and their wearer floated into safety. Last of all, the commanding officer leaped up the ladder and followed his men. All this occurred in a few seconds, and the situation of the crew struggling for sweet life through the downpouring water may be more easily pictured by the imagination than described in words.

Of the crew all escaped save one. He was shut up in the engine-room astern and could not get out of it in time to join his messmates in their thrilling dash up the conning-tower. Immured within steel walls, nothing apparently remained for him but to stay where he was and die a slow and awful death. But he was not of the kind who give in easily, and he refused to accept as hopeless a position which looked desperately so. He tried to open the hatch overhead. It would not move.

Then he tried again, exerting every ounce of strength he possessed, and still the hatch did not yield. There was sixty feet of water above it, and against the pressure of this dead weight the puny strength of one man was as naught. As well might he have tried to push out a section of the side-plating of the boat. What was to be done? It seemed as though the steel-walled compartment were destined to be his coffin, and such a thing as escape from it hopeless. But, terrible though his plight was, the man did not lose heart. With a coolness and self-possession that was marvellous considering the circumstances, he sat down and calmly thought the situation over.

"Here am I," he reasoned, "shut up in this compartment with only enough air to last me a certain time. If I cannot get out of it before the air becomes exhausted I shall die from suffocation, and I'm not going to do that if I can help it. How can I get out?" After turning this question over in his mind for a few minutes he hit upon an answer to it. "If I let water into the compartment that should equalize the pressure and enable me to open the hatch," he argued. "I may be drowned. Better be drowned doing something than suffocated doing nothing. Anyway, I'll try it." And he did.

Opening the valves he let the sea pour into the compartment. Then, standing upright beneath the hatch, he quietly awaited the result of his intelligently bold action; and that period of waiting was a fearful ordeal for him. The in-leaping water circled about his feet, then climbed to his knees, and so higher and higher about his body. As the water rose it lifted the air with it until the man began to suffer acutely from the heavy air pressure around him. Breathing became difficult, noises sang in his head, he grew dizzy and had to struggle for breath, experiencing the same kind of sensation that a diver does when the air supply goes wrong.

Desperately he fought against a creeping drowsiness which he knew would be fatal if it overcame him, sturdily he wrestled with the vertigo and symptoms of "diver's head" which were slowly, though effectually, mastering even his iron will. All this time the water continued creeping higher and higher up his body; it encircled his waist, it flowed over his shoulders and rose to his chin. What made matters all the more difficult for him was that only a few inches of clear space were left now between the surface of the water and the roof of the compartment, and into this momentarily decreasing area all the air within the place was being compressed.

Picture yourself standing in a room with water up to your chin and the ceiling just above your head, with the water continually lifting until it seems about to touch the ceiling, and you will understand this man's situation. Into the harrowing space between water and ceiling he resolutely kept his head thrust, despite the stifling air pressure, until at last it seemed that the disastrous end so gallantly fought against had come. The man reeled and insensibility came upon him, but in the last moment of fading consciousness he made one superhuman effort and won the life for which he had struggled so heroically. Raising both arms, he gave a desperate push to the hatch overhead; then the black mantle of unconsciousness enveloped him and he knew not whether death or he had conquered. But stout heart had won the victory he so abundantly deserved. Helped by their air pressure beneath it, the hatch had swung up when he pushed against it, and the outrush of air carried the man through the opening.

A few seconds later the crew of a patrol boat saw what they at first thought to be a dead body rise alongside their boat. This was our hero (and he was a hero, was he not?), living, but unconscious. He is living still and has gone back to submarining. Of such stuff is the British bluejacket made.—Jackstaff in the London Daily Mail.

CARDS PRINTED, YOUR NAME. As many as wanted at rate of 38 for 10c. post paid. Low Price. Good work. [illegible] Layton Colin, Woodstock, Ontario.

KEEPS LABOR BUSY.

(Boston Transcript)

"Owens says he gives employmen a large number of men."

"So he does—other people's bill collectors."

A HIGH-SOULED ARTI

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"Fur ten years, mum, I wuz a glass eater wid a circus sideshow," said the frowsy applicant for breakfast.

"How did you happen to lose your position?"

"It was dis way, mum. De bearded lady got sick an' de manager wanted me ter take her place fur a week. Bein' an artist, me soul revolted at practicin' a low deception like dat, an' I quit."

A MYSTERY.

(Judge)

"I can't see why so many people idle their time in crowds."

"Neither can I," replied McFee. "I've stood in hundreds of crowds trying to find out, but haven't succeeded."

MUST BID HIGHER.

(Boston Transcript)

Office Boy—Th' boss his see no callers dis mornin'.

Insistent Visitor—Boy, I'll give you a quarter to take this card in to him.

Office Boy—Aw, shucks! He gives me bigger wages for not doin' it.

THE PROPER HEADING.

(Life)

Heiress—I want every one to know that our engagement is broken.

He—All right. I'll have it put in the papers, under the heading "Business Troubles."

HIS ONLY COURSE.

(Judge)

"What did yo' do, sah, when big Brudder Tuing called yo' a liah?"

"Wh-well, sah," replied smaller Brother Slick, "as de gen'leman am six feet high and weighs mighty nigh a ton, what could I do but move dat we make it unanimous?"

SAME, ONLY DIFFERENT.

(Boston Transcript)

He—Before we were married you used to say there wasn't another man like me in the world.

She—Yes, and now I'd hate to think that there was.

A GOOD REASON.

(Judge)

Horace—There's your friend Simpkins. I am afraid he's going to get soaked to the skin. Why don't you ask him under your umbrella?

Ely—I'm afraid he would recognize it!

A DISTINCTION.

(Boston Transcript)

"You must take me for a miserable fool."

"Oh, no; you are cheerful enough."

AUTOMATIC.

(Washington Star)

"Is your motor car a self-starter?"

"No," replied Mr. Chuggins. "I have to crank it up. But it's a self-stopper all right."

REST THE MIND.

(Puck)

Physician—You shouldn't attend so many picture shows. They are a severe strain on the eyes.

Mrs. Dasher—But think how restful they are to the mind.

DOES HIS SHARE.

(Life)

Minister—And do you forgive your enemies?

Patient—Well, I can't say I exactly forgive them, but I do my best to put them in a position where I can sympathize with them.

THE REVERSE.

(Boston Transcript)

Mother—There, now, don't [illegible] Johnny. You know the Bible says, "Let not the sun descend upon your wrath."

Father—That's all right; but it doesn't say not to let your wrath descend upon the son.

GOOD NEWS.

(Boston Transcript)

Wife (at 2 a.m.)—I have no words to express my contempt for you.

Hubby—Tha's the' bes' news I've heard for a long time, m'dear.

A GOOD REASON.

(Baltimore American)

"I wonder why X was selected as the symbol of the unknown quantity."

"Because none of your friends ever have one when you want to borrow it."

NOT WHAT SHE MEANT.

(Boston Transcript)

She—I trust, Jack, that our marriage will not be against your father's will.

He—I hope not. It would be mighty hard for us if he should change it.

THE REAL MEANING.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"Pa, what's meant by 'party affiliation'?" "That's a term used by diplomatic persons to conceal the real motive which prompts men to hang together in the hope of sharing in the spoils of office."

CAUTIOUS.

(Washington Star)

"How do you account for the election result?"

"I don't try to account for it," replied Senator Sorghum. "That's too far ahead. Until the official count is over I don't intend to quit prophesying on the result."

DIPLOMATIC.

(Courier-Journal)

"Here, you! What do you mean by telling that red-nosed bachelor friend of yours that marriage is all a lottery?"

"I was just about to assure him m'dear, that I won a prize."

RACIAL INSTINCTS.

One Reason, Perhaps, for the Interest Taken in Baseball.

How shall we explain the absorbing interest in baseball and football? In baseball we have a game combining three of the most deep-seated racial instincts—the instinct to throw, to run and to strike. During untold periods of the life history of our race survival has come to him who could throw the straightest, run the swiftest and strike the hardest. To throw something at something is almost as natural for a boy as to breathe.

Throwing, batting, running, are no longer of any service in this age of mind, but they were the conditions of survival in the distant past. Baseball reinstates those ancient attitudes and brings a thrill of cherished memories. Anyone who has ever held a bat in hand and assumed the expectant attitude of the batter knows the peculiar thrill which is explained only by recalling that his distant ancestors in just that attitude beat down with a cool club many an opposing foe, whether man or beast, and those who held clubs in this position and struck hard quickly survived and transmitted this instinct.

The [illegible] throw of [illegible] the [illegible] Eng [illegible] their [illegible] the [illegible] desc [illegible] thro [illegible] child [illegible] Rela

TELESCOPE

Published Every Thursday

ORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48

Phone No. (Nights) 146

BSCRIPTION RATES IN ADVANCE

Canada	$1.50
United States (50c for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain	$1.50
France ($1.00 for Postage)	$2.50

WALKERTON, JANUARY 4th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

LLOYD GEORGE:—"It is not what a nation gains but what it gives that makes it great."

+ + +

THERE are three Canadas: The Canada of sacrifice; the Canada of Selfishness, and the Canada of Indifference. To which do YOU belong? —Manitoba Free Press.

+ + +

NATIONAL service cards are now being sent out by Postmaster Tolton. Every man between 16 and 65 is requested to answer the questions and return the cards promptly to the Postmaster. Do it now.

+ + +

THE troubles of the young ladies are many these days. After learning to knit fairly well they now have to learn to make bread. Never mind, girls, there will be a lot of heroes coming home soon who will be looking for young women who can knit and sing. The old-fashioned duties make happy dispositions.—Port Elgin Times.

+ + +

THE New York Times points out there is nothing in the pretty legend that the United States is feeding Belgium. In 2½ years the American people have contributed eight millions to feed the Belgians. The British Government contributes as much in one month and the British people contribute privately as well.

+ + +

WHEN Sir Robert has gone all over Canada and back again urging the whole nation to serve in unity and prosecute the war with all available power, he will have accomplished very little unless when he gets back he can convince the man whose thoughtful face he sees in his own shaving mirror that all aggressive action waits on him and has long been waiting on him.—Toronto Star.

* * *

Speaking at the Nomination Meeting last week, the retiring Reeve, Mr. Alex. McNab advised the new Reeve, whoever he might be, to lose no time in getting into touch with the Reeves of Brant, Carrick and Cul- [illegible] in connection with the Good Roads by-laws (stating what roads would be designated as County Roads) to the best advantage and to be prepared for the equalization of County Rates in June. Briefly reviewing the past year, he explained that the Town had sold $7,000 worth of consolidated debentures, at par, as some of the holders of the old debentures would not sell out, the town had bettered itself by using the money to buy 5½% of Gov't war bonds. The withdrawal of a man with Alex McNab's ability and knowledge of municipal affairs this year is certainly a distinct loss to the council But Alex will no doubt bob up again later on.

Country Correspondence

Continued from Page 5

PINKERTON

Miss Edith Hilbert of Walkerton, visited at Mr. Albert Pinkerton's for a few days.

Miss Aileen Pinkerton entertained a number of her young friends in her guest's honor on New Year's night.

Two loads of young people from here enjoyed an evening skating at Paisley Rink.

Mrs. N. Garland is visiting friends in Marlette, Mich.

The Annual oyster supper given by the Forester's was held on Tuesday night.

SOLWAY

Mr. M. O'Connor of Toronto is visiting with his brother Mr. C. O'Connor here.

We are glad to report that Miss Margaret Quirk who has been on the sick list for the past week, is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Streeder, spent Sunday of last week, with the latter's parents in Carlsruhe.

The S. S. No 5 School Board has secured a teacher for the coming term, in the person of Miss McLennan of Ripley, Miss Kerr having taken a position elsewhere.

The Annual School meeting was held on Wednesday of last week at No 5. Mr. Norton dropped Trusteeship and his place was taken by Mr. Jno. Haumore Jr.

Mr. Geo. Ernest who spent Xmas and New Year [illegible] home here re- [illegible] Geo. [illegible] ty of work [illegible] lty. [illegible] turned on [illegible] where, be-

BRANT TP. COUNCIL

The Municipal Council of the Township of Brant met as per adjournment on the 15th day of December 1916. Members all present. Minutes of last Meeting of Council read and declared correct.

Johnston—Rowand—That Nominations of candidates for the office of Reeve, Deputy Reeve, and three councillors for the Township of Brant for the year 1917 be held at the Town Hall Walkerton, on Friday the 22nd day of December 1916, and the following named be appointed Deputy Returning Officers and Poll Clerks, and that the place for holding the polls shall be as follows:—

No 1.—Walter Kent, D. R. O. Lorne Campbell, Poll Clerk, Polling Place, at Robt. Longs.

No 2.—Walter Rowand, Chas. Tanner, at John Ernests.

No. 3.—Norman Brocklebank, Chas. Juergens, at John Jagelowski's.

No. 4.—Geo. Sirrs, F. L. Martin, at Public Library, Cargill.

No. 5—D. W. Gregg Sr. Harvey Kerry, at Alex McKeemans.

No. 6.—Wm Tulleck, Geo. Fiddes, at Fred Liepso's.

No. 7.—Fred Jacklin, Jake Schwindt, at Farmers Hall, Malcolm.

No. 8—Eli Mielhbauser, Frank Thaler, at E. Pries' shop.

No. 9.—Julius Holm, Ed Threndyle, at Geo Hosfeldt's.

That the clerk prepare a By-law confirming this resolution.—carried.

Weir—Johnston—That By-law No. 91 A. D. 1916, a By-law confirming the appointment of Deputy Returning Officers, Poll Clerks, appointing places for Polls and Nominations be now read the usual number of times. Passed, signed and sealed.—Carried.

Gregg—Rowand—That the offer of Mulholland, Bird and Graham of Toronto for Hydro Electric Debentures be accepted.—carried.

Rowand—Weir—That the Reeve and clerk issue orders on the Township Treasurer for all accounts passed at this Meeting of council.

Norman Brocklebank, right of way filling at arch gravel	$49 05
Ben Waechter, 30 yds of gravel	3 00
Geo Fiddes, rep. 12th Con bridge and spikes	1 50
A. V. Cooke, work at Maple Hill bridge	1 35
Jas. Smith, Plank on breastwork Lot 5 con 10	2 35
Wm. Blohm, two cement culverts	0 00
Louis Yaeck, for 200, 4 inch Tile	3 00
Archie Young. Laying floor and railing 8th con river bridge	7 00
Vincent Hanmore, 12yds gravel	1 20
David Mauer, 8yds of gravel	80
John Hutton, Bal. on grant	5 00
Melvin Goodby, 185 yds gravel	18 50
Wm Ernest, cleaning ditch and culvert	1 00
M. J. Ernest, cutting brush and ploughing	0 00
Harry Threndyle, grading	5 00
Jas E Metcalf, repairing road at Chrlapin's bridge	0 40
C. J. Schnure, cement culvert tile	16 30
Wm Schleiff, cutting willows	12 80
James Campbell, cedar covering for bridge 8th con	151 39
Wm Atkinson, rep. 12th con bridge	7 00
Frank Lank, grant	25 55
John Mortimer, cleaning creek lot 55 con 8	12 10
Wm Messer, 12 yds of gravel	1 20
Municipal World, debenture forms	3 10
Jas S. Dewar, cement culvert tile	37 25
J. P. Telford, Debenture by-law	15 00
Josiah Dierstlen, putting in culvert, lot 33 con 10	24 30
John Kuntz, rep. for grader	5 20
Chris Fegelo, grading	2 20
Herman Monk, team on grader	2 00
James Crispen, drawing tile and placing same	3 00
Frank Prast, cement culvert tile	5085
Noah Wihlfang, use of Hall for Nomination 1915	4 00
Robertson & McNab, solicitors re Debentures	12 15
John Desmond, cutting and piling brush	40 00
Wm Krohn, drawing tile and placing same	5 00
John R. Brown, Lamb killed by dogs	10 00
Geo Craig, drawing and placing culvert tile	8 60
C. W. Keeling, payment in full of account re Richardson family	35 00
A. E. McNab, Bruce Preparedness league buttons	7 50
Jas Tolton, northern Exhibition grant	25 00
Dr. Bricker, Provincial B O H and B O H meetings	15 50
Wm Rowand, B. O. H meeting	2 30
Martin Monk, services as sanitary Inspector	57 95
R. S. Nesbitt, committee work $40.70, council meeting 2.70, B O H meeting 2 25 signing debentures 2.50 refund of dog tax for 5 ratepayers 5.00, presentation of gold to soldiers 105.00
Total	158 21
A. Weir, committee work 35.00 council meeting 2.70	38 30
W. A. Rowand, committee work 25.15, council meeting 2.85	28 00
Wm Johnston, committee work 24.00, council meeting 3.20	27 20
D. W. Gregg, committee 23.40 council meeting 2.60	26 00
Fred Jacklin, ½ yrs. salary 50.00, postage and stationery 11.40, signing debentures 3.00	64 40
W. A. McCallum, ½ yrs salary $100.00, judges court of revision $2.00, B O H meeting 2.40, postage 1.30, sealing debentures 2.00	137 70
Sydney Parker, judges court of revisions	3 00

Rowand — Johnston — That this council do now adjourn.

W. A. McCALLUM,
Clerk

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Happily Celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. James Tolton, Surrounded by the Members of Their Family from East and West.

On the 27th ult. at the residence of the bride's father, Elmbrook, by Rev. James Black, Mr. James Tolton, Township of Brant, County of Bruce, eldest son of Henry Tolton Esq. Eramosa, to Miss Bessie Parkinson, third daughter of Joseph Parkinson Esq., Eramosa—Guelph Mercury, Jan. 3 1867.

Fifty years ago last Wednesday a happy event took place at Elmbrook, Eramosa Tp, the home of Mr. Joseph Parkinson, when his daughter Bessie, and Mr. James Tolton, a young farmer of Brant Tp. plighted their troth "for better or for worse until death do us part." The bride was assisted by Miss Lovisia Parkinson, and the best man was Mr. John Tolton.

The intervening years have wrought innumerable changes. The long years of pioneer life on the farm have left their mark on the bride and groom of '66 but on the whole, time has dealt leniently with them. Both live to enjoy pretty good health and strength, a comfortable period of retired life, and to take a justifiable pride in the large family of boys and girls who have gone forth from the home circle to take their place in the world and to make good citizens everyone.

Mr. Tolton has in an exceptional degree received and merited the public confidence. He served eighteen years in all in the Township Council, ten years as Reeve, six years as Deputy-Reeve. Later he was Warden of Bruce County and at one time contested South Bruce unsuccessfully for the Dominion Parliament. Ever since 1867 he has been connected with the Northern Exhibition, for the greater portion of the time as Secretary. From first to last he has shown himself a conscientious and public-spirited servant of the people and his record of public Service is one which is rarely equalled.

On Wednesday of last week the members of the family assembled to do honor to their father and mother on the occasion of the fiftieth Anniversary of their marriage. The children present were:—Henry and Ernest of Oak Lake, Man., James F. of Brant, Edwin and Archie of Brant, Mrs. W. J. Richardson of Brant, Mrs. D. C. Wilson of Toronto. The only absent one was the youngest son, Alfred, who is now in Flanders, battling for King and Country. There are also twenty-five grandchildren, most of whom were present. The eldest grandchild, Mrs. (Rev.) E. Pound, received a cable from her husband at the Front, offering his felicitations to the bride and groom.

At 6 p. m. Wednesday, the Company of about fifty persons sat down to a royal spread. Present on this occasion was Mr. John Tolton, postmaster of Walkerton, who fifty years ago was best man. The venerable best man's hair has changed its shade in the intervening years, but it was noted that he is just as erect and as clear-eyed and possibly as eager to enjoy a bit of a joke. The oldest son, Henry, occupied the position of Toastmaster, and introduced a very nice toast list. The "King" was proposed by Mr. E Parkinson and honored in the usual fashion. The "Bride and Groom" was proposed by the second son, James, and responded to by the groom who in a few appropriate words expressed his great thankfulness. God had dealt kindly with him. "The family" was proposed by Mr. L. Parkinson, brother of the bride, and replied to by Mr. J. E. Tolton. The toast "Our Brother At the Front" was well proposed by Mr. John Tolton and replied to by Mr. G. E. Tolton. "The Ladies" proposed by W. A. Tolton was responded to by the sisters and sisters-in-law who ably acquitted themselves being quite equal to the occasion. The toast-list was interspersed by some well appreciated solos by Mr. Gus Royce, and recitations by the grand-children. The affair was greatly enjoyed by old and young and will always be a memorable occasion in the lives of all who were present.

The gifts received by the bride and groom were innumerable and well-chosen. One son presented twenty five dollars in gold. An address and present from old neighbors was one of many highly-appreciated gifts. Expressions of Congratulation were received by mail and otherwise, from many of the wide circle of friends in Walkerton and district who prize the friendship of this worthy couple and hope that they will enjoy many happy returns of their Wedding Anniversary.

C. O. F. Officers

Court Bruce No. 50, C. O. F., elected officers for 1917, on Tuesday evening of last week as follows:—

C. R.—Wm. VanHorne
V. C. R.—E. Weiss
Fin. Sec.—E. H. Sheffield
Rec. Sec.—A. S. Royce
Treas.—N. Crawford
Chaplain—Thos. Singer
S. W.—Wm. Yeates
J. W.—Thos. Hyslop
S. B.—Fred Scholtz
J. B.—Alex Coates
C. P.—M. Stalker and R.T. Porter
Auditors—E. Walford and E. Weiss
Trustees — N. Crawford, E. H. Sheffield, A. S. Royce.

The Court is expecting a visit some time in January from the High Chief Ranger, James Stewart of Perth. Mr. Stewart, who is an able public speaker has held this high office for thirteen years in succession.

RHEUMATISM WAS MOST SEVERE

Dreadful Pains All The Time Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. LAMPSON

Verona, Ont., Nov. 11th., 1915.

"I suffered for a number of years with Rheumatism and severe Pains in Side and Back, from strains and heavy lifting.

When I had given up hope of ever being well again, a friend recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to me and after using the first box I felt so much better that I continued to take them, and now I am enjoying the best of heath, thanks to your remedy".

W. M. LAMPSON.

If you—who are reading this—have any Kidney or Bladder Trouble, or suffer with Rheumatism or Pain In The Back or Stomach Trouble—give "Fruit-a-tives" a fair trial. This wonderful fruit medicine will do you a world of good, as it cures when everything else fails.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Fall Clearing Sale of WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

There are:—

Dining Room, Parlor, Hall, Sitting Room, Bath Room, and Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Training For Business

For 35 Years the NORTHERN Business College OWEN SOUND, ONT. has been a leader among the institutions specializing in training for commercial pursuits. The courses of study embrace every subject of use in conducting business. Actual practice is given in required duties.

Special courses for young ladies who wish to qualify for office positions during the war.

Winter term begins Jan. 2nd, but students may enter any time. Write for Catalogue.

C. A. FLEMING, Principal.

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'll like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO,
Next to Vogan's Hardware

The Time The Place The Price

NOW is the time. Men, while our range of Spring Clothe is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

One School That Merits the confidence of the public because of its High Grade work is the ELLIOTT Business College.

Toronto, Ont. We train young women to become skilful and expert stenographers, typists, bookkepers, commercial teachers, clerks, cashiers, or general office assistants in from four to six months and assist them to get positions. Winter Term opens Jan. 2. Catalogue free.

Yonge and Charles Sts. W. J. ELLIOTT, Prin.

To Our Friends and Patrosn We Extend The Season's Greetings

R. L. Gibson

IT'S Remarkable how children out-grow their smocks and frocks, their playthings their childish ways and most of all, their photographs. Only photographs will keep them as they are.

FRASER STUDIO

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Nothing more suitable than a Trunk, Bag or Suit Case for a Christmas present. See our nice stock.

McCARTER Harness Co.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL.

A. HEHN
City Bakery

Winter Goods

Axes We have a good supply of Axes, ranging in price from 85c to $1.25. Try a Samson, fully guaranteed at $1.25.

Saws There is none better than the Celebrated Improved Razor Cross Cut Saw.

Mitts We have a full line of Winter Mitts and Gloves.

Granitware When in need of Granitware, don't forget our "Old English."

We also carry Sausage Grinders and Fillers, Meat Saws, Butcher Knives.

S. W. VOGAN

She hath done what she could

Every married man in the ranks of Canada's soldiers means that his wife gave her consent.

His the sacrifice, the danger, yes—but his also the interest of a new experience, the companionship of comrades, the inspiration of action, the thrill of the advance, and the glory of victory.

Her's the pitiful parting, the weary waiting, the fevered watching for the dreaded message, the gruelling grind of daily responsibility for those dependent upon her—and her alone.

No, No; not alone! Not alone, as long as the people whose battles her husband is fighting have a heart in their bosoms or a dollar in their pockets.

Not alone—as long as Canadian manhood and womanhood knows the meaning of the word "trust." Not alone, as long as Generosity is the handmaiden of Duty and Privilege.

Only an appreciation of the need is required by those of us who here at home keep the hearth fires burning. Not for some of us the supreme sacrifice, but for one and all of us at least that whole-hearted answer to the cry of patriotism that never yet has failed to go ringing around the world when the call has come.

GIVE — GIVE — GIVE as your own heart prompts you, give to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. $6,000,000 must be raised in Ontario for the vital necessities of the great work of caring for the needy families of Ontario's men at the front.

Every case is carefully investigated, everything humanly possible is done to eliminate mistakes and prevent imposition—but to the needy is held out a helping hand, without lavishness, but with the determination to see no real want unsupplied.

You are again offered the great privilege, not of charity, but of recognition of the magnificence of Canadian Wifehood.

Remember, if the Man is a Hero, the Woman is a Martyr.

"She hath done what she could"

Ontario is being asked to assure the Canadian Patriotic Fund that it can depend on having six million dollars in 1917 for the families of Ontario's soldiers.

Four million of these dollars must be secured from individual subscriptions. If there is no Branch of the Fund in your town or county send your subscription direct to the Head Office, Canadian Patriotic Fund, Vittoria street, Ottawa.

13

160th B COLL BADGE

(Gold Plated)

Made into a handsome brooch.

Only 50cts

Orders for this brooch mailed postage free.

C. A. FOX
Jeweller and Optician

The Central Grocery

Family Flour
$4.00 Per Bag

Granulated Sugar
$8.00 Per Bag

BUY EARLY.

A word to the wise is sufficient

W. G. Searle
Phone 181 - Walkerton

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that a By-law was passed by the municipal council of the Township of Brant, on the 6th day of November, 1916, providing for the issue of Debentures, to the amount of $2,600, for the purpose of Hydro Electric Power and Light for the village of Elmwood, in the Township of Brant, that such By-law was registered in the Registry Office for the registered division of the County of Bruce on the 22nd day of December, 1916. Any motion to quash or set aside the same or any part thereof, must be must be made within three months after the first publication of this notice, and cannot be made thereafter.

Dated this 20th day of Dec. 1916.

M. A. McCallum,
Clerk of Brant Township.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the Co [illegible] of Bruce and Province of Ontar [illegible] the grounds of adultery and [illegible] duct.

DATED [illegible] WA [illegible] of Decem [illegible]

PRINGLE: T [illegible]
& COTE. [illegible] Bank Building,
Ottawa, Ont.
Solicitors for Applicant.

48—9

FOR SALE

Part of Lots 24 and 25, Concession 3, S. D. R., Township of Brant, Co. of Bruce, containing 5 acres more or less.

On the property are a brick veneered house and a frame stable, etc and a good orchard.

This is the property belonging to the late James Coulter and is situated about half a mile from Walkerton.

This property is very suitable for a retired farmer.

For terms apply to
A. Collins,
Barrister, etc.
Walkerton.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Start the year backed by the confidence that your friends and folks at home are still your best friends.

You Can Visit Them By

NEW YEARS EXCURSIONS VIA Canadian Pacific

SINGLE FARE—Going December 30, 31 and Jan. 1st. Return limit Jan. 2.

FARE AND ONE-THIRD—Going Dec. 29, 30, 30 and 31st. Return limit. January 3rd.

Tickets on Sale Now.

TAL

L. D. S., D. D. S.
sor to Dr. Coram. employed in all den- Special attention to bridge and inlay work. Three east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C. L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.

Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.

Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN

Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.

Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.

MONEY to LOAN

REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies -- English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

January Government and Municipal Bond Investments

Such securities are regarded as combining in the highest degree the essentials of good investments, safety of principal and good income return.

Security.	Due
BRITISH EXCHEQUER	1920
DOMINION OF CANADA	1925
DOMINION OF CANADA	1931
DOMINION OF CANADA STOCK	1919
PROV. ALBERTA	1926
PROV. SASKATCHEWAN	1920
PROV. SASKATCHEWAN	1921
PROV. SASKATCHEWAN	1923
PROV. MANITOBA (Guaranteed)	1936
GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC BRANCH LINES (Guaranteed by Prov. Sask.)	1939
CITY MONTREAL SCHOOLS	1951
CITY TORONTO, ONT.	1925
CITY TORONTO, ONT.	1949
CITY LONDON, ONT.	1937
CITY LONDON, ONT.	1938
CITY WINDSOR, ONT.	1918-1936
CITY REGINA, SASK.	1934
CITY SOREL, QUE., SCHOOLS	1936
CITY VERDUN, QUE.	1939
CITY HAMILTON, ONT.	1934
CITY MEDICINE HAT, ALTA.	1933
CITY WESTMOUNT, QUE.	1954
CITY ST. HYACINTH SCHOOLS	1918-1947
CITY CRANBROOK, B.C.	1951
TOWN PEMBROKE, ONT.	1933-1946
TOWN AYLMER, QUE.	1947
TOWN SUDBURY, ONT.	1917-1937
TOWN GRAND VALLEY, ONT. (Guaranteed by Co. Dufferin.)	1917-1936
TOWNSHIP DOVER, ONT.	1918-1932
R. M. ASSINIBOIA, MAN.	1917

Copy of January List, with full particulars, on request.

A. E. AMES & CO.
Union Bank Bldg., 53 King W.
Toronto, Can.
Established 1889
Investment Bankers
Montreal Office; Transportation Building

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE

FOR JANUARY

GET better acquainted with Canada and Canadian writers. Read about Canada and Canadians in MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE. Let the best known Canadian writers entertain you, and interpret to the land, life, thought and spirit of Canada and the Canadian people.

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE for January (and every month) is truly a Canadian national magazine. Here is a condensed summary of the principal contents of the January number now on sale everywhere—price 15 cents.

Sir Gilbert Parker The opening chapters of a new serial, "Jordan is a Hard Road"—a story of the Canadian North-West, introducing some old friends.

Stephen Leacock "In Dry Toronto"—rich humor, combined with a latent seriousness. Leacock is always good.

Agnes C. Laut "The Cost of the War"—an international business article by this brilliant Canadian writer, whose intimate friends are bankers and financiers and others with inside knowledge.

Betty Thornley Another Canadian woman writer with the mind of a business man and with a burning love for her western homeland. Her contribution "Putting the Yardstick on Canada," is the story of a journey she made last summer to the Skagway region of British Columbia—a part of that province seldom visited and about which most of us know little.

Main Johnson Mr. N. W. Rowell's secretary, and who accompanied Mr. Rowell on his recent trip abroad, and visited THE FRONT with him. Mr. Johnson contributes a vivid story of what he saw and learned on the Western Front.

rnot Craick writes of the New Shipbuilding Industry in Canada—a timely article on a matter of first Im rtance.

by the following distinguished Canadian short-story writers: Alan Sullivan, A. C. Allenson, Peter McArthur and H. M.

nts Review of Reviews, where are condensed for busy readers the best things in current literature; The Bus- Outlook, a well-informed survey of Canadian business condi- and information for investors, a valuable department for with money invested or looking for investment.

e how truly Canadian MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE is, and how worth-while reading it gives. It is big value for money to ev- an desirous of knowing his own country better, and its mak- rpreters. Get the January number from your bookseller ent.

The January : At all News Agents

MacLean's : 15 Cents

NEIGHBORING VILLAGES, & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

BRANT

An enjoyable Christmas entertainment was held last week at S. S. No 1 (Johnston's School.) The parents and friends were well represented and all had a good time. The children gave a nice program which was greatly enjoyed and which certainly reflected credit on the training which they had received from their efficient teacher, Miss Norrish. Short addresses were given by the trustees and others, Mr. James L. Tolton specially urging the children to turn their thoughts towards agriculture. The enjoyment was rendered complete when old Santa, impersonated by Mr. Alex McLennan, appeared on the scene, laden with nuts and candies. Before the entertainment was brought to a close, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Norrish for the excellent program.

MALCOLM

A large gathering of neighbors and friends took place last week at the home of Mr. Andrew Rae, con. 8, for the purpose of giving a send off to Private John Rae of the 228th Overseas Battalion at present quartered at Toronto. Pte. Rae who was one of the settlers burned out in the New Ontario fire enlisted at Cochrane some months ago. That his action was very much appreciated by his many friends of the home neighborhood was shown in a very tangible way, when Mr. John Milne, on behalf of the people of the neighborhood read a very nice address expressing high appreciation of Private Rae's action in enlisting to fight for those ideals on which the British Empire was founded, and Mr. Thomas Tulloch stepped forward and presented the young soldier with a handsome signet ring and a well filled purse of gold. Mr. Walter Findlay acted as chairman and after a number of speeches, the young people tripped the light fantastic. Pte. Rae comes of a good old fighting stock and will give a good account of himself when he gets Overseas.

MILDMAY

Mr. John Ripke of Bruce Township is visiting at Mr. C. Wendt's this week.

A Leap Year skate was held in the rink on Saturday night.

The box social and entertainment held on Friday night Dec. 29, in the Town Hall by the Carrick Branch of the Bruce County Preparedness League was voted by everyone to be a wonderful success. The program included musical numbers by Weechter's Orchestra, patriotic songs by the ladies of the U. J. K. Club, several selections by a male quartette, speeches by C. M. Bowman M. P. P. and John Rowland. After the program the boxes were auctioneered off by John Purvis. The prize for the box that sold for the most money went to Miss Marion Hogg. The box which sold for the second highest price belonged to Mrs. Thos. Jasper. The prizes for selling the most tickets were awarded as follows: 1st prize, Miss Hilda Coutts, 2nd Mrs. Thos. Jasper, 3rd Miss Marion Hogg. The net proceeds of the evening amounted to close onto $190. A dance was held at the close which lasted till the wee hours of Saturday morning.

Mr. John Wendt has purchased the Harper property which occupies the northern corner of his farm.

The ice in the skating rink is in good shape and thus our young people are able to enjoy a pleasant skate. The admission is 11c the extra cent being war tax.

Mr. E. R. Schwalm left on Tuesday for Toronto where he will work during the winter.

Mr. Wm. F. Wendt spent a few days in Wroxeter last week.

Mr. Harry Gowdy of Listowel spent New Year's Day at his home here.

Mr. Jack Schnurr of the C. P. R. Galt, visited at his home here Sunday and Monday.

Miss Myrtle Lambert returned to Toronto on Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Gowdy of Detroit and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gowdy of Listowel spent New Years at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gowdy.

Miss Zetta Liesemer of the Baden School Staff returned to Baden to resume her duties on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. George Lambertus is laid up this week with an attack of bronchitis.

Miss Delia Schnurr, of Claremont, visited over New Years at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Schnurr.

Pte. Clarence Kraemer of the 204th Batt. The Beavers, Toronto, is visiting at his home here.

Quite a number of our town and vicinity attended the dance and box social at Otter Creek last Wednesday.

The Carrick branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society sent $50.74 to the Society at Toronto. This is a little bit ahead of last year.

Rev. Mr. Holfyard of Victoria College occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church both morning and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wendt of Wroxeter, spent New Year's at Mr. C. Wendt's.

EDEN GROVE

Compliments of the Season and a prosperous 1917 to everybody.

Mr. Allan, Miss Allan and Miss Campbell are holiday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Alexander.

Mr. Fred Fair of Palmerston holidayed at his home in town.

So you notice the days growing longer and the young men's evenings getting shorter with the girls since Christmas—wonder what some of them got.

Mr. and Mrs. Desmond entertained the following guests at the Simcoe House during the holidays:—Pte. Dan Desmond, London; Wm. Desmond, New York; Mattie Desmond (nurse), Toronto; Misses Ethel and Venetia Doyle, Toronto.

Where is our Snowshoeing Club? Time they were making their debut or shadow on the snow

Miss Smith of Hanover and Miss Coelzing of Mildmay have returned home after enjoying a delightful holiday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sailer, King St.

One hook and ladder company nearly had a job when fire broke out on the Captain of the Brigade's premises last Thursday at Jewsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeeman and sons were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rosseau at the Mansion House, Clifford, Christmas Day. Tony is still eating three square meals a day.

Monday was a wearisome day for a lot of people.

One of our good resolutions—Will not eat any more turkey nor drink anything stronger than sloe gin until next Christmas.

Thos. Gregg from the West is renewing acquaintances in this vicinity at present.

Sunny Jim was shining in London during the holidays.

Some girls turned over a lot of new leaves and chalked the fellows' names down in the back of the book who didn't take them for a cutter ride on New Years.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Seiler and family were guests at the Cormick farm near Paisley Christmas. There is no place like out on the farm for a good time.

Mrs. Teasdale and son of Guelph were New Years visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs B. Stansel.

Mr. T. Desmond received a car of mill feed and two cars of corn this week. Tom is the boy for business.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Campbell of Brantford were Christmas visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pearson, "Quality Hill."

Gollies, I ate so much goose I can hardly write.

Mr. and Mrs Gordon Perdue, North Bay, enjoyed the holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Perdue and Mr. Emery's.

The many friends of Mrs. John Killen will be sorry to hear that she is suffering from the effects of a stroke. Nurse Brillinger of Walkerton is in attendance. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Young and Miss Verna Loughleen of Woodstock and Miss Myrtle Elder of Cargill were New Years visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pearson.

No Melinda, that was the preacher. I'm too young to vote.

Mr. and Mrs. English and son Melvin, from the North West are visiting at Mrs. J. C. Taylor's.

Wonder when those fellows will be around again shaking hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Todd and family spent the Christmas holidays with friends in Wingham.

Nothing blue at the Blue home. Mr. and Mrs. A. Blue, King St., were at home Christmas to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Peter Catto and family, Chesley; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gallinger and family, Paisley; Mrs. Catto from the twelfth; Mr. and Mrs. David Cargill and family, Elora Road. Regular family re-union.

Glad to see our representative, D. W. Gregg Jr., elected by acclamation. Still we hope Uncle Dan will not forget to come around and see us sometime just the same.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Scott and family spent Christmas with friends near Paisley.

What did you get? "Sunny" got a bucksaw, axe, snow shovel, 11 boxes of chocolates, 6 ties, and one young lady sent him a pair of braces and told him to brace up.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fair and Percy Fair, Palmerston, are spending New Years in town.

The festival held in the Methodist Church was a decided success, each number being well rendered. The singing by Miss Smith of Hanover was exceptionally fine and was one of the treats of the evening. Grandpa Gregg acted his part as Santa in good style. The members of the different committees as well as those taking part are to be congratulated.

Mr. Herb Pearson is enjoying a few holidays with Woodstock friends.

Mr. Alex. McLean and son John, Paisley, are visiting friends in town.

Seeing nobody lets a list of their visitors we just picked out the best looking ones.

Mrs. Tennant's many friends will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from her recent serious illness. We hope she will soon be around again for the Lord knows we cannot spare any woman in this burg.

Miss Gretta Gregg of Paisley was a holiday visitor in town. Her cousin, Miss Ruby Gregg, accompanied her home.

We didn't express ourselves last week after Christmas dinner. We were too full for utterance.

Rev. Alnack and wife spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Seiler.

Misses Lily Alexander and Frances Seiler rendered a beautiful duet in their usual charming manner at the morning service.

Miss Blanch Powell is spending her vacation at her home in Tara.

They can cut "will obey" out of the marriage ceremony now long as we got our Willoughby elected.

Miss Tena Steda is spending her holidays at her home near Walkerton.

Mrs. Saunders of Cargill called on friends in the Grove last week.

GLAMIS

The S. S. entertainment in the Baptist church on Friday evening was a decided success. The silver collection amounted to about $25.00.

Miss Lottie and Master Jack McNally of Sarnia, are renewing acquaintances here.

The many friends of Mr. Albert Swalwell were pleased to hear of his return from Guelph Hospital last week. Hope to see him around soon.

Mr. J. D. Robertson was appointed trustee for Glamis School last week in the place of Mr. R. J. Nesbitt retiring trustee.

Miss Winnie McLennan, of Detroit, Mich., spent the past week at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Fisher, of Didsbury, Alberta, is here on a visit to her mother Mrs. Neil McArthur.

Miss Ada Cunningham is spending a couple of weeks in and around the burg.

Miss Margaret Campbell, of Harriston, visited at her home here the first of this week.

Mr. E. J. Pickard and Mrs. J. K. McLennan spent New Year's with their sister Mrs. (Dr.) Black of Clifford.

Miss Woods and Miss Katherine McDermid, of London, were holiday visitors with the latter's mother Mrs. C. McDermid.

Miss Sara McIntyre left for Toronto on Saturday.

Mrs. J. N. McInnis and daughter spent New Year's with relatives in Tillsonburg.

Mr. John C. McLean, of Lawson, Sask., is here on a visit to his mother Mrs. Neil McLean, Boundry West.

Miss Jennie Car, is visiting her cousin Miss Abbie Boddy of Dunkeld.

Pte. C. McKeenan is still at home, he is suffering from an attack of La Grippe.

Mr. Lorne Car, of the Royal Bank, Kincardine, spent New Year's at his home here.

Mrs. W. J. McKeeman and Miss Phyllis Moffatt, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Tufford of Beamsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Woods, who are down from Sask., Sundayed with Mrs. C. McDermid.

Mrs. Arthur Greer, had the misfortune to fall on Saturday night causing a bad fracture in her shoulder. Mr. Greer is still continually ill. Their many friends hope for their speedy recovery.

A happy family gathering took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McIntosh, 11th con. Greenock on Christmas Day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist and family 2nd con. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. Gemble and family, Greenock, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. P. McIntosh and daughter of Stratford and Mrs. J. M. Draper of Stratford. All home for Christmas holidays and good cheer to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McIntosh and son David. We feel sure it was a very pleasant reunion for age and youth as Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are held in high esteem by the district and are very capable of providing their friends with the good things that accompany a reunion of this kind. All join in wishing them many happy returns of the festive season.

OTTER CREEK

Tulips and forget-me-not is the order of the day. Happy New Year to all.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hutton of Bruce were visiting their parents here.

Mrs. Earnest Bernell of Owen Sound was visiting her parents here for New Years.

Public School Section No 3 Carrick will re-open on January 3rd. Miss H. Hierworth is visiting at her home in Elmwood for the holiday.

The Box Social at S. S. No 2 Otter Creek was a good success. The proceeds were $110.

Mr. Harvey and Ervin Quanz of Gowanstown were visiting friends and relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hutton and son are visiting Mrs. Hutton's sister Mrs. George Meyers of Brantford.

Mr. Henry Russwerm is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. David Grass and family were visiting at Mr. George Ickmilers near Mildmay.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Ayton were visiting at Mr. Charles Smith's of Otter Creek.

Mr. Dippel of Walkerton was a visitor at her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dippel.

A big load from here went over to Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Schomacher's of Belmore for a very pleasant Surprise Social.

Quite an interesting joke took place when a certain good reader of the Telescope returned home from a visit when entering the house the following was lying on the table.—Thoughts that have vanished altogether. The superstitious imagination that prevailed in the minds of the Canadian people at the outbreak of the war when they saw a new star. They thought it was the Kaiser's aeroplanes coming to Canada. But they have since discovered it was a flying machine in the brain. They have given up the eronious ideas that the Kaiser wants Canada, even John Rowland don't believe it because he sees a bigger monster than the Kaiser threatening his very life. That is the Hydro-Electric power if it should come. So Good-bye, my name for this time is Jim Squint Head.

CHEPSTOW

Pte. Jas. Golden of the Tiger Battalion, Hamilton, who during his visit to his mother here over Xmas developed blood poisoning as a result of recent inoculation, is recovering rapidly and expects to rejoin his comrades soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. A. Massel left on Saturday to spend a week with friends at West Branch and Gagetown, Mich.

Mr. John McNab of Guelph spent the holiday the guest of his daughter, Mrs. P. Clancy.

After one of the stiffest struggles fought by two antagonists in the municipal arena, the old war horse Reeve Phelan has been returned the victor once more, and there is great rejoicing in Denny's camp over the result. His opponent M. McNab, although unsuccessful, is to be congratulated upon the splendid showing made against such a powerful adversary.

Mr. F. Phelan returned to Galt on Tuesday to resume his duties at the Collegiate.

Mrs. Albert Boegel and babe of Regina are on an extended visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coumans.

School re-opened on Wednesday and the faces that beamed at the sight of the holiday delicacies have resumed the form which marks them at the knowledge counter.

CARGILL

Mrs. Agnes Power who has been visiting friends in Guelph returned home on Monday.

Misses S. and M. Fisher of Mildmay visited Miss Margaret Schnitzler on Sunday.

Mr. Joseph Clancy shipped a load of hogs and a load of cattle on Tuesday. Looks as if Joe was back on the job again.

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Balsdon who have been visiting friends in Pickering, returned home on Tuesday.

Mr. Walter Sparling of Toronto spent the holiday at his home here.

Mrs. Agnes Keyes spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. J. Thornton, in Toronto.

Misses Margaret Schnitzler and Marjorie Hood visited in Walkerton on Monday.

Mrs. and Miss Kerr of Farrans Point are visiting at the home of Rev. J. L. Homer.

Miss Frances Newman spent the holiday at her home in Owen Sound.

Mr. Thomas Browncombe who has been working at Cameron's store here, discontinued his duties there on Saturday. Mr. John Zisterer of Chepstow is his successor.

Mr. Oswald Clancy made a business trip to Toronto on Tuesday.

Messrs. F. H. Smith and James Sparling called on friends in Walkerton on Monday.

GREENOCK

We wish our friends and readers a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Kraemer Bros. are busy cutting wood for Mr. Linus Bruder.

Miss Ferol Cunningham of the Stratford Normal School is spending her Christmas holidays at her home here.

New Year's Day was the busiest day our burg has seen for some time. Every body was out to poll their vote.

Miss Myrtle Hawthorne of Toronto is spending a couple of days with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kraemer spent Sunday at Ambleside.

Miss Louisa Stiffler of Ambleside is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Kraemer this week.

Jan. 16 Tues.

New Issue of the Telephone Book.

- ¶ Copy for the next Telephone Directory closes on the above date!
- ¶ Order your telephone now, so that your name will be in the new issue!
- ¶ Report changes required to our Local Manager to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada.

COAL OIL!

Try a gallon of our AMERICAN OIL which we have shipped to us in barrels. We are selling it to our customers at the following prices:-

1 Gal. for	20c
3 Gals. for	55c
5 Gals. for	85c
30 Gals. or over at per gal.	15½c

Remember this is not oil delivered to us from the tank wagon, but the very best American Oil which we buy in carload lots.

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE STOVES PLUMBING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

"MADE IN CANADA"

The 1917 Ford Touring Car

$495.00

f. o. b., Ford, Ontario

You don't need extravagant claims to justify your choice when you buy a Ford.

The new model five-passenger Touring Car at $495 is standard automobile value. We don't need to make "claims" when offering you this car. We show you the car itself and give reasons.

The quality, the price and the service it gives make satisfaction sure. You can always depend on the Ford.

Let us show you the new model today—

Liesemer & Kalbfleisch
Opposite Queens Hotel Walkerton

CURRENT COMMENT

LAUGHED AT AND SCORNED.

The peace terms presented to the Entente Powers by Germany and her Allies are as yet only known in a general way. They have not been considered by Britain or her allies, and no official announcement need be expected for a few days and until they have conferred upon the matter. But the official reception of the proposals will be on a par, without a doubt, with the reception these terms have met with from the people and press of Britain and her allies. They will be received with scorn and ridicule. We care not what is the impelling force that causes Germany to make her offer at this inopportune time, whether it be that she is conscious of victory or conscious of defeat, the terms proposed will receive scant consideration from those to whom they are addressed.

The allies do not propose to accept terms; they propose to impose them when the proper time arrives. Germany's successes are not winning the war for her. She cannot win in the Balkans. She cannot make any progress in France or in Flanders. She can only hold on and she cannot even do that. The weather is her last friend over there just now. When it improves she will have to move farther back. She cannot get to Paris or Calais, and she cannot hope to permanently cripple Russia, the troops of which are in their millions ready to batter at her doors.

Bethmann-Hollweg may brag as he pleases, but it is the people of Germany who feel the pinch, and who long for relief for their impoverished country. We are satisfied that the Kaiser has put forth these proposals as a feeler to learn what terms the allied powers might be inclined to accept. While doing this, his offer might help to appease and quiet his own people and perhaps make a favorable impression on the neutral countries.

Britain and her allies should not be slow to tell the Kaiser on what terms they are prepared to make peace. The terms in a general way have been public property for many months, and they will be adhered to. It will be for the Kaiser to say when he is willing to accept them. The Kaiser could not hope that terms would be accepted held out at the point of the sword. A Kaiser boasting of his triumphs is not the Kaiser the British people will make terms with. The Canadian people are at one with Britain in the determination to see this war fought to a successful finish. When they are good and ready the allied terms will be promptly served on Germany.

[illegible] peace and the United [illegible] are generally in accord [illegible] that the proposals will be indignantly cast aside. How could they be otherwise? London and Paris have just reorganized their Cabinets with the firm determination to prosecute the war with greater vigor, and Russia has just announced that her goal is the possession of Constantinople. Germany could not have chosen a more inopportune time to launch proposals of peace.

At the Year's Decline—1916.

Lo, we have called them Huns, have cried them Vandals,
 And is there aught, my brother, to unsay
Now dawn has quenched the night's irradiant candles,
 And up the orient climbs another day!

Nay, rather we have saner grown and cooler,
 Despite fresh horror stalking wide abroad,
And blasphemous cacophonies of a ruler—
Madman or mountebank—betraying
 God!

New names be theirs from out the dim dead ages,
 Names linked with irremediable pain—
The swart Assyrian, with his savage rages,
 The tawny terrible hosts of Tamerlane!

Shall not calamity seize a ruthless nation
 That sows an innocent land with gaping graves,
And then (ill deed for ceaseless execration!)
 Makes its surviving men and maids slaves!

There is no word too shameful, too abhorrent,
 No epithet too violent to be hurled
At those that loosed this [illegible] torrent
 And made a reeking shambles of the world!
 —Clinton Scollard in New York
 Sun.

Knew the Scheme.

Spendit—I say, old chap, if you would lend me $50 I could make $75.

Smart—How would you make the other $25?—Boston Transcript.

WHY THE SONG DIED.

(Boston Transcript)

"This story says: 'The song died on her lips.'"

"Oh, she probably murdered it."

AN EXPLANATION.

(Baltimore American)

"Pa, when is a man a radical?"

"When his head stops the point of a thing from going any further, my son."

The handle of a new travelling bag is so attached that it can be placed inside the bag when it is locked, lessening the danger of the bag being stolen.

Winnipeg.—The Woodbine Hotel was practically destroyed by fire Saturday evening, with loss of the building $20,000, and on contents $25,000.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"Yes, he was in love with her."

"I knew it!" exclaims Archie, kicking up his heels with triumphant satisfaction.

"Yes, he was in love with her," continues Hector Warren, his eyes fixed on the ground. "His heart went out to her the first time he saw her, and remained with her. Oh, yes, he was very, very deeply in love with her."

"And he told her so, and she said 'Yes,' and they were married, and were happy ever afterward," says Archie, rather contemptuously. "That's how all those sort of stories end. I don't think much of this, Mr. Warren."

"Wait a minute," says Hector Warren, with a smile that has something sad and wistful in it. "He didn't tell her of it."

"Didn't he? Why not?"

"He didn't tell her because he felt that he was not worthy of her. She was young and beautiful, and all the world lay before her, and he was—he was not worthy of her, and he had no right to ask her to share the lot of such as he was, when perhaps better men might, aye, and would in time offer themselves, and their wealth and their titles, laying them at her feet, and imploring her to take them."

"I see," says Archie, with awakened interest. "And what did he do? I should have chanced it, and asked her right out."

"Ah, yes, but he did not dare; he was afraid. He felt that if she said 'No' his miserable, restless life would become unendurable; and he didn't forget for a moment that he wasn't worthy to touch the hem of her dress."

"Well, what did he do?" demands Archie, eagerly.

There was silence for a moment, then the musical voice says, faintly:

"I don't know the end of the story, Archie. Don't be disappointed. You can make a finish for yourself—that is the best way. If I could remember the end, I would tell you."

"Well," says Archie, confidently, "if I had to make the end of it, I would make him tell her, and her to say, 'Yes, I love you just as you love me, though you are poor and wicked.' And then they could live happily ever afterward."

Hector Warren is silent for a moment, then he turns his head to the motionless figure.

"What do you say?" he asks, with a strange thrill in his voice.

Signa raises her head, but does not lift her eyes to his face.

"I?" she answers, with a tremulous laugh. "Oh, I don't know. I have been half asleep."

"Quite right," he says, with a smile. "It was a poor sort of story, not worth your keeping awake for. Ah! what is that? Not the sun, surely?"

"Yes, it is!" cries Archie, springing to his feet and running out, "and the storm has gone, Mr. Warren. Look, the sky is quite blue again! The rain has gone while you have been telling your story, Mr. Warren; but I don't think it was a very good story, you know."

"No, it wants the finish, Archie," he says, collecting the kee and the can, "and the finish is always the best part of a story, isn't it! Never mind, perhaps some day I shall remember it, and be able to tell it to you," and he carries the things down to the boat, and, with Archie making a great fuss in the way of assistance, launches her; then he goes back and finds Signa awaiting him outside the cave.

Her face is pale, her eyes downcast, and there is a strange look on her face, but she lifts her eyes to him frankly enough, as he says:

"We shall have a splendid sail home. Are you quite warm?"

"Quite," she answers.

"And—as happy?" he asks, with a curious smile.

"And—as happy," she says.

"Come, then," and he holds her arm as she climbs over the boulders. "Will you take the tiller again?" he says to her. "You will not have such hard work now; the wind is in our favor, and we shall be home, ah, in no time, as Archie would say."

He looks at the bright sky and the smiling waters and smothers a sigh.

He makes her comfortable in the stern of the boat, pushes it into the water, and leaps in; the sails extend their white wings, and the boat skims over the waves like a thing endowed with life. Hector Warren sinks down at Signa's feet, holding the rope that controls the sails, and Archie resumes his old position, curled up like a very knowing monkey.

"Yes, we shall soon be home," says Hector Warren, with a tone of regret in his voice.

"And we haven't eaten all the provisions yet!" cries Archie. "We've got half a biscuit and the plate still left!"

"Better keep it as a memento of our adventures," says Hector Warren, lightly.

"So I will," assents Archie. "No, you shall keep it for me, Signa; I should be sure to eat it," and he wraps the fragment of biscuit in the letter—it is one Hector Warren has taken from his pocket—and tosses it to Signa.

She catches it in her lap with a laugh.

"Very well," she says. "You can have it when you want it," and she puts it in her pocket, letter and all. It would have spared her much misery if she had then and there thrown it overboard; but she did not, and the biscuit, with its fatal wrapper, remained, a link in the chain which was to bind her young life.

Hector Warren crowded all his canvas on—a nautical phrase, meaning that he took advantage of all the sails he had at his disposal—and the light boat darted homeward.

He was very silent, and the dark eyes were for the most part fixed on the sails under his charge; but once, as they were crossing the bar, he turned and put his hand on the tiller, and it inclosed Signa's white, soft fingers. He was obliged to press them, and under this strain of his strong, firm hand, her face grew crimson. He murmured an apology.

"I am afraid I hurt you," and she answered, "No, not at all," in a conventional tone; but the hard pressure was not pain, it was a subtle delight to her.

There were no biscuits to eat, so Archie whistled through his teeth, after the manner of boys; and but for that whistling there was no sound on board the boat; Hector Warren kept his eyes on the sail and the shore, and Signa obeyed his murmured "Right" and "Left." But the feeling of happiness, of subtle delight, still lingered with her, and once again she longed that they might sail on thus forever. She would ask no more of Fate than that she should thus sit within reach of his hand, within sound of his voice.

But "forever" is a long time, and soon, all too soon, they come in sight of Whitfield's quaint dwelling place, and Archie calls out:

"Here we are! I wonder what Whitfield will say when we tell him that we have drunk all his coffee, and eaten all his biscuits?"

Whitefield was close at hand to meet them, and there was a grave smile on the weather-beaten face as he hauled the boat ashore.

"I am glad to see you back, sir, that I am. I wondered where you'd be, and whether 'un'—meaning the boat—"would live out the gale."

"We went to St. Clare," said Hector Warren, "and found shelter there; but we have made sad havoc of your stores, Whitefield."

"Never mind 'un," said the shipbuilder, heartily. "If I'd a-known that you'd ha' been so stuck up I'd a put more in the boat, but, you see, the boat had only just come back from fishing, and that accounts for the coffee and the biscuits."

"Which we enjoyed very much," says Hector Warren, in his pleasant manner, and he slips something into Whitefield's hand.

Then he lifts Archie from the boat, and extends his arm for Signa, but she steps on the gunwale and springs to the shore. In silence they climb the hill to the rectory, Archie running on in front. He reaches it full five minutes before the other two, for Signa walks slowly and thoughtfully, and returns with news.

"Papa is out," he shouts. "He has been sent for by some one, and mamma is in an awful state, and Sir Frederic Blyte is with her."

"Oh!" says Hector Warren, slowly; and Signa smiles vaguely.

They follow Archie, who runs on before them, and enter the rectory drawing-room.

Mrs. Podswell lies on the sofa, Mary standing beside her with hartshorn and sal volatile. On a chair near the invalid's couch sits Sir Frederic Blyte, with all his feathers blown awry.

As the three—Signa, and Archie, and Hector Warren—enter, Aunt Podswell heaves a dismal groan.

"Signa," she exclaims, "what does this mean? Do you mean to be the death of me?"

"I am very sorry," says Signa. "Do not be alarmed, aunt; we are quite safe."

"Quite safe, yes, so I see!" said Mrs. Podswell, with a moan. "But think what I have endured! Grimes, the gardener, came here with the dreadful news that you had gone sailing—actually sailing! on a day like this, with that innocent child."

"That innocent child" eyes her with a solemn face.

"And in this awful storm!" continues Mrs. Podswell. "How could you have been so inconsiderate—so—so criminally thoughtless?"

Signa is about to reply, when she feels a touch upon her arm, and Hector Warren steps forward.

"The fault was mine, Mrs. Podswell, and the blame must rest with me. It was I who persuaded your niece and Archie to take a sail. Of course, I did not foresee the storm."

Aunt Podswell groans.

"You ought to have foreseen it, sir. You had not right to run the risk. Signa should not have accompanied you. Things have come to a pretty pass, and the world has changed, indeed, if a young woman can venture on such an excursion unaccompanied except by a child like Archie!"

Hector Warren's face colors.

"Let us be thankful that nothing worse than an indiscretion—for which I, and I alone, am answerable—has occurred," he says. "We intended taking a short sail on the river, but yielding to my solicitation, Miss Grenville consented to crossing the bar. The storm sprung up, and we were forced to seek shelter on the Island of St. Clare. No harm has been done; your niece and Archie have returned, thank Heaven, quite safely. For my part in the affair, I beg your pardon most respectfully and earnestly."

Aunt Podswell sniffs.

"You'd better plead your case with my husband," she says.

"I shall be very willing," says Hector Warren, "and I wish you good-day, once more expressing my regret that you should have suffered any anxiety;" and he bows low and leaves the room.

During the colloquy Sir Frederic Blyte has sat speechless and motionless, his face crimson and white by turns, but as Hector Warren turns to depart, Sir Frederic jumps up and follows him, and before Hector Warren has gained the garden, the baronet has overtaken him.

"One moment," he exclaims. "One moment, if you please, Mr. Warren."

Hector Warren stops and turns toward him, and the two men confront each other.

The one, Sir Frederic, is carefully, neatly attired, with all the weight that wealth and position can give; the other, Hector Warren, is dressed in the rough-pea jacket that has been saturated half a dozen times in the course of the day, but still Hector Warren, is in appearance the best of it.

"I beg your pardon," he says, in the self-possessed voice, which could be as full of hauteur as an earl's: "you wish to speak to me?"

"Yes, I do," says Sir Frederic, red as a turkey cock, and with a bellicose light in his eyes. "I demand an explanation, Mr.—Warren;" and there is a world of insult in the tone of hesitation before the name.

"An explanation of what?" demands Hector Warren, leaning against the gate and taking his cigar-case from his pocket. Sir Frederic's face flames a deep red at the coolness of his opponent, and his big, unwieldy hands clinch passionately.

"Don't think to deceive me by your effrontery, sir," he says, threateningly.

Hector Warren selects a cigar carefully before he answers.

"I have no wish to deceive you, Sir Frederic," he says, calmly.

"It will be of no avail if you do, sir," retorted Sir Frederic, with suppressed passion; and Hector Warren as he looks at the commonplace face transformed by injured dignity and jealous, recalls the description of its owner which he, Hector Warren, had given to Signa. "I demand an explanation, sir," reiterates Sir Frederic.

"An explanation of what?" asks Hector Warren, taking out his fusee-case, but eying his opponent steadily.

"Of—of your conduct, sir," says Sir Frederic. "What do you mean by inducing this young lady to accompany you, and—and compelling her to spend the day in your society?"

"You might as well ask, Sir Frederic what I mean by calling up such a storm as even these coasts do not often provide," says Hector Warren, lighting his cigar. "But, though your question is not put with superfluous courtesy, I will attempt to answer it. Suffice it, then, that Miss Grenville was persuaded by me to take a sail on the river; that, deceived by the apparent fineness of the weather, I gained her consent to cross the bar. All this you heard me explain to Mrs. Podswell. That, crossing the bar, we met with a sudden hurricane, and were forced to fly for shelter to the Island of St Clare; that there, she, and Archie, and I, remained till the abatement of the storm rendered it safe for us to return, and that here she is safe and sound, and here am I to answer your question, and"—a pause, during which the two men confront each other, presenting a strange contrast, the one red with passion, the other calm and self-possessed—"to ask a question of you in return."

"You may ask me what you please," retorts Sir Frederic, passionately. "I say you have acted like a poltroon and—an—an adventurer, as I suspect you to be; but I warn you——"

"Pardon me," breaks in the quiet, self-possessed voice. "I claimed the right to an answer to my question. Before I have put that question, you favore me with an opinion of my unworthy self. My question first, Sir Frederic, and that question is—by what right or authority do you demand an explanation of me respecting Miss Grenville's conduct, or mine?"

Sir Frederic, crimson and trembling, stares at the impassive face of the speaker, and stutters an incoherent reply:

"I—the absence of the rector, her uncle, sir," he says passionately.

"Precisely," says Hector Warren, easily. "To Miss Grenville's uncle and guardian I am, no doubt, answerable; but to Sir Frederic Blythe, neither my duty nor my inclination compel me to listen. Good-day!" and, with a slight inclination of the head, he passes on.

Sir Frederic stands staring as if he could not at all believe his ears, then he turns a deathly white, and the evil temper of a pampered man, balked and overcome—that evil temper which Hector Warren has spoken of—shows itself. With a fearful oath, Sir Frederic dashes his clenched fist against the Rectory gate.

"By heaven!" he cries. "He shall pay for it—he shall pay for it!"

CHAPTER XI.

Sir Frederic the Great, as Lady Rockwell called him, was very angry and extremely miserable, because he felt that he had made a fool of himself. He, the great man of his county, while Lord Delamere was out of it, had been guilty of flying into a passion—losing his self-possession. This he could have borne if he could have flattered himself that he had got the best of it in his encounter with the man whom he felt sure was an adventurer, and perhaps worse, if there could be anything worse; but he was compelled to admit to himself that he had got very much the worst of it.

He had intended being very cool and dignified, and to administer a severe rebuke to the fellow who had dared to monopolize Signa Grenville for a whole day; he had made up his mind to keep his temper under control, and to remember that he was Sir Frederic, and Hector Warren was worse than nobody. But he had been no match for that gentleman's calm impassiveness; there was an indefinable power about him that had exasperated Sir Frederic and before which all his resolves had been vanquished. He had got the worst of it in every sense. He couldn't answer Hector Warren's question as to his right to interfere between him and Signa. Then he had given way and made a fool of himself; for, of course, he knew that nowadays men don't indulge in heroics, and don't fly into passions if they are gentlemen. It is bad form, and to be guilty of bad form Sir Frederic felt was almost unbefitting his exalted position. As he glanced morosely at his hand, which smarted, for the Rectory gate was naturally hard, he felt boiling over with rage. Why couldn't he have kept cool like his opponent? And, as he recalled the easy, almost contemptuous bearing—the calm, quiet dignity of the voice of Hector Warren, he felt that hatred which the inferior mind always feels when it comes in conflict with its superior.

(To be continued.)

DRIVEN TO DRINK.

(Baltimore American)

"I hear that Billetts was just driven to drink."

"How was that? In a fit of temptation or pique?"

"Not in his automobile to a champagne party."

Most of us are perfectly willing to forgive our enemies, after we have got square with them.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send us your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

CANADA STANDS PREPARED TO CONTINUE FULL ASSISTANCE

Bank of Montreal Annual Meeting marked by Striking References to Part Played by Dominion and Lays Down Policy for Country's Guidance. Campaign of Thrift Strongly Urged. Bank's Record at Front.

Canada's position in the great European war—the policy the Dominion should follow in order to be all the better prepared for post war conditions—the resolve of the country to continue to give, in youth and money, full assistance to the great cause—were among some of the outstanding features of the Ninety-Ninth Annual Meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal held at the head office.

The importance of the announcements made and their bearing on conditions that the Dominion would most likely have to meet seemed to impart a special significance to the meeting, and the shareholders were quick to give their heartiest support to the suggestions firmly offered by Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., President; and Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager.

There was no misunderstanding the firmness of the suggestions, as it was clearly shown that many of the conditions that prevailed in the country were purely of a temporary character and what was most important was to get ready for the time when normal conditions only might exist.

In this connection it was pointed out that all efforts should be centred on the attainment of three objects, viz.—Economy, Production and Immigration, but at the same time a note of confidence was struck as to the ability the country would show in dealing with any new problems that might present themselves.

PROUD RECORD IN OVERSEAS SERVICE.

Sir Frederick made special mention of the record of the Staff of the Bank of Montreal overseas, saying:

"As for the Bank of Montreal contingent with the colors, I have no words sufficiently eloquent wherewith to fully express our pride in their achievements, our grief in their losses. [illegible] of our total male staff, or [illegible] of those of military age, have enlisted, 61 of our best have been killed and 107 are wounded, missing or prisoners of war. Several of our men have been decorated by the King for conspicuous valor and the whole contingent is illustrious."

A very cordial demonstration was given by the shareholders when Mr. Yuile, on their behalf, asked to be allowed to especially compliment Sir Vincent Meredith on the great honor which had been conferred upon him during the course of the past year, in being created a baronet. Mr. Yuile pointed out that this was regarded by the shareholders not as an honor to Sir Vincent alone, but to the Bank as well, and the honor conferred was alike popular with the shareholders and the public generally.

The vacancies on the Board of Directors were filled by the election of Captain Herbert Molson, of Montreal, and Mr. Harold Kennedy, of Quebec. At the first meeting of the new Board of Directors, Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., was re-elected President and the Vice-Presidency which has been vacant for the past few years was re-established by the appointment of Mr. C. B. Gordon, President of the Dominion Textile Co.

Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., President, in referring to the principal developments of the year and the plans that should be laid to cope with them, said in part:—

"I hoped when I last had the pleasure of addressing you that before this Annual Meeting the end of the cruel and devastating war, which has convulsed Europe would be, if not reached, at least within measurable distance. In this expectation we have been disappointed.

"Canada, inspired by a deep-rooted loyalty to the Empire, has given and is still prepared to give freely her gallant youth and monetary means to the great cause, upon the success of which her liberties and national existence so greatly depend.

SUCCESS OF DOMESTIC LOANS.

"In a little more than a year, Canada has issued two Domestic Loans amounting to $200,000,000, and the Canadian Government has borrowed in New York $75,000,000. The success of our internal loans is a matter of pride and congratulation.

"The Minister of Finance, to whom the country owes much for his wise and far-seeing administration of our financial affairs, will doubtless keep in view these conditions when making further calls on our resources, which of necessity he must do from time to time.

OUTLOOK FOR POST WAR PERIOD.

I am tempted, contrary to my usual practice and unrestrained by the old adage, "Never prophesy unless you know," to look into the future. The thoughts of many men are turned towards the problems that will confront us after the war. Government Commissions are dealing with them; the press devotes much space to their discussion; international conferences have met, but our first, obvious and imperative duty is to WIN THE WAR.

"Canada is bearing up magnificently under the strain of this world wide war, and her sacrifices will be amply repaid by the engendering of a spirit of self-reliance, and she will emerge, a comparatively little known country to take her rightful position in the affairs of the nations.

"The future, as I have said, is beset with new problems and is not entirely free from financial anxieties, but by a young people possessing great national spirit, a territorial Empire and unrivalled natural resources, the future can be looked forward to with hope and confidence."

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, dwelt especially with the main features of the change in the Bank's business during the course of the year and the manner in which Canada's adverse trade balance had disappeared as though by magic. Sir Frederick said in part:—

"The outstanding business feature in Canada is an industrial condition more abnormal in character than ever before in the history of this bank, or of this country.

"Canada sold her record crop of last year at high prices, as in the years of the American Civil war, while this year we are disposing of a moderate crop at such steadily mounting prices that we again reap a golden harvest about equal in amount to that of 1915. The total value of last year's crop was [illegible].

"Our much criticized adverse trade balance has disappeared as though by magic, and our exports are now vastly in excess of our imports.

NOTE OF CAUTION SOUNDED.

The transient nature of our increased exports alone is a simple index to a situation that commands the attention of all thinking people.

"These views may not be acceptable to all, but they are common sense and based upon arithmetical facts. To be forewarned is to be forearmed.

"These are the main factors that have influenced and will influence the banking position—the movement in deposits and loans and the earnings, both [illegible] fore, in my opinion, the business of this Bank should be conducted with such views plainly before us until the situation clears.

"Thrift is overdue but can be started forthwith; immigration must wait, but should follow in natural sequence. I have no words at my command with which to adequately urge the necessity of an organized and an individual effort to promote thrift.

"The timely and eloquent 'Call to Action' of our Minister of Trade and Commerce commands attention. I am not sure that it should not be preceded by a 'Call to Reason,' in order that the importance of the problems of the situation be impressed upon those who are living in, let us say, the paradise of the unwise."

WHY PARLIAMENT SHOULD NOT MAINTAIN THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

Some people, when asked to contribute to the Patriotic Fund, reply that Parliament should maintain the Fund.

"It is the duty of Canada to make provision for the families of her soldiers," say they. "Why should not the Government support and administer the Fund?"

There are many good reasons why it should not. Here are a few:

Government must treat every soldier alike. It cannot make fish of one and flesh of another. It is now paying in separation allowances $20 a month to the family of each enlisted man, but one-third of the families receiving those separation allowances do not get a cent from the Fund. If the Government maintained the Fund, this third would have to be paid on the same scale as the two other thirds—causing an increase for 1917 estimated at $5,720,000.

Government could not give families the help, other than financial, they now receive from thousands of voluntary workers, who visit them in sickness and in health, share their troubles, encourage them in well doing, and make them to feel that they are not friendless nor alone.

Government would raise the required money by floating a loan, thus throwing on the future—and on the returned soldiers—a burden the stay-at-homes should bear. For such work as this we should pay as we go.

Government control would mean double, and in some cases treble, taxation. Municipalities all over the Dominion are taxing themselves for the Fund, so are many provinces. It would not be fair to relax these bodies, while other districts were escaping with only the Federal tax.

Governmental control would reduce the amounts the rich now contribute to the Fund, and place a heavier burden on the shoulders of the poorer men. It would take from all, rich and poor, the privilege of doing something of their own free will, and, through acts of self-sacrifice, assist in winning the great struggle. And, it would, by stifling the outpouring of public duty, [illegible], work to the distinct disadvantage of the community.

FIGHTING ALONG THE SUEZ

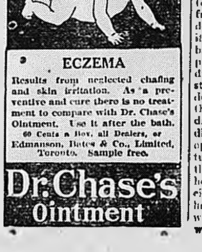
(St. John, N.B., Telegraph.)

Those who are inclined to think of the operation in France and Belgium, in the Balkans and on the sea, as Great Britain's part in the war, are given a new idea from time to time of the Empire's burden when the brief but interesting announcements are made by the War Office dealing with the fighting in Egypt and what is being done to defend the Suez Canal. The time is coming when the world will learn—with some surprise no doubt—of the severe suffering which has made so difficult the work of the troops who have kept open the short route between Europe and Japan, Siberia and India, by driving back again and again huge forces of Turks bent upon the destruction of the great waterway. Led by German officers, the enemy has fought with skill and determination to reach the canal. His success would have a paralyzing effect on the whole Allied campaign. The fact that he has been beaten in every attempt speaks well for the bravery of the British troops and the ingenuity of the British engineers.

Correspondents in close touch with the campaign in Egypt know of these things, but the censor has not permitted them to tell the story. Nor is it likely to be told until after the war. In the meantime, enough is being sent through to give us some idea of what is taking place. For example, here is what the censor allowed one correspondent to write for his paper:

"In order to push their defensive lines out to the eastward in the Sinai desert, so that traffic in the Suez Canal need not be interrupted by Turkish raids, the British troops of the army of occupation, under command of Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Murray, former Chief of the Imperial General Staff, have built up one of the most interesting and most elaborate military organizations to be found anywhere in the world. It has been a labor of months to push the British lines out ten miles into the sand dunes and rocky defiles of the Sinai Peninsula, in some of the most utterly desolate country in the world, along a ninety mile front running the entire length of the canal. In order to maintain troops ten miles from the canal, it was necessary to build more miles of railway and rock-blasted highway over the shifting sand dunes, than the censor will permit a correspondent to tell of. Every ounce of food and pint of water for the men defending the canal has to be carried and pumped out to them over the desert. Barracks had to be built, camp sites laid out, elaborate barbed-wire entanglements constructed, and last, but not least, miles on miles of entrenchments dug in the dry sand, which is constantly drifting in and filling them, and then have to be dug out again. Even the barbed-wire entanglements have to be excavated to keep from being buried, and the trenches are all shored with timber brought thousands of miles for the purpose. There are few dugouts, as the chances of the Turks bringing heavy artillery across the desert are remote, and the labor of constructing them is prodigious. As the British have no great desire, for the present, at least, to push farther out in the waste, they have built their trenches and entanglements practically in a continuous line. Here and there, however, are gaps, through which roads lead on even farther out in the desert, to the remote trenches. Each outpost, in turn, has its trenches and barbed wire, its gun positions and its roads, by which every ounce of material was carried from the canal."

This observer goes on to say that even yet the defensive is not complete, although General Murray is busy making his arrangements for the lateral transfer of troops behind the lines by building roads and railways parallel to the canal. It is the general's idea that these works should have a permanent value, after the war is over, and "peaceful traffic once more holds sway." They already have stood a severe test, as the thousands of Turkish dead in the vicinity plainly show.



ECZEMA

Results from neglected chafing and skin irritation. As a preventive and cure there is no treatment to compare with Dr. Chase's Ointment. Use it after the bath.

60 Cents a Box, all Dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample free.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS

When in Hamilton do not fail to visit Junor's, the House for Gifts. See our display of China, Art Pottery, Cut Glass and Antique Furniture, Pictures, etc. You will be made welcome.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E. SOUTH SIDE
Hamilton, Ont.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

THE CHARMS OF OTHER DAYS.

Oh would I were a child again,
From gloomy care and sorrow free,
And would that passion, sin and pain,
Were still unknown to mine and me;
I sigh for seasons that have flown
Afar beyond our earthly gaze;
I sigh for seasons past and gone,
And for the charms of other days.

Across the landscape, bleak and lone,
The wintry winds drive and delight,
And through the woodlands shriek and moan,
Like wayward spirits of the night;
How fleeting are the golden hours
That shed their lustre everywhere,
How swiftly fade the lovely flowers
That sweetly scent the cozy air.

The summer sun may shine again,
And on the waters gleam and glow,
In gloomy vales may beauty reign,
And balmy breezes softly blow,
Sweet flowers again may crown the Leas,
And deck the garden, wood and plain;
But, ah! the charms of other days,
Return—return—no more again.

—J. [illegible] MacCallum, 77 Jackson street west, Hamilton.

Interesting News For Working Men

AN ARTICLE WELL WORTH YOUR WHILE TO READ.

This is a nerve-racking age—not a man in an office or behind the counter, striving hard to get on in the world, that does not feel the strain.

If nerves are in order, a man is strong, eats and sleeps well. Unstrung nerves means weakness, worry, sleeplessness and a general decay of bodily strength.

Most men are careless of their health. They trust to luck and that kind of thing, instead of taking Ferrozone for a few weeks when they feel dull in the morning, or when they sleep poorly or lose appetite.

Ferrozone quickly brightens up the mind. It creates an appetite and improves digestion. Ferrozone makes blood, quiets the nerves, makes muscle like steel and induces refreshing sleep.

Ferrozone is a body builder, thousands have proved it. If you are sick or out of sorts, use Ferrozone and enjoy the splendid health it so surely brings.

Permanent in its results, the greatest health-giver in the world is Ferrozone. Because nourishing and perfectly harmless, all can use it, even children. Get Ferrozone to-day, 50c. per box, or all dealers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Half a Degree.

A colored congregation in Louisiana hearing that a college in Kansas was conferring the degree of D. D. for the reasonable "consideration" of fifty dollars, decided to add to their prestige by raising the required sum and having their pastor decorated with those dignified initials. Strenuous effort failed to raise more than half the amount; but nothing daunted, they forwarded twenty-five dollars, with the request that the college would forward the first "D," so that they could begin addressing the reverend gentleman as Doctor, a favor which they were sure would assist them very much in collecting the price of his "Divinity."—Harper's Magazine.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

A Death Lure.

According to tradition, Kenith, the legendary King of Scotland, was allured to his death in a most novel manner. Kenith had slain a son and brother of Fennella, who, to be avenged, ordered Wiltus, a famous silversmith, to construct a death dealing statue of silver. In its right hand the statue held a basin and in the left hand an apple of pure gold, both set with diamonds and other precious stones. To touch the apple was to defy death, it being so arranged that anyone guilty of such vandalism would be immediately riddled by poisoned arrows shot from openings in the body of the statue. Kenith was invited to inspect the wonder, and, as Fennella had hoped, he tried to pluck the precious imitation fruit. When his hand touched the apple he was wounded by the arrows and died where he fell.

ISSUE NO.

HELP WANTED

WANTED—GIRLS TO knit underwear—seamers; [illegible] ished stitchers preferred, learners, any girl with good [illegible] of plain sewing; good wages [illegible] tory conditions. Zimmerman Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Aberdeen and Garth streets, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—LADIES TO DO PLAIN and light sewing at home, whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance, charges paid. Send stamp for particulars.—National Manufacturing Company, Montreal.

WANTED—A GOOD GENERAL SERvant for small family; highest wages; comfortable home. Address, Mrs. John Eley, 2 Homewood Avenue, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—HELP FOR WOOLLEN mill spinners, and weavers. We also have several openings for inexperienced help, where energy and ability will bring promotion. We will engage several female apprentices to learn weaving. Splendid opportunity to learn trade which always offers steady employment at high wages. Special inducements to family workers. [illegible] stating experience, if any, age [illegible] Slingsby Mfg., Company, Ltd., [illegible]ford, Ont.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN

2 POTTER CYLINDER PRESSES, half sheet Double Demy and [illegible] sheet Double Royal size. Make us an o fer for them. Well suited for a Cou try Printing Office. Address, Tim Printing Company, Hamilton, Ont.

Sartorially Disappointing.

First Girl—So you met Mr. Blank, the famous writer, at the reception. What do you think of him?

Second Girl—Not much. His clothes are quite old-fashioned, and I understood he was celebrated for his style.—Boston Transcript.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

A Matter of Definition.

"What does citizen mean?" Edd asked his sister.

"It means a man that lives in a city," answered the little girl.

"Then what do you call the people that live outside the city?" asked the boy.

"Oh, they are countrymen! Don't you remember that piece about fellow countrymen?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

The publisher of the best Farmer's paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states:

"I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT, it has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

SECRET OF A FLOWER.

If someone advanced the theory that this plant had some unknown pow of reasoning you would probably rep that "plants can't reason because th have no mind." You may change yo opinion after you hear this story, related by Royal Dixon, who writes entertainingly about how near like human beings in their actions plants are.

The story is about a trumpet vine, the favorite of many an old fashioned garden. About twenty feet from where it grew was an old pine stump with the bark on. One day a fire was built about the foot of the stump and the bark was burned off.

Immediately the trumpet vine sent forth a long trailer across the garden to the stump. It raised the tendrils, felt the smooth surface of the stump and started to climb. Before long the whole blackened surface was hidden beneath the leaves and blossoms of the new vine.

With the rough bark on the stump provided no surface for the c tendrils of the vine. After th destroyed the bark the vine f place to climb.

How did the plant know th fire had prepared the stump W know. Ask the flower.

Minard's Liniment Cures Cold

German "Veracity."

From a London corresp "The German Newsagency fo eign Policy" publishes the m cal lie about Zeppelin att London yet achieved by the Press. Its Christiania corresp who says that he spent t shivering in the cellar of ters offices near St. Pancras company of the King, the Duke of Connaught, whos ret to Buckingham Palace the streets were torn up by Ze bombs. The merchant adds tha King remained for an hour and in the cellar, only speaking words. The same liar says tha don is a maze of underground business offices, shops, and th all advertising themselves as Zeppelins. He also says that cally every house in London is munition factory.

Agent—What part of your that doesn't seem to work rig torist—The part that works!

"Faulty Nutriti Elimination"—these the cause of the most of ailments that afflict hu beings. Too much indi tible food and lack of p to throw off the po that come from indig —these lead to a lo of distressing di Avoid them by Shredded Wheat B a simple, elemental fo contains all the body ing material in the wheat grain, includ bran coat which ke intestinal tract health clean. Delicious for meal in combination with sliced peaches or other fruits. Made in Canada

OR THE AVERAGE PERSON

"The bravest of all were the chaplains, who stuck by the side of the boys even when the fighting was most furious."

The above words were spoken in a London hospital the other day by a wounded soldier who had left an arm behind him, and they no doubt represent the general opinion of the boys at the front at the present moment.

During the "piping times of peace"—now, alas! seemingly so far distant—my chaplains used to be called "pilots." Since the war broke [illegible] has come to be christened by [illegible] consent the "padre," and his worth is fully recognized by the [illegible] to whom he ministers.

They are of all classes and creeds. [illegible] brave, quiet men in plain khaki, distinguishable from the combatant officers only by their black shoulder knots and the cross on their service caps.

The very first padre to be killed in the war was a brave Catholic chaplain of the Dublin Fusiliers.

Tremendous is the influence for good, by the way, that is wielded by these noble Catholic priests, comparable only with that exercised by the Presbyterian chaplains of the Highland regiments; for, when all else fails, they need only threaten to "post" a man's name on the chapel or kirk door in his native village in order to induce the most hardened offender to amend his ways.

Threats are seldom needed, however, and still less seldom used, the average chaplain, of whatever denomination, preferring to rely on moral suasion. He is an adept, too, at winning Tommy's confidence, and incidentally his gratitude. He is frequently quite as good at singing a comic song as he is at intoning a psalm—each, of course, in its proper place. He is the unofficial letter writer home, and the adviser in chief as regards all private and domestic affairs.

In a single week a chaplain confessed to have penned above three hundred love letters for men unable, through stress of wounds, work, or worry, to write themselves. Another padre actually wrote in a week six thousand postcards for so many different men!

For the most part, the chaplains do their work outside the limelight, but occasionally they are accorded official recognition of a sort. For instance, there was the case of the Rev. E. G. F. Macpherson, the senior Church of England chaplain, mentioned by name in one of Sir John French's despatches.

He it was who officiated at the obsequies of General Hamilton, the commander of the Third Division, who was killed in action at Ypres. The funeral was at dead of night, the only light being that from the electric flash-lamp used by Mr. Macpherson to read the words of the burial service. Even this, however, was sufficient to draw the fire of the ever-watchful enemy, and rifle-bullets and shrapnel spattered and sputtered all round. Fortunately nobody was hit, and General Smith Dorrien remarked, as he quitted the graveside: "A true soldier's funeral, padre. We couldn't fire a volley, but the enemy have given him the last salute for us."

NEW BOOKS

DAMARIS, by Lucas Malet (Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison); McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto.

At this season of the year, when [illegible] are so widely given as admirable and profitable Christmas remembrances, this novel is deserving of [illegible]cular attention. It is a story of [illegible]sterious East, full of that res[illegible] feeling which one always as[illegible] with the Orient. Wonderful scenes are drawn of India, of the [illegible] there, and above all, the out[illegible]ng fatalism of human nature in [illegible]periences of individuals.

[illegible] Verity is fanatically in love [illegible] the wife of a wealthy and prom[illegible] banker. Human feelings other [illegible] love lead him to marry a [illegible]

[illegible] DAY OF BATTLE, poems of [illegible] war; selected by Carrie Holman; Wm Briggs, Toronto.

[illegible]mbitious effort was undertaken [illegible] Holman, a Prince Edward [illegible] endeavoring to collect a [illegible]ative group of poetry [illegible] by the conditions of war. The [illegible] from the sale of this book [illegible] the King George and Queen [illegible] Maple Leaf Club, in London. [illegible] Englishwoman he had rescued [illegible] a dreadful fate and in his forced [illegible]mination to make her happy he [illegible] his mind to the longings of the [illegible] The banker's wife becomes a [illegible] marrying again, though, [illegible] the death of Verity's wife frees [illegible] more. Before her death Da[illegible] the heroine, is born. It is later [illegible] those seductive haunts of [illegible] Verity and his first love meet [illegible] The sound of battle is vigor[illegible] among the horrors that fol[illegible] aris and tragedy enter premi[illegible] inducing a climax powerful [illegible] go far to [illegible] fascination spell [illegible] the reader, [illegible] one to ap[illegible] action, with due [illegible] and sentiment, and [illegible] almost any [illegible] given [illegible] this,

Thinking that so his days would drift away,
With no lance broken in life's tournament:
Yet ever 'twixt the books and his bright eyes
The gleaming eagles of the legions came,
And horsemen, charging under phantom skies,
Went thundering past beneath the oriflamme.

And now those failing dreams are satisfied;
From twilight to the halls of dawn
he went;
His lance is broken; but he lies content,
With that high hour in which he lived and died.
And falling thus, he wants no recompense,
Who found his battle in the last resort;
Nor needs he any hearse to bear him
hence,
Who goes to join the men of Agincourt.

Herbert Asquith.

THE WOMEN OF BELGIUM TO THE WOMEN OF ENGLAND

Oh, English women! See our country's dying;
Her lifeblood from her gaping wounds is sighing,
Her bitter wrongs to God for vengeance crying!

The Iron Hand has struck, but in smiting
Its own dishonor on the wall is writing.
And Belgium's funeral pyre the world is lighting.

If we had failed or shrunk before the paying,
If we had saved our dearest from the slaying,
What price had you not paid for the delaying?

Oh, mothers! who your man grown sons are keeping,
Oh, fathers! to the patriot's duty sleeping,
Oh, lovers! at the thought of parting,
weeping,
Awake and give us men to do our reaping!

Mary Booth.

"A SUNNY SUBALTERN."

Consisting of Billy's letters from Flanders; McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, $1.00.

An attractive contribution to the war literature of the day is this volume of letters, published anonymously. They are genuine in every respect and come to the reading public through Billy's mother, who thought so much of them that she was induced to put them in book form. As a preface, she says:

"At the earnest solicitation of friends I am publishing these letters, which were written without any attempt at literary effort, and intended only for a mother's eye. I am sure my son will be pleased if they are the means of bringing even a passing pleasure to those whose loved ones have made the supreme sacrifice, and to any others who may read this book."

There is something refreshing about these letters, something which appeals to the reader and convinces him of their spontaneous penning and their reflection of the writer's feelings. They cover Billy's trip from Canada directly to Flanders and the fighting there. His feelings when first under fire must be those of every one of the many uninitiated soldiers. For instance, this is the manner in which he tells of being wounded:

"The day wore on. In mid-afternoon came word to proceed to ——, there to counter-attack a certain part of the line. We gathered together the men, some eighty that were immediately at hand, and started off. It was a trip practically in the open, as the trenches had been so battered as to be useless. From every direction came long files of men, all centralizing along a given line. I can't remember the exact time the thing was planned for, but we started off. Our artillery opened up, and if we got unutterable hell before so did the Germans now. However, they still had some ammunition, and the shells burst there—and there—and there—and then—

A drink of water;

A scarlet cross fronting a vision in blue and white.

Cool deft hands;

White sheets;

The throb of a motor;

The swirl of water;

The tiny toot of an English engine;

Another motor;

A bunch of roses mixed with eyeglasses and perfume;

A white handkerchief;

A few jolts;

A bed;

Familiar street noises, and the dawning realization of a hospital in Blighty; dear old London at last."

There are many such incidents uniquely told in Billy's letters, and in just as original a way. The volume should have wide circulation, for with so many thousands of mothers and others with dear ones at the front, it is bound to be full of interest to all of these. There is not, either, any pessimistic turn to the letters, as one might possibly expect, but a freshness which causes one to read on until the last page comes to view.

THE STAGE

Stars have twinkled feebly this [illegible] Never before have so many [illegible] won favor with New York [illegible] because of the merit of the [illegible] strength of the acting [illegible] and never before have so [illegible] of long standing in the [illegible] forced to give up the [illegible] such players as George [illegible] and Margaret [illegible] compelled to withdraw [illegible] it seems, something [illegible] the theatrical world. [illegible] "Paganini" and [illegible] was a marvel[illegible] bit of acting. But [illegible] play. The fault lies [illegible] Knoblauch, not with Mr. [illegible] the play should have [illegible] of the Criterion Theatre. Certainly no other actor in America could have done more with the character of the eccentric violinist. Mr. Skinner created another highly-colored and grandiose figure to the gallery of his splendid portraits in the Booth Tarkington play, "Mister Antonio." He played an Italian organ-grinder, and played it wonderfully well, but the audiences refused to accept the florid Mr. Skinner, however picturesque his acting might be, in lieu of a real drama. Henry E. Dixey, with all his technical skill, could not save "Mr. Lazarus," and Miss Anglin could not breathe the breath of life into "Caroline." The Marchian play departed from the Lyceum and moved to Chicago. Ann Murdock, even with her "Billy burkishness" and a "bully" company in her support, failed to make "Please Help Emily" a success. Blanche Ring, the buoyant, could not save "Broadway and Buttermilk." The unctuous humor of Frank McIntyre was of no avail in "Fast and Grow Fat." The name and fame of Jimmie Powers could not keep "Somebody's Luggage" on Forty-eighth street.

On the other hand, note "Cheating Cheaters" and "Turn to the Right," the two most substantial of the early successes, and you find not a sign of a star. Nor is there a star in "Seven Chances," in "Arms and the Girl," in "Hush," in "The Flame," in "Pierrot the Prodigal." Perhaps the producers will some day come to the conclusion, a conclusion that many have already reached, that what the audiences want after all is a play of gripping interest, or unfailing humor, or sound pathos, or a combination of these and similar qualities, and that they want the play sincerely and adequately acted. But more and more they are caring less whether Otis Skinner, George Arliss, Margaret Anglin and Ann Murdock or John Jones and Mary Smith act in their plays.

THE MOVIES

"Where Are My Children?" a film that did not meet with the approval of the Ontario Board of Censors—or any in Canada, so far as known— is being shown in England to adult audiences, under special conditions. The Times in a recent issue deals with the filming, approved by National Council of Public Morals, before a large audience, including medical men, clergy and women interested in social work. Says the Times:

"The film produced a profound effect on the audience, and of its sincerity and good taste there can be no question. It is played by the most capable actors and actresses of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, with Tyrone Power as lead.

"The Bishop of Birmingham, speaking after the display at a luncheon at Pagani's Restaurant, of the ethics of limited families, said that in the film they had seen how science had been used to promote and cause death, and that self-control was the only permissive limitation. A State needed the largest possible number of healthy citizens it could afford. The film industry might help and the film they had seen that day was an extremely touching thing, the pathos of its conclusion being very strong."

Why,
With flour so high,
Have pie?
Why not forgo
The dough
In funny scenes
On movie screens?
Let heroes rave
And money save.
So why
Sling pie?

POETRY

HER MIRROR

Elnora has a mirror, such a dainty little mirror,
With a row of romping cupids all around the golden frame,
It reflects her dressing table with its powder puffs and brushes,
And the cream jars and the bottles and the [illegible] flame,
And the silver vase of roses, and [illegible]
[illegible] a crumpled kerchief,
Or a knot of withered violets discarded from her breast;
And it is a magic mirror, for it also daily shows her
In its depths the form and features of the one she loves the best!

Oh, the pretty little mirror, the enchanted, haunted mirror;
If the swains of Elenora—and she counts them by the score—
Peeped into its shining oval at the image it encloses
They would be surprised, but never would be jealous any more.
For the face the truthful mirror limns upon its polished surface
Is no manly wooer's famous for his gallantry or pelf,
But a gay and girlish siren's, since the being Elenora
Loves the best in all creation is her own exquisite self.

Minna Irving.

THE DAY'S REWARD.

They kiss me when I start away
They kiss when I return,
What sweeter or what richer pay
Can any toiler earn?

And whether I have won or failed
Am glad or wholly glum,
With joy by that young troop I'm hailed,
They smile to see me come.

—Detroit Free Press.

THE QUESTION

Dear Sir,—Official figures I have before me show that during the first fourteen months of the war, the cost, in round total, was £30,000,000,000. Are you in a position to give me the comparative costs of other wars of the last century or so? Thanking you in advance, Reader.

Answer: The Napoleonic campaigns, 1793 to 1815, took $6,700,000,000; the Civil War, 1861 to 1865, [illegible],000,000; the Franco-German War of 1870 and 1871, $2,500,000,000; the Spanish American War of 1898, $165,000,000; the Boer War of 1899 to 1901, $1,000,000,000; the Russo-Japanese War of 1905 and 1906, $2,500,000,000; the two Balkan wars of 1912 and 1913, $2,100,000,000. This totals in round numbers to $19,000,000,000, or a little more than half the cost of the present war during the first fourteen months of activity.—Ed.

The top coat for the fall season is obtainable in many attractive styles. The coat illustrated is of dark brown velours de laine with graceful flare coat semi-fitted at the waistline. Silk stitching affords very attractive trimming, also the border of beaver fur.

Hero Buried Dead Friend

A Zouave told me the story. I saw him, looking wistful, outside a tobacco shop in a British base in France.

We spent most of the day together. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Marie Louise [illegible]

[illegible]

"The other two bodies were much nearer the German trenches—less than two yards from it, I think—but Marie Louise's pluck was his own reward. The Germans almost stopped firing. We could see them with their heads together, talking about it, and while they talked Marie Louise was working. He buried the second body, and as he patted the earth down the Boches stopped firing altogether.

"We had stopped shooting to him to come back. We were so frightened into silence as they were. There was something impressive in this boy who was risking his life to bury three dead comrades. Nobody moved. There was a silence which hurt. And then, quietly, as if he were all alone, Marie Louise stood straight up and stretched himself.

"Nobody moved in our trench or in theirs. But afterwards I found blood on my lip, where I had bitten it. Marie Louise stood straight up, stretched—a living target, shouldered his spade, [illegible] quietly to the third [illegible] not a sound. He spat [illegible] and quietly, steadily [illegible] were digging [illegible]

[illegible] began [illegible] that [illegible] after [illegible]

"Marie [illegible] ed up a bit of wood, broke [illegible] and made a cross and stuck it at the head of the grave he had made. Then he fumbled in his pockets, and looked about the ground, turning his way and that, as if he had lost something. I saw the light catch something which moved in the German trench, and I shouted. As he threw himself on his face, two bullets whistled again, and one of his feet kicked up.

"But he wasn't dead. We saw him wiggling and crawling quickly towards us, and then he stood up again, under a rain of the twittering bullets, laughed, saluted the Boche trench, and tumbled headlong on the top of me. We pulled him about and pawed him over, but he was not dead—he was laughing. 'Don't do that,' he said, as we hugged him and kissed him. 'I am not a little girl, though you do call me Marie Louise. And I believe I have caught something in my heel.' But it was only a bit of the boot which had been torn away.

"'Why did you turn round and look about you like that?' I asked him, when he was smoking half the lieutenant's last cigarette, and the lieutenant had threatened him with prison and the military medal for leaving the trench without orders, and everything was quiet again. 'It was your turning round like that which made them fire.'

"Marie Louise chuckled. 'I had some red cloth from my trouser strap,' he said, 'and I wanted a bit of white and a bit of blue to put on the cross to make the tricolor, and show the Bighters what I thought of them!'"—John N. Raphael in the London Express.

Chats With the Doctor

(By A PHYSICIAN)

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS.

Probably more readers write to me for advice in connection with states of health in which low spirits are the most obvious symptoms, than about anything else. I have again and again pointed out how intimate is the connection between good spirits and physical well-being—between health and happiness; that there are numerous cases of depression of spirits or hypochondria, as it is called, in its more pronounced forms, in which the melancholy is far more obvious than any physical indisposition which might have caused it or be caused by it. Treatment in these cases is very difficult and calls for much patience, common-sense and tact. Harshness and absence of sympathy with troubles which, however trivial they may seem to us are very real to the patient, only tend to aggravate matters. On the other hand pampering and eternal fussing and doctoring, are little less harmful. The rational line of treatment consists first and foremost in giving the patient something else to think about beyond his own feelings and states of mind. That is why changes of surroundings and travelling with congenial, cheerful, intelligent friends, are so useful in cases of hypochondria. Every effort should be made to induce a interest in some work, or art, or hobby—according to the predilection of the individual. Little whims and prejudices should be reasonably humored, but a common-sense limit should be fixed to this humoring, especially where such things as diet are concerned. In these cases a steadily-increasing amount of outdoor exercise, preferably associations with some work or object of interest, is nearly always of the utmost value. Drugs, except for such simple purposes as the relief of constipation are usually best avoided.

EYE TROUBLES.

When we consider how delicate is the mechanism of the eye, what fragile membranes and muscles go to the making of it, and how exposed it is compared with other of our complicated organs, it is amazing that it so seldom receives any serious injury. This is, of course, largely due to the perfect system of protective devices which surrounds it. The extreme sensitiveness of the nerves which control the lids makes their closing when danger seems to threaten the eye a matter as involuntary as "ducking" the head, which usually accompanies the blink. It is very difficult for the most self-controlled of us to avoid blinking when the eye is threatened, even though we may know quite well that we cannot actually be hurt. Not until we are completely unconscious does this protective action cease.

Blinking, of course, in the ordinary way, serves the purpose of cleaning and moistening the transparent surface of the eyeballs. The blinking of the lids and the watering of the eye when any foreign body gets into it is its effort to rid itself of the object between the lids. In ordinary cases this is amenable to the simplest treatment, but where the object is very sharp, as a piece of steel or iron filing; where it is hot, or where it is highly irritating, as are some chemicals, a doctor should be seen at once without the least delay. Injuries to the transparent membrane which covers the eye are not likely to leave permanent scars or thickening which interfere with the sight. Where the object has come out, but the lids and eye remain sore and watery, the eye should be covered from the light, and washed out two or three times at an hour's interval with weak, warm boracic lotion, dropped or gently syringed between the lids.

This treatment is excellent, too, for simple cases of weak and watery eyes. In addition to the washing with lotion a little yellow oxide of mercury ointment should be smeared between the lids at night. This does good when the eyes water at night, and are found gummy and stuck together in the morning.

When the watering and tiredness of the eyes is persistent in spite of simple treatment some actual sight abnormality [illegible] suspected, and an [illegible] early ad[illegible] sight. Even if the eyes only give trouble during periods of overwork or of fine work done by lamplight, glasses should be worn, even if only at those times. The eyes may be perfectly able to carry out the ordinary work of the day, but fail when the extra task is laid upon them.

WILHELM REX

(Alexander S. Kaun in Chicago Tribune)

My name is Ehrich Wergel. I am a lieutenant of the Leipzig grenadier regiment; was captured under Ossowetz and transported to Siberia, to the gold mines on the River Lena. God knows whether I shall ever see my dear fatherland; our captors treat us inhumanely. For this reason I wish to write down my thoughts on paper, and I shall intrust the manuscript to my former orderly, the loyal Hans Rigler, my brother in captivity. I have recorded with precise exactness what I heard and saw of one of my companions in misery. The tale may appear as sheer delirium of a maniac; and yet—who knows? It may serve as an important historical document.

One morning a fresh party of war prisoners was brought to our barracks. Before being sent to work we were all arranged in line, and the officer in charge called the roll. When he reached the new names he had his assistant read out aloud the individual specifications of each captive, whereupon he assigned him some employment.

"Wilhelm Rex!"

The assistant giggled respectfully. His superior glanced at the document in the other's hand, and smiled condescendingly into his beard. Then he read aloud in a mechanical fashion: "Wilhelm Rex. Captured in the woods of Grodno. Of unknown rank. Claims to be the German kaiser. Left arm crippled. . . . Housework."

A soldier briskly detached the prisoner and placed him aside. I saw a middle-aged man, whose face was worn and covered with a grayish red growth, clad in a shabby, undistinguishable uniform. I turned away my face in pain; the by-products of the glorious war, in the form of madmen and neurasthenics, aroused in me pity and disgust. Yet it came to pass that I should spend five weeks side by side with that man, during which time my attachment to him grew closer and tender. We happened to sleep on the same board berth in the crowded barracks room and many nights we lay awake conversing in a whisper, lest we be rebuked by the sentinel. One night I missed him at my side. He disappeared mysteriously. The Russian officers refused to give me information about the queer prisoner, and I have not heard of him since.

* *

It took some time before I gained the confidence of my fellow prisoner. Even now I think he condescended to speak to me not because of his liking for me but out of a dire need to find an outlet for his loaded mind. He chose me because I was lying next to him and I treated him with respect. There was something about him that compelled politeness and consideration. His majestic, haughty bearing, his refined speech and manners, the way he accented mein whenever he said "Mein Gott," and many more imperceptible traits in his personality kept me at a distance from him and eliminated familiarity from our relations. One night he lifted himself on his elbow and turned to me: "Col. Wergel, [illegible]"

"Lieutenant," I corrected him mechanically.

"Wergel, I have promoted you to the rank of colonel."

It was spoken in such a matter of course manner that I could not even smile. I felt the steel blue of his eyes piercing me in the dark when he whispered: "Col. Wergel, have you heard any news?"

I told him about the rumors that were circulating at the works. Our armies were victorious on all fronts. On the west we were slowly advancing, driving the enemies back. In France as well as in Italy. Vilna was taken. The Kaiser had entered Petrograd and had changed its name to Hindenburg. Moscow was besieged.

"Precisely so. Precisely so." His fingers twisted the points of his unkempt mustache. "All is well. Everything comes out according to my plan. More items shifted from debit to credit. One more . . . Two more . . . Ah, colonel, you may not understand me?"

I confessed my ignorance.

"It does not matter. Circumstances allow me to indulge in mental bookkeeping. I have compressed my past, present, and future into series of tasks; tasks that I have placed before me since I ascended the throne; tasks that I have accomplished with the aid of my God; tasks that are still to be carried out. The last ones I put on the debit page of my imaginary ledgers, to be lifted to the credit page as soon as they become realized. Colonel, would you like to go through the records with me? You will remember that my first task was to undo the harm wrought by Bismarck in alienating the good feelings of the Catholics and the Socialists—more than half of the population. I have made friends with the vatican and have won the staunch support of the Catholic voters. I have taken out the sting from Socialism by granting the workingmen such concessions as were harmless for the state and pacifying the revolutionary elements. I did not suppress their red talk, for I knew that in time of need the call of the drum would prove more effective than their theoretic gibberish. Then I turned my eye toward my neighbors. For some time my debit page had carried an item: To make friends with France or with England. That item had to be erased after years of futile consideration. I had come to see clearly that the French were obsessed with the revanche idea and that the animosity of England was growing in proportion with the growth of our commerce. Isolation was the destiny of the fatherland. Italy could not be trusted; she has always been a bargaining party, with the motto, 'Who will give more?' The support to be expected from my Austrian friend could not exceed that of the biblical bruised reed. My eastern neighbor has been the ally of France; true, I kicked the bear into war with Japan, and thus blunted his claws, but the bear can be defeated only temporarily. A new task had become crystallized on the debit side: to augment isolation into world power. If Germany is to stand alone she must be strong enough to whip the world. I set out to forge an invincible nation. . . . ."

Daybreak found him still leaning on his elbow, looking into the distance with fixed, cold eyes, whispering short, terse sentences. His talk made me feel uneasy; often during the day I stopped my work and meditated over the impressions of the sleepless night. Was he a madman, or . . . I dared not formulate my wild thoughts. But since I am not writing about myself, I shall skip over this irrelevant matter.

* *

Night after night I listened in a sort of a trance to the feverish utterances of my neighbor. The upbuilding of my country in the last thirty years loomed before my eyes as the gigantic work of one person, the one who spoke to me with the accentuated I.

"The world laughed at our mad experiments. I allowed them to laugh. I allowed our Zeppelins and submarines to explode occasionally so as to demonstrate their futility. Secretly I was getting ready for The Day. Zeppelins—a reality; forty-two centimeter guns—proved practical in defiance of all 'experts'; submarines that could cruise for three weeks away from their base; supply depots planted on the sea bottom around the English coast—these trumps were not of a so great an importance as my main achievement, the machinization of my people. I have transformed Germany into a scientific apparatus, working with clocklike preciseness and accuracy. I have killed our proverbial sentimentality and supplanted it with efficiency. I have driven out individualism from my empire. The individual has come to serve the state unreservedly and religiously. The system, the machine, have become the omnipotent factors. Even I have become unnecessary. This you can see, colonel, from the fact that while I am here, in Siberia, my machine continues its work as efficiently as ever. I have been but an accidental screw in the gigantic apparatus."

To ask him how he had been brought to the condition he was in would have been tantamount to an affirmation of his claims. But my curiosity grew so keen that I finally gathered up my courage and asked him about it. He looked at me inquiringly for a few moments.

"Col. Wergel, you deserve my confidence. As a matter of fact, I look upon my personal elimination from the field of activity as on a bagatelle, as on one of those incidents which are likely to happen with any machine. I have fallen the victim of my own theory. On the night of the fall of Brest-Litovsk into my tent came a group of my best friends and counselors, the chancellor and the officers of the general staff, and they declared to me in the name of the army that my personality was considered detrimental for the cause, since I have shown individualistic tendencies in the management of the war. Count Zeppelin was instructed to carry out my abduction. In the dark of the night I was driven over the frontier and dropped off in a remote Russian village. For many days I wandered without food and drink, unable to speak to the natives, who looked with suspicion at my strange garb and unkempt appearance. I walked westward in the hope of coming upon my army. The Cossacks picked me up in a half-conscious condition, and here I am now, Colonel, the malice I had felt against the conspirators has given place to gratitude for the opportunity they have given me to convince myself in the splendid organization of our machine, which works automatically, proving the superfluity of any individual, be it even myself . . . "

Several times during our night talks I had intended to put the following question to my unique companion: How did he explain the fact that the name of the Kaiser was still mentioned in all news, that he had appeared in Petrograd and other places? My courage failed me on each occasion. My inquisitiveness would seem vulgar and impertinent. To my joy, my mystifying point was made plausibly clear to me by the unknown himself. On the last night that we were together he was nervous and elated. He touched my shoulder and whispered:

"Colonel, you have never asked me about my alter ego, who passes for the Kaiser. I appreciate your noble delicacy. The explanation is simple. It is another proof of our excellent efficiency. You are surely aware of the nickname the press has given me—Wilhelm der Plotzliche. Quite true. I have often appeared at places unannounced and unexpected. At times I seemed to be ubiquitous. On one occasion the newspapers reported my presence at the Royal opera in Berlin, while I was in Ischl on an important consultation with Francis Joseph. I have a double who resembles me so closely and imitates me so skillfully that he has baffled my own family more than once. My dear conspirators have made use of him. I am not envious of poor Otto, the calif-for-an-hour."

He spoke the last words with a whimsical mysteriousness.

Potash From Sargasso Sea.

The search for potash has extended to the Sea of Sargasso, whose only known use hitherto has been to serve as a graveyard for derelict ships. Captain W. [illegible] Warner, of Tampa, Fla., writes the "Manufacturers Record" that plans are completed and he is now seeking construction materials and mechanical outfit for an [illegible] sea-going barge combination a seaweed harvester, potash reduction plant and storage facilities. His plan is to build a floating continuous process potash recovery plant, which will be towed to that great expanse of vegetation known as the Sargasso [illegible] operated to con[illegible] [illegible] to con[illegible]

WHO[illegible] C[illegible]

The Infant's Most Dangerous Disease.

Whooping Cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than in male children.

Whooping Cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop," Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, and weeks of suffering prevented, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. Nellie Barley, Amherst, N.S., writes: "I have much pleasure in saying that there is no cough syrup like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. My little girl took whooping cough from a little girl who has since died with it. I tried lots of things but found 'Dr. Wood's' to give the greatest relief. It helped her to raise the phlegm, and she is now better.

My young brother is also taking the cough, and I am getting 'Dr. Wood's' to work again."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Refuse substitutes.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

TORONTO.—Retail Xmas trade is proceeding on a scale considerably larger than last year. A couple of Toronto retail men stated that they are experiencing a better Christmas trade than for several years past, and approaching the [illegible] encountered in many years of business life. While wholesale firms report that business has slackened until travellers are sent on the road in January, they say that there is an active inquiry through the roads. Hardware lines are active, especially with manufacturers and munition business. General business in hardware is also good. Drygoods lines are proving out well; the retail trade is universally acknowledged to be brisk and wholesale firms are arriving at the exact totals of a year's business that is declared on many sides to be of record proportion. Grocery lines are active. Commercial notes are being well met.

MONTREAL.—Local merchants are enjoying a record Christmas trade. Industries that are busily employed, and wages that are generally much higher than have been known in Canada's history are accounting for a very brisk holiday trade that is satisfactory to wholesalers and jobbers and retailers alike. There is an active enquiry for drygoods lines, especially woolens, and orders appear to be limited only by the ability of [illegible] to deliver goods. Hardware lines [illegible] and the grocery trade as well [illegible]

OTTAWA.—[illegible] Christmas trade is considerably [illegible] than that of last year. While wholesalers are unable [illegible] the proportions [illegible] has been no expression [illegible] any quarter. Purchasers are paying the high [illegible] without demurring. [illegible] are busy and [illegible] quite plentiful.

HAMILTON.—Christmas retail [illegible] is even better than [illegible] conditions [illegible] out the autumn [illegible] distribution [illegible] drygoods [illegible] of merch[illegible] house furnishings, boots [illegible] employed, and [illegible] absorbed profit[illegible]. Labor [illegible] Country trade [illegible] are generally g[illegible]

LONDON.—T[illegible] out Western Ont[illegible] desired. Country trade [illegible] good. Spring orders are [illegible] travellers who have recently [illegible] from the road, to be extremely [illegible] some shop dealers have said that they were too heavy to suit them in view of some uncertainty about filling them in view of shortage of materials. Grocery, hardware and drygoods lines are active. Christmas trade is brisk, and payments are reported to be good.

WINNIPEG.—The sharp downward trend of grain prices was almost solely due to the effect of the Chicago market, and local grain men are confident that the future will surely follow, although it may be preceded by a temporary difference. All lines of mercantile trade are experiencing unwonted activity. Both country and city payments are extra good.

CALGARY.—High prices for grain and general farm produce has ensured a [illegible] merchandise in all districts thro[illegible] the province, and this is reflected [illegible] an extensive buying locally. City pay[illegible] are [illegible] to be improving. Edmonton report[illegible] that seasonable weather has [illegible] impetus to winter trade, and [illegible] buying [illegible] good.

VANCOUVER.—Merc[illegible] satisfactory and mone[illegible] more plentiful. Com[illegible] are reported to be sho[illegible] [illegible]vement.

QUEBEC.—Retail tr[illegible] [illegible]ues active as Christmas ap[illegible] [illegible]d some report sales ahead o[illegible] time a year ago. Amongst the wholesale activity is noticeable in the following lines: groceries, provisions, dry goods, shoes and [illegible]. Remittances are fairly good.

A Readable Movie.

An innovation in moving pictures includes the use of two screens side by side. On one are given pictures in the usual fashion, while upon the other is the text of the story the pictures are to illustrate. This supplies words which can amplify the plot developed in the picture. The reading screen is also valuable in educational and scientific movies. It can give the lecture or description along with the pictures thus supplying the place of a lecturer at a trifling expense.

You never can tell. A man may be absent-minded and still have a good presence.

WAS WEAK and RUN DOWN

SUFFERED WITH "NERVES."

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak and the nerves unstrung it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and you will find that in a very short time you will become strong and well again.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was [illegible] and run down, I could not stand [illegible] of any kind. I [illegible] Pills to be

STOCK TAKING

The first two or three weeks of the New Year we devote to Stock Taking and during this process we find lots of odds and ends which we will clear at a fraction of the original cost.

Sale of Ladies' Misses' & Children's Winter Coats

This week we start a special Sale of Ladies' Misses' and Children's Winter-Coats. Everyone a fashionable up-to-date garment, some with only one size, but every size in some garment. Prices: $5.00, $7.50, $11.50, $13.50 and $16.50.

Clearance of Furs

In Furs and Fur-Lined and Fur Collared Coats and especially small Furs, Collars, Throws and Fur Ruffs, we find after Christmas selling that we have a lot of odd pieces in stock. Some swell Neck Pieces without muffs to match and also Muffs without the Neck Piece to match. Every one must go if prices will move them. Prices from $2.50 Up.

Remnants of Dress Goods, Etc.

In Dress Goods and Coatings, Remnants, scores of splendid ends for skirts, dresses and children's wear will be sold at about half-price.

STEPHAN BROS.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Greetings

Our firm and Staff extend to all Our Customers and Business Friends

The Season's Greetings

And thank you for your Liberal Patronage for many years past. Wishing you all a Very Happy and Prosperous Nineteen-Seventeen.

J. H. APPEL

A Happy New Year To All

C. PATRICK

Hartley House, Walkerton,
Tuesday, Jan. 16th.

DORENWEND'S
OF TORONTO

Canada's foremost hairgoods manufacturers will exhibit for your inspection their finest and latest hair creations in ladies'

SWITCHES, CORONET AND FANCY BRAIDS, POMPADOURS, TRANSFORMATIONS, CHIGNONS, WAVES, BANGS, AND

FOR BALD MEN

TOUPEES AND WIGS of hygienic and scientific construction that are as lifelike as nature, cannot be detected from a person's own hair, and will render long service and satisfaction.

They make the appearance years younger and improve the health by the protection they offer.

A Demonstration of these Hair Structures is FREE OF CHARGE. It will not obligate you in any way.

REMEMBER THE DATE
Tuesday, January 6th.
Dorenwend's
Head Office and Show Rooms
105 Yonge Street
Toronto

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application. S24

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, D. Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, Chepstowe.

D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley.
47 t. f.

RAW FURS

Trappers, Ship Your Raw Furs To Me
Highest Prices, Fair Assortment
Write for price list free
C. H. ROGERS, Walkerton, Ontario

Winter Term From Jan. 2

CENTRAL Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

We have COMMERCIAL SHORTHAND and TELEGRAPHY DEPARTMENTS. The courses are thorough, up-to-date and practical. The instructors are experienced and we place graduates in positions. We are receiving applications for trained help we cannot supply.

Write at once for particulars.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Yours For Big Business

"Quality Groceries"

They are "Good" to-day
They are "Good" tomorrow
They are "Always Good"
at the Leading Grocery, Walkerton.

Goode & McKay

The Best Newspaper Value

In Western Ontario

.. The ..
London Advertiser
All Mail Editions $3.00 Per Year

READ THE ADS.

HEAVY SHOES

Cruse Calf, Black Whale, and Russian Calf for Men and Boys.

C. Petteplace's

Mammoth Stock-Taking Sale

THIS ANNUAL EVENT STARTS
FRI'Y JAN. 5
And Continues Until
SAT. JAN. 27

ON AT

McBURNEY'S

BARGAINS
— IN —
Winter Goods
IN EVERY PART OF THE STORE.

THIS IS OUR ANNUAL CLEAN-UP SALE :-

BEFORE TAKING STOCK and in the face of steadily advancing prices in all lines of Dry Goods, it is almost impossible to appreciate the tremendous saving in lines that this Big Sale will mean to the people of Walkerton and surrounding district. On some goods you will save 10 per cent; on others 20 to 50 per cent everything you buy will be below present values. We quote some of the special values, but there are many more that space will not permit enumerating.

TRAVELLERS' SAMPLES

Travellers' Samples of Gloves, Mitts, Toques, Scarfs, Booties, Tams, Hoods, Men's, Women's and Children's Underwear at a reduction of 25% to 50% less than regular value.

RIBBONS

20c to 25c Ribbons all colors on sale 15c yd or two yds for 25c.

COMFORTERS

Sale of Comforters, $2.00 for $1.00, $2.25 for $1.85, $2.50 for $2.00, $3.00 for $2.50, $4.00 for $3.50, $4.50 for $3.95.

Eider Down Comforters at $5.00, $6.50, and $8.00.

WOOL BLANKETS

Wool Blankets Reduced $4.50 for $3.95, $5.00 for $4.25, $6.00 for $4.95, $8.50 for $7.25 per pair.

EMBROIDERIES AND LACES

15c and 20c Embroideries and Laces, a beautiful assortment to choose from, at 10c per yd.

SILKS

Heavy Black Duchess Silk, our best $1.75 quality, sale price $1.50 per yd.

$1.50 Black Duchess and Paillette Silks 1 yd wide fine rich lustre on sale at $1.25 a yard.

CASHMERE HOSE

15 doz. reg 50c black Cashmere Hose, sizes 8½ to 10 on sale 39c a pair.

12 doz. reg 60c black Cashmere Hose, splendid quality, sale price 49c a pair.

35c Ribbed Black Cashmere Hose, while they last on sale 25c a pair.

CORD VELVET

All colors Cord Velvet, very scarce goods, on sale 75c to $1.00 per yd.

WOMEN'S, MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S WINTER COATS

Women's, Misses and Children's Winter Coats, 20% to 50% off regular prices on all ladies' and children's winter coats. Be on hand early for these.

YARNS

20% off regular prices on Yarns of all kinds. The quicker you come the better your chance for these as they will not last long.

WHITE AND ECRU LACE CURTAINS

$1.50 to $2.00 Curtains on sale at $1.25 a pair.
$2.25 Curtains on sale at $1.35 a pair
$2.60 Curtains on sale at $1.50 a pair.

CORSETS

20% off in Corsets, Ladies' Corsets $1.00 to $4.50 per pair. You have your choice at 20% off regular prices during the sale.

LADIES' UNDERWEAR

Ladies', Misses and Children's underwear at early fall prices.

LADIES' FLANNELETTE NIGHT GOWNS

Ladies' White and Colored Flannelette Night Gowns, a few special lines, 75c for 50c, $1.00 for 75c, $1.25 for 98c, $1.50 for $1.10 and $2.00 for $1.49.

PRINTS

A good assortment of light and dark prints at 12½c, 15c and 10c a yd.

FLANNELETTES

Flannelettes at old prices. We have about 75 or 80 pieces of Flannelette in plain white and light and dark colored patterns, bought a year ago and on sale at less than present wholesale prices, 10c, 11c, 12½c, 15c, 16c, 18c, 20c and 25c a yd.

VELVETEENS

Black and colored Velveteens worth 85c to $1.00 a yard. Clearing now at 60c per yd.

EMBROIDERED VELVETS

Embroidered Velvets reg. $1.00 per yd during sale at 75c per yd.

LADIES' HANDKERCHIEFS

15 doz Ladies' Embroidered and Hemstitched Handkerchiefs reg 20c and 25c, sale price 15c or two for 25c. 8c, 10c and 12½c laces and embroideries, sale price 5c a yd.

MEN'S UNDERWEAR

Men's winter underwear, 20 per cent off regular prices, on all men's winter underwear.

SWEATER COATS

Special prices on men's, boys', women's and girls' sweater coats. Some astonishing values in these lines.

MEN'S WINTER OVERCOATS

20% off regular prices on men's winter overcoats. 10% off regular prices on all men's and boys' suits. Special prices on boys' overcoats.

MEN'S AND BOYS' FELT HATS

20% off regular prices on all men's and boys' felt hats, black and all colors in the lot.

MEN'S AND BOYS' COLLARS

10 doz odd lot of men's and boys' linen and celluloid col on sale at 5c each.

MEN'S AND BOYS' SHIRTS

10 doz men's and boys' 85c, $1.00 and $1.25 shirts, sizes 14 to 17, sale price 65c each.

MEN'S OVERALLS

6 doz men's bluestriped overalls, all sizes, reg $1.50 quality, sale price $1.25 a pair.

MEN'S CASHMERETTE HOSE

10 doz men's seamless cashmerette hose worth 35c, on sale at 25c per pair.

MEN'S LEATHER MITTS

8 doz men's heavy lined leather mitts reg price 60c, sale price 49c per pair.

Heavy lined $1.25 buck faced mitts at 98c a pair.

REMNANTS

A big table of remnants of all kinds of that mean a saving of 25 to 50% on regular

LADIES' BLOUSES, ETC

Odd sizes in ladies' white and colored blou waists at about half their reg prices, all sizes is a great money saver.

FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 5th, we open this Su [illegible] ful Values that you must not miss. This would be an exc time, but under present conditions it is an [illegible] rop everything else to attend this Sale and you will b morning when convenient. COME [illegible] ARY 27th.

[illegible] day, Jan. 27th.

W

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. [illegible] NO. 2 — WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JANUARY 11th 1917 — $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Louse Killers

You may require some of the numerous preparations for your cattle or poultry. Either in liquid or powder Louse Killers, you will find the popular ones here, and also fresh, uncolored, best quality Insect Powder and Hellebore.

After using the lice killer, it will pay you to give your hens Dr. Hess' Poultry Panacea or Royal Purple Specific as an Egg Producer and Tonic.

A 25c package English Condition Powders will do wonders to horses and cattle.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks — Phone 35 — C. P. R. Ticket Agency

CURE THAT COUGH!

With one of these:-

Rexall Cherry Bark

Rexall White Pine & Tar

Rexall Baby Cough Syrup

A.P.SIEVERIGHT
The Rexall Store

BOOKS STATIONERY WALL PAPER OFFICE SUPPLIES

McCrum & Co.

Harvard Brown

The new color for women's fine shoes FOR FALL made in Russian Calf, laced 8 in. top, perforation on vamp.

Price $6.00

Ramsey The Shoeman

We Are Entering 1917

With a determination to give the best of satisfaction in STYLISH TAILORED CLOTHES.

We are very particular to fit garments to you, that look well on you.

Give us a trial, you'll be satisfied with the quality and our little prices.

We carry a complete line of MEN'S FURNISHINGS.

G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 185, Walkerton, Ont.

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

160th Batt'n COLLAR BADGE

(Gold Plated)

Made into a handsome brooch.

Only 50cts

Orders for this brooch mailed postage free.

C. A. FOX
Jeweller and Optician

The Central Grocery

Heinz' Sweet Mixed Pickles in bulk.

Heinz' Pork & Beans with or without tomatoe sauce.

Corn and Peas 2 Cans for 25c

Cooking Figs 3 lbs for 25c

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 — Walkerton

HEAVY SHOES

Urus Calf, Black Whale, and Russian Calf for Men and Boys.

C. Petteplace's

READ THE ADS.

CHRISTMAS IN ENGLAND

Boys of the 160th Smothered With Turkey and Plum Pudding at Banquet Fit for King—A Handsome Souvenir Issued.

The Boys of the 160th Bruce Battalion had a royal celebration on Christmas, according to reports that have come across the Big Pond. Liberal supplies of turkey and plum duff assisted them in drowning the feelings of homesickness that would no doubt be uppermost in the hearts of many during the festive season.

An elaborate souvenir booklet gotten up in beautiful form, tells the story. First of all a menu worthy of the Waldorf Astoria was served, which included tomato soup, fish, olives and radish, turkey, plum pudding, Canad an "cream cheese and crackers, coffee, nuts, raisins, figs, and cigarettes.

There followed a regimental entertainment in which Sergt.-Major Harry Watts made a proficient chairman. The popular Colonel made a speech. Joe Ammon performed some mouth organ stunts. Capt. Shaw and Capt. Todd gave recitations. Sergt. Eidt performed at the piano. And there were bear dances, step dances, drum solos, pipe solos, band numbers and music to no end.

A well-written sketch of the Battalion, under the heading: "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here," in which we think we see the hand of Capt. Whitehead, thus concludes.—"So this Christmas finds us still at Bramshott, farther away from home than most of us ever thought of coming, and makes us wish and hope that next Christmas will see us home again, where, to those who were not with us on The Big Trip, we will spin the most amazing yarns."

Patriotic Dance

The Patriotic Dance given by young men of the town last Wednesday night was quite successful. About fifty couples were present. Excellent music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Len Taylor of Clifford, and all report a good time. About forty dollars were netted for Patriotic purposes after paying expenses.

+ + +

District L. O. L. Meeting

Cargill District L. O. L. met in annual session in the village of Paisley on January 9th, 1917. Wor. Master Frank Bolden occupied the chair. The secretary was instructed to send greetings from the district lodge to all members on active service. The present officers were re-elected by acclamation for the coming year as follows— District Master, F. E. Bolden; Deputy Master, R. M. White; Chaplain, George Carbert; Rec. Sec'y, Wm. Van Horne; Fin. Sec'y, Wm. Dobson; Lecturer, Sylvester Parker; Director of Ceremonies, J. Chambers. It was decided that the next meeting in the village of Paisley, on the second Tuesday of January, 1918 at two o'clock p. m. The district lodge then closed in regular order with the singing of "God Save the King."—Wm. Van Horne, Dist. Rec. Sec.

+ + +

Lieut. Fatt Killed.

Lieut. William M. Fatt whose name appeared in Tuesday's casualty list as accidently killed was a son of Rev. F. H. Fatt of Victoria, B. C., formerly rector of St. Thomas Church, Walkerton. The young man was also a nephew of Mr. Richard K. Sutton. No information is available as to the nature of his accident, as the official notification has been sent to his wife in England. Lieut. Fatt went to the Front with the 2nd Divisional Cyclists in May, 1915, having been transferred to that unit from a Victoria Highland Battalion. After eleven months at the Front he returned to England and took a course in Aviation and it is probably he met his death while flying. A brother, Pte. Fred P. Fatt is now in England on his way to the Front with the 15th Brigade Ammunition Column. Lieut. Fatt was one of six nephews of Mr. R. K. Sutton who are in khaki.

BORN

Riehl—In Walkerton, on January 10th, to Pte. and Mrs. W. G. Riehl, a son.

Eedy—At Walkerton, on January 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. Lorne A. Eedy, a daughter.

Robertson—At Barrow Bay, on January 1st, 1917, to Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Robertson (nee Nellie Little), a son.

Prockenow—In Carrick, on Jan. 1st, 1917, to Mr. and Mrs. Dan Prockenow, a daughter.

DIED

Eedy—At Walkerton, on January 7th, 1917, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne A. Eedy.

Diemert—At Indian Head, Sask., Barbara, relict of the late John Diemert of Carrick, aged 87 years.

Slipped Off Load

Joseph Spitzig of con. 4, Greenock, had his ankle badly injured by slipping off a load of hay on Tuesday. No bones were broken but the ankle was very badly sprained and bruised.

+ + +

Death of Miss Clark

Miss Lydia Clark, an estimable young lady, well known in Walkerton, passed away at her home in Hanover on Monday night, following a short illness. Death resulted from uraemic poisoning. Miss Clark was the daughter of the late Rev. Andrew Clark of Hanover and a niece of Mrs. (Dr.) W. A. Hall.

+ + +

It Comes High

That it is a mighty serious thing to go up against the new Liquor Act was again demonstrated here on Monday, when a young man of the town was fined $200 and costs by Magistrates Tolton and Richardson for giving a companion a drink from a flask while they were driving over to Hanover. As the defendant was a young man with a good record, the Magistrates wanted to be lenient but the statutes place the minimum fine for the offence at two hundred dollars.

+ + +

Big Box Social.

A big box social under the auspices of the Brant Preparedness League will be held at Johnston's School House, S. S. No. 1 Brant, on Friday evening of this week, Jan. 12th. A splendid program will be provided. Mr. John Rowland will occupy the chair, which ensures a lively evening. Teams will be provided free to convey parties to and from the entertainment and will leave the town hall at 7.30 o'clock. Everybody come. Admission 25c, ladies bringing boxes free.

+ + +

An Irish Shillalah

At the Mayor's Banquet held at Erdman's two weeks ago when Mayor Lippert was presented with a gold-headed cane, he promised to give his pet Irish blackthorn to the successful candidate for the Reeveship, whoever he might be. The Mayor carried out his promise at the inaugural meeting of the 1917 Council on Monday morning when he stepped forward and handed the shillalah to Reeve-elect Russell. In acknowledging the gift, Reeve Russell said he liked it all the better for the bit of Irish to it. Mayor Lippert has had no occasion to use the big stick during his three harmonious years as Chief Magistrate. But it sure would be a murderous weapon.

+ + +

Rules of Rural Mails

It would be well for patrons of the rural mail system to take note of Sections 16 and 17 of the Rural Mail Delivery Regulations—(16) "All matter deposited in his box by the patron to be collected by the courier, must be fully prepaid. The practice of placing money in the box to pay postage which has hitherto prevailed, is to be discontinued and the courier shall not be required to collect any mail matter that does not bear the requisite amount of postage. Patrons must furnish themselves with a supply of postage which can be procured from the courier." (17) "The courier shall not be required to sell less than twenty-five cents worth of stamps at a time to any patron."

+ + +

Latest War Despatch

London, Eng., Jan. 10—(G. N. W. Tel.)—Despatches received here indicate that German submarine activity will be increased now that if distress caused by lack of supplies grows worse in Austria and Germany, an attempt by the combined fleets of the Central Powers to break the blockade may be expected. French War Office reports quiet night on West front. Despatch from Athens says it is announced that guarantees of the Allies against an extension of the revolution under Venezelos are satisfactory to the Greek Government and the ultimatum will be accepted. Despatch from Lugani declares German Chancellor now at work on new note which will outline peace terms acceptable to Germany.

+ + +

Something Doing in 1917.

Mr. James Warren, who has taken a life-long interest in astronomy, and is well-posted as to the approach of celestial phenomena from time to time, informs us that during 1917 there will be no less than seven eclipses, the greatest number that can happen in any year. The eclipse of the moon which took place in the earlier hours of Monday arrived on schedule time. In fact so accurate is the moon in its revolutions that astronomers could have foretold 100 years ago the exact second at which Monday's eclipse would begin. Owing to the cloudy weather it was not easily observed however. Altogether this year there will be four eclipses of the sun and three of the moon. The last year on which a similar occurence took place was in the year 1805, over a century ago. There is another combination that gives five eclipses of the sun and two of the moon. The cause of these combinations would require a lengthy explanation that the general reader would have difficulty in following.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Hogs are 12c live weight.

Don't forget to renew your Telescope.

Mrs Stauffer is visiting her son at Toronto.

Miss Holm went on a visit to Detroit Tuesday.

Have you renewed your subscription to the Telescope yet?

Mrs. Gould is spending the winter with her daughter at Toronto.

Mrs. Schause of Clifford, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Chris. Kolpin.

Mrs. McCully of Stratford is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. E. McGregor.

Miss Velma Ritchie of Toronto renewed acquaintances here last week.

Mrs. Golden (formerly Miss McCredie) is visiting at Mr. N. Crawford's.

A great crowd attended J. Bilger's sale last Thursday. Prices were good.

Mrs. Hildred and Miss Vera of Bervie, visited at Mr. A. J. Wesley's last week.

Mrs. Malcolm Thompson of Malcolm is at the Bruce County Hospital for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Flatt and Miss Vivian, of Pinkerton, spent Sunday at Mr. J. E. McGregor's.

Mrs. Bonnyman, who has been ill with grippe the past two weeks is able to be out again.

Miss Lily Gress, of 14th con. Carrick, left this week for Buffalo where she has taken a position.

The Separate School pupils have had an extra week of holidays owing to a new floor being laid in the classrooms.

Dr. Grant of Durham, a brother of Dr. C. L. Grant of Walkerton, headed the poll for the Council in his home town of Durham.

Pte. Will. Coumans of the 107th, Winnipeg, Batt., who has been visiting at his home in Chepstow, returned to Winnipeg last week.

The Ontario Government Better Farming car will be at the Grand Trunk Station 10.30 a. m. to 5.30 p. m. Thursday, Jan. 18, Moving pictures and lecture at night.

Jack Burk writes his mother from France that he is fine and fit and has come through the fight unscathed up to now. He mentions having met many Walkerton boys.

Messrs. Frank Bolden, District Master, and William Van Horne, delegate from Walkerton Orange Lodge, attended District meeting of L. O. L. at Cargill on Tuesday.

An address by Rev. C. W. Cosens at Knox Church on Bible Society night on the history of the Bible, was greatly enjoyed. It was one of the best addresses on the subject that has been given here.

Joseph Johnston, the new reeve of Arran Tp., is a nephew of License Inspector Jos. M. White. He is a young man with only two years experience in municipal affairs but a "live wire."

Mr. J. E. McGregor went to Blythe the last of the week to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Mr. George Knox, who died at St Joseph's Hospital, London, on Friday following an operation.

The Telescope inaccurately reported last week that Mrs. Lou Anderson had given a party for her friends. It should have stated that the party was a surprise affair gotten up by Misses Liddle and Salter.

Mrs. Alex. McCarter realized a neat sum for purchasing yarn for soldiers' socks by giving an afternoon tea last week. Mrs. McCarter is one of the many devoted women whose hearts are at the Front, and whose needles ply busily day and night.

Lieut. J. A. Cronin, of Kincardine who went overseas with the 160th Bruce Battalion, arrived home on December 27th on three months leave. Lieut. Cronin was ill with pneumonia for a short time in England, and is now home to recuperate.

Inspector McCool attended the opening of a fine new Indian School near Southampton on Friday night. He had great praise for the school and the decorations for the occasion which had been arranged by the children. The school is taught by Mrs. Robb, formerly of Stratford.

TOWN COUNCIL 1917

Mayor
Andrew P. Johnston.

Reeve
Robt. Russell.

Councillors
Alex. McCarter, Rev. J. W. Sanderson, Sam Vogan, John McKinnon, Harry E. Truax, John E. McGregor.

Mr. R. H. McKay is able to be out again.

Mr. M. J. Ramsey was in Toronto on business this week.

Mr. Arthur Collins spent Monday and Tuesday at Owen Sound.

Mrs. B. G. Malone of Detroit is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lymberry.

Doctors state that there is a great deal of sickness—mostly grippe—just now.

Everybody mask and join the Grand March at the Patriotic Carnival, Jan. 19th.

Mr. John Dester was operated upon for internal trouble at Bruce County Hospital yesterday.

Mrs. H. Bodt has been confined to the house the past week as the result of a fall on an icy walk.

Mr. Will. Sutton of the M. C. R. Shops, St. Thomas, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Sutton last week.

Rev. Thos. Wilson is assisting Dr. Minifie in Belgian Relief work at Port Elgin, Southampton and Paisley this week.

Mr. O. E. Klein was able to be out for a little while yesterday after a very serious attack of grippe with complications.

Brant Tp. Council met for reorganization on Monday. The Township Assessor was given an increase of $25 and reappointed for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stephan arrived home from their wedding trip on Friday and are staying at the Hartley House until their fine new residence is ready.

It is reported that Pte. Hugh Threndyle of the 160th who was rejected in England as physically unfit, will be among a party of soldiers sailing for home shortly.

The marriage of Capt. J. G. Little, Commanding Officer of "B" Co., 160th Batt'n, to Miss G. Whitmarsh of Teeswater, took place in London, England, on Nov. 13th.

Twenty ladies of the South Ward met at the home of Mrs. Frank Latchford on Monday afternoon to make shirts for the soldiers in connection with the I. O. D. E. work. Eleven garments were made up.

Mr. and Mrs. John Meyer of Labrett, Sask. are visiting Mr. Meyer's father, Louis Meyer of Cargill. They will remain here over winter and it is probable that Mr. Meyer sr. will accompany him to the West in the Spring.

Elroy Hergott of the G. T. R. staff had his hand rather badly cut and bruised on Tuesday, requiring medical attention. He was assisting a trainman in closing a freight car door when the door suddenly gave, catching and jamming his hand.

Miss Annie Robertson, of Southampton, formerly of the Walkerton Public School Staff underwent a very serious operation at the County Hospital on Wednesday morning. Her condition is very low, but she is reported to be doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. A. Hehn of Youngston, Alta., is home on a visit to his father, Mr. L. Hehn of Culross. Mr. Hehn, who is located on the Goose Lake Line, says crops were pretty fair in that section. With the high prevailing prices the farmers fared pretty well. Even No. 6 wheat, ordinarily used for feed, brought as high as a dollar per bushel.

Mr. James H. Hunter, who had an operation performed on his foot at the County Hospital last week, was able to return to his home on Monday. The operation was apparently successful and it is thought he will now have relief from the injured member, which had been bothering him for years.

A reception was held at the home of Wm. Beatty, London Road on Wednesday evening, January 3rd, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Beatty, on the occasion of their recent marriage in Walkerton. About forty were present and a most enjoyable and pleasant evening was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Beatty will reside at Creighton Mines. —Sarnia Canadian.

Mr. Frank Heldmiller, a prosperous farmer of Stavely, Southern Alberta, is here on a visit to the old home at Riversdale. Mr Heldmiller brought a sample of No. 1 hard wheat which grew forty-five bushels to the acre on his place this year and would crack your teeth to bite it. Mr. Heldmiller says that all things considered, the farmers of his section have had the most prosperous year on record.

A member of "C" Co., 160th Batt'n met his death in England in a peculiar way. During a lecture on machine gun firing, a bullet from a cartridge, which was thought to be blank struck him in the leg. The leg required to be amputated and he died as a result of the operation. The name of the soldier is not mentioned but he no doubt comes from the Teeswater and Kincardine neighbourhood where "C" Co. was recruited.

Bruce County Council meets Jan. 30th.

Inaugural meeting of Town Council to-night.

Ormsley Methodist Church mortgage was burned Monday night.

The ladies of the R. C. Church gave a euchre party Wednesday.

H. A. Keyes of Kindersley, Sask. is visiting the old home in Greenock.

Tony Zuber comes up before Judge Greig for sentence on Friday morning.

John Kocher has leased the Desmerton Hotel and applied for a standard license.

You can show you appreciate the Telescope's efforts to give you a live local paper by renewing your subscription promptly.

Miss Marcella Weiler, who has been home from St. Anne's College, Kitchener, for the holidays, is confined to the house by illness.

A horse driven by a Pinkerton farmer ran away on Durham St. last night and having broken loose from the cutter dashed down the C. P. R. track.

The three public school concerts held in Carrick recently, and the Mildmay concert last Friday aggregated nearly five hundred dollars for patriotic purposes.

Several road divisions in Carrick are now equipped with small angle scrapers, the purpose of which is to keep the roads nicely rounded up, and to fill up the ruts by the rapid automobile traffic.

Mrs. Andrew Watson of Hartney, Man. is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Butchert of Eden Grove and other relatives in this section. Mrs. Watson received a letter from home stating that the thermometer stood 40 below zero there.

The shortage of coal is becoming a serious problem in Mildmay, and unless the situation is relieved within the next few days or a week; there will be a lot of coal stoves and furnaces in Mildmay going hungry.—Mildmay Gazette.

The engagement is announced of Miss Jennie Climie, younger daughter of Mrs. John M. Stewart of Chesley to Mr. Wellington G. Krug, son of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, Krug, Chesley, the marriage to take place quietly early in January.

+ + +

For Sale

Piano and several articles of furniture. Apply to Mrs. M. Crompton; Gibson St.

+ + +

General Servant Wanted

For family of two in Toronto, able to do plain cooking. Wages $10.—Apply Telescope.

+ + +

Mentioned In Despatches

Capt. C. E. Kilmer, who was awarded the D. S. O. for gallant conduct the Ypres Salient last July, is mentioned in General Haig's despatch.

+ + +

Died at Crandell, Man.

The death occurred at Man., on Friday last, of Mrs. Kidd, formerly Miss Annie B Walkerton. The remains brought to her home town of Clifford for burial on Wednesday.

+ + +

I. O. D. E.

The regular business meeting of the Daughters of the Empire will be held in the Armoury on Tuesday evening. Nomination of officers for the coming year will be made by ballot. All members of the local chapter are urged to be present.

+ + +

Auction Sale

Auction Sale of house and lot, horses, lumber and mason's effects will be held at the residence of Herman Becker, one block south of Exhibition Grounds, Saturday, Jan. 20th at 1 p.m. No reserve. Herman Becker, prop., John Purvis, auctioneer.

+ + +

Women's Institute

A meeting of the Women's Institute will be held on Jan. 12th, at 3 p. m., when Mrs. F. W. Watts of Toronto will speak to the ladies, her subject being, "A Talk to Mothers and Girls." A joint meeting will also be held in the Town Hall in the evening. Everybody welcome.

+ + +

Treat for the Children

The Daughters of the Empire had a Christmas tree at the Town Hall on Friday night for the children of soldiers in khaki. Each child received a present and some candy. The mothers also were invited and everybody enjoyed the affair immensely.

+ + +

Stopped By Bad Ankle

It is reported that Signaller John Rowland, who went to England as a divisional signaller from Ottawa in November, has failed to pass the medical examination in England owing to a defective ankle, but has been recommended for a position in the Pay Office in England.

GOT A COUNCIL AT LAST

Five Citizens Qualified for the Vacancies and 1917 Town Fathers Are Now Doing Business

At last Walkerton has a Council for 1917. The second attempt proved successful. Seven candidates were nominated on Thursday for the five vacancies and of these Messrs Douglas and Lettner resigned, leaving Messrs McCarter, McGregor, Truax, McKinnon, Vogan, and Sanderson elected by acclamation.

Mayor Johnston will have a good representative group of men to assist him. The worst that can be said against them is that they are inexperienced but time will soon remedy that.

PERSONNEL OF COUNCIL

Mayor—Andrew P. Johnston, master barber, four years member of Town Council, 1911–15, D. D. G. M. of this Masonic District.

Reeve—Robert Russell, milk dealer, member of Town Council and Chairman of Streets Committee 1916.

Coun.—Harry Truax, manufacturer, member of firm of R. E. Truax & Son. Had a year's experience in Council several years ago.

Coun.—J. W. Sanderson, retired Methodist minister, resident of Walkerton a number of years.

Coun.—Alex. McCarter, Harness Dealer, member of 1916 Council.

Coun.—J. E. McGregor, traveller and Salesman, with considerable business experience.

Coun.—John McKinnon, carpenter and contractor, life-long resident of Walkerton district.

Coun.—Sam Vogan, hardware, well-known young business man. Probable Finance Chairman.

The new Council met on Monday morning and took the oath of office. All members were present but Messrs Truax and McGregor who were out of town.

Reeve Russel, Coun. McCarter and Vogan were named as a Committee to strike the standing Committees for 1917.

The Council then adjourned to meet this (Thursday) evening to complete the organization.

Train Service Unchanged

Both local railway agents stat that the cutting down of of passenger trai and C. P.

Mention

Lieu nipeg wa u

mildest in many years, touched by the thermome above zero. The mercu that point early Wedne on the government thermo N. P. Schmidt's fruit farm. weather is getting colder that rec may stand only a few hours.

+ + +

Tom Marks Coming Here.

Tom Marks with his big Dramatic and Vaudeville Company and his Kiltie Band have been engaged by Mo land to present John great Masterpiece "Are You in the TOWN HALL, Walk night only, Monday, Ja Eight special vaudeville given by the Co. Prices a few special seats McCrum's on Thurs

+

Human Hair

Protects and a If you have thin —do not miss see hibit of Human Hair Goods and gentlemen at the Hartley House on Tuesday, January 16th. The display will include Ladies' Switches, Coronet and Fancy Braids, Transformations, Pompadours, Waves, Chignons, Bangs, and for bald men toupees and wig structures that will benefit the health and appearance. There is no charge for a demonstration.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, Jan. 10)

Hay, per ton.	8.00 to	10.00
Oats, per bsh.	60 to......	63
Wheat " "	1.65 to......	1.65
Barley, " "	83 to......	95
Buckwheat " "	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag,	[illegible]
Hogs, per cwt.
Butter, per Eggs, per

N EVIL HERITAGE

CHAPTER XXXV.

On his return to England Bernard went to Thornton for a few days—for as few days as he could manage, since he knew himself to be there as his uncle's guest. He had to say good-bye to the old place. It was the only good-bye which he would be able to say, as he knew very well, for of course an interview with Sybil would never be permitted, deeply as he yearned for one more sight of that beautiful face to carry with him as memory through life. No doubt he could take farewell of Marian, if he chose, but, strangely enough, each time he thought of this his courage failed him. Over and over again he had tried to picture to himself what a meeting between him and Marian could be like—certainly most unlike anything that had ever gone before, for, since that evening at Cane Hill when he had sat beside the dining-room table with [illegible] in his arms, his cousin had become to him a different woman. To meet her again would be like meeting a stranger. He shrank from the prospect, and yet he returned to it persistently, for so strong a hold upon his imagination had the new Marian taken, that, despite the fresh wound in his heart of which he was not aware that it had even begun to cicatrise, his thoughts during these days were almost as busy with his cousin as they were with Sybil.

Bernard's hopes with regard to his father's old papers had not been quite vain, for after a laborious hunt he brought to daylight the letter written by Joseph Silkworth in reply to [illegible]'s letter of enquiry, and in which it was clearly stated that Caroline Barrincott had died on June 15th. His father had therefore not been aware of committing bigamy; the question weighing on Bernard's mind was answered; but another had arisen on its heels: What could possibly have been Joseph Silkworth's motive in quoting an incorrect date, and very likely also falsifying a certificate, for whether the manager had supported his assertion by any more forcible means Bernard had of course no chance of ascertaining. The only person who might possibly know more was Mr. Silkworth, junior, who was established, so Bernard had been told, on The Monastery estate. Should he send for the man? That meant delay, a thing for which Bernard never had any patience. The matter ended by his putting on his hat and starting for Mr. Silkworth's dwelling within the same half hour that had brought to light the West Indian letter.

It was one of the earliest days of May, and the trees were very fairly green already, though to Bernard's eye they looked lamentably bare beside the St. Clara mangoes and breadfruit trees.

He stepped out sturdily until The Monastery boundaries were crossed, and then unconsciously he began to hang back a little and to glance guiltily about him. Strictly speaking he had no right to be there, and he knew ... final interview which ... him and Mr. ... nt. In ... d that ... for ... very ... are;

... he ke... remember ... it must have been some... the 18th that they carried ... m the Big House to the ... just a couple of days be... 's wedding day.

... suppose there is no one else ... who is likely to know the whole ... ory," said Bernard, rising to go.

"I suppose not," growled Mr. Silkworth. Then, after a moment, he added half unwillingly, "Of course, there's Lizzie."

"Who is Lizzie?"

"Joseph's widow. She's alive, I believe, at least I've never heard ... being dead. She's far ... a lot, anyway, to have ... But it comes to much ... since, even supposing I ... ever so much, I couldn't ... you which of the islands ... ting on at present. It's ... all I know."

...'s widow alive— ... an unlooked-for ... all that remain ... of the past. As ... ace homewards ... with the idea of ... rie and begging ... quiries after the ... Lizzie Silkworth. So preoccupied was he with his new train of thought, that he had almost reached the middle of one of the stretches of grass which lay on his way before he noticed that the meadow was no longer as deserted as it had been half an hour ago.

With something of a start he looked about him; he had almost forgotten that he still was on The Monastery grounds. At a little distance from him two people with their backs towards him were gathering flowers. Owing to the dazzle of sunlight in his eyes he could not distinguish details, though he saw that they were both women. Immediately everything else vanished from his mind; his heart began to beat unbearably, and he pressed forward with straining eyes. One of the figures was in a dark, the other in a light, dress; but whether ... her of them was tall and stately it ... ard to discern, seeing that both ... uble, and both ... s though for ... overflowing ... as with liquid gold stood on the grass. These things Bernard distinguished as he drew nearer. Then one of the figures straightened itself—the one in the light dress—and, alas! it was short and stumpy. But in the same minute the darkly-clad figure stood upright, and Bernard found himself face to face with Sybil Durrant standing ankle-deep in the waving May grass and with both her hands full of cowslips.

She looked so beautiful in her close-fitting dark green dress, and with the flush of exertion on her face, that his first impulse was to wonder how he ever could have been fool enough to think that he could give her up. What was it that Miss McCrie had hinted at in her questions? Was it, after all, quite outside the bounds of possibility that Sybil should "stick to him," as the old maid had bluntly put it? Had not other girls stuck to the men they loved, and ended by overcoming even the opposition of ambitious parents?

It was but a passing flash of insane hope. In the next instant already he had recovered his senses sufficiently to say almost quite soberly:

"Good evening, Miss Durrant. What a fine show of cowslips!"

The cowslips were a great blessing at that moment, and so was the stumpy light grey figure, without whose presence he knew that he would probably have lost his head to the point of making a fool of himself.

"I thought you had gone to London," he said, as Sybil did not immediately answer, for he felt that speaking was safer than holding one's tongue.

Sybil had likewise recovered herself by this time. She had flushed scarlet in the first instant, but there was scarcely a break in the smooth, rich voice as she stammered:

"We were to have gone to London yesterday, but mamma had caught cold, and it was put off till to-morrow."

"And are all those cowslips going to London, too?"

"Yes, mamma sent me to gather them. She is very particular about the flowers for the dinner table, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Bernard, impudently. "You were arranging flowers for the dinner table when I first saw you last year."

"Of course one can buy flowers in London," went on Sybil, rather more hastily, "but mamma fancies that cowslips would make more effect than the regular town flowers, so she thought it would be a good plan to take a hamper of them up with us, especially as they cost nothing, mamma is always so practical. This is the best cowslip meadow about here."

There could be no doubt upon this. [illegible] and pelted this stretch of every tree around an hop had been, at least. If on every bough of green with golden balls, the grass could not have been more thickly set with the yellow flower heads.

"And was it to help you carry the basket that your mamma sent your maid with you?" asked Bernard, glancing towards the stumpy grey woman who was gathering cowslips at a little distance.

"Miles? Oh Miles has always been walking with me lately. That is to say—"

"That is to say, since I came back to Thornton," finished Bernard on another imprudent impulse. "You can tell your mamma that she is quite right," he added, digging the point of his cane deep into the ground beside him. "She is a very clever woman. ... be frightened," and he laughed ..., for Sybil was looking at him ... eat, startled eyes, into which ... rs began slowly to rise; "and ... you do, don't cry. I ... keep to commonplaces, but ... I shall have to give up the ... nce. Perhaps I had better ... Instead of which, however, ... ed where he was, savagely ... ing the cowslips right and ...

"... certain," Sybil acquiesced, a little falteringly, but she, too, did not put out her hand for good-bye.

Suddenly Bernard looked up straight into her face.

"Tell me this one thing before I go: Did you ever care for me, or was it only because I was a suitable husband that you were willing to marry me? Don't look anxiously towards your maid; I am not going to make love to you, I swear it. I only want to know the truth."

"But what is the good?" faltered Sybil, while her fair brow grew ruffled. "It only disturbs one to think of these things. Surely it is far better to forget all that time, since, after all we can never get married."

"Far better," grimly acquiesced Bernard. "Your deductions are always logical." The cowslip heads were flying about faster than ever.

"What are you going to do?" asked Sybil, speaking lower. "I mean, have you made any plans?"

"Not many; but I am probably going to South America, and when once I am there it will depend partly upon which of the Republican armies will have me, and partly upon where there is most chance of fighting. I am not quite a beggar, you know, since my mother left me two hundred a year."

Sybil caught her breath, and the tears which welled up to her eyes this time [illegible].

"Two hundred a year!" she repeated in an awe-struck whisper. "Surely it must be very dreadful to have to live on two hundred a year. Will you not be able to keep a carriage?"

"Hardly. My land steward has not three hundred a year, and he doesn't even keep a donkey cart."

She looked at him with her beautiful black eyes [illegible]. Bernard had never seen her so genuinely moved as this. Nothing, in fact, had touched her so deeply as the idea thus awakened. She knew what it would mean to her to do without a carriage, and therefore she was able to appreciate what it must mean to him. It was a thing which came within the range of her perceptions.

Bernard was on the point of saying, "I believe that, after all, you cared for me a little," but he checked himself in time. "And your plans?" he asked instead. "You have got plans, too, I presume."

Sybil quickly dried her eyes. She felt that it was foolish to give way to this weakness.

"My plans? Oh, I never have any plans. It is mamma who makes my plans for me."

After an instant's pause she added slowly, as though speaking against her will:

"I suppose mamma means that I shall marry some day."

"And does that mean that you will do it?"

She could not say "No"; and since she was ashamed to say "Yes," she lowered her eyes and stood silent before him.

And this was the girl of whom he had dreamt that she might cleave to him in the face of fate itself!

"Sybil," he said hurriedly, for the cowslip-gathering Miles was drawing nearer, apparently disturbed by the length of the interview, "Sybil, when I first saw you I took you to be a queen among women, one of those rare creatures before whose greatness and before whose majesty other women must bow, whether they will or not. Why are you not so? Explain me the riddle, if you can."

Sybil raised her head quickly.

"Do you remember me telling you last year that I was a fraud? You would not believe me then. Perhaps you will now. It is all the explanation I can give. Time to go home, Miles? Yes, I am coming. Good-bye, Mr. Berrincott," and she put out her hand rather blindly, for the tears were again in her eyes.

Bernard took it, but did not quite succeed in saying "Good-bye, Miss Durrant."

"I must be going," said Sybil, hurriedly, and it was then only that he became aware that he was still holding her hand. Miles was watching, he knew it, though she pretended to be busy with her flowers, but he knew also that it was the last moment of all. A hundred Miles would not have kept him from catching that beautiful hand to his lips—cowslips and all—and pressing upon it one passionate farewell kiss.

It was not quite as romantic as it sounds, for the hand, besides being beautiful, was also beautifully gloved, so that Bernard's parting impression of Sybil remained for ever after confusedly connected with the best quality of Paris kid, but the intensity of the gesture was such that even Sybil's calmness was not proof against it. As he strode away across the grass with his deer-stalker pulled low on his forehead, she stood with parted lips, gazing and gazing after him as though rooted to the spot. She was scarcely quite herself in that minute, all there was of blood in her veins was coursing as fast as it could course, all that there was of energy in her nature was up and stirring. Her passion had caught fire at his. For one mad moment, as she marked his lessening figure and felt her hand still tingling with the vigor of his kiss, the possibility of resisting her mother's will presented itself to her mind. Already she had made a step forward as though to call him back, but in that very moment she remembered Gertrude's face as she had stood beside her bed in the darkened nursery on the morning after that long stormy day, and immediately her courage died away. She stood still with a shiver, while her arms fell helplessly to her side. The fire had died out of her already.

"Yes, Miles, I am coming," she answered, quite meekly, when that young woman rather pointedly observed that the basket could not possibly hold any more cowslips for to-day.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

When Bernard reached the house again he locked himself into what had been his writing room, and, sitting down before his father's old writing table, wept as he had not wept since old nursery days. His tears were not many, but his cheeks and lips, and the back of his hand, on which a stray drop fell, felt as though scorched with their heat. Neither was his passion of grief long, being too violent to endure, but while it lasted it shook him from head to foot. When its strength was spent he sat for a while quite passive in his chair, looking straight in front of him, and with eyes whose fire seemed exhausted. So that dream was over. Whatever life might yet have in store for him, that one chapter was closed. Of that he felt aware, though he was scarcely yet aware that its abrupt termination was not devoid of a certain sense of relief. Until to-day he had still clung to the thought that Sybil was the woman he had taken her to be; after to-day he would never think so again, and, unknown to herself, he was grateful to her for having destroyed the false image and shown herself as she was. From the ideal Sybil it would have broken his heart to part; to the real Sybil he had felt it possible to say good-bye, even in the very height of farewell pangs.

Next day Bernard left Thornton and went to London. His uncle's offers had been generous to the verge of eccentricity, but his resolve to quit England stood firm. Indeed, he was hurrying his departure by every means in his power, for the Captain was still in London, and it was clear to Bernard that, so long as the dispossessed owner lingered on British soil, a certain delicacy of feeling would keep the new proprietor from taking possession of Thornton. Besides, the papers were full of this sensational case in high life, and London was full too, of people who had known him in his former character. Clearly he was better out of the way.

(To be continued.)

When the Buccaneers Reigned.

The importance of the island of St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, arises from the fact that the harbor on the south side of the island, on whose borders the town of Charlotte Amalie is located, is one of the finest in all tropical America. From the days of the buccaneers its strategic advantage has been realized, for when the Spanish Main was the happy hunting ground of the gentlemen of the Black Flag, this harbor was their headquarters. Behind its outer hills the pirate craft found shelter from the open sea, and were well screened from the sight of passing ships until the moment came to pounce down upon them. In more recent times it has played the role of safe harbor for the thousands of vessels bound from Europe to Panama and surrounding territory, or vice versa. With a free port, where ships' stores and coal might be had, upon which there had been no levy of tariff duties, the shipping world found the harbor of Charlotte Amalie an attractive way station on most of its Caribbean routes.—National Geographic Magazine.

Would you say that because a man is an echo of his wife he is merely a hollow mockery?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON I.

January 7, 1917.—Jesus, the Life and Light of Men.—John 1: 1-18.

Commentary.—I. Jesus the Word (vs. 1-5). 1. In the beginning—Compare this expression with Gen. 1:1. Before the work of creation commenced, Jesus existed. He was uncreated. The human mind may run back as far into the past as it is able, and it can not reach a point of time when Christ did not exist. "In the beginning" he "was" and he is to continue the same forever (Heb. 13:8). The opening verses of John's Gospel clearly sets forth Christ's eternity and deity. The Word—Words express thoughts. They are used to reveal ideas. "The Word" is Christ (v. 14) who in his person and acts reveals the Father. Christ is the embodiment of divine revelation. The Word was with God—The original language indicates not only that the Word was "with" God, but also that he was in union and communion with God. Not only is the eternity of Christ proclaimed, but also his complete unity with God. 2. The same. The Word. Was in the beginning with God—This seems to be a repetition of what was said in the first verse; but it is repeated to guard the doctrine, and to prevent the possibility of a mistake. He had said that he was before creation, and that he was with God; but he had not said in the first verse that the union with God was from the beginning. He now expresses that idea and assures us that that union was not one that was commenced in time, and which might be, therefore, a mere union of feeling or a compact, like that between other beings; but was one which existed in eternity, and which was, therefore, a union of nature, or essence.—Barnes. Again the truth is conveyed to us that Jesus is divine. The fact that he "was in the beginning with God" shows that he is both eternal and uncreated.

3. All things were made by him—Christ is here declared to be the Creator; and this expression affirms his deity, for divine works are ascribed to him. Compare the words, "By whom also he made the worlds" (Heb. 1:2). Without him—Apart from him. Was not any thing made—This is a denial of the eternity and non-creation of matter, which was held by the whole thinking world outside of Judaism and Christianity; or, rather, its proper creation was never so much as dreamed of save by the children of revealed religion.—J., F. & B. The Word was the sole Creator. 4. In him was life—This is a clear affirmation that he is the only source of life. By him both physical and spiritual life are given. After he had created vegetable life and all animal life excepting the highest, he breathed into the body he had formed out of the dust of the earth, and man became a living soul. Jesus himself declared, "I am the way, the truth, and the life" (John 14:6). The life was the light of men—Observe how frequently John's thoughts overlap and run into one another. Creation leads on to life, and life leads on to light.—Plummer. The Word is the light-giver, or instructor, to the world. He said, "I am come a light into the world" (John 12:46), and, "I am the light of the world" (John 8:12). 5. The light shineth in darkness—The present tense is here used. The light shone and still shines. It shines into the physical darkness to scatter it, and also into the spiritual. John uses the term darkness to express the sinful state of man, and Jesus came to turn the darkness into light. The darkness comprehended it not—"The darkness apprehended it not."—R. V. The darkness of sin is deep, and is only penetrated by the light of the living Word as he is voluntarily, submissively and trustingly received. To reject the light is to remain in darkness; to receive the light is to become saved from sin, even from all sin (1 John 1:7). Another allowable translation is, "The darkness overcame it not." The Light shines on though he has been rejected by the multitudes during the centuries since he came to earth.

II. The word manifested (vs. 6-17). 6. A man sent from God—John has just shown the existence and nature of the Word, and now he refers to the agency by whom this Word is introduced to the world. John the Baptist was foretold by a long succession of prophets, and now a prophet, the greatest of the list, was commissioned to declare the immediate appearing of the Christ. 7. To bear witness of the Light—The mission of John the Baptist was to prepare the way for Christ's coming by preaching repentance and by telling the people of his speedy coming. This was an exalted mission and one that required strong faith and unfaltering courage. Through him—Through John the Baptist—John's purpose was so to proclaim Christ's coming and to introduce him that the world would receive Him as King and Saviour. 8. He was not that Light—John the Baptist came clothed with divine authority, but he was only a man; yet a man was employed to introduce to the world the King of kings and Lord of lords. God chose to commit this important service to a man rather than to angels. 9. Lighteth every man that cometh into the world—The forerunner of Christ was not the true Light. He could give light to comparatively few, and to them the knowledge only of the vision of the true Light. Christ would give illumination to all the world. He said, "As long as I am in the world I am the light of the world." When he went away in his bodily presence, he still remained in the person of the Holy Spirit to give light to the world.

10. The world knew him not—Although he was in the world from the beginning and the world was made by him, yet he was not recognized. The minds of the people were filled with visions of an earthly king and a splendid temporal kingdom, and not with a vision of the humble Galilean. 11. Unto his own—On the human side Jesus was a Jew, and he came first to his own people, the Jews. His own received him not—It involved an inconceivable humiliation for Jesus to leave the glory he had with the Father and take upon him human nature. Even then most of those for whom he humbled himself rejected him. 12. As many as received him—Some received him, acknowledging his Messiahship, yielding themselves to his authority, trusting him for salvation. Power—Right and ability. To become the sons of God—They become the sons of God by the new birth (John 3: 1-8). On the human side there are repentance and faith, and on the divine side there is the impartation of spiritual life. 13. Not of blood, etc.—No human agency, power or will can bring about the relation of sonship with God, but it is a divine process. Man places himself in an attitude of desire, submission and faith before the Lord and he is created anew in Christ Jesus.

14. the Word was made flesh—In the incarnation Jesus received a human body, being born of a woman, and was possessed of a human soul. dwelt among us. The writer of this Gospel was associated for months and years with Jesus in the flesh. we beheld his glory. He appeared as a man, and he also manifested his glory in the miracles he wrought, in his utterance, and marvelously in his transfiguration and in his resurrection and ascension. 15-17. John the Baptist told beforehand of the coming of Christ and when he came, he declared to the multitudes that it was he. John performed well his mission. He took no honor to himself and highly exalted him, whose forerunner he was. Moses gave the law, but the impartation of grace is from Jesus Christ.

III. The word revealing the Father (v. 18). Jesus is one with the Father, and therefore in the incarnation was able to reveal him to the world. God had had revealed himself in the law, in the prophets, in his dealings with individuals and with nations and in miracles; but he made an additional and glorious revelation of himself in the life and mission of his Son. No man ever saw God in the sense that he saw him, and Christ in the words he spoke, in the spirit he manifested and in the works he performed has shown us the Father. Through the revelation made to us by the Son, we have a glorious view of the Father. We are led to know what God is and what he would have us to be.

Questions.—Who wrote the words we study to-day? Under what names is Christ mentioned? What statements declare his eternity? What statements show that Christ is divine? What kind of darkness is mentioned? To whom did Christ come? What must one do in order to receive him? What is the result of receiving Christ? What was the mission of John the Baptist? What is the purpose of John's Gospel?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—God revealed to humanity.

I. Through the divine Word.

II. Through the divine Light.

I. Through the divine Word. The apostle John here presents Christ in the glorious activity of his divine nature, as a new communication from the eternal Father. He speaks of the divine Word as uttering forth the thought and will of God in the hearing of mankind. He shows Him to be the source of all the knowledge we have of the divine Being in His relations to us, His infinite love and the wonderful plan of salvation He has made. He is also the source of all the knowledge we have of the life beyond. John was deeply impressed with the divineness of Christ's mission. We find in these verses the record of his personal observation, and in the closest connection with it his declaration of personal conviction. His statements were advanced with a full knowledge of what they involved. He declared to be equal with the Father. Being eternal he was competent to give the world an eternal revelation of the eternal God. In his own person and life he was the manifestation of God to the world. Without the guidance of revelation none can reach a true conception of the unity, spirituality and moral character of God. The doctrine of the Trinity is fundamental to Christianity.

II. Through the divine Light. Christ's life was underived and infinite. He is the source of life, as he is the Creator of existence, as the Restorer of human existence. The history of Jesus shows us divinity and humanity united in one person. Deity shining. The union of Christ's divinity and his manhood made the resources of light available for mankind. Christ took a complete and perfect soul and body that he might heal the whole malady of sin, which had infected every member and faculty. Nothing was lacking in him to constitute human nature in its completeness, a fulness of every kind of perfection. Christ is presented as the head of the gospel dispensation, as the founder of a new order of things, as the author and finisher of man's faith. As a Son he came with the keys of God's treasury of grace and truth. His gracious character appears from the great design of his divine mission. He was in tenderest sympathy with mankind, though the unrecognized Creator and Redeemer. The whole world at large is said to have been insensible to the character and work of Jesus as in the claims of Jesus. There were anarchy and rebellion where there should have been subordination and harmony. The more emphatic and bitter human rejection became, the more clearly the necessity of a Saviour was evident. Christ is the life and light of men in that he delivers them from ignorance, unbelief and vice, and from the ruin and misery which are their invariable attendants, and brings them to the knowledge of divine truth, to faith and purity. The distinctive need of man is met by the distinctive power of Christ. The Light comes into men's hearts as into its proper, natural dwelling place. The Lord asserted his right over all the feelings, instincts, impulses and determinations of those hearts as over his rightful subjects. The new birth is the awakening of dormant faculties, the resurrection of buried powers. The real gospel is God's life through Christ, touching man's life and making it new. This portion of scripture opens before us God's living way of making himself known to us, his way of illuminating our lives. This subject yields in importance to no other. The views we take of it will influence those we take of all other doctrines and must terminate in results which affect God's glory. Christianity is a spiritual revelation to the spiritual nature of man. The theology taught by the incarnation is the world's hope in the world's darkness. Christ, the divine Mediator, [illegible] harmonious manifestation of God. Without this [illegible] of the character of the Saviour of the world would be wanting [illegible].—T. R. A.

Saving Eyes by Trick.

With embroidering a piece in many colors, use just as many needles as you use colors. Keep each needle threaded and then change from one to the other. This rests the eyes, because the monotony of working on one color and obviates the necessity of holding a needle to perpetually [illegible] hands for any great length of time.

Poet—How can a chap get rich on his capital? Reporter—You probably mean, 'How can he get richer.'—Puck.

The Aerial Torpedo Proved a Boomerang

New York. A special London cable to the New York Times says:

Battleplanes mounting two or more guns and carrying as many as six or eight men; scout and reconnaissance aeroplanes, with a speed of 140 miles an hour, and the little "privateer" planes, with their one man and a machine gun, whose method of attack is to drop from 12,000 to 15,000 feet and deal the death blow while passing the enemy aeroplane, have all been successful. The problems of military aeronautics have practically all been solved, with the exception of the aerial torpedoes. These are as yet an uncertain quantity. In theory their use is similar to the dirigible torpedo. This submarine brother is equipped with powerful motors, and guided by microphones or "ears," which are susceptible to the faintest wireless impulses. These guide it in any direction, and make it one of the most deadly instruments of war.

Early in the war aeronautic experts conceived the idea of building a torpedo that would fly through the air for several miles, and be guided by wireless impulses reaching it through its microphones. In theory these torpedoes would carry several hundred pounds of high explosive, and would be driven by their motor until they reached the right spot, and then would drop into the camp or fortress of the enemy, with the result that the camp or fortress would cease to exist. Plans were made for giant aerial destroyers carrying a ton or several tons of high explosive, which would "drop earthquakes" on the enemy.

STILL RATHER DANGEROUS.

Recent tests, somewhere in France, however, have shown that the aerial torpedo as yet developed is imperfect and even dangerous. An inspector for one of the allied countries now over here looking into aeronautical devices and superintending the shipments and hydro-aeroplanes, those developments in aeronautics in which this country still retains its supremacy, gave details of the recent tests of aerial torpedoes.

"You know we'd heard an awful lot about these flying deaths," he said, "and it was said that they had been doing fairly good work with them down at Hendon. So when a runaway chummy looking chap turned up one day with a letter from the Home Office, telling us to look out for him, as he was the aerial torpedo man, we were quite interested.

SMITHERS ARRIVES.

"I was flying at the time, and we had a snug little camp in one of those old French chateaux. Four hours a day in the air and the rest of the time we played bridge, and all that sort of thing, you know. Now and then one of the fellows wouldn't get back or would come back a bit done, but otherwise we were fit as fiddles and having a bully time.

"Well, this queer cutter, whose name was Smithers, was all sorts of a big gun at home. He was a professor of electricity or something of that sort at one of the universities, and I had a private letter telling me to take good care of him, as his people were bang up.

"Following him came a huge motor lorry, and our mechanics unloaded several long, heavy boxes from it. These, Smithers explained, contained two aerial torpedoes, and he was very anxious that they be handled with care, just as though they contained glass, and all that sort of thing. He was so particular that he insisted on opening the cases himself while we all stood about and gave advice. He was rather uppish also, and did not take kindly to our remarks—said something about our being a lot of ignorant aviators and not having any regard for the attainments of science and all that sort of thing. After working for nearly a day on his infernal cases, he unpacked all his materials, and they fairly filled our largest hangar. There were bits of this and that and the other thing, and after inspection I saw that he had what looked like two baby aeroplanes, with long, narrow torpedoes for bodies.

"Next morning Smithers announced that he would assemble his machines without our assistance—he was emphatic on the 'without,' so we made ourselves scarce while he was doing his tinkering. Of course we had our regular flying to do, and all of us were fairly busy the greater part of the day. A practical demonstration was arranged for the next day.

"Out behind the hangar the next morning we found Smithers' two torpedoes. They were well built little planes, and looked as though they'd fly like the devil. Smithers explained the motors of the torpedoes—they were remarkable, quite extraordinary, and of the same type as those used in the Whitehead submarine torpedoes. The most wonderful thing about the torpedoes was their 'ears'—the microphones with which they received the wireless impulses that steered them.

UNCANNY STEERING DEVICE.

"Smithers had his own wireless set which was run by the motor of the lorry, and he gave us a demonstration of how the torpedoes steered. He worked the wireless, and their rudders of steering planes would turn this way and that in the most uncanny fashion. The Honorable Cressman, one of our best, looked at their evolutions in amazement and then ejaculated, 'Bah Jove! Nice little doggies, eh, what?'

"We were rather keen on Smithers after we'd seen what his machines would do on the ground, and quite [illegible] when he announced that he was about to let one off we gave him a [illegible] and then had the torpedo on its launching stand. Then he got our [illegible] to see them in the air. He [illegible] and studied the direction, and started the motor. The propeller went off with a whirr, and we found that it was pulling hard at its fastenings, just like a dog held in leash. Cressman got wildly excited, and jumped up and down not at all like a scion of the aristocracy, and then Smithers, with great dignity, stepped to the launching stand and pulled the lever.

"Like a clay pigeon thrown from a trap, the torpedo rose in the air, and in a moment was speeding away, the whirr of its propeller growing fainter and fainter. Naturally we all cheered and shook hands with Smithers, who treated the performance as though it were a mere nothing. When the torpedo had become a mere speck in the sky, he announced that he would show us how he controlled it. His wireless began to hiss and spit, and we saw the torpedo, through our glasses, veer to one side and begin to describe a curve. It was over the German lines by that time, and we could see their shrapnel breaking about it. Smithers straightened it out as soon as it had completed a half turn, and then suddenly a shell broke under it, and through my glasses I saw that it was blown to pieces.

DIDN'T EXPECT IT BACK.

"Smithers was awfully upset for a moment, but soon cheered up when we told him how successful the test had been. The more we praised him the more uppish he became, and we again began to feel that we were not as fond of him as we might be.

"'I will now send out torpedo No. 2,' he said, 'and I must have the correct directions on this, because I never expect to see it again.'

"We didn't quite understand what he meant, but verified the directions for him, while he began talking about 'the triumphs of science' and all that sort of thing. We went through the same performance—he started the motor and a moment later the torpedo took the air. It started up in an arc, and when it had reached about 2,000 feet, Smithers began using his wireless, and it assumed a horizontal position.

SUNDAY AT HOME

PRAYER.

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me, night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats,
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend!
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.—Tennyson.

IMPERCEPTIBLE GROWTH.

It is often difficult to gauge our advance in holiness. To do so we must employ a measure of sufficient capacity. If we confine our attention to a few days or weeks, it is likely we shall be disappointed, being unable to perceive any advance. We must rather take in months and years. You shall stand by the seashore and be unable at first to discover whether the tide ebbs or flows. It is only after diligent watching for an appreciable period that you decide that the sea is slowly but certainly advancing.

THE GIRL GOAL.

The time, the time, the place, the girl, these are four stages of the playwright and the story writer. We must follow the order of nature:

Her 'prentice han' she tried on man,
And then she made the lassies, O!

The last, the best, the most finished flower of all creation, she has been called the Sabbath of man. She is from God, and the man who puts his hand on the shoulder of a woman touches the kingdom of God. And when a man in his own home shuts the door, he can shut out the world and shut God in, and that is heaven.

The time, the time, the place, the girl. Think of the beautiful city of Florence; think of him who put the crown of glory on her beautiful name, and think of Beatrice enshrined in his poetry, his one superlative ideal, who sanctifies the scene by her august presence. Dante exalted her by his own splendid gifts, and though she was never his wife, yet is she embalmed in the minds of all true lovers as the true and real and lasting partner of his immortality.

The girl is the true goal! Think of John Newton. He goes to the rough calling of a sailor. He is wild and reckless and goes down to the depths of sin, but there is one little star in his black heavens, one, only one little gem stored away in the locker of his heart, a thing the devil cannot touch; it is his love for the girl he left behind in old England. This was the saving lifebelt that saved him and lifted him out of the horrors of the slave traffic, and that life enlarged itself so as to comprehend life in Christ Jesus. It made him a man, a preacher, a poet; we sing his hymns in the most polite society. And we take breath and say, What hath God wrought?

A man once gazed at a beautiful face in the street. Distantly it became his nature, consummate beauty painted its own portrait on his sensitive soul, and, though he never saw her again, she became his charm, his anchorage, his stay, his better life.

There is a wondrous workshop where they are making plans of life—your life and mine included. You did not see behind the veil, how small the trifles were which hindered you in your quest, how small the items which helped you to come into a large inheritance. Oh, the ships that pass in the night, leaving on the water only a glimmer of the stern lights dancing on the waves! Oh, the ships that did not pass without a signal, a hail, a sail in company and more.

"Only an accident," says a careless one. There are no accidents with God, says the thoughtful soul. The very hairs of your head are all numbered, and He is pilot of the bubble on the breaker. After long searching, we have to confess, "Lo, these are part of His ways, and yet how little is known of him."

—H. T. Miller.

Sardines and Spinach.

Boil two quarts of spinach, drain and chop [illegible] a tablespoon of [illegible], salt and pepper, and boil [illegible] minutes longer. Place a layer [illegible] a baking dish, then a layer of sardines. Cover with the rest of the spinach and cover with the rest of the [illegible].

There is only way to get along with some people, and that is their way.

Sick Headache and Biliousness

CURED BY MILBURN'S
LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Willard Tower, Hillsboro, N.B., writes: "I have suffered something awful with sick headache. At times I would become bilious, and would have severe pains in my stomach after eating and have a bad taste in my mouth every morning. I told some of my friends about it and I was advised to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. This I did and they cured me."

When the liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the stomach foul and sick and bilious headaches occur.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean the foul coated tongue and stomach and banish the disagreeable headache.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE POULTRY WORLD

CANADA NEEDS POULTRY, BRITAIN MORE EGGS.

At no time in the history of the Dominion has the necessity for increased production of eggs and poultry been more apparent than at the present time. The demand is unprecedented. This is true whether for export or for home consumption. Consumers generally, and even producers themselves, are eating more and more eggs. The average per capita consumption of eggs in Canada this year will be greater than ever before.

The market for Canadian eggs and poultry is very firm. Prices to producers are extremely high, but even at these prices trade is increasingly active all over the country. The prospects for a continued demand are very bright. The country is facing a shortage, not only of current receipts, but of Canadian storage stocks as well. So great has been the export demand that we shall be obliged to import to meet our own requirements. Increased production has never rested upon a more secure foundation.

That poultry on the farm are profitable needs no argument. Eggs now rank as a staple article in the products of the farm. Poultry flocks can be increased materially without much additional outlay for buildings and equipment, and the increased labor involved is not such as will bear heavily upon the time of those charged with the care of the stock. Some object to the present price of feed, but when it is considered that the selling price of the product is from forty to sixty per cent. higher than it was two years ago, the margin of profit is such as will compare favorably with that obtainable elsewhere on the farm.

Canadian egg producers have responded well to the call for increased production. The country as a whole, which was importing eggs a few years ago, has, in the aggregate, produced more than sufficient for its own requirements this year and last. Between seven and eight million dozen Canadian eggs were exported to Great Britain last year, and as an indication of what is going forward this year, nearly one million dozen were shipped during the first week of October. The supply on the British market is short, and there is a demand for millions more. Increased production, more and better poultry, should be the motto of every Canadian farm and homestead.

Canada has all the requisites for the production of a quantity far in excess of her own requirements, and with favorable climatic conditions, careful, proper care and attention, production quality to the best in the world. Only the fringe of production possibilities has been touched up to the present. The Western Provinces, with their volumes of feed, are the natural home for the Canadian hen. The bulk of the supply at the present time comes from the [illegible] of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta [illegible] Canada [illegible] they [illegible] in this connection in this great home trade expansion. The first experimental shipments of eggs from Winnipeg to the British market [illegible] will be, on their way, and it is hoped the increase in production in the Western Provinces in the coming year will be such as to warrant the opening up of a big trade in this direction.

Eggs are scarce in Canada at the present time. Current prices are high and a sharp decline immediately following the conclusion of the War is not anticipated. When prices advance gradually, [illegible] the case of staple food products they decline slowly. It will take [illegible] years to re-establish the normal supply [illegible] the markets of the world [illegible] while prices of meats are high people will continue to use increasingly larger quantities of eggs. This [illegible] naturally be reflected in the market prices. This is the situation. Producers may draw their own conclusions.

COMMON AILMENTS AND CURES.

Reviewing the more common ailments in the poultry yard, we learn these facts: If in the early stages of bumble-foot we can spread the corn by painting it externally with tincture of iodine, daily for a week. Bumble-foot is caused by too high perches or roosting places, the fowl flying down the fowl's feet often come in contact with some hard, sharp object which causes a bruise resulting in the corn. When our hens are allowed to become overfat, a disorder of the organs is often the result, which causes them to "break down behind." It really is no disease—merely a penalty for injudicious feeding. The best remedy known is to kill and eat all such specimens. They are not sick birds. Canker is a [illegible] ailment, but generally in the start it can be checked by [illegible] application of fine salt rubbed on the sore spots. Four drops of aconite in a half pint of drinking water, given daily for a week or more, is effective in cases of catarrh. Chicken-pox [illegible] fully treated with carbolated vaseline after having first bathed well with hot water. One-grain quinine pill should also be given each night for a week.

When a bird is debilitated it needs something nourishing so as to build up the wasting tissues. There is nothing better than a raw fresh egg every morning until the fowl shows signs of recovery. Then it can be changed to a little cooked meat, and a little muriate of iron added to the drinking water. When it is noticed that a bird is mopish, [illegible] in good health, sluggishness can be quickly remedied by giving a family liver pill—just the size that you would take yourself if you were out of sort. Repeat each night for three nights in succession. [illegible]

Many Women Suffer From Pains in the Back.

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills are not a cure-all, but a medicine for the kidneys only.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Hampton, N.B., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. For years I had suffered with my kidneys, I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. After I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills bear the trade mark of a Maple Leaf and are put up in an oblong grey box. See that you get "Doan's" when you ask for them.

Price 50c. a box, 3 for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

D.S. erton
e and at the Friday
Medier of arge-y of erm
. 2
llege.
IORT-
Y DEs are ctical.
ced and itions.
for ars.
ILAN
LE of Pat-
for sale
20 Con-
. This
e about for full rester, ister,
aley.
-law uncil
for ount ydro villhip of register-regis-
Bruce 1916
the be onths
notice
bat
A-in of ut of,
Te
of

How Britain Is Solving War Financing Problems

bility at the time of its creation. There are the normal expenditures for the administration of the Government, the class of pre-war outlays. Concurrently there are the expenditures represented by the interest and sinking fund on the obligations that have been issued for the conduct of the war.

Upon a liberal estimate the total debt of the United Kingdom in August, 1917, is placed at 20,000,000,000 of dollars, without crediting her with $3,00,000,000 of advances which she has made to the allied nations. At 5 per cent. average interest and 1 per cent. sinking fund this indebtedness would call for the payment of 1,200,000,000 dollars per annum, at least until the adoption of a funding basis has reduced the charge. To this demand Edward Andrews in New York Sun.]

Among all the nations of Europe, the English nation is the wealthiest. Its trade embraces the globe. Its capital is incredibly large. Its resources are almost inexhaustible. — Frederick the Great.

I.

More than one hundred years ago this was the estimate of England's economic power by the greatest German of them all. The lapse of a century has confirmed this material primacy. During its progress Great Britain has become the possessor of one-quarter of the earth's surface, and has included under her dominion one-quarter of the world's inhabitants. Since the time of Napoleon she has been essentially an industrial empire. The diversity as well as the volume of her activities has been unique in the history of commerce. She was the pioneer inventor of the basic appliances of modern industry. By developing her vast stores of coal and metal she obtained the leverage for converting the raw material furnished by other countries into manifold values of manufactured products. The ownership of one-half the world's mercantile marine facilitated her trading in all markets. And the possession of these several factors of universal commerce constituted her the world's banker, gathering tribute from every international transaction. This long continued application of human industry has resulted in the accumulation of capital beyond precedent, and these garnered resources have been invested throughout the globe, wherever they could reproduce wealth for the motherland. Even colonial wars have followed by emergencies into greater prosperity and have served to illustrate the magnitude and durability of financial Britain.

These prosperous conditions were strongly in evidence at the outset of the present war. Her commerce was he highest level, having increased per cent. in ten years. She had e same period discharged $1,250,- of obligations, including some made for the prosecution of the war. Her national estate in- 90,000,000,000 of dollars of in permanent form; 20,000,000,- of dollars annual income, and nd colonial securities, 15,000,000,- of dollars annual income, and deposits ranging near the $6,000,- mark. Her currency rests upon solid ground of real and convertible value, fortified by two-thirds of world's production of gold.

II.

ecure in the possession of these elements of economic strength, Great tain is financing this great war. Taxation and economy summarize nd direct methods.

heir keynote consists in making ision for payment of every lia- should be added the ordinary nditures of the Government at rate prevailing in 1913 and calling ,000,000,000 of dollars. These to- annual requirements of 2,200,000,- of dollars are fully provided by receipts for the current fiscal o country furnishes a standard for easuring the facility with which eat Britain can meet these revenue nds. Her annual savings, together with her income from accumulated estment, realize $17,000,000,000 each r. During the war permanent improvements practically cease and current investments are absorbed mainly by governmental securities. These gigantic income funds and their increments constitute the main tax sources of a surplus of $100,000,000 in the British Treasury for the present year.

This fiscal result is favored by the distribution of incomes among their owners, enhancing their desirable character as producers of revenue. Britain is preeminently the land of moderate fortunes as well as of large upon decades of prosperity have produced a mass of recipients of unearned and fairly substantial incomes, numerically far beyond this element in any other European country. Their owners can easily part with a large proportion of these receipts upon the call of the nation, merely by docking expenditures for superfluities, estimated at $2,000,000,000 of disbursements each year. This condition, so favorable for the taxing power, is illustrated by the fact that the British Treasury receives 70 per cent. of the income taxes from unearned incomes. Twenty-nine thousand tax receipts of the Government for the year before the war. The average rate levied upon income is five shillings in the pound. Its broad application is effected by starting at low rates, producing $200,000,000 from small incomes, and progressing to 40 per cent. graduated intensively upon incomes exceeding $10,000. From the entirety of incomes two-thirds of the direct war tax of Great Britain are derived. Thus they justify the historic tradition from the time of Pitt to the time of Gladstone that this ever flowing unit of wealth is the fiscal bulwark of the United Kingdom.

Indeed, the proposition was recently made in the House of Commons that fifteen shillings in the pound be levied on the great body of substantial unearned incomes. This plan would have probably obviated the negotiation of Government loans, but it would have been unjust to those income holders to concentrate the entire taxing power upon them. Besides it would unduly impair the resources that have been so largely volunteered to subscriptions for Government loans. However, the proposition illustrates the extent of this perennial resource, which England may continuously invoke for the prosecution of her part in this war.

Moreover, the existing subjects of taxation are sufficiently fruitful to permit the broadest distribution. The well established system of succession duties presents another instance of large productiveness combined with highly developed progression. Analysis of its 150,000,00 of dollars return to the Treasury shows that this collection likewise emanates in great part from large estates.

The 60 per cent. excess profits taxation is the exceptional revenue product of the war. Its $125,000,000 of outcome testifies to the large tribute which industry created by the war can return for its prosecution. As the Government is practically the sole customer or controller of these factories, this revenue is in its essence the division of franchise benefits. While it will cease upon the termination of the war, the Treasury will then no longer be called upon for that class of expenditure. Meanwhile this accruing revenue constitutes a valuable and increasing resource.

The taxes upon domestic and foreign commodities are covered by receipts from customs and excise, which supply about 400,000,000 of dollars. The product from these sources is reduced by their subjection to higher dictates of public policy. The importation of certain articles of luxury is prohibited, and the sale of intoxicants is limited by stringent legislation. Britain elects to forego revenue in order that her men may be fit and that her women may substitute deposits in savings banks for the purchase of adornments. The various personal luxuries formerly absorbed 1,700,000,000 of dollars annually, and the expenditure in these directions is still largely reducible for fiscal advantage.

Britain possesses a notable source of revenue not derived from any species of taxation. It is the result of public service, the principal being the profits from postal, telegraph and telephone utilities, the receipts in the above category aggregating $170,000,000.

III.

The foregoing recital presents a very imperfect outline of British financial forces in this war. The expenditure is not a mere subtraction from the resources of the country. Some great compensating factors counterbalance the extraordinary outlay. Great Britain is peculiarly the land of wastage. Her rate of consumption in time of peace vastly exceeded that of any other European country, and a large proportion of this wasteful expenditure was just as much subtracted from the reproductive power of the nation as if it had been assigned to military objects. Hence the taxes collected to carry on this war are in great part a mere transfer of wastage.

In addition positive economies are exercising a manifold bearing upon the resourcefulness of the country. The prohibition of unnecessary imports arrests extravagance at a tempting source. The reduction in the expenditures on intemperance and sumptuary excess is estimated to exceed $200,000,000. Economy through governmental administration likewise figures as a reducer of public demands. Industrial England has been largely nationalized by the control of many departments of activity in the interest of the public. By colossal purchases of raw material in every quarter of the globe English authority has become the sole buyer in some instances for her civilian as well as her military requirements. In relation to certain products the Government also acts as the single vendor to her citizens. By fixing maximum prices for various articles of prime necessity she preserves the economic substance of the nation.

In short, the productive power of Great Britain, whether from her past savings or her present acquisitions, is the supreme test of her ability to maintain her credit. There are some unfailing criteria of her success. As the transaction of business implies profit, the immense total of business transacted by the United Kingdom during the war is unerring proof of her profitable accretions. Her foreign trade exceeds $5,000,000,000 a year. Thirteen millions of British tonnage is engaged in sea transportation, and her shipping earns annually far in excess of the above amount. Notably the yearly output of British domestic and pacific industries exceeds $9,000,000,000. Her large exports are a continuing source of financial strength, constituting payment toward her foreign purchases. These exports have decreased only 25 per cent. since the war began, and now exceed $2,500,000,000 in market value. Britain should likewise be credited with the familiar factors of interest, freights, insurance and commissions.

The receipts from this continued commercial activity and the main portion of the public outlays are still disbursed in the United Kingdom, even allowing for expenditures in the United States and elsewhere. This fact renders it quite appreciable that the income of Great Britain has increased 35 per cent during the war, until it has reached the sum of $15,000,000,000 a year.

IV.

The present rate of taxation assures the payment of all expenses and outstanding obligations. The future financing of the war, with its increase of liabilities, is assured by the constant and commensurate increase of taxable resources. With the existing rate of increase in national income, provision is effected for all Treasury payments to accrue, even assuming that they increase in the present ratio. And increase in the rate of income tax on a large class of incomes, added to the amount assessed for taxation as above indicated, would furnish a large surplus revenue for many years.

Great Britain realizes proximately the great goal of maximum productiveness during the war. With this basis for her fiscal system, she taxes neither her accrued nor accruing capital. She is living on her revenue in time of war as she did in time of peace. If we consider the ethical as well as the physical sources infusing Great Britain's energy, we can better understand that the increase of her prosperity during this war is not a paradox.

In a great emergency like the present struggle moral considerations enter directly into the economic as well as the military efforts of the nation. At this time the British Empire is politically transfigured. The antagonism toward Napoleon when Britain was opposing his vaulting ambition, is an adequate comparison with the present feeling. Not since the days of the Armada, when the name of Spaniard was synonymous with fanaticism and cruelty, has the fervid determination of Britons burned so ardently. The payment of a war contribution is looked upon as the civilian substitute for ability to enter upon the line of battle. When this spirit inspires the wealthiest nation in the world, its poor as well as its affluent citizens become identified with the State in worldly substance as well as in thought and spirit. In Britain to-day the overwhelming strength of this national impetus is everywhere apparent. It sends the wage earner with his £5 to subscribe to war certificates. It sends women by the millions to work in war industries. It has enlisted the machinery of associated effort, from the Friendly Societies of the villages to the clubland of London. The financial outcome of this aroused British indignation is reflected in the following language of the Exchequer in presenting to the House of Commons the largest budget known to English history.

In speaking of the country's demands for heavier taxation Mr. McKenna said: "In ordinary occasions I would not give reasons for asking more. But such is the willingness of our people to make sacrifices and such is the determination of the country to spare nothing to bring this war to a successful issue that I have made this statement."

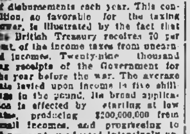
V.

Britain is still the greatest national creditor in the world. Every normal nation is her debtor to the extent of millions. During this war she has raised and is raising from her own people all the money required for herself and some billions for her allies.

Her domestic supplies of capital have been increased during the war by the diversion to home investments of $2,000,000,000 usually invested in other countries. Her obligations are eagerly sought within the United Kingdom, as the most secure and remunerative investments. Therefore she has not the slightest occasion to explore foreign countries for the purpose of becoming a borrower per se.

The business relations of Great Britain and the United States are essentially of a different nature. By her phenomenal purchases in this country she has created an abnormal demand for dollars. Their value has through this means alone become substantially enhanced. Any constraint upon Great Britain to pay the enhanced price would not benefit anybody, not even the American seller of the merchandise. Therefore she is contracting for the future delivery of stated amounts of dollars. Whether she pays for them in ingots of gold or ingots of credit, and whether that credit is American or English, has no bearing upon the financial status of either country. It is certain that no countries in the world's histories have maintained such vast commercial relations, have ever been so dependent upon each other for material prosperity and human development.

GILLETT'S LYE
MADE IN CANADA
For making soap.
For softening water.
For removing paint.
For disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, closets, drains and for 500 other purposes.
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.



DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 8, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

The Ishmaelites of To-day.

The sons of Ishmael are to-day the Bedouins, who live east of the Jordan and south of the Dead Sea. Their banishment from the society of settled tribes has not seriously hurt them. They are the sturdy sons of the desert, who are so often pictured on their spirited Arab steeds, armed and manly in their careless but alert grace.

But the daughters, the Hagars among the Bedouins, have a harder time of it. The hard work of the camps falls to them, and they sometimes fight side by side with their picturesque, but lazy and proud husbands and masters.

The real Bedouins were tent-dwellers, and nomads, and neither built huts nor cultivated the ground. But the coming of a degree of law and order even in Turkey has caused some Bedouins to settle down to a life under a roof and tilling the fields or tending sheep or goats instead of Arab steeds or ungainly camels.

The Badari, or settled tribes, are partly nomadic and partly agricultural.

When drought occurs in the desert famine drives the Bedouins to rob and pillage, but they are really kind and polite, endowed with a certain grace of kings. If one eats bread and salt with them, he is safe, for a true Bedouin can be trusted by all, as his law of hospitality is inviolable.—Christian Herald.

Willis—I was at Bump's trial to-day. Gillis—Bump arrested? Tell me the accusation. Willis—He was accused of—what do you call it when a fellow lies for money? Gillis—Politics, diplomacy or war corresponding.—Life.

RISKY RUBBISH HEAPS.

Many Serious Fires Traceable to Such Accumulations.

More fires originate in rubbish heaps than from any other source. To permit rubbish to remain in the building not only invites a fire to visit your home or place of business, and render your family temporarily homeless, or cripple your business at a time when you can least afford it, but also endangers the lives of your family or employees. In addition to destroying an average of [illegible] in property value in Canada each year, fire caused the death of 141 persons in one year. The home is built to protect our loved ones, and we want to do everything to insure absolute protection to those who live in it. That rubbish heap in the attic, storeroom or basement is a menace to your household, because there is always a possibility of fire starting in it, and it may start when least expected. Consider what might happen, and then, without delay, eliminate the menace of the rubbish heap.

A CAUSE OF INDIGESTION

People Who Complain of This Trouble Usually Are Thin-Blooded.

Thin blooded people usually have stomach trouble. They seldom recognize the fact that thin blood is the cause of the trouble, but it is. In fact, thin, impure blood is the most common cause of stomach trouble; it affects the digestion very quickly. The glands that furnish the digestive fluid are diminished in their activity; the stomach muscles are weakened, and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state of health nothing will more quickly restore the appetite, the digestion and normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles and awakens the normal activity of the glands that supply the digestive fluids. The first sign of improving health is an improved appetite, and soon the effect of these blood-making pills is evident throughout the system. You find that what you eat does not distress you, and that you are strong and vigorous instead of irritable and listless. This is proved by the case of Mrs. J. Harris, Gerrard street, Toronto, who says: "About three years ago I was seized with a severe attack of indigestion and vomiting. My food seemed to turn sour as soon as I ate it, and I would fall on the floor after vomiting. I tried a lot of home remedies, but they did not help me. Then I went to a doctor, who gave me some powders, but they seemed actually to make me worse instead of better. This went on for nearly two months and by that time my stomach was in such a weak state that I could not keep down a drink of water, and I was wasted to a skeleton, and felt that life was not worth living. I was not married at this time, and one Sunday evening on the way to church with my intended husband I was taken with a bad spell on the street. He took me to a drug store, where the clerk fixed me something to take, and [illegible] get me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the end of the first week I could feel some improvement from the use of the Pills, and I steadily continued taking them until every symptom of the trouble was gone, and I was again enjoying the best of health. These Pills are now my standby and I tell all my friends what they did for me."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COMMERCIAL NOTES.

Interesting Trade News From British Export Gazette.

The revised customs tariff for Mexico has come into force.

Real and imitation jewellery is in large demand in Egypt.

A British consular agency has been established at Bahia de Caraquez, Ecuador.

British goods are rapidly replacing those of German origin in South Russia.

Trade in Cyprus is increasing. Last year imports were £133,019, against £120,711 in 1914.

There is little demand for large gas ranges in France, but small gas stoves and oil stoves would find a good market.

Morocco imported British goods to £2,044,436 in 1915, an increase of £267,930 on the total for the pre-war year 1913.

Japan is shipping cotton bootlaces to Australia in large quantities, and to avoid duty on the completed article the tags are being shipped separately.

Italy's imports from the United Kingdom from January to May were valued at £17,130,000, against £6,-09,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

An American-Argentine Company, lately established in the Sierras Bayas district, Argentina, for the manufacture of cement, will commence production shortly.

Since the war started the United States has increased its mercantile marine from 2,405 vessels of 1,076,152 gross tons to 3,155 vessels of 2,191,470 gross tons.

Many stocks of razors in Chile are entirely sold out. Former supplies were largely from Germany, and total imports amounted to nearly 8,500 dozen annually.

Japan ordered 100,000 cotton looms from England prior to the war; only 50,000 have been delivered. The British ban on iron and steel has prevented delivery of the remainder.

As many as 65 new companies were formed in Russia in July against 23 in the same month of 1915. The total capital, too, was 105,850,000 roubles (£11,000,000 at normal rate of exchange), against £4,000,000.

Bolivia's trade during the first four months of the year amounted to £8,031,200, an increase of £3,064,000 over the total for the corresponding period of last year. The increase, however, was wholly in exports.

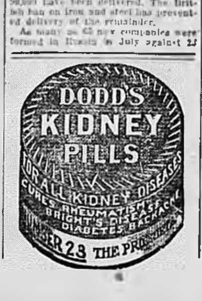
Shortage of coal in Venezuela is favoring the increasing importation of electrical appliances for domestic and industrial use, especially fans, stoves, irons, ovens, pumping outfits, and motors of from 1 to 25 h.p.

The importation of cotton goods into New Zealand increased from £400,000 in the first half of 1914, and a similar amount in the same period of 1915, to £620,000 in that of 1916. Higher prices were to some extent responsible.

Japan imported iron of various kinds during the first half of the present year to the extent of £3,700,000 more than in the corresponding period of last year. The United Kingdom, the United States, Sweden, and China were the chief suppliers.

The British participation in the trade of Ceylon rose from 28.7 per cent. in 1913 to 42.2 per cent. in 1916; and that of British Possessions from 36.6 per cent. to 21.3 per cent.; while the trade of foreign countries declined from 20.7 per cent to 25.9 per cent.

Copper is reported to have been discovered in Newfoundland.



Redpath
SUGAR

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

When you pay the price of first quality sugar, why not be sure that you get it? There is one brand in Canada which has no second quality—that's the old reliable Redpath.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it."

3

Made in one grade only—the highest !

WOUNDS AND INFECTION.

Fresh Air a Good Healer for Shell Wounds.

The professional healer, like the professional fighter, has found that many of the things he learned in South Africa he has had to unlearn in Flanders. Wounds seldom proved troublesome in the Boer War, because the South African veldt was almost virgin; but in Belgium and France, where the land has been cultivated for centuries, the gentle germ is always ready to enter the smallest wound and bring about tetanus and other diseases.

At first surgeons were in despair, fearing that much vaunted antiseptics were of no avail. It required hard search and experiments before methods of overcoming new difficulties could be discovered. Then, owing to the lavish use of high-explosive shells, wounds are more complicated and more difficult to keep clean, while the pointed bullet works more havoc than the blunt one of the "good old days."

Plenty of fresh air is found to work marvels, so there is at least one hospital in which the patients live practically in the open. It has also been found that wounds remain clean if water continually flows over them, so the clever surgeon has constructed little baths which fit over the wound, a supply of warm water impregnated with oxygen continually flowing through.

Corns Drop Out
INSTANT RELIEF

Paint on Putnam's Corn Extractor to-night, and corns feel better in the morning. Magical the way "Putnam's" eases the pain, destroys the roots, kills a corn for all time. No pain. Cure guaranteed. Get a 25c bottle of "Putnam's" Extractor to-day.

NO PREMATURE PEACE.

(Rochester Free Express).

Suppose Great Britain had stood by consenting while Belgium was destroyed or incorporated against her will in the German empire. Suppose that England had broken her pact or engagement with France and had looked on in pusillanimous inactivity while France was overrun and despoiled, Paris taken and the French people forced to ransom their capital by paying the total war cost of the enemy which attacked them. Suppose Great Britain had taken this cowardly course, would any voice in all the world be raised in justification of her conduct? She might have bought a short-lived safety by deserting her allies, but would not even those who profited by her poltroonery have held her in contempt? And the professional tail-twisters and others who by embargoes and otherwise would hamper her conduct of the war, would they not have despised and assailed her still more bitterly had she kept out?

Yet now that she is in the war, now that she has spent ten billion dollars in getting ready to fight, there are sentimentalists and pacifists who would force an inconclusive peace upon her, a temporary truce during which the nations would toil night and day in preparation for an inevitable, still mightier clash. The British people do not take kindly to these suggestions. It naturally seems mawkish drivel to them that nations on whom a war was forced should be urged to stop the fighting before they had secured themselves against another attack. British papers point out that America has grown rich out of a war which other nations are waging for her protection as well as for their own. Germany is ready for a peace, they say, which gives her a free hand in Central and South America, and the sarcastic suggestion is made that England need not object to that if the United States does not. The boiled-down gist of their advice to our sob and slaver pacifists is to leave the Allies alone to fight to the end this war for a lasting peace; nor do they hesitate to declare that they would regard this republic a traitor to the cause of world freedom if an armistice should be enforced upon them by American intrigue.

In June of 1864, the great Lincoln said in his grave, impressive way that the North accepted the war for a worthy object, that the war would end when that object was attained and that he hoped, under God, that it never would end until that time. All the clear-thinking people of the North agreed with him that the struggle must not cease until its object, the preservation of the Union, had been achieved. Copperheads and pacifists may have raised discordant voices, but the war went on, and this war will go on until results commensurate with the effort made have been attained. The only effect, so far as can be seen, of peace proposals made through neutral states will be to show the world just what the two belligerents are fighting for. The Allies have defined their aims. They fight that every race and nation shall be free to develop along its chosen lines, and to bring about conditions in which militarists can no longer plunge the world into war. Is not that an honorable and proper object and ideals of liberty, desire the war to end before these things have been secured?

Joints Quit Aching
Soreness beats It Away

NO MORE STIFFNESS, PAIN OR MISERY IN YOUR BACK OR SIDE OR LIMBS!

Wonderful "Nerviline" is the Remedy.

A marvelous pain reliever. Not an ordinary liniment—just about five times more powerful, more penetrating, more pain-subduing than any thick, oily or ammonia liniment. Nerviline fairly eats up the pain and stiffness in chronic rheumatic joints, gives quick relief to those throbbing pains, and never burns or even stains the skin.

"Rheumatism kept my joints swollen and sore for ten years. My right knee joint was often too painful to allow me to walk. In this crippled tortured condition I found Nerviline a blessing. Its warm, soothing action brought relief I had given up hoping for. I rubbed on quantities of Nerviline and improved steadily. I also took Ferrozone at mealtime in order to purify and enrich my blood. I am today well and can recommend my treatment most conscientiously.

(Signed) C. PARKS,
Prince Albert

Not an ache or pain in the muscles or joints that Nerviline won't cure. It's wonderful for lumbago and sciatica, for neuralgia, stiff neck, earache and toothache, Nerviline is simply a wonder. Best family liniment known and largely used for the past forty years. Sold by dealers everywhere, 25c per bottle. Refuse a substitute, take only "Nerviline."

Using electricity, a new machine pops the amount of corn bought and delivers it to a customer when a coin is dropped into a slot and a handle turned.

FROM BIRTH TO BURIAL

The Hamilton People Care for Their Soldiers' Dependents in a Comprehensive Way.

The Hamilton Branch of the Patriotic Fund finds room for its energies everywhere.

In Hamilton the Canadian Patriotic Fund has 25 guardian accounts for children in Homes, for women who are not able to handle their own money. To these accounts are deposited the proceeds of sales of properties made on behalf of soldiers. The number of these accounts is increasing monthly, many of the dependents having recently asked that the Fund be to some extent their bankers.

The Hamilton Fund owns a cemetery plot in which has been buried, since the formation of the Branch, 18 children, wives and other dependents of men of the C.E.F.

The Fund has at the present time an employment department, where are listed those desirous of obtaining situations, and each day some of these are brought into contact with people desiring their services.

The social service work extends far afield, everything being done that is possible to protect the women, to restore to their home such as have gone astray, and to strengthen the moral fibre of the weak. A few illustrations will show how thoroughly the officials of the Fund do this work:

An enlisted man had been earning $15 a week. His wife, apparently had been always a bad manager. There were five children and with the man's enlistment she was in receipt of $70 a month. She immediately contracted debts for a baby carriage and furniture, and the end of each month found her without any ready money. The eldest child, a girl of eleven years, did some of the buying and the consequence was extravagance. The Hamilton Fund arranged with a lady helper to receive the allowance from the fund and disburse it on account of the children. The eldest child was sent to an Industrial Home temporarily and the family placed on a better footing generally. The man has since returned. The daughter had been brought home and the affairs of the family are in such a position that the man himself has felt free to again offer himself for enlistment.

Another man, an exceptionally desirable type of soldier, left his little family, at the time of the second contingent, happily situated in a nice home with a warrant officer's pay and allowance. All seemed to go well until the wife developed a mental trouble which made it necessary to remove her to an asylum for insane. The fund took charge of the household placed the four children in care of a competent housewife, kept the home intact, the insurance paid and made application for the return of the enlisted man. The prompt attention to the case will undoubtedly result in a permanent cure of the unfortunate woman and the man will be in his own home to welcome his wife when she is able to return.

In one case a wife had so misconducted herself that it finally became necessary to take proceedings through the Children's Aid Society, and her two small boys were placed in a home. For a time it appeared that this meant the final collapse of the woman's will power, but repeated interviews, some small kindly acts, some little payments of old accounts, the adjustment of back taxes, relief from pressing creditors, brought from the soldier's wife a promise that she would work and remove herself from the companions who had caused her much trouble. This woman has now for months past been working steadily, visiting her children regularly, buying clothes for them, and depositing monthly with the Patriotic Fund her separation allowance and assigned pay. This is being used towards the payments on her home, and in addition she has made some deposits of money earned by herself by her daily work in a factory.

PRETTY AT THIRTY-FIVE.

How Beauty Increases With More Knowledge of Life.

"Thirty-five and pretty?" queried Sweet Seventeen, with dubious uplifting of eyebrows. "I think thirty-five horrid. How can one be pretty after thirty? To be more than twenty something-or-other means the end of things for a woman, the very word 'thirty' has a menacing sound. Why, one must almost be getting gray." The man regarded her with a smiling indulgence. "You are forgetting cultivation," said he, "and cultivation puts age out of the question. In these times 'thirty' spells nothing to a woman. The modern cultured woman has a charm beyond compare, and what matters thirty, thirty-five, even forty, Sweet Seventeen, you small bud of innocence? For women are as the flowers—some of you sweet, gentle, fragrant as the violet; elegant and stately as the lily; and even, I grieve to say, handsome and flaunting as the poppy with poison in its heart. You, Sweet Seventeen, are yet but the smallest of the white violet buds."

"I don't see what that has to do with a woman being thirty-five and old," pouted Sweet Seventeen; "and I don't want to be lectured. When I'm thirty-five I shall quite have left off caring about being pretty, or thinking about clothes, or—or, even anything that I like to think about now." "It is impossible," said the man, very slowly, tenderly, placing his hat, and smoothing out the fingers of his gloves. "It is possible for a woman to be at the zenith of her beauty even after thirty-five. Many of the lovely women of history have been notoriously beautiful much later in life than that. Youth is the beginning of beauty; the lovely bud may become a far, far lovelier flower. You are at the beginning of life, and life is beautiful; absorb its wonders and reflect its glories.

"Admire all that is given unto you to admire. Colors, flowers, sweet odors, atmosphere, pictures, music, books, curves, grace, the loveliness of nature, of children and all young things. Regard them with an appreciating mind, and realize the appeal they make to your heart against all that tends to lower your standard of what is right. You may dwindle from the smartness of a young racehorse to the unkempt depression of the average peddler's donkey if you neglect your grooming. Don't you see," groaned the man, reaching for his hat, "that it is good grooming that keeps a woman going and holds the years in check? Will you let a mean, [illegible], discontented life write its ugliness about your face and develop small ailments and a constant grumble, or will you see to it that your blood dances freely through your veins and colors your cheeks with waves of pink, and lights your eyes of heaven's own blue?"

Veal on Casserole.

Fry out in the casserole several cubes of salt pork with an onion; place a thick slice of meat in this and add a can of tomatoes and bay leaf, if at hand. Season and cover. Cook in oven one and one-half hours and serve in casserole with plain boiled rice for vegetable.

(Bi

"Did you night?"

"Yes," replied 'but I didn't miss i quired a wobbling one

BEFORE AND AF

(Judge)

"Papa, what is the difference a President and a Vice-President?"

"A Vice-President is surrounded obscurity when he takes office and President is surrounded by it when leaves."

HIS PROOF.

(Washington Star)

"I get tired of hearing about the 'good old times,'" said the cheery moderalist. "What's the use of assuming that people were in reality as well off as they ever were?"

"Well," replied the man who talks about rainy days, "maybe you're right. But you must admit that we used to get a whole lot more peanuts for a nickel then we do now."

A MOVIE NURSE.

(Puck)

Young Hospital Nurse—Is he really dead?

Old Hospital Nurse—Yes—have you only worked in movie studios?

HAS TO CLIMB DOWN.

(Washington Star)

"A candidate cannot afford to miss meeting the public during a campaign."

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "There are times when a great man has to climb down off his pedestal and take the stump."

EXPLAINED.

(Washington Star)

"You are taking a remarkable amount of interest in the sporting page."

"Yes. That's where I look for my educational news. If my son gets a chance to play football, I'll know he has passed his examinations."

TOO MUCH CHECK.

(Baltimore American)

"Why don't you check your wife's constant demand for money?"

"That's just it. She's always after checks."

HIS MISTAKE.

(Boston Transcript)

Miss Culchaw—Do you like "The Passing of Arthur"?

Mr. Champ—I'm not up on football. What team is he on?

THOSE LOVELY GIRLS.

(Boston Transcript)

First Girl—Mr. Dauber said my face was classic. What is classic?

Second Girl—Oh, most anything old.

THAT WAS EASY.

(Boston Transcript)

Visitor—You don't know who I am, do you, Jimmy?

Jimmy—Naw!

Visitor—Aha! I know who you are, though.

Jimmy—Aw, that ain't nothin'—I know that myself.

WORTH THE MONEY.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"When we were in Egypt Mrs. Twobble stood speechless before the pyramids," remarked Mr. Twobble.

"Fancy that!"

"I don't remember what the trip cost me, but it was worth the money."

CARELESS.

(Buffalo Express)

"A man who never made a mistake never made anything," said the Wise One.

"Yes," agreed the Boob. "But a lot of chaps who believe in that get careless and never make anything but mi takes."

PUNISHED.

(Puck)

"Before I married you, you sa had money." "See what one g lying!"

USEFUL.

(Boston Transcript)

This world would be a pleasa if there were not so many fo

"Yes; but it would be more make a living."

BOTH FOOLS.

(Washington Star)

"A freak election bet makes a m look ridiculous."

"Yes. And it's hard to tell which w it—the man in the wheelbarrow or the man who is pushing."

TEMPERANCE CRANK.

(Boston Transcript)

"Briggs seems to be a temperance crank of the extremest kind."

"I should say he is! Why, he won't have anything to do with stocks because they frequently take a drop."

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

(Louisville "Courier-Journal.")

"How does young Flubdub stand in college?"

"Not so well."

"Why is that?"

"He is all right enough in studies, but he is more than suspected of cutting football games."

PROOF POSITIVE.

(Houston "Post.")

"Who is that foolish man that is in love with you?"

"How do you know he is foolish?"

"He is in love with you."

EASY.

(Puck.)

Jim Jones—But how can I neighbor as myself when howls all night?

The Parson—Why, ve ther Jones, very easy his dog.

RUINED.

(Boston Transcript)

Poor Suitor— you refuse your Old Richleig sir?

Poor Suitor— she will marry

Peach Bat

Slice into a deep sing dish sufficient pe half fill it. Add two or three pits and dust thickly with sugar. Sift into bowl two even cups of flour and add one teaspoon of salt and a pinch of baking soda. Beat the whites and yolks separately of four eggs. Add to the yolks one pint of milk and then gradually beat the liquid into the flour. When very smooth and free from lumps, fold in the stiffly whipped egg whites and pour over the peaches. Bake for three-quarters of an hour and serve immediately on its removal from the oven. Eat with cream or hard sauce.

Their Lot!

With woman it is a struggle to provide something for the comfort of the inner man, and with man it is an endless effort to provide for the outer woman.

Poet—How can a chap get rich on $10 capital? Reporter—You probably mean, 'How can he get richer?'—Puck.

SHER
48
(Nights) 146

RIPTION RATES

in Advance $1.50
not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance. $2.50
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain. paid in advance..$1.50
France, paid in advance.......$2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
5% additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, JANUARY 11th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

HAVE you filled in and mailed your National Service card?

+ + +

THE Renfrew Mercury would save khaki cloth by creating fewer honorary Colonels.

+ + +

IT is predicted by those who should know, the Weekly Sun says, that next season binder twine will cost the Canadian farmer not less than eighteen cents a pound.

+ + +

THE Globe's Ottawa correspondent forecasts a dissolution of Parliament and an election early the coming year. June or July, he predicts, will see the assembly of a new parliament.

+ + +

IN THESE days, when a man calls at the door of an Orillia house asking for charity, on the plea that he has not been able to find work, it takes some self-restraint to refrain from calling him a liar.—Orillia Packet.

+ + +

THE Toronto Globe, in commenting on the fact that "Toronto people are still getting two cent newspapers for one cent." Of course, The Globe can hardly blame the people. If the maker won't value his product, who will?—Port Elgin Times.

+ + +

FAT policemen in Pittsburg have to wear corsets, as the chief says the tighter they are the faster it makes them on their feet. If that's so, we know some women who should be able to run a hundred yards in 3 seconds.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

THE farmer with a well-preserved wood-lot can toast his shins by a roaring birch-and-maple fire, while his neighbour, forced to depend upon coal, is this year shivering because of the scarcity of the product in many localities.—The Canadian Countryman

+ + +

GEN. MAUDE, once so well known at Ottawa, is now leading the British forces in and about the scene where the Garden of Eden is supposed to have been situated. One can imagine with what perfect bearing he will respond to the invitation, "Come into the Garden Maud."—Toronto Star.

+ + +

THE Liberals of West Simcoe are doing the right thing in defraying themselves the cost of the coming bye-election, in which Mr. Isaac Scott, a fine type of citizen, is their candidate. May the time come soon in Canada when every constituency will do the same and the "barrel" will be a thing of the past.—Globe.

+ + +

THE Canadian Baptist says ministers, salaries, like nearly everything else, must be raised; but admits that the official raising at a church meeting is likely to be easier than the subsequent and more substantial raising by individual canvass. To the average man, ten cents to the church looks bigger than a dollar spent on his own pleasure. And yet many people thought the British Empire's piety would save it from war!

+ + +

CARDS have been sent out through the Post office to every man in Canada between the ages of 16 and 65 years. The purpose is to obtain an inventory of Canada's man-power for the use of the National Service Board of Canada. The past week the Postmaster of Walkerton has sent out [illegible] cards to all the men in reach of [illegible] office. The cards should be [illegible] filled in with the desired information and returned to the Post[illegible], whence they will be sent to [illegible]. Let every man do his [illegible] this matter. It is important. [illegible] service. The Nation[illegible] of Canada has been [illegible] duty and responsibility [illegible] investigations and [illegible] that will in some [illegible] for those adjust[illegible] national life necessary [illegible] of the agricultural [illegible] other basic industries of the Dominion, at the point of production and efficiency so absolutely essential to the success prosecution of the war, while continuing unimpaired the indispensable public services of the country. To accomplish these results, and insure the maximum production of war material and equipment, the services of all available men and women of Canada must be utilized in such a manner as will, while achieving these purposes, permit of the release from their present employment of men who, physically fit and of suitable age, may desire to serve overseas with our military or naval forces. The National Service inventory is a step to victory. Let each man help to make the registration complete. If you have not already filled out your card, do so AT ONCE and return it to the Postmaster.

Telescope Letter Box

Interesting Lines from Walkerton Folks in France, Saskatchewan, Montana, and even from Germany

FROM PRIVATE ALBERT CONDY

Somewhere In France.

Dear Mother:—

I guess you will be looking for a letter from me again. I sent a field card yesterday. It's the first time I got a chance to write for some time, as we have been up to the lines again for some time and are out now. I think it's the last time we will be in the trenches at this Part and I am glad of it, as the casualties have been pretty heavy. I am sure thankful to get through it all safe. We had some very bad weather too. It has frozen a little and is freezing again to-night, one of those misty frosts, one can see nothing but mud here. It would be fine if it would freeze solid for a couple of months but I guess there is no chance of that in this country. We had a little flurry of snow here one morning but it didn't last long as it rained afterwards. I think the next time we go into the trenches it will be in a little quieter part, for the Canadians sure have done their share of heavy fighting this fall, so I don't think you will see so many casualties among us for the next two months or so. I think we are going to get ten days leave to England this winter so that will be great, of course we will not all go at once only about 50 a week so it will take some time to get around us all. I expect to get mine sometime after New Years, but may get it sooner. I am ready anytime it comes. Well mother sometimes I think the war will soon end. Then other times I think it will never end but reports from prisoners, say that the Kaiser promised them peace by Christmas and if they dont get it they are going to surrender by battalions instead of a few at a time, so I hope it is true. Sometimes I think they have plenty of amunition the way he sends it over but they have been driven back a few hundred yards every week by the steady pressure of our artillery and infantry combined. I got your letters dated Nov. 5 but not the parcel but will get them soon. I hope and think I will get quite a few this Xmas for there are a couple on the way from Winnipeg. Then I will likely get some from the West so I ought to fare pretty good, but remember me when you are eating your Christmas Pudding. Yes, mother, I find out we need plenty of socks here in the winter time for it's very hard to keep one's feet in shape so much in the wet and a pair of good warm lined gloves would be fine not buckskin for they get wet too easy. Pigskin or something like that would be better, as for underclothes we fare pretty good as we have to have them often for you never saw such a place for getting lice on one. They seem to breed in the clay.

Dec. 9th—Just received the parcel and mighty glad and pleased to get it. Well mother, you don't need to be so anxious about me now for a while as we are in a much quieter part of France and had quite a few days marching to get here. We have not been up to the line here yet, as we are due a good rest and I am not sorry to be out of it for a while for we had our share of heavy work this Fall. We are in the nicest part of France I have seen yet. Well mother it will soon be Xmas it will be before you get this. I managed to buy a few cards to-day away down in a village in this part. I would like to send you something good but you know we only draw a little of our pay over here so don't have much spending money. I have a German gas mask that I am going to try and send over. I have a bad cold since I came into Civilization again. Well mother I have an awful lot of mail to answer as I haven't written a letter for over three weeks or more as I didn't get a chance, for we just got out of the trenches and came down here. So wishing you a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year and don't worry for me.

I remain your loving son,

Albert.

+ + +

AN OLD WALKERTON BOY

A. V. Whitehead of Weyburn, Sask. writes the Telescope;—

We are having fine weather here. Autos are running here yet, the roads are good. Crops in this district were a good paying crop, this season. I am quite busy on the roads as Deputy Sheriff, and have been for the last ten years. I also have an auctioneer business which goes quite good with the Sheriff's work. Your old friend, N. C. Royce, has moved from his farm and is in the City of Weyburn for the winter. He is in good health and looks younger every year. Since I came to Weyburn about fourteen years ago the little Hamlet has grown with leaps and bounds until it is now a city of near six thousand with Five Banks, Six Churches, Three Schools, A High School or Collegiate Institute, Three Hotels, but no Bar. Seven passenger trains arrive at the station each day.

+ + +

BRUCE BOY IN MONTANA

Mr. Albert Yack, an old Bruce Boy now farming at Sollid, Montana, sends the Telescope an interesting description of conditions in that part of the world.—

Sollid, Montana, 12-28 16.

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

I had for a long time intended to write a letter to "the Telescope" as I saw so many letters from other parts of the country I thought that perhaps one describing conditions in this state would be interesting to at least a few of your readers, and then your invitation came and that decided the question.

As to climate, Montana is nearly identical with Southern Alberta with perhaps a little less rain and snow and I must say less frost, for frosted wheat, except along the foothills is an unknown thing.

This has been a very disagreeable year as to weather. Last winter was very cold with an excessive snowfall. The Spring was cold, windy and late. The summer was very warm and gave us a lot of electrical storms and hail in excess of that of any other year. But for all that, the farmers cleared more money this year than they have since 1909, when this country was just being settled. We had a big snow storm about Oct. 1st, and since then the weather hasn't been settled. Threshing was late. I finished Dec. 5. There is a lot of grain still to thresh both in the stack and in the stook.

We have had a very cold snap beginning on the 20th inst. The mercury fell to 33 below and stayed about there until the 26th, when it dropped to 30 but it is coming up again. About 25 to-day. Those were cold mornings to hit a 25 mile trail with a load of grain and a man sure notices the cold when he has four or six horses to drive.

Most of the grain that is threshed is still in the granaries owing to the congested condition of the market during Nov. The farmers are very anxious to sell, as the prices are good and peace rumors and talk of an embargo are steadily forcing them downward.

Conrad, 25 miles, is my nearest railroad town but the Great Northern Railway are surveying in this country now and will in all probability commence building and grading next spring.

The crop outlook for next year is very good as the ground was well soaked this fall and we have a lot of snow now. There was practically no Fall. It was too late when the grain was off the ground.

We feel the effects of the war over here to quite a large extent. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics records an advance of 16 per cent in the retail price of foodstuffs from October 15th 1915 to Oct. 15th 1916. From September 15th to October 15 of this year the advance on all food prices combined was 3 per cent. This works a hardship on the masses while a few are making fortunes. These are, I think, spoken of as profiteers in Canada. I hope the war will be brought to a successful issue before another winter and all nations will see the utter uselessness of it and sue for permanent peace so that when another Christmas comes we can again say "Peace on Earth Good Will toward Men."

Very Respectfully Yours,
Albert F. Yack.

+ + +

FROM GERMAN MILITARY PRISON.

Mrs. Henry Williams received the following letter from Pte. Victor Bell, Royal Canadian Regiment, now a Prisoner of War in Dulmen, Germany.

Dear Emma and All;—

Just a line hoping you are all well as it leaves me at present. I have not heard from anyone yet, it is going on for six weeks since I had a letter from anyone. My, it does seem a long time. Say, Emma, I will have to leave it to you to arrange for to have my parcels sent to me under this new scheme of the governments if you are allowed to send one put in some Quaker Oats and sugar and some Golden Syrup or oatmeal or rice, anything filling. Send mostly tinned stuff as it takes so long for a parcel to come that stuff like bread won't keep. They say that under this new scheme you won't be able to send anything except tobacco but there are so many rumors around here that you don't know what to believe. Well, Emma, every time you hear from me write a line to mother and tell her how I am and she will do the same. My it will be nice to get a letter from home just to let me know that you are all well. Some of the fellows have had letters from England that came here the same time as me so I guess it wont be long before I get one at least I hope not anyway. There is not much news around here, only we are all looking forward to that first parcel from home. We get treated fine here in this camp. The guards are very good to us, they don't make us work too hard. I have not been working these last couple of days I have been getting my boots repaired. Oh! say Emma if you have not sent some before you get this letter put a couple of pairs of socks will you, I am using my puttees for socks just at present.

Well must close with love.

Victor.

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

594 Champlain St., Montreal.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells, and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen.

A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LABRIE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time. Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

INSURANCE
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL
TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies -- English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES
T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

Fall
Clearing Sale of WALL
PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—
Dining Room,
Parlor,
Hall,
Sitting Room,
Bath Room,
and
Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
☞ Next to Vogan's Hardware

IT'S Remarkable how children out-grow their smocks and frocks, their playthings their childish ways and most of all, their photographs. Only photographs will keep them at they are.
FRASER STUDIO

A HAPPY
NEW YEAR TO ALL.

A. HEHN
City Bakery

Winter Goods

Axes We have a good supply of Axes, ranging in price from 85c to $1.25. Try a Samson, fully guaranteed at $1.25.

Saws There is none better than the Celebrated Improved Razor Cross Cut Saw.

Mitts We have a full line of Winter Mitts and Gloves.

Granitware When in need of Granitware, don't forget our "Old English."

We also carry Sausage Grinders and Fillers, Meat Saws, Butcher Knives.

S. W. VOGAN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

WHY DOES THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND REQUIRE SO MUCH MONEY?

This question is often asked, by persons and by municipal councils, when the matter of liberal giving to the Fund is brought before them.

They are entitled to the most complete answer, for the Fund is the people's. They created it, and it is they who must maintain it.

Now for the reasons. There are 149,230 of them.

The Fund asks for so much money because Canada has given her men so lavishly to the Great Cause. Between 300,000 and 400,000 have volunteered. If their families need help, this Fund provides it. In October 53,693 families did need it. These families comprised 149,230 persons, nearly all either mothers, wives or children. Is it any wonder that so Great a Need requires so Great a Fund?

HOW GREAT IS THE NEED OF MONEY?

The sum expended in October, 1916, was	$891,814.00
The average payment to each family was	16.29
The average payment to each person was	5.73
The cost of administration was	15,464.00

(In above averages, sums paid for broken periods not included.)

Pay special attention to the figures concerning cost of administration—including expense of campaigns for raising money. It is the ambition of the managers of the Fund to keep the cost of raising and disbursing it below that of any voluntary fund ever created in Canada. Their aim is to hand to the soldiers' families as nearly as possible one hundred cents for every dollar subscribed. They succeed in handing 99½ cents. The sum received in October as interest on moneys in banks was about $11,500. Take this from the cost of administration. The remainder is $4,000. And that, therefore, is all that had to be deducted from sums paid in.

That is to say, of every $100 paid by generous givers, $99.46 reached the families.

Is not that economy which should give confidence to every subscriber?

Does the magnitude of the Fund, as well as its importance, begin to impress you, Mr. Citizen-who-is-being-asked-to-subscribe-$100, or you, Gentlemen of the Municipal Council, who are being urged to vote $100,000 for 1917? Does the REQUEST look as large as it did now that you know something more of the NEED?

Since the war began the people of Canada have subscribed to this Fund	$16,495,000
For 1917 they will be asked to give—and will give	12,500,000
Of this sum Ontario is being asked to guarantee—and will guarantee—at least	$6,000,000

This is one million more than in 1916, but every dollar will be required for Ontario's families. Not much chance for individuals or counties to economize by cutting down their contributions, is there? On the contrary, the giving must be on a scale more generous than ever. And why not? If we can't FIGHT, isn't it a Privilege rather than an Obligation to PAY?

ONE WORD MORE:

No man should ignore his personal responsibility towards the families of those who are fighting for him, simply because his Municipal Council is taxing him slightly for the same object. He owes these people far more. Perhaps he is too poor to pay more. If not, it is up to him to give a generous cheque to his local Patriotic Fund Committee, or mail it to

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND, VITTORIA STREET, OTTAWA

SOME OF THE 149,230 REASONS WHY THE FUND NEEDS SO MUCH MONEY

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist. Successor to Dr. Ca
Modern methods employed in all tal operations. Special attention crown, bridge and inlay work.
doors east of post office. Visits C gill 1st and 3rd Thursday afterno each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L
Graduate of Royal Colleg of Dental Surgeons
Ontario.
Dr. Lonat's old stand.
Wisser Block - Wal

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, No
Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st in each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.
Honor Graduate in Arts and cine at Queen's University. Mem the College of Physicians and
ons. Office and residence on corn
Colborne and Cayley Streets.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Nothing more suitable than a Trunk, Bag or Suit Case for a Christmas present. See our nice stock.

McCARTER
Harness Co.

The Best Newspaper Value
In Western Ontario
.. The ..
London Advertis
All Mail Editions $3.00 Per Yea

Winter T
From Ja
CENTRAL Business Co
STRATFORD, ONT.
We have COMMERCIAL S
HAND and TELEGRAPH
PARTMENTS. The cour thorough, up-to-date and pr
The instructors are experie we place graduates in po
We are receiving applicati trained help we cannot suppl
Write at once for partic
D. A. McLACH
PRINCIPAL

FARM FOR SA

The Executors of the Wi rich O'Hagan, deceased, off
the West Halves of Lots 10
cession, B. Elderslie, 100 ac is a desirable grass farm s three miles from Paisley particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, D. F
Executor, or Ba
47 t. f. Chepstowe P

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that a B was passed by the municipal of the Township of Brant, on t day of November, 1916, providi the issue of Debentures, to the a of $2 600, for the purpose of Electric Power and Light for th age of Elmwood, in the Town Brant, that such By-law was ed in the Registry Office for th tered division of the County of on the 22nd day of Decembe
Any motion to quash or set as same or any part thereof, must be made within three after the first publication of this and cannot be made thereafter.

Dated this 26th day of Dec. 1916
M. A. McCallu
Clerk of Brant Town

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN
JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABR
HAM of the Village of Wiarton, the County of Bruce and Provinc
Ontario, will apply to the Parliam of Canada at the next session ther for a bill of divorce from his w
MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM
the Village of Wiarton, in the Coun of Bruce and Province of Ontario, the grounds of adultery and misc duct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE: THOMPSON: BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
Solicitors for Applicant.

48-9

Training For Business

For 35 Years the NORTHERN Business College OWEN SOUND, ONT. has been a leader among the institutions specializing in training for commercial pursuits. The courses of study embrace every subject of use in conducting business. Actual practice is given in required duties.

Special courses for young ladies who wish to qualify for office positions during the war.

Winter term begins Jan. 2nd, but students may enter any time. Write for Catalogue.

C. A. FLEMING, Principal.

A Safe, Sure and Quick Route

to a good business position is via the

ELLIOTT Business College.

Shorthand, Typewriting, Bookkeeping, Banking, Higher Accounting, Correspondence, Penmanship, Spelling, Office Routine, Business Forms, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Law, Civil Service &c., taught quickly and correctly. Experienced teachers; careful attention; moderate rates; best results. Demand for our graduates is far in excess of our supply. Enter now. Catalogue free.

Yonge and Charles Sts. W. J. ELLIOTT, Prin.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application. 844

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

"Good bye and Good Luck!"

"Thank you for the wishes and for

WRIGLEY'S

The Flavour Lasts

This great little pick-me-up is full of vigour and vim for the jaded soldier. Quenches thirst, allays fatigue, gives new life to enervated spirits. 5¢

ry letter or parcel your soldier friend uld contain a few bars. Appetite, digestion and spirits are the better for it.

Sold Everywhere

Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co., Ltd., Wrigley Bldg., Toronto

The Flavour Lasts!

Hartley House, Walkerton,
Tuesday, Jan. 16th.

DORENWEND'S
OF TORONTO

Canada's foremost hairgoods manufacturers will exhibit for your inspection their finest and latest hair creations in ladies'

SWITCHES, CORONET AND FANCY BRAIDS, POMPADOURS, TRANSFORMATIONS, CHIGNONS, WAVES, BANGS, AND

FOR BALD MEN

TOUPEES AND WIGS of hygienic and scientific construction that are as lifelike as nature, cannot be detected from a person's own hair, and will render long service and satisfaction.

They make the appearance years younger and improve the health by the protection they offer.

A Demonstration of these Hair Structures is FREE OF CHARGE. It will not obligate you in any way.

REMEMBER THE DATE
Tuesday, January 6th.
Dorenwend's
Head Office and Show Rooms
105 Yonge Street
Toronto

OUR WESTERN LETTER

Written for the Telescope By an Old Bruce Boy.

If last summer was a comparative failure here the winter is a decided success, the weather to date being A 1 at Lloyds. My own opinion is that taking it by large the winter is the best part of the year in Alberta. There is generally enough snow for sleighing and the days are bright and calm. Of course we have an occasional week when it is cold or stormy as does any other country that is far enough north to have winter. We have also the Chinook which even Heaven-blessed Ontario can't boast. Last year and this spring we had some undesirable people in this locality, they didn't do any farming, but were always riding the country looking for stray mavericks. They shipped dressed beef to Calgary but never bought cattle, or just enough to be able to produce a bill of sale if called upon. The whole neighbourhood finally got very suspicious, especially as cattle and horses were mysteriously disappearing and everyone kept a keen watch on their stock rounding them up each week. If anything was missed the owner simply rode for the headquarters of these people and hunted round. So they left us last summer. Where they are now receiving hospitality from the Mounted Police. On how many or what charges they are held we haven't heard yet. There are some confederates not yet plucked. Every one hopes the police will be able to get them all, then send them away for a good many years. The cattle and horse rustler, when convicted gets no light sentence in these parts. Here is an instance to show how anything savouring of cattle stealing is dealt with. A farmer living in a neighbouring valley and who did quite a business in buying and selling cattle sold four calves to a neighbour this summer. The transaction took place on a Sunday. He received $100 to bind the bargain and later a cheque for the balance. This cheque was sent up twice to the bank it was drawn on and returned N.S.F. then the farmer was given a cheque on another bank. Before he ascertained if this cheque was good he shipped a car-load of cattle and in driving them to the shipping point came across three of the calves he had sold and took them along putting them in the car. The purchaser then had him pulled. At the trial it came out that the purchaser never had any money in the bank on which he gave the first cheque (the second cheque was good) and that he intended to leave the country shortly. Nevertheless the farmer was put away for three years with hard labour.

+ + +

(LATER)

Since last writing we have started real winter weather, almost daily snow. Unfortunately the snow was accompanied by heavy wind, consequently the snow is very much in spots. These spots are frequently at the road side with a paucity of snow in the road which makes sleighing for a distance some gamble. It is strange how unexpectedly and away from home you will meet some one you have forgotten years ago. The December before leaving Ontario I visited the Fat Stock Show at Guelph and while there was greeted by a man I didn't know but whose voice sounded familiar. We had been class mates at college some twenty years before and he had recently arrived in Canada. He said I had changed so little he knew me at once. The next spring I spent a vacation in hospital. Who took the bed I vacated? This same man. A few years later I ran across him in Lacombe Alta. He is now at the Front. Among the first men I became acquainted with out here was Bob Hutchison from near Kincardine. He has for a neighbour Norman Ross also from that neighbourhood. They left Ontario presumably for Ontario's good some twenty five or more years ago. One day a traveller happened past here about noon and asked the chances for dinner. We told him if he could eat that good old Scotch dish 'pot luck' he was welcome and he came right in. At dinner something was said about Walkerton. He asked if I knew Bruce Co. I replied that I had lived for a few years some six miles from Walkerton. He came from Paisley, his name being McGuire. It turned out we had quite a number of mutual acquaintances. He had known Tom Bowes who lived on the road from Eden Grove to Pinkerton and who between bouts at checkers with J. E. Eckford tried to invent a perpetual motion machine. He knew J. C. E. Hugh McKerracher and a whole lot more known to me. After dinner we parted feeling almost as if we had known each other for years. We have a number of neighbours here with very Scotch names (McPherson and such like) but they are from the U. S. A. and don't know the origin of their forebears. I asked a man the other day with a Scotch name if he was of Caledonian descent. "No", he replied "my parents were English. They went to Canada some 60 or more years ago and were among the first settlers near Paisley Ont. They stayed there about two years but it was such a hard life they left for the States where I was born and raised." When in a Lacombe harness shop one day recently I mentioned Walkerton. The proprietor said he had a man from there working for him. I promptly interviewed that man and found he was a brother of George and August Pletsch with whom I worked on J. C. Eckford's farm in 1888. Such is life and so small is this world. If astronomers ever get to Mars they will find a Scotchman from Bruce County there ahead of them.

Walkerton In 1916

1916 Review of the Notable Happenings of the Past Year, in Walkerton and Bruce County, Taken from The Telescope Fyles. 1916

DEC. 21 1915—Bruce Preparedness League organized, Judge Klein president.

DEC. 23rd, 1915.—Big meeting of Bruce Citizens at Town Hall, Walkerton, pledged themselves to assist Col. Weir in raising 160th Bruce Battalion.

DEC. 28th.—Lieut.-Col. Weir and Major Moffat open office at Armouries. Recruiting starts.

DEC 31st.—Recruiting officially started throughout Bruce.

JANUARY

JAN. 3rd, 1916.—Mayor F. W. Lippert jr. elected Mayor for a third term. Reeve Nesbitt elected in Brant, Phelan in Greenock; Kuntz in Culross, and Felsinger in Carrick by acclamation.

JAN. 5th.—100 recruits for the 160th Batt'n in less than a week.

JAN. 10th.—Mayor Lippert announces at Inaugural Council meeting that Hydro and sidewalks will receive attention.

JAN. 10th.—Mr. and Mrs. John Hogg of Carrick, sadly bereaved by accidental death of their son, Charles in the West.

JAN. 17th.—Death of Griffith Jones, aged 66 years.

JAN. 18th.—Death of Mrs. Henry Clark.

JAN. 20th.—Measles epidemic in Walkerton.

JAN. 25th.—Alex McNab elected Warden of Bruce.

JAN. 25th.—Treasurer James Coulter of Brant, died after brief illness

JAN. 27th.—Bruce County Council votes $30,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

FEBRUARY

FEB. 1st.—Dr. John S. Reed died after brief illness with pleuro-pneumonia

FEB. 1st.—160th Bruce Battalion has [illegible] recruits at end of first month.

FEB 2nd.—William Wesely, Senior Publisher of Bruce Herald, died suddenly.

FEB. 5th.—$57,000, Bruce County bonds sold for a shade better than par.

FEB. 12th.—Death of Patrick O'Hogan of Paisley, at Guelph.

FEB. 15th.—Death of Ray Vogan.

FEB. 23rd.—160th Batt. is 825 strong.

FEB. 25th.—Miss Helen Hackley of Walkerton High School wins first Carter Scholarship.

MARCH

MAR. 3—Local amateurs put on dandy Minstrel Show under auspices of I. O. D. E

MAR. 7.—Walker House gutted by fire.

MAR. 9.—'Bob' Rowland given a public welcome home from trenches to take a commission in 160th Batt'n.

MAR. 9.—Large cracks in Wall plaster indicate Town Hall is settling.

MAR. 9—Death of Mrs. Henry Bacon, aged 93 years.

MAR. 9—Cargill, with 300 population, has an Honor Roll with 30 names.

MAR. 11.—Town Council dismisses Fire Brigade and names Alex George as new Fire Chief.

MAR. 21.—R. Wor. Henry Clark presented with address and gold-headed cane by Masons.

MAR. 22.—Walkerton boys of the 71st Batt'n. dined by Mayor and Council at Soldier's Aid Tea Rooms.

APRIL

APR. 6.—President L. C. Benton, announces 71½% of Bruce people signed petition to make Ontario dry.

APR. 6.—160th Batt'n strength is now 1153.

APR. 10.—Announced 160th Batt'n. would mobilize in Walkerton.

APR. 13.—Walkerton business men put up $500 in ten minutes towards expense of mobilizing 160th Batt'n here.

APR. 10.—Walkerton Town Council asks Hydro Electric Power Commission for figures.

APR. 11.—Alex McIntyre of Malcolm loses $6,000 by burning of his large barn.

APR. 11.—Death of Peter Miller, McGivern St., an old resident of Kinloss.

APR. 27.—Joe Lindsay appointed caretaker of Walkerton P O succeeding Mrs. Gibson, resigned.

APR. 29.—Daughters of the Empire issued special 160th Batt'n issue of the Telescope.

MAY

MAY 4.—160th Batt. mobilizes at Walkerton.

MAY 4.—Boys arrested for wrecking interior of Joseph Jones' house.

MAY 4.—Matthew Hudson respected resident of Walkerton for 40 years moves to Beamsville.

MAY 8.—Large Deputation of Citizens urged Town Council to build permanent roadway from Station to Station.

MAY 15.—Mrs. John Schnitzler died suddenly.

MAY 24.—10,000 persons attended the Big Bruce County Military Day at Walkerton.

MAY 27.—Walter Schnurr was killed at Port Elgin by touching live wire.

JUNE

JUNE 2.—160th Battalion given a formal farewell.

JUNE 3.—Soldiers of 160th Battalion royally entertained at Chesley, marching from Walkerton, 10 miles, and back again on June 5th.

JUNE 3.—Public and High Schools Scholars collected 5,374 lbs of old papers for the Red Cross.

JUNE 9.—Death of Mrs. Nicholas Eidt.

JUNE 11—Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGarity of Brant received word that their son, Daniel P. McGarity, had been killed in action.

JUNE 15.—Word reaches Walkerton from England that the 71st. Batt'n is to be broken up.

JUNE 17—News received of the death of the first Walkerton boy to fall in battle, Pte. Ray Hyslop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hyslop.

JUNE 22—Town turns out en masse to see boys of 160th Batt'n off to London Camp.

JUNE 26—Magistrates Tolton and Richardson fined two Chesley men $300 and costs each, for selling liquor without a license.

JUNE 22—Sergt. Duncan McKerracher of the 160th Battalion died at his home in Paisley of anaemia.

JULY

JULY 1.—Gordon Craig, fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Craig, formerly of Brant, killed by lightning at Haileybury.

JULY 4.—Bert Bunstadler, previously reported missing, writes home that he is a prisoner of War at Dulmen, Germany.

JULY 8.—Death of Thomas Lamb of Brant.

JULY 10.—Walkerton Town Council decides to lay a mile of new cement pavement.

JULY 13.—Word received that Reg McCarter, son of Coun. and Mrs. Alex. McCarter, had been killed in action.

JULY 14.—William Brown, former Publisher of the Bruce Herald, died at Vancouver B. C.

JULY 27.—Walkerton citizens contributed 7,314.95 to Patriotic and Red Cross Funds as the result of a day's canvass.

AUGUST

AUG. 8.—Telegram from Saloniki announces Sergt. Wilbur Cryderman "seriously ill with dysentery".

AUG. 9.—Capt. Chas. E. Kilmer, grandson of Mr. N. Crawford, reported seriously wounded. Awarded D. S. O.

AUG. 15.—Joe Lippert's big barn near Chepstow burned to the ground with all its contents.

AUG. 28.—Town Council strike 31 mill tax rate.

AUG. 31.—Reported that J. F. Farrel, former Walkerton boy, is to get Military Cross.

SEPTEMBER

SEPT. 1.—Death of Salvador Kroetch aged 24.

SEPT. 4.—H. H. Miller ex-M. P. of Hanover died rather suddenly.

SEPT. 10.—Death of Matthew Goetz, County Court Clerk.

SEPT. 16—Walkerton and all Ontario goes dry.

SEPT. 16.—Jos. M. White appointed license inspector for Bruce County.

SEPT. 18.—Pte. Jim Russell, who was home from the Front on detail duty given send-off at Town Hall.

SEPT. 18.—Reported that Corp. Will Hanley, son of Mr. Timothy Hanley, Chepstow, died of wounds, on Sept. 4th.

SEPT. 21.—Pte. Wm. Wesley given a public welcome by citizens after being invalided home from the Front.

SEPT. 26.—Town Council decides to fit up additional residential quarters for Chief Ferguson in Town Hall.

OCTOBER

OCT. 1.—Lieut. Geo. E. Clark, formerly of Bank of Commerce, Walkerton, reported killed in action.

OCT. 1.—Lieut. A. E. Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Reid, Pinkerton, reported missing and probably killed Sept. 17th. Awarded D. S. O. for gallant exploit which cost him his life.

OCT. 3.—Mr and Mrs. Geo. Ross celebrate their golden wedding. Married at Embro, Oxford County, Oct. 3, 1866.

OCT 4.—Walkerton Boys of 160th Batt'n home on last leave. Presented with five dollar gold pieces by the town.

OCT. 4—Chum's letter states Signaller Albert Ballantyne of Walkerton missing and thought to be killed.

OCT. 9.—Brant Citizens request Township Council to grant $1500 to Red Cross.

OCT. 10—Corp. Harry Wade reported Killed in Action.

OCT. 14.—160th Bruce Battalion left training Camp at London, Ont. for Overseas.

OCT. 16—Mrs. McCann, life-long Walkerton resident, dies at Regina.

OCT. 19—Walkerton contributes $1600 to Red Cross on Trafalgar Day.

OCT. 23—K. M. Taylor, manager Merchants Bank, passes away after brief illness.

OCT. 24—Lt.-Col. R. M. Thompson, of Winnipeg, a Walkerton old boy, reported Killed in Action.

OCT. 28.—160th Batt'n. arrived safely in England.

OCT. 29.—Rev. H. R. Moeig, pastor of Lutheran Church, accepts call to New Hamburg.

OCT. 30.—Death of Joseph Corbett, Brant pioneer, aged 86 years.

OCT. 31.—Death of Mrs W. G. Thompson.

NOVEMBER

NOV. 2.—Formosa Church spire struck during terrific electrical storm and narrowly escapes destruction.

NOV. 3.—Four Walkerton Signallers, Ralph Glave, John Rowland, Clayton Freeman and Wilfred Freeman, given send off at Town Hall. 160th Batt'n. moved to Bramshott Camp.

NOV. 9.—Norman Walford, G. T. R. agent, transferred to Hespeler.

NOV. 9.—Victor Bell reported a prisoner of war in Germany.

NOV. 9.—Dr. Clapp of Mildmay appointed County Court Clerk of Bruce.

NOV. 13.—David Pinkerton, of Greenock, died in his 67th year.

NOV. 16.—Lieut. Lee. Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young of Cargill, reported killed in action.

NOV. 20.—Cargill citizens give royal send-off to G. T. R. agent, Jim Clancy, transferred to Walkerton.

NOV. 24.—Town Council arranges to have Hydro Vote taken at coming municipal elections.

NOV. 30.—Mrs. Forbes Clark and family remove to Toronto.

NOV. 30.—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Truax remove to Toronto.

DECEMBER

DEC. 6—County Council presents Warden McNab with gold headed cane.

DEC. 7.—Miss Annie Ferguson wins gold medal at Stratford Hospital.

DEC. 7.—Fifteen Walkerton lads give their names as recruits for British Navy.

DEC. 7.—Bruce County Council gives Good Roads By-law its first reading.

DEC. 15.—Mayor Lippert "caned" by his 1916 colleagues.

DEC. 25.—Louis M. Dippel, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Dippel, awarded the Military Cross.

DEC. 28.—Andrew P. Johnston and Conn. McCarter elected to Walkerton council by acclamation.

DEC. 27—Mr. and Mrs. James L. Tolton celebrate their golden wedding.

New Books At Library.

The following books have been added to the Public Library: In Pastures Green, McArthur; Castaways, Jacobs; Lady Connie, Ward; Old Blood, Palmer; These Lynikers, Beresford; The Ivory Child, Haggard; Fifth Wheel, Prouty; Blind Man's Eyes, MacHarg; Betty Grier, Waugh; The Hoosier School Boys, Eggleston; Real Boys, Shuter.

+ + +

He found the Feet

A hardware manufacturer in Eastern Ontario received the following letter from a merchant in the Province of Quebec. "Dear Sir,—I received the stove wich I by from yu alrite, but for why yu dont sent me no feet? Wat is de use of de stove wen he dont have no feet? I am loose to me customer sure ting by not having de feet, and date not veree pleasure for me. Wat is de matter wit yu? Is note my trades money so good like anader mans? You loose me my trade, and I am very anger for dat, and now I tell yu dat yu are a big fool an no good. I sent yu back at wunce your stove tu-morro for sure, because yu are such awful foolish peoples. Yours respectifulee, Narcisse Lallame. P. S. Since I write yu dis letter I find de feet in de hoven, excuse to me. Narcisse.

BRUCE COUNTY COUNCIL 1917

Amabel, D. G. Craig.
Arran, J. J. Johnston.
Brant, D. Willoughby and W. A. Rowand.
Bruce, J. Johnston and P. Dobson.
Carrick, M. Filsinger and Dr. L. Doering.
Culross, Wm. Case.
Eastnor, D Scott.
Elderslie, J. E. Case.
Greenock, D. Phelan.
Huron, J. Wilkinson.
Kincardine Township, W H. Rutledge.
Lindsay, P. Forbes.
Kinloss, D. A. McDonald.
St. Edmunds, A. Munn.
Saugeen, G. Christie.
Hepworth, James Douglas.
Lucknow, R. Johnston.
Paisley, J. H. Steele.
Port Elgin, D. J. Izzard.
Tara, J. Morrow.
Teeswater, D. Ferguson.
Tiverton, D. B. McDonald.
Chesley, W. H. Brown.
Southampton, C. W. Bell.
Kincardine Town, Wm. Hunter.
Walkerton, R. Russell.

New Issue of the

Jan. 16 Tues.

Teleph Book.

¶ Copy for the next Telephone Directory closes on the above date!
¶ Order your telephone now, so that your name will be in the new issue!
¶ Report changes required to our Local Manager to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada.

STOP! LOOK!! LISTEN!!!

100 Dry Cells or Batteries.
Reg. 40c. While they last, 30c.

These are real live Batteries and just the thing for anyone who has a rural telephone, gasoline enging, or anything that requires batteries.

We also have a good line of Flash-lights and Flash-light Batteries, Hot Point Electric Irons and Toasters.

We sell the Eureka Vacuum Cleaner and keep one which we rent out at $1.00 per day.

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE STOVES PLUMBING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

"MADE IN CANADA"

The 1917 Ford Touring Car
$495.00
f. o. b., Ford, Ontario

You don't need extravagant claims to justify your choice when you buy a Ford.

The new model five-passenger Touring Car at $495 is standard automobile value. We don't need to make "claims" when offering you this car. We show you the car itself and give reasons. The quality, the price and the service it gives make satisfaction sure. You can always depend on the Ford.

¶ Let us show you the new model today—

Liesemer & Kalbfleisch
Opposite Queens Hotel • Walkerton

ANSWER.

listened, Premier the Imperial Parliament gave in clear, ringing emphatic and unmistak age Great Britain's answer ny's boastful offer of peace ions. The Premier spoke not or Britain, but for France and a and all the other allied powers. Anxious as they were for peace the only possible peace, the Premier declared, called for "complete restitution, full reparation and effectual guarantees." Until Germany was ready to accept peace on these terms, all peace talk was futile. In a few days Germany will receive from the allied powers a reply in accordance with these resolves. What its terms will be may be gathered from the speeches of Premier George and Lord Curzon, and that of Premier Briand of France, and the declarations of the [illegible] Duma. Germany will be [illegible] to understand that she must [illegible] occupied allied territory, make [illegible] for all the ill she has [illegible] and give guarantees for her good [illegible]. If the Kaiser is ready and [illegible] to agree to these terms a peace conference will be held; if he is not ready for these, then the war will go on.

Premier George sees nothing in the German offer that makes him believe that Germany is ready to accept such terms. He said: "Did the German Chancellor use a single phrase to indicate that he was prepared to accept such a peace? Was there a hint of restitution? Was there a suggestion of reparation? Was there an indication of any security for the future that his outrage on [illegible] would not again be perpetrated at the first profitable opportunity? [illegible] of this, the Premier declared that "We shall put trust in our unbroken army rather than on broken faith." And here we may refer to Mr. George's brilliant tribute to Britain's new army. They were noble words, words that will nerve every British arm to deeds of valor.

Britain has no faith in German promises or protestations. The war will go on. As Lord Curzon says, "We must carry on the war to the last man and the last shilling." It will be a fight to the death until the Kaiser sees the writing on the wall, and comes, not as a conqueror, but as one prepared to meet the wishes of the powers arrayed against him. The Premier assured the House that they would wait until they heard what terms and guarantees there are other than those, better than those, surer than those which Germany so lightly While thus waiting, Britain her whole force into the n of the war.

view the better to enable ble, the Premier called upon make sacrifices in the thrift—to give up all les. He wanted a proclaimed tariffs. He also announced mobilization of labor, Chamberlain as Director Service. There will be of labor and wealth. The will also be nationalized and control system will be put in An Imperial conference will soon be called, so that Dominions beyond the seas shall have a voice not only in the peace terms, but also in the prosecution of the war. An effort will also be made to have the Irish question settled. A firm hand is to be placed on King Constantine, and the agents of Ven the tells peace terms speech ation of all carry on" until it outlines the to take to ensure of the war. The of Premier George and his the German Chancellor's will meet with the warm approval of the people of Canada. They also are determined that, as far as in them lie, the war will be waged until German militarism is destroyed, until Belgium, Serbia, Roumania, Montenegro, Poland and all the other allied territory are freed from the contamination of the enemy. No other termination of the war is possible of contemplation. "It may be a long way to Tipperary, but in conjunction with the motherland we will go the whole way. With the measures the new British Government is taking we may confidently hope that that way will be considerably shortened.

Saving Eyes by Trick.

With embroidering a piece in many colors, use just as many needles as you use colors. Keep each needle threaded and then change from one to the other. This rests the eyes, re the monotony of working on olor and obviates the necessity ng a needle in perspiring any great length of time.

of the House—I trust that ays truthful, Mary. The , mum, I am to me own lies to the callers for

---

HER HUMBLE LOVER

Like most men who have things pretty much their own way in this world, Sir Frederic was of a jealous disposition. All his life he had got just what he wanted—a mother who worshipped him—servants who came, and with haste, at his beck and call—neighbors who looked up to him and some of whom toadied him—money in abundance—a fine estate entirely unincumbered; he had but to set his heart upon a thing to obtain it.

And he had set his heart upon Signa. He was hard hit the first evening he saw her—all the harder that she had taken so little notice of him; he felt still more sure that he loved her after her visit to the Park, but now that this fellow, Hector Warren, had stepped in between them, he felt certain that he loved her passionately, and that he must and would have her.

The thought that the girl he, Sir Frederic, loved, the future mistress of Blyte Park, should spend the day alone with this unknown nobody, with the handsome face and opera-singer airs—for this is what in his own mind Sir Frederic stigmatized Hector Warren's calm, easy bearing—was simply intolerable, maddening. With a hasty stride of his long legs he reached the lane, and jumping on his horse, which he had left bridled to a gate, he struck his spurs into the high-bred animal, and rode home full pelt, Hector Warren's cool smile and quietly haughty voice haunting him all the way, and making his self-love ache worse than his bruised hand.

Flinging his bridle to a groom who ran forward with obsequious haste, Sir Frederic entered the house—a grand place, as Signa had said—and was passing through to his room to dress for dinner, when he heard Lady Blyte's voice calling him from the drawing room.

He hesitated a moment, then pushed the half-open door wide, and entered.

Lady Blyte looked up anxiously; she had seen him from the window dismount, and knew that something had gone wrong.

"How long you have been, dear," she said, glancing up from her book with that smile with which she was so chary to the rest of the world, but lavished on her adored son.

"Yes," he said, morosely, dropping into a chair, and thrusting his hands in his pockets—"yes, I have been waiting—at the Rectory."

"I thought you had gone there," remarked Lady Blyte, softly.

He flushed and looked down.

"Yes, I've been there. I went to—to inquire after Miss Grenville. It was the proper thing to do."

"Of course, dear," she assented. "And she is none the worse for her visit to us, I hope?"

"I don't know—I didn't ask her," he said, shortly. "She was out; she had been out all day with—Mr. Warren."

Lady Blyte raised her eyebrows with a look of surprised disapproval.

"But not alone, Frederic?"

"As good, or as bad, almost," he said, angrily. "Archie alone was with them."

"Dear me!" said Lady Blyte; and there was strong disapproval in her tone.

"It—it was an accident, it seems," he said, sullenly—"at least so they think. Of course she wouldn't say what wasn't true——"

Lady Blyte looked down in silence.

"Of course she wouldn't," he repeated, angrily. "She thinks that it was an accident, but I dare say he could have prevented it. They went out in a boat, got caught in a storm, and went to St. Clare's, where they were kept by the storm. At least, he says they were kept."

"Dear me!" said Lady Blyte again.

Sir Frederic beat the devil's tattoo with his big feet on the Turkey carpet.

"I can't think how she could have allowed him to take her," he said, angrily. "I suppose it was his sheer impudence that did it."

"Who is this Mr. Warren? You mean the man you met the other night, dear?"

"Yes. I wish somebody would tell me," he replied, between his teeth. "It is my opinion that he is an adventurer; Lady Rookwell declared that he was an opera-singer or something of that sort, and I'd stake my—my life she was right, for all the airs he gives himself."

"It is very strange," said Lady Blyte. "I am surprised that she should have gone with him. She did not strike me as that sort of girl—"

"What on earth do you mean by 'that sort of girl?'" he asked, irritably.

"I mean a sort of girl who would commit an indiscretion of that sort, dear," exclaimed the fond mother, meekly. "I was so favorably impressed by her when she was here. Perhaps, you know, Frederic, I liked her very much."

"It wasn't her fault," he said, sullenly. "It was his doing, I'm sure of that. He planned and schemed it all beforehand" and but for his mother's presence, he would have added: "Curse him!"

"Did you see her, dear?"

"Yes, I—I waited; I thought I had better wait," he said, with a flush. "Mrs. Podswell was anxious, ill, in fact; and I—I didn't know what had happened to her," and he turned his face away.

Lady Blyte looked up at him and sighed. She knew that he had set his mind upon the girl in deep earnest, and she smothered a sigh.

"I—I don't think I would suffer myself to be put out, dear," she said, timidly. "After all, it wasn't her fault, as you say, and—and—it doesn't matter."

"Doesn't matter!" he exclaimed. "Doesn't matter that—that she should make a friend of this fellow who comes from heaven knows where!"

"Of course it matters, in a sense, dear," said Lady Blyte, "and it is very annoying, but—but, Frederic, if you are quite sure—" and she stopped.

"Quite sure of what?" he demanded, though he knew what she was going to say.

"That you have made up your mind, dear. You have seen so little of her, only twice, three times—"

"That doesn't signify," he said, hastily. "It's all the same as if I had known her for years. If you mean, am I in love with her—yes, I am," and he frowned and clinched his hands in his pockets. "I have quite made up my mind."

Lady Blyte smothered another sigh. She had hoped for something different in the way of a daughter-in-law than this Signa Grenville, whose past was not altogether brilliant, and who had neither title nor fortune to recommend her. She had hoped to see him marry even higher, if there was anything higher, and in her pride she doubted it, than, himself. A peer's daughter need not have turned up her nose at the prospect of being Lady Blyte; but if he had fallen in love with the dairy-maid and wanted to marry her, she knew that he would have to have his way.

"Well, dear," she said, gently; "I have nothing to say against her—"

"Against her!"

"No, certainly not, Frederic. It is not necessary that your wife should have money or title; it would be better—"

"I don't want either," he said, sullenly.

"No," she assented, with a proud, haughty smile. "So that that doesn't matter. And she is very beautiful and—and—distinguished-looking, I am sure. The Grenvilles are an old family."

He made an impatient gesture.

"It would be all the same if—if they were not," he said, huskily. "I — I have made up my mind."

"Then, dear, you need not be uneasy, I think," she said, with a touch of proud confidence. "And as to this Mr. Warren, I should not let him disturb me in any way. He is a mere nobody, and quite poor, it appears. It is not likely that she would hesitate in her choice between him and you."

He bit his lip and stared out of the window, but his face cleared somewhat. After all, it was not likely. He could not have anything to fear from the rivalry of such a man, and yet——

"Even if she were taken by this man's manners—Lady Rookwell was here this morning and said he was rather good-looking."

"He is very good-looking; he is handsome," he said, with savage candor.

"Well, well, she may have taken a slight fancy."

"Don't," he said, almost livid with jealousy. "It is impossible. I don't believe it."

She looked up, and her lip trembled. How certainly he must love her—this girl whom he had seen just three times.

"I don't say it, I merely suppose it. I won't go even so far as that; don't be impatient with me, dear," and the proud eyes filled with sudden tears.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I—I am out of sorts and upset. Of course there was nothing in it. She cannot help it, and—and——"

"It will all come right," she said, eagerly, smilingly. "She is not the girl to hesitate between you. Don't think any more about him. She must come here again; I will go and see her myself. It will all come right, dear."

"It must," he said, hoarsely, gnawing at his lip. "I—don't know what has come to me. I have never felt like this before. The sight of that fellow drove me mad. I—I hate him."

"Frederic!" she murmured.

"I cannot help it," he said, fiercely. "I hate the sound of his voice. How dare he come here and—and—hang about her the whole day, and I sitting here waiting? And when she came in she scarcely spoke to me. I don't think she wished me good-day, even! Scarcely knew that I was in the room," and he paced the floor with fierce, awkward strides.

"My dear, I do think you are troubling yourself unnecessarily. Remember who and what you are!"

"I will," with an air of determination—"I will. I forget it when I am with her—I feel like a clod; but I will remember it, and I'll make him feel it."

The dinner bell rang as he spoke, and he started and looked at his watch.

"Is it so late?" he said, passing his hand over his hot forehead. "I didn't know the time. I shall not be long."

"Don't hurry, dear," she said, gently. "It is of no consequence. I will tell Parker to keep the dinner back. Don't hurry."

Dinner is late at the rectory as well as at the park, for at half past six the rector has not returned, and Signa and her aunt spend a very uncomfortable half hour of it. Mrs. Podswell would have liked to have said some unpleasant things about Signa's adventure; but there is a quiet dignity in Signa's bearing, a steady look in the beautiful eyes that warn Mrs. Podswell that it would be scarcely safe; so she contents herself with moaning faintly at intervals and bearing herself as if she were a deeply injured individual, and was suffering untold anguish by the shock Signa's absence has inflicted on her.

Signa tries a little conversation, and attempts to enter into particulars of their trip, but Mrs. Podswell will scarcely speak, and at last Signa takes a book and relapses into silence—not reading, but thinking of the rain and the storm and the fire in the cave, but most of all of that sudden pallor in the face and light in Hector Warren's eyes as he drank out of the cup.

Three quarters of an hour behind time the rector comes in, looking rather thoughtful and absorbed, so much absorbed that he doesn't notice the constraint between Signa and her aunt. Immediately after dinner is over Signa goes to her room; she feels that even another quarter of an hour alone with the "martyr" would be too much to be borne, and the rector coming in finds his dear Amelia alone.

With a deep sigh, Mrs. Podswell commences to inform him of Signa's wrong doing.

"It is simply shameful!" she says, sharply. "Of course it was done on purpose. I didn't like the look of him from the beginning."

The rector rubs his chin and coughs.

"And Sir Frederic was waiting here to see her, of course, while she was gallivanting with this person. She must be a fool!" she winds up.

"Very annoying, my dear, very," he says.

"Annoying! It's worse. It's downright wicked. She is throwing a chance away that—that—is a great deal too good for her! Sir Frederic was exceedingly annoyed. It must be put a stop to, Joseph."

"Yes, my dear," he assents, meekly. "But I——"

"You must give him the cold shoulder and let him see he isn't wanted here. After all, it won't matter. Lord Delamere won't know, perhaps, and if he does——"

He looks at her sideways, with a shrewd expression in his small eyes.

"We—ahem!—mustn't do anything rash, my dear," he says. "Ahem! Old Brown is dead."

Mr. Brown is, or was, the Vicar of Ridgeley, a small village, within a mile and a half of Northwell.

"Oh!" says Aunt Podswell, inquiringly. "He was very old. But what has that to do with Mr. Hector Warren and Signa, Joseph?"

He coughs and folds his hands, looking down at the carpet, thoughtfully.

"The—er—living of Ridgeley is in Lord Delamere's gift, my dear. I was thinking that—ahem!—as it is so near, his lordship might feel inclined to add it to this; we could manage it very well, you know." By which he means that the already overworked curate could be made to do most of the duty at Ridgeley, while he, the rector, drew the stipend.

Mrs. Podswell nods eagerly.

"Of course you could. It ought to belong to Northwell. Lord Delamere wouldn't refuse you, I should think."

"It's a very good living," he says, in a meek voice—"five hundred or thereabouts. I—ahem—of course, I should like to let this Mr. Warren see that his visits here are not welcome, but, you see, my dear——"

"He might write to Lord Delamere and complain," says Aunt Amelia, shrewdly.

"Just so," assents the rector. "I—ahem—should be very sorry to offend Lord Delamere, very sorry, indeed, and we must remember that he sent the young man here. After all, perhaps it might have been an accident; we must not be uncharitable, my dear Amelia."

"Certainly not, Joseph," with a long sigh.

"There was a storm, a very heavy storm, you know, and there might have been danger in attempting to come back across the bar. I think, my dear, we will say nothing more about it."

"Just as you please, of course, Joseph," she assents; "you know best. Perhaps"—with a moan of humility—"I was rather hasty this afternoon."

"You didn't—ahem—quarrel with him?" he asks, in alarm.

"I was very much upset," she says, coloring, "but you can soon set it right again. After all, if there was danger we ought to be very grateful to him for taking care of her. No doubt"—spitefully—"she was only too ready to go wherever he wanted her."

"I'll set it right, my dear," he says, coughing. "As you, with your usual good sense, observe, we really ought to be grateful to him. I wonder whether he knows Lord Delamere's address. He—ahem! might say a word in my favor, as he is such an intimate friend of his lordship's. We could manage both livings very well indeed."

There is silence for a moment, then she rings the bell.

"Will you ask Miss Signa if she will be kind enough to pour out the tea for me, Mary?" she says; and when Signa comes into the room she is received with a smile, instead of the moans and frowns she is expecting.

"I am so sorry to trouble you, my dear?" says Mrs. Podswell.

"And so you had quite an adventure, my dear?" says the rector, blandly, but avoiding her eye. "I—ahem!—I'm sure we ought to be much obliged to Mr. Warren for taking care of you."

"I think he saved our lives," says Signa quietly.

"I must walk down to-morrow morning and thank him, really," says the rector.

Signa's eyes open rather widely at this sudden change in the barometer.

"I don't think he cares about being thanked," she says, pouring out the tea; "but he did take care of us, all the same. He was wet through, while Archie and I were quite dry," and a faint flush comes into her face.

"Very kind—very," says the rector, smiling pleasantly. "A—er—quite remarkable character this Mr. Warren. I'm not surprised at Lord Delamere's partiality for him. By the way, my dear, has he happened to mention where his lordship is at the present time?"

"No," says Signa. "I don't think so. I don't think he knows."

The rector looks rather disappointed.

"It is of no consequence," he says, carelessly. "I merely asked——"

"Mr. Warren, ma'am," says Mary, entering the room.

A vivid flush covers Signa's face, and she bends over the tea table, paying great attention to the cream-ewer.

The rector fidgets and looks around embarrassed, and Hector Warren enters, calm and self-possessed as usual.

He has changed his wet clothes for the old weather-beaten tweed suit, and looks as impassive as if his encounter with Sir Frederic had never occurred.

"Let me apologize for my appearance at this late hour," he says, "but I came to explain——"

"Sit down, my dear sir," says the rector, in his blandest manner. "You have come just in time for a cup of tea. Ahem! I was just saying that I must call on you tomorrow on your—ahem—diggings," and he laughs at the slang expression, "to thank you for your exertions on behalf of my young people——"

(To be continued.)

Dame Fortune isn't apt to smile on the man who flirts with her distant cousin, Miss Fortune.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at [illegible] and [illegible] in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at [illegible] and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

TRAPPERS!
Send your RAW FURS
to JOHN HALLAM

and receive highest cash prices. We send money the same day the furs are received. [illegible]

FREE
Hallam's Trapper Guide (96 pages)
Hallam's Sportsmen's Catalogue
Hallam's Raw Fur Quotations
Hallam's Fur Style Book (32 pages)

Sent free on request. Address as follows:
JOHN HALLAM Limited
201 Hallam Building, Toronto.

ON ARTIC WARRIORS

Armies Not Recruited From People of Polar Regions.

Battle history halts at the Arctic Circle. Beyond that human life is so difficult to sustain that its wilful waste is unthinkable. The Lapps and Samoyeds of Arctic Russia, like the eskimos of North America and Greenland, are so often compelled in times of dearth and famine to sacrifice their aged weaklings that this form of death has become a vague religious and social triumph with them.

The armies of the great white Czar, like those of the King-Emperor, says Pearson's Weekly, are not recruited in such distant places; indeed, the men are of such meagre stature and intellect that a military training is next to impossible—certainly not a thing to be persevered with in the days of a great campaign.

The population of Arctic Russia, both in Asia and in Europe, outside the official and mercantile classes, contains few elements which are truly Slavonic but in the minds of insular Britons the reputation of Arctic dwellers pertains to all the people living in Serbia, which is always portrayed as a land of ice and snow and unhealthy marsh.

The Siberian battalions, which have won so great a fame in the Russian campaigns, are drawn mainly from territory as near the equator as Great Britain. It is undeniable that their winters are terribly severe, but in the hot summer crops of the utmost value can be sown, ripened and harvested. It is not impossible to lead a robust life in the Siberia of military Russia.

The real natives of the Arctic can endure hunger and fatigue—can march in their own fashion through hurricane and blizzard—but their value is rather to the explorer of the inhospitable North than to the soldier. As hunters they are wonderfully clever, yet they are curiously formal in administering the coup de grace.

They will apologize to the fierce white bear which they have cornered before advancing to a close attack with bone-tipped arrows and spears, a duel in which the odds seem decisively on the bear destroying the man. They are therefore not cowards in any sense, and few British sportsmen would risk their lives against bear and wolf and walrus protected only by futile weapons and their own personal dexterity.

They are free from national duties and taxation, and their intercourse, even with fur traders of blood alien to their own, is very meagre, indeed. There are dialects spoken by those tribes which have never been interpreted and never reduced to writing, and their ideas of the great world outside the tundras and steppes are very crude.

A generation may pass before the story of the Grand Duke's great campaign filters north, and even then it will be incomprehensible to persons to whom a crowd of even a hundred human beings would be a marvel. Now and then a stray whaler or exploring ship comes within sight of the shore camps and a little barter by means of signs is carried on, but the inland dwellers have not even this communication with the outside world.

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

His Writings.

Every Sunday morning Mr. McGlobe walked up to Central Park from his boarding house in the West Twenties and looked at monuments and things. After the walk it was his habit, when the opera season was on, to look at the Metropolitan bill for the coming week. He inclined himself slightly toward culture.

"I must go to the opera this winter," he confided to Miss Reba Gordon, who sat next to him at the table, "but I am waiting until something of Mazzini's is sung."

"What did he write?" asked Miss Gordon, one of those strange persons who never try to mask their lack of information.

"His best," I think," said Mr. McGlobe, "are 'Dio e Il Popolo' and 'Pensiero ed Azione.' At least those are the ones which appear on his monument in the West Drive. But I never see them advertised. I guess he is not appreciated by modern theatregoers."
—New York Sun.

"You know a little learning is a dangerous thing." "I ain't worried," replied Farmer Corntossel. "The professor says Josh isn't even getting that much."—Washington Star.

METEORS.

Why They and Falling Stars Show Varied Colors.

The earth's atmosphere is now believed to have three fairly distinct strata, the first, extending up to about forty-five miles, having nitrogen as the leading constituent, the second, with its upper limit at about 125 miles, being chiefly hydrogen, and the third, at a greater height, consisting of a very thin gas, which has been named "geocoronium."

Dr. Alfred Wegener has attempted to explain the striking differences of color in meteors or "shooting stars" and says that meteors coming from outer space are not sufficiently heated in the exceedingly light gas to become luminous. Their fall through the hydrogen layer causes them to become incandescent, and before they reach the lowest stratum most of them are completely dissipated. A few of the largest, however, penetrate the nitrogen atmosphere, a very small number reaching the earth's surface.

It is found that the deep falling meteors pass through three stages of color—yellow-white, green and deep red—and it is concluded that the green is due to incandescence of the hydrogen and the red to that of the nitrogen.

Only the first stage is seen in the quickly dissipated meteors, the white, yellow or something reddishness being evidently the glow of the meteor substance.—London Family Herald.

Drooping, Tired, Weary
Try This Remedy!

Don't give in to that depressed, played out, don't care sort of feeling. Better days are ahead. Cheer up, do as the other fellow is doing, tone and strengthen your blood, and you'll feel like new again. You'll dance with new found energy once you use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They will quickly fill your system with energy, bring back the old appetite, restore that long lost complexion, make you feel like a kid again. A wonderful medicine, chucked full of health bringing qualities. You need Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Get a 25c box to-day at any dealers.

Winter Walking.

Winter walking diminishes greatly the time spent in the open air by those who ride in automobiles. It comes near putting bicycles out of use. From steamboats to canoes, there is almost entire cessation of water outings.

All of which means that more walking instead of less ought to be done in cold weather. There is no other way of moving about the open air which keeps a healthy human being's feet so warm and brings such a current of warmth from the body itself. If the pedestrian is properly clad, especially in respect to keeping dry-shod, all of the effects of winter walking should be beneficial.

With a little care and discretion such exercise can be made as agreeable as it is wholesome. Usually there is no [illegible]. Often the temperature is neither too low for comfort nor too high for vigorous exercise without fatigue or lassitude.

Rightly timed and used, within limits, winter walking is a good preventive against the ill effects of indoor life and too much indoor air.—Cleveland Leader.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

LOVERS' SECRETS.

Should They Tell of Former Heart Affairs?

A dear girl friend recently asked me: "Should I tell Jack about my brief and unhappy engagement to that other man?"

Did I think, she asked, that a confession of the unpleasant experience that she suffered when she was little more than a child, not through folly, but through sheer inexperience, would make her Jack love her less?

Would it cause him bitter unhappiness?

The question whether engaged couples should confess to each other is a very big one.

Still, I will give my own honest views just as I gave them to my friend, for they do apply to the average nice girl.

Yes, think it well over, and then, if there is anything to tell—well, tell him all about it. If the man is sensible, he will see that the instinct prompting his sweetheart to tell him of what happened before they met is just the outcome of her whole-hearted love for him.

When a girl is really and truly in love she feels that she must tell everything—that she simply cannot retain a secret from the man she loves. A man really can't quite understand how tremendous is his sweetheart's craving to open her heart to him entirely, to lay bare the best and the worst in her nature.

With a woman, to love is to give. She gives everything, glorying in the giving.

The girl who is whole-heartedly in love cannot help thinking that it would be nothing short of treachery to her love to hide a single incident of any moment concerning herself from the knowledge of the only man who matters. She feels that it would be obtaining the most priceless thing in the wide world by false pretences if she did not tell him every tiny thing about herself.

Now, no reader must be angry with me, or think that I do not appreciate her lover at his true worth, if I just point out that, by confessing about any previous affair, a girl is applying some sort of test of her man's love.

If—please forgive the if—he loves as he should do, then his devotion will be but strengthened by such convincing proof that his girl loves him with all others, to care for her always in the future.

But if it happened that he did not love deeply and sincerely enough to hear all about the other man—who, as was the case with my friend, was met long before the girl ever realized that such a person as "Mr. Right" existed—without losing some of his respect and regard for the girl, then I would say seriously that it would be better for their future happiness if they parted at once.

There is an old-age tradition that permits a man as many flirtations or "affairs" as he wishes before his marriage. His dallyings are recognized preliminaries to finding the right girl—the one whom he can honor above all others. This may not be right, but it just is so.

There is a silly saying: "The more loves a man has had, the more he'll honor the woman he'll wed." Well, just so long as men are content to apply that code of morality to themselves, it is only just that they should let it apply in some measure to the girl they love, if necessary.

Health in Old Age

As age advances the blood gets thin, the nerves exhausted and vitality runs low.

By building up the nerve force of body and mind Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is an unbounded blessing to people of advanced years.

50 cents a box, all dealers.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS

When in Hamilton do not fail to visit Junor's, the House for Gifts. See our display of China, Art Pottery, Cut Glass and Antique Furniture, Pictures, etc. You will be made welcome.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E. SOUTH SIDE
Hamilton, Ont.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Ship Signals at Sea.

There are various ways in which ships signal at sea. The most general method in daylight is by code flags and pennants, these being arranged according to an international system of signals. But sometimes owing to weather conditions or distance, it is not easy to distinguish the colors, patterns or shapes of the flags and then other methods have to be adopted. Chief among these is a system of exhibiting cones, balls or drums, various colors and positions representing different things, according to the recognized international code. One combination means, "Show your ensign;" another, "Is war declared?" Another, "War is declared." Another, "Beware of torpedoes or channel is mined." Another, "Enemy is in sight." Another, "Keep a lookout, enemy's ships reported about disguised as merchantmen," and so on.—Exchange.

AMERICAN COLONEL GIVES FREE ADVICE TO RHEUMATICS

SAYS IT'S SHEER FOLLY FOR ANYONE TO SUFFER THESE DAYS.

Rheumatism can't be cured so long as your system is weak and run down. You must first build up and get strength to fight off the disease.

Ferrozone cures because it builds up, because it renews the blood and dissolves the Uric Acid and the poisons that cause rheumatism.

It is proved right here that Ferrozone does cure.

Col. H. M. Buse, of Edwards, St. Lawrence Co., one of the fine old heroes of the Civil War, was completely restored by Ferrozone. Read his statement:

"I couldn't get around without a cane, and then only with difficulty.

"Rheumatism took complete control of my limbs.

"Suffering was more intense than hardships on the battlefield.

"When my doctor had done his best I got Ferrozone.

"Then came a quick change.

"Ferrozone gave me comfort at once, eased the pain and took the stiffness out of my muscles.

"I am well to-day. Ferrozone cured me completely. I can jump and run like I did forty years ago."

Be sensible about your case. If your present medicine is useless give it up. Don't experiment again. Ferrozone is known on all sides to be a cure that does cure. Why not get a supply to-day. The sooner you begin Ferrozone the quicker you will get well. Price 50c per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Blundering Reporters.

"Drunkenness is folly," earnestly exclaimed Bishop Magee in the House of Lords on a celebrated occasion. How horrified was the prelate to read in the papers next morning that he had given utterance to the very bacchanalian sentiment, "Drunkenness is jolly."

Lord Salisbury was a master phrase maker, but one of his best points was spoiled when a careless reporter turned his reference to "manacles and Manitoba" into the meaningless "manacles and men at the bar."

Lack of knowledge of familiar quotations is a prolific source of misreporting. For instance, a speaker once made use of the well-known lines from Milton's "L'Allegro":

But come, thou goddess, fair and free,
In heaven yclept Euphrosyne.

The brilliant reporter deputed to take him down was in despair. He could not make head nor tail of this mysterious utterance. But, following the sound as far as possible, he seized his pen and produced the following:

But come, thou goddess, fair and free,
In heaven she crept and froze her knee.

The speaker was taken down in more senses than one.—Tit-Bits.

A cupful of vinegar added to the water in which colored clothes are to be rinsed will preserve the color.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—GIRLS TO WORK ON knit underwear—seamers and finished stitchers preferred. We also teach learners, any girl with good knowledge of plain sewing; good wages; ideal factory conditions. Zimmerman Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Aberdeen and Garth streets, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—LADIES TO DO PLAIN and light sewing at home, whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance, charges paid. Send stamp for particulars.—National Manufacturing Company, Montreal.

WANTED—A GOOD GENERAL SERVANT for small family; highest wages, comfortable home. Address Mrs. John Riley, 25 Homewood Avenue, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—HELP FOR WOOLLEN mill spinners and weavers. We also have several openings for inexperienced help. Where energy and ability will bring promotion. We will engage several female apprentices to learn weaving. Splendid opportunity to learn trade which always offers steady employment at high wages. Special inducements to family workers. Write, stating experience, if any, age, etc., to Slingsby Mfg. Company, Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN

2 POTTER CYLINDER PRESSES—A half sheet Double Demy and a half sheet Double Royal size. Make us an offer for them. Well suited for a Country Printing Office. Address Times Printing Company, Hamilton, Ont.

PRINTING.

CARDS PRINTED. YOUR NAME [illegible] Low Price. Good work. [illegible] Ontario.

How to Make Starch.

This is the way to make plain boiled starch. Allow two tablespoonfuls of starch to a gallon of water. Wet the starch with cold water until it is of the consistency of cream. Then pour over it the water, which is bubbling. Stir constantly until smooth and boil for five minutes. Add an inch of candle—to a gallon—or a tablespoonful of lard to give a very smooth starch. This is the foundation for all starching, excepting that done with uncooked starch. If a very stiff starch is desired a tablespoonful of gum arabic water to a quart of starch gives good results. To prepare gum arabic water pour two cups of boiling water over a quarter of a pound of gum arabic. When the gum is dissolved, strain the solution into a bottle, cork and keep on hand for use in the laundry.

Marion Bridge, C. B., May 20, '02.

I have handled MINARD'S LINIMENT during the past year. It is always the first Liniment asked for here, and unquestionably the best seller of all the different kinds of Liniment I handle.

NEIL FERGUSON.

Use for Glycerine.

Tea stains on linen should be rubbed with glycerine before the article is laundered to prevent the yellow discoloration.

Glycerine should be added to hot lemonade in place of sugar for a cold. It makes the remedy more efficacious.

When black kid gloves become shabby rub them with equal parts of glycerine and black ink. This is a good dressing for black leather of any sort. Wet shoes rubbed with this are not so hard when dried as if allowed to dry first. Fill shoes with paper to absorb some of the dampness and help them keep their shape.

Use a few drops of glycerine small lump of borax to a water when wiping off paint cloth if you wish to have th of new article.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns.

"NO MAN'S LAND."

What It Means to Get Lost in Between the Lines.

A London paper says: Seven men, including a N.C.O., went out to explore an enemy sap. The Boche awaited them. The Boche threw bombs. Five of the party got back. It was assumed that the other two had been killed or wounded. Two days later a lone figure was seen walking about between our own and the enemy lines. Both sides fired at him. The man rushed like a scared rabbit into a big shell hole. Five days later a worn, dishevelled, khaki-clad, dirty, unshaven man came over the parapet. Rough but kind words of cheer greeted him—as well as a stretcher. The poor fellow was light-headed. For a week, without either food or drink, he had been in "No Man's Land." The only food he had had was grass and daisies. Think of it. A week in "No Man's Land" without either food or drink, with a big bombardment going on intermittently from both sides and both friend and foe—your identity unknown to either—firing at you!

A man claimed he was cured of the drink habit by using Peruvian bark tea.

Putting Punch in Preparedness is not a question of guns and shells alone—it is a question of men—and you have to build men out of food. Be prepared for the critical moments in life by eating Shredded Wheat, a food that supplies the greatest amount of muscle-building material with the least tax on the digestive organs. For breakfast with milk or cream or fruits.

Made in Canada.

Telephone Work At the Front

Telephone operators in the trenches are seldom in the limelight. More often than not they are in unshell-proof dugouts. Their services are of vital importance in up-to-date warfare, and well do they perform them.

A party of telephone operators, or signallers, as they are technically known, is attached to a company occupying the front-line trench. The dug-out where they and their instruments are installed is as near the company commander's headquarters as can be conveniently arranged. It must be remembered that a dugout is seldom a haven of rest, and never of safety. During a bombardment a dugout is quite the most unhealthy place that can be selected.

The work of these men is not by any means always of a stationary nature. They have to repair their wires when broken—often under heavy fire. When an advance is made by the troops they have to follow closely the unit to which they are attached, so as quickly to establish communications with the officer directing operations.

The sun has just sunk behind the ragged outline of a stack of shell-shattered brickwork which was once a thriving factory. Through the twilight the German trenches show up clearly at first, then gradually fade into the darkness, which slowly but surely shrouds them in grim gloom.

As though to brighten the solemnity of their surroundings the German sends up star-shells with a frequency which suggests a bad attack of the jumps.

In the British trench our Tommies have just learned that they are to go "over the parapet" in the morning. The news has acted like a tonic, for at last the time has arrived for them to have a real good fling at the Germans.

The British guns, which, according to custom, had sunk into silence with the setting of the sun, suddenly resume their bombardment of the enemy's lines, which they have carried on incessantly during the day.

In almost [illegible] answer to the booming challenge the German guns belch back their reply.

Then "things begin to hum" in the British trench.

The men take the best shelter they can. The only dugout occupied in the line is by the telephone operators. Inside this candle-lit, cave-like abode the three operators are indulging in a friendly game of "nap." It helps to pass the time, which flies but slowly to those who wait expectantly for the "direct hit" of a shell which luckily may never arrive.

At each deal one of them takes up the receiver and "calls up" the operator at the other end, to make sure the wire is unbroken.

Again and again clods of clay, displaced by shells exploding in the vicinity, fall with dull thuds on the sandbagged roof. The hands of the players holding the cards shake palsiedly in sympathy with the shuddering floor on which they sit tailorwise, as a nine-inch, high explosive bursts almost fatally near.

"Close go that!" observes one.

"Means the next will be farther away," asserts another optimistically.

The game of chance inside and outside the dugout goes on uninterruptedly till a time arrives when no answer can be obtained on the telephone.

"Wire's broken," ejaculates the operator holding the receiver.

Without a word the other two, tak-their rifles and tools, pass out white light of the star-shells, clamber over the rear parapet
dge along, following the wire.
ngerous shells are falling with regularity to right and To heed such happenings useless. But luck is with that they pass unhurt out zone into comparative ength they reach a shell cause of their unwished-for ade. The work of splicing a piece of wire to the broken ends is n accomplished.

Then they retrace their steps to the
and the danger zone.
t was the only breakage
during the night.
n is just peeping over s though curious to happened in the ab-
British trench the caping his wrist-watch im-
time to time.
faces are wearing a rning expression. They d will one to the other.
hearts there is neither good will to the German grip of their rifles is stronger than is absolutely necessary. The British guns are still blazing away at the front trenches opposite.

Suddenly the captain raises his eyes from his watch, and with a quick scramble is on the parapet.

"Over, boys!" he shouts gaily.

There is no cheer; only the scuffling sounds of men clambering, intermingled with heavy breathing. As far as the eye can see to right and left there is a wrinkled wave of khaki-clad men surging forward.

The three telephone operators, in accordance with orders, are waiting till their comrades have taken the hostile trench. They interpret these orders in the widest sense, for the attacking force can scarcely be said to have reached their objective before the three of them are doubling across.

One carries a spool of wire which he unreels as he sprints along, the others carry tools and the instrument.

Between their starting point and objective the German guns are putting a dense barrage through which they must pass. Shrapnel spatter on all sides like the first ominous drops of rain which precede a summer storm. Bullets, fired from the rear trenches of the enemy at the newly won position "phit" past in countless numbers. Suddenly, the man with the reel of wire spins half round, staggers and falls.

"Only through the thigh. I'll follow on," he grinds out, as he hands his burden to a comrade, who jerkily cut a quick word of sympathy, dashes on once more.

The two gain the captured trench where their captain awaits them.

Out of breath with his recent exertions, he pants out:

"Rig the 'phone up here," pointing to a deep shell hole. "Only place. Cover from rifle fire anyway."

The two men quickly adjust their instrument, and the captain, after handing a written message to be sent rearward, hurries away.

The German guns are now playing on the newly won position, the heavy crash of high explosive intermingling with the snap-like report of the shrapnel shells.

The captain perceives a mass of the enemy collecting for a counter-attack. He hurries back to the telephone to notify the artillery of the target. A glance into the shell hole shows that the shrapnel has taken toll—one of the operators is dead. The other is lying with the receiver to his ear, but he returns no answer to his superior's call. In a flash the captain realizes that that recumbent position is too natural to be natural. He gently takes the receiver from the stiffened hands and gets his message through.

Then, glancing up, he sees a man on all fours, looking down into the shell hole. It is the wounded operator who has crawled painfully after his comrades.

"I'll carry on, sir," says the newcomer, quietly.—London Mail.

LIFE WORK OF LLOYD GEORGE

David Lloyd George is pre-eminently the British Government's man of "push and go," energetic, determined and fearless.

As Chancellor of the exchequer he was the author of budget reforms which opened a new era in the fiscal history of the United Kingdom.

When, in 1914, internal politics were eclipsed by England's entrance into the war, Chancellor Lloyd George was shouldered with the chief responsibility of financing the Empire's part in the conflict, though he had been one of the chief obstructionists to great military expenditures on the part of Great Britain, in peace times. Face to face with the war he tackled the problem of raising money with his whole strength, and set in motion the first of the great loans which were floated to meet Britain's war cost—estimated at ten billion dollars a year.

In the midst of these financial problems Lloyd George was called to assume a new role, as Minister of Munitions, when in May, 1915, a coalition Cabinet was formed and when it was charged that Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of state for War, had failed to supply the army with sufficient guns and ammunition.

Lloyd George hurried the passage through parliament of a special munitions bill, which gave the government broad powers of control over all factories that were making or capable of making war munitions. The bill made strikes and lockouts illegal, gave power to fine "slackers," limited the profits of employers and provided for a volunteer army of workers.

Exasperated by the slowness with which workers rallied to the factories, Lloyd George gave the labor leaders just seven days in which to make good their promise of getting sufficient men to man the plants for maximum production. During the week the newspapers all over the United Kingdom were flooded with full page advertisements, and the labor leaders turned town halls throughout the country into recruiting offices, with the result that women as well as men workers enlisted in even greater numbers than were necessary, and the munitions problem was soon solved.

Lloyd George found intoxication to be a serious handicap in maintaining efficiency at the munitions plants, and through his handling of the situation new legislative restrictions on liquor sale were put into effect.

In contrast to Lloyd George's leadership in the prosecution of the European war, is the fact that his first political prominence came through his attacks on the pro-war party during the South African campaign in 1899-1900. He carried his opposition to that war so far that he refused to vote for the supplies necessary to maintain the army. His disparagement of the British cause was so unpopular, however, that he put his life in jeopardy by expounding his views. At Birmingham, for one instance, his life was sought by a rioting mob, which the police were unable to handle, and Lloyd George was able to escape from their hands only by disguising himself in a policeman's uniform. In later years he was the object of physical violence on the part of the suffragettes, who hurled missiles at him on several occasions, and who, in February, 1913, destroyed his country house with dynamite.

Lloyd George was born in Manchester, Eng., Jan. 17, 1863, but his parents were Welsh, and his bringing up was in Wales, so he is a champion of Welsh nationalism. The son of a schoolmaster, who died while Lloyd George was an infant, the future Premier knew the extremes of poverty. He received only a limited education, but obtained an apprenticeship with a firm of lawyers, and finally succeeded in establishing his own little practice in Wales.

He gained his local reputation by defending the right of Non-Conformists—he himself is a Baptist—to burial in the Anglican parish churchyard without the rites of the Church of England. A law establishing this right had been passed, but an irreconcilable vicar of a little church in Wales had refused to allow the burial of a Non-Conformist quarryman beside the body of a daughter. He forced the burial of the body in a plot set aside for suicides. Lloyd George led a raid on the graveyard, where the body was moved from the suicide plot and placed beside the grave of the quarryman's daughter. The vicar instituted trespass proceedings, in which he was sustained by court after court to which Lloyd George carried an appeal, until the court of last resort upheld Lloyd George and the Non-Conformists.

This fight made Lloyd George famous throughout Wales, and at the next by-election in the district of Carnarvon Burgs, he was elected to Parliament in his twenty-seventh year. It is this district which has returned him regularly to Parliament at every election since.

In the House of Commons the young Welshman soon became one of the most prominent guerilla fighters, conspicuous for his audacity and pungency of utterance, and his capacity for obstruction while the Conservatives were in office. With the overthrow of the Conservatives, and the beginning of the Liberal regime, under Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman, in 1905, Lloyd George entered the Cabinet as president of the Board of Trade, where he justified his appointment by the successful handling of a threatened railway strike which would have paralyzed the kingdom.

When Mr. Asquith became Premier in 1908, he appointed Lloyd George to the Chancellorship of the Exchequer, which was applauded generally in financial circles. However, when the budget of 1909-10, when the Government faced a deficit of some $75,000,000 Lloyd George convulsed the country by introducing drastic reforms in taxation which put new burdens on the moneyed classes. It was this finance bill with its heavy super-taxes and with its capture of part of the unearned increment of land that precipitated the war on the veto power of the house of lords.

Among other battles which made Lloyd George stand out as a supreme advocate of the people was his struggle for the establishment of state insurance and old-age pensions modeled after the German systems. These called forth much hostile criticism and predictions that they would prove a failure. The organization of the insurance scheme had barely been perfected when the conditions brought about by the European war caused a partial breakdown of the system. However, it stood as the chief item in the programme of the Liberal Asquith ministry, and was distinctly a Lloyd George cause.

The force of Lloyd George's personality is particularly remarkable because he was a little man, not only short but slim, with a small mustache and white face, though his eyes are as eloquent as his voice. His manner is cheerful, frank and democratic, and he is one of the most approachable men who ever held public office in England. Although little in favor among the aristocracy, it is said he is one of King George's favorites, liked by the sovereign more than any other minister.

Bouffant drapes at the hip still appear here and there and unquestionably are attractive. A charming afternoon frock of navy serge silk with bright relief afforded by the white satin collar and cuffs, is illustrated.

Blockaders, Their Work

This business of blockading is a fine whetstone for the wits. It keeps those of all parties engaged in it—"runners" and "preventive men"—alike—rubbed up to the keenness of a well-stropped hollow-ground.

Anyone with six months' experience on either side should thereafter be able to hold his own against even a Cairo Greek, for he will know the whole grammar of guilefulness from simple verb to the most abstruse declensions.

Many ships' companies engaged in the "search" have during the past twenty-seven months been acquiring a knowledge of human nature which will make them exceedingly distrustful of that strangely mixed composition for as long as they remain where it is. Among those qualifying for a full arts degree in this university of rich experience are the crew of our old friend Pushalong, the discoverer, as you may remember, of rubber onions, copper ploughshares, and sundry other super-ingenious inventions of the blockade runners.

COMBING THE SEAS.

Although its operations are so extensive, the British people have but an indifferent knowledge of the work done by the Examining Service—the "Search," as it is called by those engaged in it, or the "Blockade," to give the thing its popular title. They do not know that this vigilant force combs the sea from chilly Iceland down the summer latitudes, and that its unceasing energies have created a sort of Liverpool in a secluded part which rarely held a merchant vessel before the war began. Still less do they know of the strange things discovered there in professedly innocent "cargoes" by the men who drive into the cargo of merchandise which these ships carry. For the Admiralty, [illegible] its business, and the Admiralty, being the most taciturn of all our great state Departments, says as little as possible about what happens within its own domain, be those happenings good, bad, or otherwise.

But many of these occurrences are recorded in the logs of such craft as Pushalong, whence might be extracted an exceedingly entertaining narrative of one phase of the war at sea.

Pushalong was sliding her grey nose through the chill, gale-driven seas in latitude blank, longitude ditto, when the lookout reported a vessel in sight.

"Ahoy, old ship, stop a minute; I'd like to have a talk with you," signalled the Pushalong to the stranger, and in precisely that form of words, though put politely, for the British sailor is never rude until rudeness becomes necessary.

MANIFEST ALL RIGHT.

"Certainly, glad to meet you," (though she was not), replied the stranger in effect, knowing quite well that if she answered otherwise Pushalong would "turn nasty" and do unpleasant things. As the two vessels neared one another and stopped for their "talk," Pushalong dropped her sea-boat, which pulled across to the stranger and landed the customary "armed party" of inquisitive men upon her decks. The officer from Pushalong in charge of these examined the stranger's papers. These appeared all right, general cargo not contraband, and so on. But the officer knew the deceptiveness of outward appearance. A burglar may look just like a Baptist deacon and a Baptist deacon may look like a burglar. Nature delights in such tricks of physiognomy. Also, cargo may seem non-contraband on the "manifest" and be quite otherwise when you come to look at it. The officer decided to look at it. For a time the examination revealed no cause for suspicion. Then the party came to a pile of bags.

"What's in these?"

"Beans."

"Open one."

One was opened and it contained beans—or thought such very beany beans that they could not be mistaken for anything else. But that officer had conducted "searches" before, and in the course of them come across such odd things that he knew the fallacy of "seeing is believing." Anyway, the last thing he was prepared to believe was the unsupported testimony of his own eyes.

"Try another," he ordered.

Another bag was opened.

"Now empty some others and shake the bag up."

A stalwart bluejacket did as instructed. Then, thrusting his hand into the bag, he drew it out filled with "beans." Sorting these over in the palm he picked up one and without a word handed it to the officer, who put the "bean" between his teeth.

"I'm—rubber," he remarked — and rubber it was. More than half those "beans" were made of it—beautifully made too. Even a horse might have been deceived by them until he got them into his mouth. These "beans" did not get to Germany, and thus was misapplied ingenuity once again foiled of its aim by the acuteness of our "Search."

OIL IN THE SAND.

Pushalong's log would tell you also of a floating oil-field—though you might think such a freak of nature never existed. And your thought would be correct in so far that the "field" was the creation not of nature but of art. Its discovery came about in this way.

One day Pushalong overhauled a vessel in ballast. She had a lovely lot of sand in her "bottom," quite a little [illegible] that you stroll about upon [illegible]. One of the Pushalongs [illegible] over it, and he thought it smelled oily. Forthwith the sand was bored into, and although the "search" did not open a "gusher," they "struck oil" very richly. There were hundreds of gallons of it beneath that sand. Any prospector who could find an equal quantity in an equal area of any field ashore might justifiably regard himself as a possible rival of John D. Rockefeller.—[illegible] in London Daily Mail.

His Own Defence.

A story is being told in the London clubs about the one and only G. B. S. Shaw drew up, with his usual ingenuity, three possible lines of defence for Sir Roger Casement. One of these was based on the plea of insanity. When Casement saw the manuscript he rejected it at once as quite out of the question. "No, no," he said, "Shaw must have thought he was writing his own defence."

Various odd arrangements of the "Tam" crown are a notable feature in the millinery world to-day. Particularly charming is the hat illustrated, in navy blue velvet combined with chiffon velvet in a turquoise shade.

Silk Culture in India.

The progress of silk culture in India and Ceylon is the subject of a series of most interesting annual reports issued by Mr. F. Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, which body has displayed great activity in connection with the development of this important industry. The latest of these reports, that for 1915-16, is just to hand from India. In 1916 Mr. Booth Tucker consulted the Imperial Institute with reference to the silk produced by the Salvation Army silk-weaving school in the Bangalore district. A specimen of the silk was accordingly scientifically examined at the Institute. The results were highly favorable, and were confirmed from the commercial point of view by a leading silk manufacturing firm in this country, to which a sample was submitted. Subsequently the Imperial Institute arranged for spinning and weaving trials of the silk to be made and as the result of these trials certain defects in the silk were pointed out. Since then the number of Salvation Army silk centres in India and Ceylon has been greatly increased, and in April last there were 28. Nearly all these centres undertake silk-worm rearing and silk-reeling.

SECRETS OF FRENCH "75."

What is a 75? By this is conversationally described a French field gun the calibre, or interior diameter of the bore, of which is seventy-five millimetres. Incidently it is the finest man-killing machine the world has yet known.

In 1897 France surprised the armies of the world by the introduction of an artillery weapon which till then had only existed in the dreams of experts.

Till this period the slowness of artillery fire was due to the fact that after the gun was laid and fired the shock of discharge so upset the aim that the gun had to be relaid for a second shot. The rapidity of fire thereupon became a matter of how quickly and accurately a gun could be laid by the personal skill of the layer. The French, seeking artillery progress and confronted with the inexorable shortness of their conscripts' period of training, sought to improve in mechanism what they could not improve in personal skill.

Briefly, the new French field gun of 1897 ceased to be attached to its axle-tree, but was attached instead to a buffer in a cradle, which not only absorbed the shock of recoil, but ran back the gun so exactly into its former position that no second laying was necessary.

The primary trouble of laying having been got over, rapidity of fire appeared to have been attained. Experiments then proved that, though a rapid rate of fire was possible, this rate was only as fast as that at which the gunners could adjust the fuses of the shells.

How now improve the rate of fuse setting? This task was and is a matter of meticulous accuracy, needing careful training to be done correctly. Moreover, it could not be hurried, since a shell badly fused by even so little was not only innocuous to the enemy, but was a danger to one's own side. Once more the French put aside any idea of bringing up the personnel and invented a machine to set the fuse. The details of this fuse setter are still a secret. Let it suffice that it is simple, accurate and very rapid in its work. Thanks to it and to the steadiness of the gun after each discharge, the French field gun is easily capable of twenty-five aimed rounds a minute.

One more word about the recoil absorber and the secret thereof. The recoil is taken up by a cylinder beneath the gun, which contains a combination of glycerin, quantities of air and springs. It is this combination and the exact proportions thereof which make the secret of the gun. It is not even ascertainable from a captured gun, since if you take a cold chisel to it and try to examine the works by opening the buffer the compressed air escapes, and the secret which lies in its density evaporates with it.

Having solved the question of the rate of fire you would have thought that the French would have been content. Not they! Range and accuracy were successively taken in hand. Muzzle velocity, which, after all, means range, was increased, not by increasing the charge and with it the thickness of the gun that withstood it, but by lengthening the gun to a hitherto unheard of extent and giving it a slow burning propellant.

The temptation to put in a lighter shell and so get it farther on the same bang was successfully resisted. The designers never lost sight of the fact that the primary object of the gun was to deliver death to its enemies at the greatest speed, range and effectiveness possible. So they concentrated their energies on a man killing shrapnel which in the end weighed sixteen pounds and left the gun on its long journey at the unprecedented pace of 1,739 foot-seconds.

And there you have the present shrapnel.

Tactics here began to get mixed up with mechanics and ballistics. It was pointed out that troops would not always remain in the open to be wiffed out of existence by shrapnel. Rather would they get under cover at what speed they might. So a shell to deal with entrenchments building and fortifications was indicated. Here again careful thought showed the need of accurate gunnery and a still higher velocity in the shell which, being more local in its effects, could not be allowed the same latitude in its action as its shrapnel confrere.

So a high explosive shell weighing only 11.6 pounds was introduced. Thanks to the chemists this time, its contents were of such a startling nature that its weight became a secondary consideration. It raced away on its mission at a velocity at that time unequaled even by the latest small bore rifle, and when it exploded its melinite charge blew great holes in the scenery.—Pousse Cailloux in Blackwood's Magazine.

Fur Trimmings.

More fur trimmings than ever is the outlook for fall. The favorite trimming furs are silver dyed rabbit, mole-skin, Hudson seal and raccoon. Instead of the high funnel collar on coats, the deep sailor collar which can be held close to the neck with a strap will take its place.

Fur hats are distinctive features of this season's styles in millinery. This one is developed in velvet and moleskin fur, the bent brim being covered with the fur and ostrich feathers in matching tone.

Sharks Not The Only Deadly Sea Monster

Sharks—some of the larger species—are dangerous enough; but the ocean contains other creatures far more ferocious, more formidable, and more dreaded. Let us hope that you and I will never meet one of them.

For instance, there is the huge "vampire ray," otherwise known as the "sea devil." Dr. Charles F. Holder, a naturalist of high reputation, in describing this extraordinary fish, has said, "It resembles an enormous bat, and no more diabolical creature could be imagined."

Picture to yourself a common skate magnified in size until it weighs a ton and a half with a breadth of 20 feet. Provide it with a long whip-like tail, two powerful fleshy tentacles extended forward from its head (for grasping), and a pair of enormous "wings" (modified pectoral fins) by the flapping of which it swims much in the same way as a bird flies. You will then have a notion of the aspect of this truly frightful monster.

The "sea vampire," as it is sometimes called, is a denizen of warm seas. Fishermen in the Gulf of California (where the species is exceptionally plentiful) are greatly in dread of it, for on slight provocation it will fiercely attack boats. There are stories of its assailing pearl divers in those waters, swooping from above, so that the luckless victim beholds a living cloud settling over him, with eager jaws to gobble, while he is helpless to escape the horrible embrace of the grasping tentacles.

SWIMMING RESEMBLES FLIGHT.

The mode of progress of this great fish through the water has been likened to the flight of a large bird of prey. It is a carnivorous creature, and particularly fierce when accompanied by its young. So far as known, it is the only fish in the world that produces a single offspring at a birth—the young one six feet across when born alive, and well able to take care of itself from the start.

The two fleshy tentacles above described are used as arms, it seems to be an instinct of the fish to grab with the many object with which it may happen to come into contact; and, having done so it holds on with a mighty and determined clasp. Once in a while it seizes in this accidental way the anchor line of a boat, and promptly runs away with the latter. It has been known in such fashion to carry off small vessels. But nobody can say with certainty whether it is true, as alleged, that the "vampire ray" has a fancy for attacking fishing boats by running alongside with one wing outstretched above the water and swamping them.

The "killer" whale—a numerous species in North Atlantic waters, as well as in the Pacific—is a far more dangerous animal than any shark, if interfered with by man. It is a true whale, and, therefore, a mammal, and not a fish. Sharks are stupid creatures, but the "killer" is extremely intelligent and cunning. It will not eat a man (so far as known), but, if pursued, it will turn upon a boat and smash it to pieces in less than no time. Much safer it is to hunt the tiger of the jungle than to assail one of these marine wild beasts.

The "killer" is a small whale—not more than 16 or 20 feet long. But there is not any inhabitant of the ocean that it cannot whip; no shark approaches it in ferocity. It is afraid of nothing. So strong is it, and so swift a swimmer, that it is rarely captured. It will attack a huge "right" whale and literally tear its helpless prey to pieces, dashing about and biting out great chunks of its flesh.

No carnivorous beast on land is more bloodthirsty. The "killers" hunt in packs, like wolves, and their favorite quarry is large whales of other species. Commonly their presence may be known by their back fins six feet high, which look like enormous daggers as they project above the surface of the sea. The only people who make a business of capturing them are the Makah Indians, of Washington State, who are very fond of their flesh and fat. It is glorious sport, but exceedingly dangerous.

OGRE OF THE OCEAN.

The real ogre of the ocean, however, is the giant squid. It is neither a mammal nor a fish, but a mollusk—an enormous magnified cuttlefish. A small specimen, ten feet long, with tentacles 32 feet in length, was stranded a few years ago on the shores of Trinity Bay, Newfoundland. Plaster casts were taken of it, and a reproduction of the creature, full sized, is now exhibited at the National Museum in Washington.

But this particular squid, as above stated, was undersized, doubtless a young one. When full-grown, the animal attains a length of 50 feet (for the body part), with tentacles 100 feet long. That is to say, the two major tentacles are of that length; it has eight smaller ones. It is undeniably the most frightful monster to be found anywhere on land or sea.

The species seems to be exceptionally numerous in the Indian Ocean. The professional fisherman in those waters may be prepared at almost any time for the possibility of seeing a gigantic creature with huge goggling eyes rise out of the depths and fling across his boat a mighty tentacle armed with scores of sucking discs so powerful that nothing short of horse power can drag them away from an object to which they are once attached. He has always ready a keen knife, with which to slash off the tentacle before he is dragged overboard. But he must work quickly, for the monster possesses another tentacle to help him in the attack, and it is hardly an even fight between one or two men and a beast with an arm reach of 100 feet.

The giant squid is an inhabitant of all seas, but most common in tropical waters. When of full size it weighs 10,000 pounds. It has by far the largest eyes of any animal in the world—fully a foot in diameter. A parrot-like beak serves for tearing its prey to pieces, when once drawn within its grasp by the two long arms and securely clasped by the eight smaller ones. If frightened and trying to escape, it clouds the water by discharging an inky fluid, thus concealing its movements. The same sort of fluid, obtained from its tiny relative, the little squid, is the sepia of commerce.

On November 30, 1861, the French despatch steamer Alecton, between Madeira and Teneriffe, came upon a full-grown giant squid floating on the [surface]. Many bullets fired at it passed through its soft flesh without seeming to disturb it at all. Harpoons were thrust into it (the vessel being stopped), but they would not hold. Finally a rope with a running noose was passed over its tail, and an attempt was made to haul it aboard, but the immense weight caused the rope to cut through, and the mass fell back into the sea and disappeared.

A BIT OF ROMANCE.

The "poulp" described with such horrid vividness in Victor Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea," does not accurately correspond to any existing species of animal. It is a sort of imaginary combination of the giant squid and the octopus.

The latter, though far less formidable than the giant squid, will undoubtedly attack man; and specimens sometimes attain a measurement of 16 feet from armtip to arm tip. Once fairly embraced by such a creature, there is small chance for the strongest man, unless he is lucky enough to be armed with a knife.

The octopus has eight tentacles of equal length radiating from its pulpy central mass and armed with suckers. Its habit is to lurk in some dark cranny among rocks, waiting for an unwary victim to come within its reach. With three or four of its arms it clings fast to a rock, while with the remaining tentacles, waving, gliding and feeling about in the water, it keeps on the alert for prey.

A man coming within reach of a large specimen is likely to be seized instantly. As by the pull of a trigger, the pistons of the hundreds of suckers on each tentacle are jerked simultaneously inward, and the unfortunate is so completely pinioned that hardly a struggle is possible. Drawn into the close hug of the monster, he is soon torn to pieces by its beak and absorbed.

THE SHARK'S ENEMY.

The only enemy that the larger sharks have reason to fear is the swordfish. That knight of the sea, indeed, seems to be a determined foe of the "man-eaters," and tremendous combats between sharks and swordfishes are sometimes witnessed. Under ordinary circumstances the swordfish will not attack man, but if assailed by him it will retaliate with utmost ferocity. To drive its mighty weapon clear through a boat is to that formidable creature no remarkable feat.

Now and then it happens that a swordfish (as it would seem) is overtaken by a sort of temporary insanity and starts to run amuck. It will, under such conditions, behave in the most reckless and extraordinary way, assailing craft of considerable size without the slightest imaginable provocation. In some instances it has been known to pierce the side of a vessel, through the copper sheathing and several inches of planks.

From a study of the results of such attacks it has been reckoned that a swordfish, at full speed, strikes with the force of 15 sledge-hammers swung by a strong man with both hands. Its velocity is equal to that of a swivel shot, and the shock as dangerous as that of heavy artillery projectile.

Among the sea animals dangerous to man are some fishes of comparatively small size. There is, for instance, the "wolf fish." Summer visitors along the coast of Maine, especially in the neighborhood of Eastport, are warned to be cautious about wading at low tide in rocky pools. They may be attacked by wolf fishes, which are much more ferocious than most sharks.

The wolf fish attains a length of three feet. It will promptly assail any human being whom it suspects of attempting to meddle with it, and with its large and powerful teeth will bite considerable chunks out of a man's legs. Ordinarily, however, it depends for food upon lobsters, crabs and whelks. The stomach of a specimen has been found to contain four quarts of sea urchins, mostly whole and with the spines attached—a most unattractive diet, one might imagine.

This interesting species is often taken on cod and haddock lines by fishermen. It is very good to eat, but has an offensive odor that renders it unmarketable.

The Good Lunch.

Germany is feeling the presence of the allied blockade, of course, but the stories about German famine are exaggerations.

The speaker was Alfred Geissler, German Consul to Chicago. He went on:

"Yes, these stories are exaggerations. Like the story, you know, of the young Berliner who returned to the office after his nooning with a toothpick in his mouth and an air of smiling reflection.

"Such a good lunch as I've had," he said. "The restaurants were all sold out, as usual, but I treated myself to a delicious sandwich out of two bread tickets and a meat ticket. Ah, such a good lunch!"

RAISED

Never neglect w but a slight cold. Yo you are strong enough to h colds are not so easily fought northern climate, and if they attended to at once will sooner develop into some serious lung t such as bronchitis, pneumonia, and haps that dreadful disease, consumpti

Miss Kasye McDonald, Sydney Mines, N.S., writes: "Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and it settled on my lungs. I would cough and raise phlegm and blood. I had the cough for a month, and had medicine from the doctor, but it did not seem to do me any good. I really thought I had consumption.

My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am very glad I used 'Dr. Wood's,' and would recommend it to every one."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's," when you ask for it as there are a number of imitations on the market, which some dealers may try to palm off on you as the genuine.

See that it is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees is the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

TORONTO.—The Christmas business which has been experienced by local retail firms has altogether surpassed expectations. An executive head of one of the large departmental stores declared that this year's holiday trade had surpassed that of any previous year since the founding of the establishment, and he gave it as his opinion that the purchasing power of the average person has increased more rapidly than the rise in the prices of commodities. One large wholesale dry goods house had had increased earnings every week this year over the corresponding period of 1915, even without the large war orders placed here in the autumn of 1915. Payments are being well met.

MONTREAL.—Reports from retail business houses agree in the essentials about the heavy buying, which in practically every case is stated to exceed that of last year. Travelers have booked a good volume of spring orders, and shoe manufacturers in some cases have received even more orders than they desire with raw materials advancing steadily, and with limited outputs resulting from scarcity of some materials and the shortage of labor. Some dry goods wholesalers have declared that the year which is just closing has been attended with a much larger turnover, and larger profits than was the case in 1915. Staple lines of dry goods, boots and shoes, house furnishings, and jewellery are meeting a good demand. City payments are slowing improvement.

OTTAWA—Incomplete reports of Christmas trade gleaned from retailers show that business is much above last year and in some cases it is asserted that the trade is a record one for a number of years past. Grocery lines are fairly active, especially dried fruits, and canned goods. Confidence is general for the future, as local industries are assu of a heavy business for some ahead.

HAMILTON.—Seldom has unanimous appreciation of trade been given as tha tailers express in c holiday business w an end. Sea the last f
creasing the volume of last m
Opinions were given that this turnover, is in excess of any fo five years or more, in every li try trade was very good. Buy er seems to be as great as ever paratively very high prices.
household furniture, and music ments were among the leaders sale houses are showing la in their annual turnover.

LONDON.—General sati evident among the retail city, as regards the holid record trade was claim quarters, and invariably sales has been greatly in of 1915. The rural tr
Western Ontario was also quite brisk. Wholesalers until the close of the cut sorting orders, and e year's business were ge favorable. Both country
ments are good.

WINNIPEG.—The general situation for the holiday sea shown up much better than th year ago. Brisk winter weather, cou with the fact that the public is fairly well supplied with money, made this city's retail Christmas trade, almost without exception, a profitable one.

CALGARY.—The general situation shows no material change, and trade preceding the Christmas festival was commented upon very favorably by the local retail trade. There was an active distribution of goods, and payments both country and city, were said to be situation is d half pits a into b add en of baking yolks sep to the yolk gradually flour. Whe from lumps,

ped egg whit teaspoon. Bake an hour and its removal from t
cream or hard sauce

Had Weak
Dizzy Sp WAS CURED BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel writes: "I was weak and run my heart would palpitate, and I take weak and dizzy spells. A frie vised me to take your Heart and Pills, so I started at once, and foun
I felt much stronger, and my hea ever so much better in a short time.
cannot praise your medicine too hi for it has done me a world of goo
My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood, and finds quick relief by using your valuabl pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills
been on the market for the past five years, and are universally k the very best re arising from

STOCK TAKING

The first two or three weeks of the New Year we devote to Stock Taking and during this process we find lots of odds and ends which we will clear at a fraction of the original cost.

Sale of Ladies' Misses' & Children's Winter Coats

This week we start a special Sale of Ladies' Misses' and Children's Winter Coats. Everyone a fashionable up-to-date garment, some with only one size, but every size in some garment. Prices: $5.00, $7.50, $11.50, $13.50 and $16.50.

Clearance of Furs

In Furs and Fur-Lined and Fur Collared Coats and especially small Furs, Collars, Throws and Fur Ruffs, we find after Christmas selling that we have a lot of odd pieces in stock. Some swell Neck Pieces without muffs to match and also Muffs without the Neck Piece to match. Every one must go if prices will move them. Prices from $2.50 Up.

Remnants of Dress Goods, Etc.

In Dress Goods and Coatings, Remnants, scores of splendid ends for skirts, dresses and children's wear will be sold at about half-price.

STEPHAN BROS.

Yours For Big Business

"Quality Groceries"

They are "Good" to-day
They are "Good" tomorrow
They are "Always Good"
at the Leading Grocery, Walkerton.

Goode & McKay

A Happy New Year
To All

C. PATRICK

THE BIG SALE
IS BOOMING!

IT CONTINUES UNTIL SATURDAY, JAN. 27th

Everybody is pleased with the Values.
Come and get your share.

20 per cent off reg. prices on Men's winter underwear.
20 per cent off reg. prices on Men's winter overcoats.
10 per cent off reg. prices on Men's and Boys' suits.
Special discounts on Boys' overcoats.
$1.50 overalls $1.50 blue stripe best quality, sale price $1.25.
Light and dark pattern Prints at 12½c, 15c and 18c per yd
Flannelettes-special values at 10c, 11c, 12½c, 15c, 16c, 18c, 20c, 25c.
20c and 25c Ribbons all colours, 15c yd, 2 for 25c.
Wool Blankets $4.50 for $3.95; $6.00 for $4.95; $5.00 for $4.25; $8.50 for $7.25.
Comforters, $2.00 for $1.60; $2.25 for $1.85; $2.50 for $2.00; $3.00 for $2.50; $4.00 for $3.50; $4.50 for $3.95.
Special saving prices of Coat Sweaters for men, women and children.
20 per cent off reg. prices on all men's Felt Hats.
20 per cent off Yarns. This is a great saving.
20 per cent off reg. prices on all Corsets.
Cashmere Hose 60c for 49c; 50c for 39c; 35c for 25c.
Remnants of all kinds on the table at big reductions.
A big pile of travellers' samples of Gloves, Mitts, Toques, Underwear, etc., 25% to 50% less than usual prices.
The earlier you come the better your choice. Come in the morning if convenient, but come anyway. You will be well repaid.

McBURNEY & CO.

Have You Started the New Year Right?

BY RESOLVING TO SHOP AT
OUR STORE

You will find here much to interest you, much that you need, all at exceptionally low prices.

NEVER OVERLOOK A BARGAIN

Everything we sell comes under that heading.

THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRICE AND SERVICE.

Put us to the Test.

Butterick Quarterly

Complete forecast of the latest Paris and New York fashions as interpreted by exclusive Butterick Designers.
25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR 15c IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerton

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

GREENOCK

Miss Teresa Steffler who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Kraemer the latter part of last week, returned to her home at Ambleside on Sunday.

There was no school last week. Miss Cook was on the sick list.

Mr. Jake Keller is busy these last couple of weeks blacksmithing for Joe Massel at Chepstow.

[illegible] Kraemer made a business [illegible] rton on Saturday.

[illegible] Vales N. D., [illegible] with his [illegible] Jake here before going to the [illegible] States to spend the winter.

[illegible] Olive Schurter of Formosa [illegible] the past week with Mr. J. [illegible] here.

[illegible] Ernewein of Walkerton [illegible] the burg for a couple of [illegible] renewing old acquaint[illegible]

[illegible] Giebler of Walkerton [illegible] of days of last week [illegible] Miss Kieffer here.

[illegible] Hawthorne is at present [illegible] daughter at Toronto.

[illegible] Keller is in Walkerton [illegible] week with Mrs. Doctor Sinclair.

+ + +

SCHOOL REPORT S. S. No. 5.

The numbers indicate the percentage obtained. 75% and above is honours, 60% and is pass.

Sr. IV.—N. Alexander 83, E. Alexander 70, E. Donnelly 60, T. W. [illegible] land 53, J. [illegible] H. [illegible] G. [illegible] Pinker[illegible] ertus 79, [illegible] Taylor [illegible] ick 40. [illegible] 10, G. McKee [illegible] Lambertus 62, [illegible] pbell 92, P. [illegible] 75, R. Tay[illegible] ick, S. Donnel[illegible] aylor. [illegible] lly, H. Lamber[illegible] M. Donnelly, H. [illegible] bly.

G. G. McKee,
Teacher.

KERTON

[illegible] and Masters Frank and [illegible] Donnelly returned to school in [illegible] on Monday.

[illegible] Jas. Gale returned to Toronto [illegible] Tuesday after spending his holi[illegible] at the Manse.

Mrs. Elliott and Miss Grace returned home from Molesworth on Saturday.

Mr. Russel Birrell and his two friends, Messrs Leslie and Kenneth Kilburn who accompanied him home for the holidays, returned to Toronto this week.

Messrs T. and Wesley Birrell were [illegible] Walkerton on Saturday.

[illegible] ter have moved [illegible] onto. [illegible] ast large a crowd as usual a very pleasant evening was spent. An excellent supper was provided and the impromptu program was very much appreciated. Bro. J. B. Campbell of Chesley occupied the chair.

Mr. R. Donnelly made a business trip to Toronto this week.

That the boxes sent to the boys Overseas were appreciated was evidenced by the fact that the Secretary of the Red Cross received ten letters expressing their gratitude. These were read at the meeting on Thursday. Another event of interest was the presentation of $106.35 by the members of S. S. No. 7 Greenock. This amount was realized at a box social given on Dec. 8th, at which Miss McCurdy the teacher, with the assistance of others, presented a very enjoyable program.

OTTER CREEK

"Deer Hunting" is the order of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Weber enjoyed a visit from quite a few friends from Formosa.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickison and family of Clifford, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jasper of Mildmay, were visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jasper's.

Who was the first man who took a ride in a submarine? "Jonah".

Mr. Wilfred Damm of Walkerton and Mr. George Miller of Mildmay, were visiting friends here.

Mr. Wilfrid Grein made a business trip to Wingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ziegler of Preston, were visiting relatives here.

Messrs. Wilfrid and Crawford Miller of Clifford were visiting friends here.

Mr. Charles Diegole of Caledonia was a visitor at Mr. and Mrs. David Grein's.

Mr. John D. Pfohl was a visitor in Hanover.

EAST BRUCE

Skating is the order for the night now.

Mr. R. McGregor is around with his wood cutting outfit. The housewives all smile when the woodpiles grow.

Miss Mabel Lewis of Clifford spent New Years at Mrs. A. Pace's.

Alex. Vatsee is busy moving to the 4th con.

Mr. John Ripke spent New Years in Mildmay.

Miss Tillie Brown is visiting friends in Detroit.

Misses Edith and Ann Rose returned to Guelph after spending the holiday under the parental roof.

The County Fathers would do well to adopt the good roads system at the Jan. session.

Mr. Edgar Browncombe of Stratford spent the week end at his home here.

GLAMIS

Mr. George Passmore of Lafleche, Sask., is visiting at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alvery Smith.

Miss Lillian Taylor of Cargill is hired at Mr. Arthur Greer's.

Miss Jean Davidson of Beamsville is visiting at W. J. McKeeman's.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Wilson returned on Saturday from a couple of weeks' visit in Paisley.

The Ladies Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church met at the home of Mrs. Thos. J. Gamble on Wednesday.

Miss Verna Hush is visiting in Kincardine.

Miss Mary McKinnon is visiting Capt. and Mrs. Knox of Owen Sound.

A number in the village are on the sick list with heavy colds and La Grippe.

Mrs. Wm. Bartle, Loval, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. McKenzie.

Mr. Harry Deehan entertained a number of his S. S. classmates and friends to a social evening on Thursday.

Mr. Robert Jackson has gone to work at Niagara Falls for the winter.

We are sorry to report this week the serious illness of Jack McNally with pneumonia. His many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Fiddis of Vesta was a Sunday visitor in the vicinity.

Mr. Wilson Carr of Paisley spent Saturday and Sunday here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McLennan visited Kincardine friends on Friday.

Mrs. Jackson is visiting her friend Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist, 2nd con. Bruce.

CARG..L

Mr. Golden of Tobermory spent the week-end at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. C. Almack here.

Mr. Edgar Massel Sundayed in Mildmay.

Messrs Phil and Walter Sparling and James Alexander spent Saturday in Walkerton.

Mr. James T. Clancy, G.T.R. Agent Walkerton, spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. W. L. Keeling who has been spending the holidays at his home here, returned to Toronto on Monday.

Dr. Parker of Wingham, Sundayed at the home of Mr. C. W. Keeling here.

Mr. Jas. Alexander sr. who has been visiting relatives in Allenford, returned to his home here on Tuesday.

Mr. Oswald Clancy has secured a job in a factory in Oshawa.

Miss Taylor of Clifford spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. E. D. Baillie.

Mrs. W. J. Loughleen left for Woodstock on Wednesday morning to attend the funeral of a relative there.

+ + +

SCHOOL REPORT
Room I.

Sr. IV.—L. Crawford, S. Cargill, M. Scharbach, A. Hamilton, T. Powers, J. Clancy, W. Sparling, J. Cameron.

Jr. IV.—A. Thompson, D. Martin, D. Shrumm, A. Anderson, L. Grainger.

Sr. III.—F. Hettrick, R. Mahoney, C. Powers, L. Brawn, E. Raeburn.

Jr. III.—C. Pegelo, H. Thompson, A. Hood, J. Martin, M. Hood, G. Meyer, F. Clancy, J. Powers.

Sr. II.—N. Schuett, M. Kyle, W. Bester, E. Raeburn, M. Scharbach, B. Streeter, M. Mawhinney, L. Hopf.

Room II.

Jr. II.—W. Wunn, J. Young, J. Power, M. Grainger, H. Hardaker.

Sr. I.—J. Scharbach, A. Meyer, W. Pegelo, M. Clancy, P. Elder, F. Mahoney, T. Baillie, W. Mawhinney, I. Crawford, D. Streeter, F. Benson.

Jr. I.—G. Kyle, M. Schuett, W. Raeburn, B. Hood, W. Zettler.

Sr. Pr.—W. Schuett, R. Mawhinney, S. Martin, N. Shrumm, W. Young, M. Hardaker.

Jr. Pr.—A. Hetzler, J. Meyer, M. Thompson, E. Bester, A. Zettler, M. Power, L. Zettler.

Primary—L. Hettrick, D. Cargill, W. Hetzler, M. White, M. Mahoney, N. Schmidt.

G. M. Keeling,
Teacher.

WESTFORD

Mr. James B. Murray and his sister Margaret of Toronto, spent the Christmas holidays with their parents here.

Miss Maude McGlynn has returned to Detroit after spending a couple of months with friends.

Messrs P. and J. Mahoney of Mildmay, visited at Peter Linehan's on New Years Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reith spent the week-end with friends in Hepworth.

Dr. C. Donovan of Chicago, spent a few days with his sister, Mrs. P. Murray last week.

Quite a number of the people from here attended the dance on New Year's night at Mr. Wm. Walls, 8 con. and all reported a good time.

Mr. Wilbert Haldenby has returned to Stratford after spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Haldenby.

SOLWAY

Wedding bells are ringing at Baird's again.

The surprise party held at Mr. John Kaster's last Tuesday evening was a great success and much enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. M. Thompson was removed to the Bruce County Hospital on Thursday last.

Mrs. L. Dietrich, Master Louis and Miss Mabel returned last week after holidaying with friends in Kitchener.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stroeder visited at the home of Mr. Jos. Grubb near Formosa on Sunday.

The new Council met for the first time at the Township Hall here on Monday.

Messrs. Sohn and Saviour Fischer from Rosewater, Sask., and Andrew of Elbow, Sask., are visiting their sister, Mrs. John Stroeder here.

Mr. Pete and Miss Eleanor McGarrity returned last week after visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Haumore spent Sunday in the burg.

EDEN GROVE

These March winds blow through a fellow's whiskers alright.

Pte. Dan Desmond was home on last leave over Sunday. The 118th expects to soon go overseas. Dan has been a resident of Kitchener long enough to be able to tell the Kaiser in his own language where to get off at.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeeman called on Paisley friends Wednesday evening.

The Grand Trunk presented Mr. Herb Pearson and "Sunny Jim" each with an annual pass over the entire system in recognition of their long and faithful service. Sunny will have to get married now as the passes are good for two.

The residents of the village were greatly shocked and grieved Friday morning upon learning of the almost sudden death of Emma Loreen, youngest daughter, aged 18 months, of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Blue, who had peacefully passed away Thursday evening. The child had been as well as usual up to the afternoon when it became ill. Dr. Bricker was called and all that human aid could do was of no avail. At 9.30 dear little Emma fell asleep to awake in a better world. The deceased was an exceptionally bright child for her age and was a general favorite with all who knew her. The sorrowing parents and sisters have the sincere sympathy of their friends in this their sad hour of bereavement. The funeral took place Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. W. Almack officiated at the house and at the burial.

At the annual School Board meeting Mr. Kerry retired after faithfully filling his term as trustee. Mr. Robt. Alexander was elected trustee for the ensuing year.

Miss Mewhinney, graduate nurse of Detroit, was in town a few days last week.

Epworth League, Thursday evening Miss Clara Stancell, president of the league, will handle the topic—forget the name, but come out and you will hear.

Mrs. Todd and family are visiting at her home in Paris for a few weeks.

No, Eliza Jane, the G. T. R. hasn't cut any trains off this line yet.

Mr. Alex. Massell from near Walkerton called on friends in town on Saturday.

It was pretty cool to sit out on the back porch Sunday night and wait for the eclipse of the moon, but guess some people saw it alright.

The following were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond at the Simcoe House over Sunday:—Pte. Desmond, London; Mrs. Scanlan and two daughters and Mrs. D. Connors, Walkerton; and Miss Florence Connely, Toronto.

Senator Bailley expects to leave for Ottawa, Monday next.

After all those good resolutions we expected to see the church filled on Sunday—but it wasn't.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Gallinger of Hanover visited at the home of Mrs. Alfred Stewart over New Years.

Mr. David Thompson, Paisley, called on Grove friends Tuesday.

FORMOSA

Mr. John Capatain, an old former resident, was buried here on Friday last. Mr. Capatan was book-keeper for the late F. X. Messner probably forty years ago. Later he married Mr. Messner's widow who still survives. Mr. Capatain had been making his home at Stratford for a number of years.

CHEPSTOW

Mr. Geo. Fritz left on Friday for Kitchener, where he will visit relatives prior to returning to his homestead in Alberta.

Ed. McNab and Jas. Coumans, students at St. Michael's College, Toronto, returned on Monday to continue their studies.

Mrs. P. Leonard of Windsor is on a few weeks' visit to her mother, Mrs. Golden.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. A. Cassell returned on Monday from a week's visit throughout Michigan.

We understand L. Schenkle has purchased the 50 acre Heeney farm and has already begun to transfer his household effects. We expect to see Louis an interested party in a different kind of deal shortly.

Miss Fitzpatrick of Toronto, has commenced her duties at the Red School as successor to Miss Jordan, who has accepted a school near Tilbury.

The quill-pusher from a near-by village, who is the weekly contributor for our contemporary is gaining some notoriety through the "patriotic" flavour and literary flourish which pervade a certain item of last week's budget. We venture to say that this particular fault-finding individual would himself appear much better in khaki in a route march, than in the errand which forms an important item of his daily program.

MILDMAY

Mr. Jacob Fink has so far recovered in health as to be able to be up and around.

A load of young people from Gilutz's School Section drove to Mildmay on Saturday night and enjoyed a pleasant skate.

Mr. Emil Goetz of Liberty, Sask. is in town again. Mr. Goetz has started a hardware business at Liberty and is now going to move his family out West.

Mrs. Conrod Liesemer has so far recovered from the injury caused by a fall some time ago as to be able to be about again.

Rev. Mr. Albright of Victoria College Toronto, who is well known here to the Methodist Congregation, will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Church both morning and evening.

A sleigh load of Formosa sports drove to town on Saturday night to practice skating in the local rink.

We are glad to report that Miss Kate Schwalm has resumed her duties as teacher in the Junior room of the Public School. Miss Schwalm was laid up some five weeks before Xmas on account of illness but she has recovered her health again.

Mr. Joseph Kunkel has purchased Mr. Cook's building, which formerly was the British hotel. Mr. Kunkel intends tearing down the building and erecting a fine residence there next summer.

Rev. William Allan conducted the services in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday.

A patriotic concert is to be put on on January 19th. A high-class entertainer in the person of Madam Coutts-Bain, the Scottish Prima-Donna who has been highly spoken of at many places near here has been engaged for the evening. The program will be high-class in every particular. Proceeds to go to patriotic purposes.

Mr. Edward Wittich left for Toronto on Monday morning.

A good number of people around town are sick, this mild and changeable weather.

BORN — To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wiseman jr, 10th con. Carrick, a son.

The Better Farming special train will be at Mildmay on Wednesday, January 17th.

Our former townsman, R. J. Easton has been elected Mayor of Harriston. Mr. Easton was engaged in the drug business here years ago.

Mr. Sidney Harriston, of Glevannah Sask., is visiting at his relatives' here.

BRANT

School Report, S. S. No. 2

Sr. IV—Honours—(I. Inglis, K. James).

Sr. III—Honours—(E. Rapp, F. James), H. Inglis.

Pass—E. Ellis, E. Etsell.

Jr. III—Honours—C. James.

Pass—(E. Etherton, G. Ellis).

Jr. II—Honours—J. James.

Pass—I. Etsell, H. Ernest.

Sr. I—Pass—(I. Ernest, W. Echenwiller), G. Ashley.

Jr. I—Pass—(M. Ellis, G. Inglis), A. Stroeder.

Inter. Pr.—Pass—V. Etsell.

The pupils whose names do not appear have not received a pass mark.

+ + +

S. S. No. 7.

Sr. IV—Dan McKeeman, Winnie O'Reilly, Lillie Scott.

Jr. IV—Jack McKeeman.

Sr. III—Florence Smith, Verna Blue, Arthur Young, Maurice Young, Tom Young.

Jr. III—Lela Kerry, Marjorie Brown, Edith Blue, Harry Scott, Frank Desmond, Sophie Kauffman, Tracey Desmond, Nelson Kerry.

Sr. II—Manuel Napper, Melvin Pearson, Jennie Alexander, Marjorie Young, Hazel Edmunds, Gertie Greenaway.

Jr. II—Percy Gregg, Joe O'Reilly, Charlie Greenaway.

Sr. I—Annie Kauffman.

Jr. I—Dorothy O'Reilly, Grayce Kerry.

Pr. B—Verna Young, Polly Kauffman, George Gregg.

Pr. A—Henry Young, Wallace Napper.

No. on roll 31, av. attendance 29.

Blanche I. Powell,
Teacher.

+ + +

SCHOOL REPORT S. S. No 8.

Jr. IV.—Pass—Gladstone McIntyre.

Sr. III.—Pass—Lizzie Bluhm, Johnnie Wilkin, Edna McNaughton.

Jr. III. Honours—Orvin Wilkin.

Pass—Milton Monk, Loretta Kieswater, Mae Lambertus.

Jr. II.—Honours—Mary Monk, Edna Kieswater.

Sr. I.—Honours—Edward Schlorff.

Pass—Arthur McNaughton, Andrew Schlorff.

Sr. Pr.—Honours—Clarence Monk, Minerva McNaughton.

Pass—Mary Monk.

Jr. Pr. (a)—Honours — Dorothy Schlorff, Wilbur Wilkin, Tom Lambertus, Willie Becker.

E. Hilbert,
Teacher.

POETS' CORNER

A CANADIAN IN FRANC

Pte. F. P. Cuthbert [illegible] Machine Gun Co., [illegible] France, has written a [illegible] contribution which touc[illegible] with a lot of the boys [illegible]

When we were camp[illegible]
On Shorncliffe's m[illegible]
We cursed the ble[illegible]
That had so many [illegible]

We thought we had a [illegible]
To growl and kick and gro[illegible]
But we hadn't been to France
We hadn't met the louse.

We didn't have our gr[illegible]
By gosh darned [illegible]
Why, to rid this b[illegible]
Would take a mi[illegible]

So here's to good [illegible]
With all her mu[illegible]
I'd rather live in [illegible]
Than visit Franc[illegible]

But just a tiny whi[illegible]
Of a land far o'er t[illegible]
Where everything is [illegible]
And just as it should be.

Where the sun is always shining,
O'er the fields of golden grain,
Gee! I'd give a million dollars
To be back right there again.

So when the war is over,
Excuse our seeming haste.
We'll skip right back to Canada
So fast you'll think we're chased.

To Our Friends and Patrons We Extend
The Season's Greetings
R. L. Gibson

Read the Ads.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 3 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JANUARY 18th 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Louse Killers

You may require some of the numerous preparations for your cattle or poultry. Either in liquid or powder Louse Killers, you will find the popular ones here, and also fresh, uncolored, best quality Insect Powder and Hellebore.

After using the lice killer, it will pay you to give your hens Dr. Hess' Poultry Panacea or Royal Purple Specific as an Egg Producer and Tonic.

A 25c package English Condition Powders will do wonders to horses and cattle.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks, Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

CURE THAT COUGH!

ith one of these:-

exall Cherry Bark

Rexall White Pine & Tar

Rexall Baby Cough Syrup

A.P. SIEVERIGHT

The Rexall Store

BOOKS
STATIONERY
WALL PAPER
OFFICE SUPPLIES

Crum & Co.

Harvard Brown

e new color for women's fine shoes

FOR FALL

de in Russian Calf, d 8 in. top, perfora on vamp.

Price $6.00

Ramsey
The Shoeman

We Are Entering 1917

With a determination to give the of satisfaction in STYLISH ORED CLOTHES.

very particular to fit gar you, that look well on you.

e a trial, you'll be satisfied the quality and our little prices. carry a complete line of MEN'S ISHINGS.

T. ROURKE

lity Tailor and Men's Wear. e 166, Walkerton, Ont.

The Central Grocery

CANNED GOODS

SALMON from 8c to 30c. See our special line at 2 for 25c.

CORN & PEAS 2 for 25c.

AYLMER TOMATOES Large tin 15c.

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan. Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

Wonderful Invention - -The New Edison

It is not a talking machine. It is a wonderful invention which baffles detection from the original.

Superiority of the New Edison

NO NEEDLES TO CHANGE
NO PARTIALLY REPRODUCED MUSIC
INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORDS

No unevenness in playing, no harsh, discordant qualities, no shortened records.

Won't you please call or write for further information about this new invention. I shall esteem the privilege of giving you a free demonstration at your home.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER - WALKERTON

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

Read the Ads.

FIRE AT WALKER HOUSE

Building Gutted By Flames for the Second Time Within a Year—Loss Fully Covered by Insurance.

Fire broke out mysteriously at the Walker House early Monday morning and the building was soon a mass of flames. The firemen responded quickly to the alarm, which sounded shortly before 3 a. m. but before they could reach the scene the flames were bursting through the roof. The main portion of the building was thoroughly gutted and most of the contents destroyed. The fire appears to have started in the room formerly used as a bar, but the origin is a mystery. The rear addition, the stable, and a room at the west end used as a butcher shop escaped the flames, but the remainder of the building, with the exception of the outer walls, was a total loss. Mr. John Ward, the proprietor, was badly suffocated by smoke. He was carried out by Fire Chief George and taken to the County Hospital. The loss which will be heavy, was entirely covered by insurance. This is the second time within a year that the hotel has been burnt. On March 7th last, the building took fire in the middle of the night and was badly gutted. Old electric wiring was blamed for causing the fire at that time.

First Cold Snap

The thermometer dropped to zero for the first time this winter last Thursday morning when the government thermometer showed 5 below 9 degrees below, which is the coldest this winter so far.

+ + +

Warden Dennis Izzard?

County Council meets here next Tuesday, Jan. 23rd. Reeve Dennis Izzard is the most likely choice for Warden. Mr. Izzard has served long on the County Council and is probably the best posted man on County affairs.

+ + +

A Sad Death

A bright young life was sadly cut off in the death on Tuesday, Jan. 16th, of Violet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Giesler. She was in her nineteenth year and had just graduated from the Walkerton Business College a year ago when she was taken ill and her condition became gradually worse. She was a girl of sweet and lovable qualities, and in their sad loss her parents and the family have the deep sympathy of all. Besides her father and mother she leaves two sisters, Mrs. Albert Tschirhardt and Miss Norma, and one brother, Arthur. Funeral service will be held at the R. C. Church Thursday morning at nine o'clock.

MARRIED

WEIHBAAR—SCHMIDT—At Buffalo, on January 8th, Miss Clara Schmidt of Carrick, to Mr. Lawrence Weishaar.

+ + +

DIED

GIESLER—In Walkerton, on Tuesday, January 16th, 1917, Violet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Giesler, aged 19 years, 3 months, 16 days.

REDFORD—In Elmwood on Dec. 26th, Mrs. Thomas Redford, in her 87th year.

JACKLIN—In Brant on Jan. 10th, Beatrice Margaret Isabel, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jacklin, aged 26 days.

+ + +

BORN

GEORGE—In Walkerton, on Friday, Jan. 12th, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. George, a daughter.

Winter Footwear

The Latest Styles and the Best Qualities. No misrepresentation here. Repair department in connection.

C. PETTEPLACE

A Safe, Sure and Quick Route
to a good business position is via the

ELLIOTT Business College,
TORONTO, ONT.

Shorthand, Typewriting, Bookkeeping, Banking, Higher Accounting, Correspondence, Penmanship, Spelling, Office Routine, Business Forms, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Law, Civil Service &c., taught quickly and correctly. Experienced teachers; careful attention; moderate rates; best results. Demand for our graduates is far in excess of our supply. Enter now. Catalogue free.

Yonge and Charles Sts. W. J. ELLIOTT, Prin.

Two Nurses Graduate

Diplomas are to be granted to Miss Clark of Campbellford and Miss Whitemore of Owen Sound, who have completed their course at the Bruce County Hospital.

+ + +

Much Prized Souvenir

Mrs. E. J. Skelton received from a fellow-officer of the late Lieut. Les. Young this week, the memo book which Les. had in his pocket when he fell on the field of battle. The little book was grazed by the fatal bullet and the variation of a fraction of an inch might have meant a great difference.

+ + +

The Country Weekly.

"The influence that is shaping public opinion in rural Canada to-day is not the big newspapers, but the small country journals, which publish the letters from the boys overseas. Thousands of these impressionate letters are being read daily in farms and villages, and a great force is being developed which is becoming very coherent. Having this in mind I have little fear for the future of the Empire."—Peter McArthur.

+ + +

History To Order

If Paul Revere, the American patriot, should discover the liberties which the Bruce Times took with his name last week, he would at least attempt to turn over in his grave. "Paul Revere's ride from the Johnstown Flood" is the way the Times put it. Considering the Times man's well-known liking for scriptural quotation, we are surprised he did not put that other Paul, of New Testament fame into the saddle and have him do the wild ride.

+ + +

For Gallantry at Regina Trenches

Mr. M. G. Dippel had a letter this week from his son, Louis Dippel M. C., post-marked London, Eng. He says that he is having ten days' leave in England for the first time in one year and maybe he isn't enjoying it all. He states that he and his companion, Houston, were each given the Military Cross for an exploit in connection with the taking of the Regina Trenches. He tells what the exploit was, but modestly insists that it be kept private.

+ + +

Rev. D. A. Walker, Ill.

Walkerton people will learn with deep regret that Rev. D. A. Walker, B. A., who left here last June to take the pastorate of the Preston Methodist church, is very ill. A letter received here this week from a friend in Preston states that Mr. Walker is very ill with heart trouble and was to be removed a few days ago to the Galt hospital. The letter stated that he might be laid up for a year or more. Mr. Walker's many friends here will hope to have more favorable news of his condition shortly.

+ + +

Buried in Dugout

Two Walkerton boys at least spent a memorable Christmas at the Front. Ed. Eidt writes home that he and Chester Cunningham spent Christmas Day in the first trenches and experienced a lively bombardment by the Germans. Towards evening a German shell burst and blocked him and Chester Cunningham in their dugout, where, after three hours of futile effort spent in trying to dig themselves out, they had to stay until some of their comrades, discovering their plight, got busy and brought them out to star-light.

+ + +

160th Batt'n Quarantined

Letters from the boys of the 160th Battalion indicate that there is a good deal of sickness prevalent just now. Most of the Battalion are quarantined with measles, mumps, and diptheria. Major Moffat has the mumps. One of the boys speaks of starting a six weeks' course of instruction and does not expect to get to France for two months yet. One of the battalions which went to England on the same transport with the 160th has already been on the firing line. The talk of the camp is to the effect that hostilities will end next May and that the married men will be sent home first and the single men by next Christmas.

+ + +

Shipping High Class Horses.

Four carloads of horses, probably the finest that ever left Walkerton, were shipped yesterday to the West via C. P. R. by Irwin Bros., the local horse dealers. They were all heavy-draughts, many of them Percherons and included fifteen registered stallions. They included a number of well-matched teams. A heavy team of pure white attracted a good deal of attention and a team of heavy imported mares, bought from J. G. McKenzie, was greatly admired. This team cost the importer $1,000 and their sire was sold for $17,500. Irwin Bros. have bought over two hundred horses since they returned from the West a couple of months ago, and they will be making regular shipments from now on. A firm of live and progressive boys like the Irwin Bros. is certainly a valuable asset to Walkerton and the surrounding country.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Have you renewed your subscription yet?

G. T. R. agent Clancy is taking his annual holidays.

Have you renewed your Telescope subscription yet?

Mr. W. M. Shaw was in Toronto on business on Monday.

Marks Bros. played here to a full house on Monday night.

Mr. H. E. Truax M. P. left for Ottawa yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Joseph Lawson of Guelph was a visitor in town yesterday.

Mrs. John R. Shaw of Woodstock is visiting at Mr. E. H. Sheffield's.

Mr. N. C. McKay is conducting Agricultural classes at Underwood.

Hogs are $12.50, the highest-price ever paid for hogs at Walkerton.

Silk Scarfs and woollen mufflers at reduced prices at Woodman & Co's.

Mr. Dan Maltman of Staffa is visiting his father, Mr. Peter Maltman.

Knox Presbyterians held their annual congregational meeting last night.

Ringwood woollen gloves worth 75 to 85 cts. for 50 cts. at Woodman & Co's.

Messrs J. E. and H. R. Tolton visited relatives near Guelph the past week.

Wedding bells are ringing on the 2nd con. of Brant, not far from Walkerton.

Mr. W. Law and little daughter of Preston, are visiting their aunt, Mrs. Jno. Wolfe.

Mrs. J. W. Eedy of St. Marys spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Lorne A. Eedy.

Miss McInnes of Owen Sound has enrolled as a probationer at the Bruce County Hospital.

Mrs. Henry Kleist of Carrick is recovering from a severe attack of pleuro-pneumonia.

Mr. James Crawford of Brant moved into the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Clarke this week.

Mr. Joe Bauman who has been laid up with a bad attack of grippe, is reported to be considerably improved.

Get one of those Auto caps for this cold weather worth $1.00 to $1.25 at 60 cts. to 85 cts. at Woodman & Co's.

Mr. Alex Hans arrived home last week from a month's visit to Montreal Toronto, Kitchener and other points.

Miss Jennie Hyslop of the Bell Telephone staff left this morning for Toronto where she will spend a few days.

The daughters of the Empire held nominations for the coming year on Tuesday night. Election of officers will be held next month.

Mrs. Dr. C. L. Grant was at Durham yesterday attending the wedding of her sister, Miss Margaret McLean to Mr. Charles Moore of Durham.

James E. Cass, Elderslie's favourite son, has entered the race for the Wardenship. Mr. Cass is a man of high principle and recognized ability. He will certainly be a factor in the contest.

President James A. Lamb and Sec. W. A. Rowand of the South Bruce Board of Agriculture attended a meeting of the Society at Teeswater on Monday. Over 100 people were present at the night meeting there.

Mr. Simon Fennell, a prosperous farmer of Crandall, Man. is here on a visit to his brothers, William and Albert Fennell. Mr. Fennell has been in the West over thirty years and is one of the pioneers of his district in Manitoba.

Coun. Alex McCarter had word from his son Sergt. G. M. McCarter of the 160th Batt. that he is in the hospital in England with a bad cold but expects to be out soon. This is the second time Milt has been in the hospital since landing in England.

The Telescope had much to do with the carrying of the Hydro by-law at Walkerton. Mr. Eedy, the new editor and proprietor of The Telescope, has brought to Walkerton not only newspaper ability and experience, but also interest and knowledge concerning public questions locally and nationally.—Port Elgin Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young of Cargill had a letter the past week from Pte. Schillemore, formerly of Hanover, who was their son's orderly at the Front, in which he speaks of Lieut. Young's heroism and his desire to look after his men. The day following Lieut. Young's death he himself was hit in the left elbow and has been in the hospital ever since.

The many friends of Bugler Courtney S. Knepflar, now overseas with the 160th Bruce Batt. will be pleased to know that although not old enough for the Firing line, and having to remain in England until such time, he has been given the privilege of taking a Sergeant's course. Courtney is a credit to his home town and is one of the cleanest types of young men that enlisted with the 160th Batt.

County Council meets January 23rd.

Capt. Ross Clarke of Toronto called on old friends in town this week.

Judge Greigg was at Chesley on Tuesday holding Division Court.

Miss Doris Graef of Clifford is spending this week with Mrs. F. G. Eidt.

Mrs. Rowland and Miss Norma were in Toronto the first of the week.

The annual meeting of the Northern Fair will be held Saturday, January 20th.

Herb Wells, a former Walkerton boy, living at Tisdale, Sask., has donned the khaki.

Leonard Monahan of Brant had his hand badly cut in a cutting-box at Wehengle's one day last week.

Tony Zuber was released from the County Gaol Tuesday night after serving his five-days' term. He paid the $50 fine.

The South Bruce Telephone Co. installed twenty-five new phones in 1916, necessitating the construction of about a mile of new line.

The pupils of the Separate School recently took up a collection of pennies and presented the Sisters with one of the new crank pencil sharpeners.

Citizens complain that ashes piled at the side of the street are frightening horses. The town by-laws forbid placing ashes at the side of the roadway.

Publishers from fourteen towns and villages of Bruce will foregather at Walkerton next Thursday for the Annual meeting of the Bruce Press Association.

You can't beat our suiting for quality and material, call and get measured for those trousers you were thinking of. Fit and workmanship the best at Woodman & Co's.

Mrs. Richard Pidman (nee Miss Thusie Wallace) and Miss Pidman of Toronto, who have spent the past two weeks with the former's mother, returned their homes on Saturday.

Mr. Thos. Dixon had word from his son, Elliott Dixon, who has been in the hospital in England with pleurisy, that he expects to be discharged from the hospital soon.

Miss Annie Robertson is reported to be making good progress at the County Hospital. Her sister, who has been with her, returned to Southampton on Monday.

The ladies of the R. C. Church gave an enjoyable euchre last Wednesday night. The prize-winners were:—Ladies, Miss Rose Ellinghausen; Gents, J. Monahon; Booby prizes, Mrs. Schumacher and A. Schmidt.

John Rowland, of Walkerton, is after The Telescope because it fought for Hydro Electric and the interests of the people. The Telescope does not need to worry, John's bark is worse than his bite.—Kincardine Reporter.

Mrs. Hugh Threndyle gave a patriotic tea at Mrs. Alex. McCarter's last Friday afternoon at which a large number of ladies were present. A neat sum was realized, to be spent in buying dainties for the soldiers at the Front.

+ + +

General Servant Wanted.

For family of two in Toronto, able to do plain cooking. Wages $16.—Apply Telescope.

+ + +

An Incipient Blaze

A match dropped into a waste basket filled with paper started a blaze in Mr. L. H. McNamara's Flat on Sunday afternoon. Curtains and rug caught fire but fortunately Mr. McNamara saw the blaze start and succeeded in putting it out with a few pails of water.

+ + +

Heaviest Mail Yet

The boys of the 160th state that the last mail received in England was the heaviest yet. Those handsome lads of the Bugle Band were perfectly deluged with mail. Outside of parcels and papers, there were 119 letters for the 29 Buglers. Does that mean 29 letters from home and 90 billet doux?

+ + +

Down in Florida

Mr. A. E. Sherrington had a letter this week from his old friend, Mr. John Connell formerly of Carrick, but now in Florida. Mr. Connell says the winter down there has been exceptionally fine. On Jan. 8th he had dinner with Mr. William Hacker, formerly of Mildmay, when ripe tomatoes fresh from the garden, were served.

+ + +

Bought Boozeless Bottles

A West Ward man, who has found it rather trying in the dry belt since Sept. 16th was the victim of rather cruel game last week. He had ordered a case of wet goods from Montreal which arrived in good time. On opening the case he was completely flabbergasted to find that the bottles had been shipped to him empty. Mr. Man feels that he is the victim of cruelty of the worst type.

Public Is Puzzled

The decisions handed out by the law courts of the land never cease to be a matter for wonder to the lay mind. The public received another big surprise last Monday when Judge Greig pronounced sentence in the case of Tony Zuber, who had been found guilty by a jury of writing a threatening letter to a local doctor. As the evidence at the trial showed the doctor to be absolutely blameless, and to be the intended victim of blackmail of a most serious nature, it was thought that the punishment meted out to the offender would be very severe and the public were not prepared to see him let go with the nominal punishment of 5 days in gaol and a $50 fine. People who perhaps don't know much about law and law courts are puzzled and are asking whether the public are not entitled to better protection from evil-doers of this class.

+ + +

Death of Dan McNaughton

The death occurred at his home near Hanover on Friday of Mr. Daniel McNaughton, a well-known resident of Brant. Death resulted from a severe cold which he caught about a week before his death, and which finally affected an old sore on his leg, gangrene setting in. Mr. McNaughton, who was in his fifty-first year, was born on the 4th con. Brant and spent most of his life there on the farm. About a year ago he bought the farm on the Gravel Road a mile from Hanover, where he lived at the time of his death. He was a man well thought of in the community and a member of Hanover Presbyterian Church. Besides his sorrowing wife, a family of five sons and a daughter are left to mourn. They are:—Herbert, of the second con., Brant, Will, Edgar, James, Percy and Ruby at home. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, interment being made in Hanover Cemetery.

+ + +

Tony Zuber Sentenced

Tony Zuber, the West Ward teamster, who was found guilty by a jury in December of sending a threatening letter to Dr. Porter came up for sentence before Judge Greig on Friday. The Judge sentenced him to 5 days in the County gaol and to pay a fine of $50. In case he doesn't pay the fine he will do thirty days. Before sentence was pronounced Zuber's lawyer, Mr. O. E. Klein argued that evidence given at the trial as to what Zuber had said to certain parties, should not have been admitted. Judge Greig stated that the evidence was rightfully admitted and that it showed a systematic course of conduct on the part of Zuber throughout the whole transaction. In pronouncing sentence Judge Greig reminded Zuber that he had been guilty of a very serious offence. A doctor goes in and out of houses every day in his practice, and his living depends upon his reputation. He was going to be lenient with Zuber and he hoped when he came out of gaol he would turn over a new leaf.

BOX SOCIAL AT JOHNSTON'S

(Contributed)

The Box Social held at Johnston's Corner School on Friday last under the auspices of the Brant Preparedness League was a great success, both financially and as an entertainment. About $90 was realized. Mr. John Rowland was chairman and excelled himself on this occasion. His opening address was grand, as one delighted young lady put it, "Isn't Mr. Rowland lovely?" The programme consisted of song and recitations by such notables as Mr. Ben Waechter, who made a great hit with his songs and humorous story. Mr. and Miss Wahn's selections on the piano and mandolin were greatly appreciated and the recitations by Miss Hazel Irwin were well received. The Misses Eleda and Jean Norrish took part in their usual good style. The step-dance by Miss Hattie Long was exceptionally good and the recitation by Stanley Tolton entitled "Seeing Things at Night" brought down the house. Mrs. A. G. McLennan sang a solo which was well received as were also Walter Kent's solo and selections on the gramaphone. Clayton Tovell, a talented young musician from town was the accompanist for the evening. Mr. Jas. L. Tolton gave a short address on agriculture in which he threw out some good suggestions. Mr. Purvis gave a splendid address along patriotic lines and also told a good story at the expense of Mr. John Kormann, much to the merriment of the audience. He handled the selling of the boxes well and Messrs. John Rowland and E. J. Skelton, who were good bidders had to go some before they got the boxes with the sprig of holly. It was great to see the little ones enjoy their eats. Mr. Rowland, the chairman, was paired off with a most charming young lady from Greenock, and seemed to thoroughly enjoy this part of the proceedings. The committee in charge are to be congratulated on the success of the entire program.

New G. T. R Time

Under the new G. T. R. time card, which came into effect on Sunday, the night train now arrives twenty-five minutes later than formerly at 9.30.

+ + +

Tasker—Rosalie

Mr. John G. Tasker, a well-known and highly respected farmer of Brant Tp. was united in marriage on Wednesday January 17th to Miss Rosalie of London. The marriage took place at the bride's home at London.

+ + +

Walkerton Girl Wedded

Miss Emma Arscott, eldest daughter of Mr. John Arscott was married on Tuesday Jan. 16th, at the home of her sister, Mrs. William Wahlgren in Idaho, with whom she has been making her home. The news was received here by her father, Mr. John Arscott over the phone Tuesday evening from his son, at Toronto. Further particulars have not yet been received.

+ + +

Death of Miss C. Carroll

Miss Christena Carroll, who carried on a dressmaking establishment in the town for a number of years, passed away at her home early Tuesday morning following a month's illness. Her death is deeply mourned by a wide circle of friends. Two sisters survive: Miss Mary Carroll of Walkerton, and Mrs. Hastie of Brantford. The funeral takes place at her late residence this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock for the Walkerton cemetery.

+ + +

Greenock Farmer Wins

Levi Goode of Greenock has been successful in his suit against the General Animals Ins. Co, judgment having been given on Friday in his favor for $1,000 and costs. A horse which the plaintiff had insured for $1,000 died and the Company refused payment on the ground that he had not answered some of the questions to be filled out in the policy correctly. The case was tried at Stratford last November by Judge Sutherland, judgment being reserved. Robertson & McNab of Walkerton were solicitors for the plaintiff, Wilkie and Duff of Toronto for the defendant.

+ + +

Farmers Talk Shop

Two speakers, prominent in agriculture, addressed farmers meetings here on Friday in connection with the South Bruce Board of Agriculture on Friday. President James A. Lamb occupied the chair. Mr. Henry Gross of Lefroy, Simcoe Co. spoke on "How to increase and maintain the fertility of the Soil." Mr. Gross has been president of the Dominion Grange for a number of years and takes a lively interest in all that makes for the benefit of the farmer. Mr. Grier of Dufferin, another good speaker, dealt with "Economic Production of Beef." At the same time the Women's Institute enjoyed a splendid "Talk to Mothers and Girls" by Mrs. F. W. Watts of Toronto. The night meeting was slimly attended but the program was good, Mrs. Watts spoke on "Home Influence," Mr. Gross on "The Assets of Canada," and Mr. Grier on "The Farmer's Garden.

NOTICE

The Annual Meeting of the Formosa Mutual Fire Insurance Co. will be held in Beingessner's Hall in the Village of Formosa at 2 o'clock, p. m. on the 8th day of February, 1917, to transact the general business of the company.

B. BEINGESSNER,
Manager.

Formosa, January 15th, 1917.

NOTICE

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE Northern Exhibition Agricultural Society will be held in the Department of Agriculture Office, Walkerton, on Saturday, January 20th, 1917

at three o'clock p. m., for the purpose of receiving the Annual Report of the Directors and the Financial Statement for the year 1916, and for the election of President and Directors for 1917 and such other business required by the Ontario Act respecting Agricultural Associations.

James Tolton,
Secretary.

Walkerton, January 10th, 1917.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, Jan. 17.)

Hay, per ton,	8.00 to	10.00
Oats, per bsh.	63 to......	66
Wheat " "	1.70 to......	1.70
Barley, " "	85 to......	90
Buckwheat "	1.00 to......	1.00
Potatoes, per bag,	2.00 to......	2.00
Hogs, per cwt,	12.50 to......	12.50
Butter, per lb,	35 to	36
Eggs, per doz,	40 to... ..	40

CURRENT COMMENT

A WAR CABINET.

Lloyd George has organized the British Government and selected a War Council of a few men. Mr. George is a Liberal or rather a Radical, but he picked the men he thought best suited for the job. Two-third of his colleagues in his own Government are Unionists or Tories, with one or two Laborites. Mr. George is not interested just now in his own party or any other party, except the war party. He wants the country to win the war and he is doing what he can in his way to help the country win it. He has won Labor to his side. The majority of the Labor men are behind him in his effort to succeed. They have turned back all their ambitions and aspirations for trade union and other reforms, have accepted conscription and dilution of labor, and will no doubt agree to anything that may be needed. Mr. John Redmond, the Irish National leader, who has been in the trenches, is also behind Mr. George, and between the two there is a good prospect that the Irish question will be settled, thus bringing Ireland in line with the rest of the nation in the struggle to defeat Germany.

There has been a revolution in Britain. We may call it a spiritual awakening. Party shibboleths and party names have disappeared. The deposed Mr. Asquith is supporting the new Premier in all his efforts, and there is in consequence a united nation behind the Government. There is surely a lesson in this for Canada which should be more deeply concerned as to the outcome of the war than even Great Britain. But we are still more or less in the bonds of partyism. Neither the public nor the press have sufficiently interpreted the signs of the times as to know that things that mattered before the war have little or no meaning to-day, if properly visioned. What are our petty squabbles compared with the liberty of our country and the lives of our men at the front?

Parliament will meet soon. There are three questions that must get consideration—the extension of the term of Parliament, a general election or a National Government. The Government will ask for an extension. Should it get it under present conditions? Dealing with this matter, the Toronto Star says:

In these circumstances Parliament will soon be faced with the question of giving the Government an extension of time—for that is what an extension of the life of Parliament means. There is in favor of the proposal, a general dislike of a general election. It is felt that a campaign at this juncture would waste time and energy that ought to be devoted to the common cause, that it would renew and aggravate partisan bitterness, that the conflict would be bad tempered and violent.

Against the proposal is the obstinate or indolent refusal of the Government to reform itself. It will not allow any infusion of new blood. It will not associate with itself either leading members of the opposite party or business men who are not active in politics on either side. It asks for a renewal of confidence in men who, as a whole, do not enjoy the confidence of the country, and in methods which do not satisfy the country. It asks for approval of the Government's refusal to reform and reconstruct. This is what the country is unwilling to give.

We have no desire to see a new election held if it can be at all avoided. There are nearly twenty vacant constituencies, and we believe that these should be filled. It is not fair that these people should be unrepresented in the House. Were these by-elections held, the result would show the Government [illegible] the country was [illegible] it or not. Should the result be unfavorable the Government would be expected to resign or reorganize. We are satisfied that many of the Liberal leaders are in favor of a general election, and we believe that the rank and file generally are favorable to an election, if there can be no other relief from the present unsatisfactory state of affairs.

We imagine that the only action that will prevent an election will be the formation of a reorganized National Government chosen from the best men in the country. Mr. Borden can scarcely hope to "carry on" as he has been doing. We believe that he can't carry on a party Government any longer. He must make some kind of overtures to the Opposition before he can get the parliamentary term again extended.

It should be the duty of the press on both sides to endeavor to lessen the friction of partyism, and use their efforts to induce the Government and the Opposition to forget their differences and unite for the good of the country. A united front is now needed, and if a National Government were established the people would rally round it.

The Department of Water Supply expects to turn the Catskill water into the New York city mains on April 1, thus increasing the pressure in a number of districts. Householders have been warned to look to the plumbing in their homes and prepare it to meet the demands made on it. The expense in many cases will be heavy; in some districts the pressure will be raised from ten to thirty pounds. The proposed new pump for Hamilton will not require any new mains. It will be used when the Hydro is off.

It is mighty selfish to live entirely for yourself; also on others.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

Hector Warren looks at him steadily, and a faint smile curves his lips.

"My exertions were very slight," he says, "and not worth consideration, but I am sorry that Mrs. Podswell should have suffered so much anxiety."

"My wife has weak nerves, and—ahem!—is much better now," says the rector, apologetically.

"Much better," says the matron. "I am afraid I was rather hasty this morning. But—with a [illegible]—you must make allowances for an invalid, Mr. Warren."

He inclines his head, and goes up to the table for his cup of tea.

"Sugar?" says Signa, without raising her eyes.

"Please," he says.

It is only a word, but how different is the tone to that which he used a moment ago!

"Thank you. I hope and trust you are none the worse for this morning's adventure?"

"I!" says Signa. "That question would come better from me!" and she smiles up at him.

He laughs.

"I've had a rather better appetite than usual, which enables me to thoroughly enjoy Mrs. Thompson's mutton chops as I never appreciated mutton chops before. I have felt no effects, and shall not. But I ought to be candid," he says, leaning against the wall in the easy attitude which Signa knows so well by this time. "It was only to offer my apologies, and to seek Mr. and Mrs. Podswell's forgiveness, that I came here to-night"—and he smiles—"I came hoping to gain a little information."

"Information?"

He nods, and takes a letter from his pocket; it is inclosed in one of the small square envelopes of the period, and has an immense coat of arms upon it.

"I found this on my table when I reached home. It is an invitation to dinner from Lady Rookwell."

Signa smiles.

"That is very nice," she says. "But I don't see——"

"On what point I want information? Well, I wanted to know whether Mrs. Podswell and"—he hesitates just a second—"you were going!"

Signa colors and brushes a crumb from the lace on her sleeve.

"I'm sorry I cannot give it to you," she says, laughing softly. "I don't know," and she looks across at her aunt.

He is silent for a moment. Then he says, with a smile of humor, "I wonder whether she would be very much shocked if I asked her?"

"You can but make the experiment," says Signa, trying to speak lightly, and hide the subtle pleasure which his anxiety to know whether she is going gives her.

"I think I will," he rejoins, and he actually goes up to the sofa with the note in his hand.

"I was just telling Miss Grenville," he says, in his quiet voice, "that Lady Rookwell has been kind enough to send me an invitation, and that she mentions that she has asked the rector, you and Miss Grenville. I hope you think of going, Mrs. Podswell."

Aunt Podswell looks up at him covertly. There is always something about this man that awes her, and makes her embarrassed and awkward just as it does the rector.

"I—yes, we have had an invitation, but I haven't spoken to Mr. Podswell yet; my nerves—I don't know."

"I—ahem!—I told Lady Rookwell, whom I met this afternoon, that I hoped you would be well enough; and Signa, of course, will accompany us if we go," says the rector. "Are you going, Mr. Warren?"

"Certainly—yes," [illegible] as if there had never been any doubt of it. "It is very kind of her ladyship to remember a stranger."

[illegible] the rector coughs and rubs his chin, keeping his small eyes fixed on Hector Warren's boots.

"I—er—should decline any invitation other than Lady Rookwell's, for a neighbor of ours, Mr. Brown, of Ridgeley, is dead,—but her ladyship calls it quite a family dinner, quite quiet; and"—with an unctuous sigh—"I am sure poor Mr. Brown, if he could express his thoughts, would wish that I should go."

Which is somewhere near the truth, as Mr. Brown and the rector had never been such friends that Mr. Brown should care whether the rector went or stayed away.

"He was the vicar of Ridgeley," goes on Uncle Podswell, folding his hands meekly. "And—er—I wish Lord Delamere were in England. The—ahem!—parish is near my own, almost a part of it; indeed it has often been remarked that it would be well if it should become merged in it. If—ahem!—if I knew Lord Delamere's present address, I think that I should feel it my duty, my positive duty, to put the case to him."

A curious smile glows in Hector Warren's eyes for a moment, then he inclines his head slightly.

"You might write to Delamere's agents, you know," he suggests.

The rector sighs solemnly as the thought occurs to him that this Hector Warren must be pretty intimate with his lordship to speak of him without his title, as he always does.

"I would rather communicate my ideas to his lordship direct. Have you any idea where he is?"

And he raises his eyes for a moment with an anxious look. He wants the living of Ridgeley very badly indeed; very badly.

"If I were to tell you Paris, or Cairo, or Rome—by the way, he would not be very likely to be at Rome now, would he?—or Switzerland, your letter might not find him."

"That is very true," assents the rector. "I'm sorry you can't tell me, but I'm very much obliged all the same. If his lordship should write to you, perhaps you will give me his address."

"If Delamere writes to me, I certainly will," replies Hector Warren, emphatically.

"Thank you, thank you very much," says the rector, effusively.

Then Hector Warren goes back to the tea table.

"It is all right," he says, not bending down or speaking particularly low, yet managing that his voice shall come to Signa only. "Mr. Podswell and you are going. I shall write an acceptation to-night. And now I suppose I must go," he adds, rather reluctantly. "I feel that I ought not to have intruded."

Signa glances at the heavy black marble clock, and her eyes say, "It is not late yet;" but he holds out his hand, and when she puts hers into it, his fingers close over and press it tightly.

"Good-night," he says, in a low voice, "we shall meet again at 'Pull Uppi;' that is, Lady Rookwell's!"

"Good-night, Mr. Podswell," he says, as he shakes hands with the rector. "I hope you may get your living," and once again the curious smile curves his lips.

"I—ahem!—I am sure I am very much obliged to you!" says the rector, shaking his hand up and down as if it were a pump handle. "Very much obliged to you, indeed."

CHAPTER XII.

"Upon my word, it is very good of you to come," says Lady Rookwell.

It is the evening of the dinner-party at the Villa, as Lady Rookwell's dainty little house is called, and notwithstanding her declaration that it is to be 'quite a quiet, family affair,' the drawing room is pretty well crowded. Her ladyship is dressed in black satin, with here and there a diamond ornament glittering on the rich soft stuff, but her keen eyes almost outvie the diamonds as she puts them on Hector Warren, with a smile that is half sarcastic, half good-humored. There is a sudden silence in the room as her ladyship's musically clear voice makes the little speech of welcome, and those who have not yet seen this mysterious man from nowhere, Mr. Hector Warren, look round at him curiously.

"Very good," repeats her ladyship. "I'm afraid you'll find it rather dull. Dinner-parties always are. I don't know why people should ever come to them, or why they ever give them."

A smile goes round the room at this speech, which would be considered extremely rude and inhospitable if any one but Lady Rookwell had made it, and every ear is strained to catch the reply which Hector Warren will make to this awkward and embarrassing sentiment. But he is not at all embarrassed.

"For the same reason that makes us unfortunate men wear tall hats on special occasions," he says. "But there are exceptions to every rule; some men like tall hats, and I am sure that any one would be happy to be one of your ladyship's dinner-party."

"Hem!" says her ladyship, showing her teeth. "Very prettily said. You'll find some friends here you know," she adds, and turns away to receive some newcomers.

He looks round the room, not brilliantly but comfortably lighted with wax candles, and nods to the captain and Mr. Jenks, and to Dr. Plumbe, but he goes up to Sir Frederic, who is standing leaning against the wall with a mixture of awkward shyness and haughty disdainfulness that sits comically on his face; goes up to him and holds out his hand.

"How do you do, Sir Frederic?" he says, in his calmest, easiest manner.

Sir Frederic crimsons, and for a moment he stares at the impassive face as if he meant to blurt out something savage; but the cool impassiveness of the dark eyes, the easy, assured manner, are too much for him, and he holds out his big hand grudgingly, and muttering a "Good-evening" sullenly, stalks away.

Hector Warren, however, does not look at all embarrassed by his cool reception, which all present have noticed, of course, but turns to Dr. Plumbe as calmly and naturally as usual.

While the doctor is holding forth on the prospects of the coming partridge season, there is a sudden cessation of the hum and chatter in the room, and Hector Warren, looking up, sees that the Rectory party has entered.

"Dear me," says the doctor, beneath his voice, and with a little sideways nod of approbation, "what a beautiful girl she is; looks more beautiful than ever to-night."

"Are you alluding to Miss Grenville?" asks Hector Warren, with the faintest of smiles.

"Bless my soul, yes!" says the little doctor, with a chuckle. "There is no one else to rouse up the enthusiasm of an old man, Mr. Warren. I thought her very pretty the first time I saw her, but, gad! she has improved even these last few days; there is more light in her eyes and that delicate color in her face. 'Wonderful air, Northwell, wonderful!'" and with a nod of satisfaction the doctor blows his nose with the sound of a trumpet, after the fashion of country doctors all the world over.

Perhaps the sound attracts Signa's attention, for she looks that way, and sees not only the doctor, but the stalwart figure standing beside him, and the faint color, which the doctor so much admires, grows suddenly rosered, but for what reason the doctor, much puzzled, cannot divine, as he goes up to pay his respects.

But though there is a general crowding round the beautiful young creature, whose appearance has caused such a sudden sensation of admiration and curiosity, Hector Warren stays and waits. Sir Frederic, whose face has gone from pale to red, and from red to pale again, shuffles his big feet for a moment, then, like a moth drawn to the candle, he goes up to her.

Those who happen to be looking at him can see the sudden pallor and hear the constrained tones of his voice, which discover the emotion that he is struggling with, but Signa does not notice his manner. She had thought him shy and awkward when she had seen him first, and as calmly and pleasant as if he were—say Lady Rookwell herself—she gives him her hand and welcomes him with that faint smile in the gray eyes, and about the delicate lips, that render her beauty, for the moment, sheer loveliness.

Hector Warren, standing with his hand resting on a chair back, waits until the greetings are over and dinner is announced, then he approaches her in a manner so quiet and unobtrusive that he is not noticed.

She looks at him as he bends his head before her, and gives him her hand, but with nothing of the smile which turned Sir Frederic's brain; indeed, her face is rather pale, and her eyes seem to droop heavily under the regard of his dark ones, and her breath comes with a faintly-drawn sigh as his hand grasps her so gently and yet so firmly.

"I thought you were never coming!" he says, in a low voice, but not so low but Lady Rookwell hears him.

"So did I," says her ladyship, "and if you had kept us another quarter of an hour, my dear, I should have hated you for the rest of my life, pretty as you are. I am old enough to dislike having my dinner spoiled because a young girl can't get her hair right or a flower won't fix itself properly."

Signa laughs softly.

"I don't want you to hate me, Lady Rookwell," she says. "It wasn't my hair, and the only flower I wear Auntie stuck in as we passed out of the gate. I hope [illegible]." And she bends her head to display a couple of oxeyed daisies resting on the dark, silken hair.

The gesture, so natural and unaffected, has so much grace about it that Lady Rookwell's keen eyes soften, and she pats the white arm nearest her with her fan.

"It is of no use trying to frighten you, my dear," she says. "But some day you will find that I am a dreadful old ogre, and that I shall eat you up, pretty as you are."

"I am not afraid," said Signa, laughing.

Then Lady Rookwell looks up at Hector Warren with a curious smile, considers a moment, and just as he is thinking that she is going to tell him to take Signa in to dinner, she grins sardonically and beckons to Sir Frederic, who has been standing just within ear-shot with a look of suppressed impatience and anger on his face.

"Sir Frederic, will you take Miss Grenville in?" she says. "Mr. Warren, please take care of Lady Bumbleby."

The faintest, slightest shadow falls on Signa's face, and her eyes half lift themselves to Hector Warren's as Sir Frederic comes forward eagerly, but Hector Warren doesn't show a sign of the disappointment that he feels, and certainly Lady Rookwell does not hear the 'Confound her!' which just breathes from his lips.

Lady Bumbleby is fat, fair, and considerably above forty, and she looks rather surprised at having this handsome, distinguished-looking cavalier allotted to her; but Hector Warren's manner is as pleasant, respectful and reverential as if she were the belle of the room.

By chance or intention, Sir Frederic and Signa are placed exactly opposite Hector Warren and Lady Bumbleby. The rector takes one end of the table, Lady Rookwell the other. Imagine a room and a social atmosphere the opposite [illegible] of the Rectory, and you have Lady Rookwell's dinner party. There is no better hostess than her ladyship in all the county, and before the soup has disappeared everybody seems happy and talkative, everybody with one exception, and that is poor Sir Frederic. Never does a man appear to less advantage than when he is in love, and Sir Frederic is very much in love, indeed. To have Signa near him, to feel her soft draperies flutter against his sleeve, to hear her voice, to feel her violet eyes resting on his face, are such exquisite delights that, like most delights, they intoxicate him and bewilder his brain. At the best of times he is shy, awkward, and a bad talker. To-night he feels as if he could find nothing on earth to say, although he would give the world to be eloquent and witty, if only for half an hour.

He does try. He says that it is a fine day after the storm, and then colors at the awkward allusion to her adventure; but Signa does not notice it, and agrees that it is a fine day.

"Do you like [illegible] or [illegible]?" he asks.

"Both, thanks," says Signa, absently, for at the same moment Lady Bumbleby ripples and shakes with laughter at something that Hector Warren has said, and Signa has been straining her ears to catch the something. "No, thanks, please," she says. [illegible] "I beg your pardon?"

"I was only saying that they have [illegible] a great deal of salmon lately," [illegible] Sir Frederic.

Then Signa tries to concentrate her attention upon him, but Hector Warren's musical voice and grave face, but light and bright with a touch of humor in it, comes across the table, and she cannot shut it out.

What has come to him to-night? Not only is Lady Bumbleby laughing, but Captain Jenks' "Ha! ha!" is heard chiming in, and presently Lady Rookwell leans forward and grins approvingly.

"I wonder what Mr. Warren is saying to make them all laugh so?" says Signa, ignorant that Sir Frederic is glaring with suppressed anger across the table.

"I don't know," he says, sullenly. "Some tom-foolery or other. Some men can put on the cap and bells at a moment's notice and wear them easily."

Signa glances at him with genuine surprise.

"Oh, do you think that Mr. Warren is that sort of man?" she says, with faint wonder. "He always seems so grave—and yet—" then she stops, remembering his face and voice in the cave.

"I don't think about him," says Sir Frederic, trying to speak with easy, contemptuous indifference, in which attempt he fails utterly. "I don't care for dinner-table wit. I detest your 'funny man.'"

Signa smiles at the idea of calling Hector Warren a "funny man," and Sir Frederic, seeing the smile, reddens angrily and bends over his plate in silence. The rector's dirge-like voice can be heard at the other end of the table now and again, and Captain Jenks' subdued growl strikes in occasionally; but the clear, musical voice of Hector Warren is the plainest heard, for the reason that all who sit near him are eager to catch what he says.

(To be continued.)

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work. Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 [illegible] all shades are leaders with us. Just send us your sample, or write for anything in our line. GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $20 and $30, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

ALASKAN FOOD.

The Indian Makes Ice Cream of Tallow and Berries.

The main food of the Alaskan Indian is meat and fish. In the winter many people do not cook the fish at all, simply leave them in the house for two or three days and then eat them raw. Women always serve the food and always see that others are satisfied before beginning their own meal. They have to be very careful not to spill anything, for that would bring bad luck to the one whom they are serving. When a person is invited to eat in the village it is considered bad manners to eat all that is before him. He must leave enough to take home to the members of the family who did not come. The host generally gives his guest a piece of dried fish to hold the food which he is to take home. The fish is broad and flat, about one-half an inch thick, and the bundle is carried away openly, without any attempt at hiding it. In the summer, berries, fruit, and roots are added to the diet, and berries are frozen in the fall to last through the winter. Since white people came, flour and canned goods have changed the food very much. It is easy to have ice cream for dessert any time. There is no cream about it, but tallow and berries are mixed with snow, sometimes fish is added to it, and when it is frozen it makes a fine dish.—Southern Workman.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

Odd and Interesting Facts.

A Danish nerve specialist places convalescent patients on top of a piano so that they may be benefited by the vibrations as it is played.

Russian engineers soon will begin experiments that will cover three years to ascertain if sugar beets can be raised profitably in Siberia.

A machine has been developed for spreading fine rock dust on the passageways of bituminous mines to prevent explosions of coal dust.

A Yorkshire (England) farmer, employing eight women on his holding of 600 acres, says they "will only work when the weather is fine."

A new cafe and observation car has large windows at the tables so that diners may get a broad view of the passing landscape while dining.

A French aviator has placed a pneumatic buffer in front of the seat of his aeroplane to lessen the shock should he strike the ground heavily.

For stringing beads quickly an ingenious German has patented a crank-operated machine which feeds them on the point of a threaded needle.

Sanitary advantages as well as safety for their contents are asserted for new steel poultry shipping crates, which can be folded flat when empty.

Spain prohibits the importation of cottonseed oil unless previously rendered unfit for human consumption.

WITHOUT PURE BLOOD HEALTH IS IMPOSSIBLE

Owing to faulty action of the kidneys and liver, the blood becomes filled with disease germs that imperil health.

The first warnings are backache, dizziness, headache and lack of energy. Act quickly if you would avoid the terrible ravages of chronic kidney complaint. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day, they cure kidney and liver troubles for all time to come. No medicine relieves so promptly, cures so thoroughly. For good blood, clear complexion, healthy appetite, use the grand health-bringing medicine Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Get a 25c box to-day.

Some Inkstand.

A man who kept a roadhouse in Rhode Island was called upon to testify in a suit as to the number of cubic yards that were handled in some filling work near his place. He showed very little knowledge of the matter, and his ideas of cubic yards was so indefinite that it seemed doubtful whether he knew what the term meant. In order to make his meaning clear, the judge said:

"Listen, witness! Assume this inkstand to be three feet across the top this way and three feet that way and three feet in height, what should you call it?"

"Well, your honor," said the witness, without hesitation, "I should say it was some inkstand."—Public Health Journal.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

Still a Complaint.

A kind-hearted old gentleman heard a small boy crying lustily in the street outside, and went out to inquire the cause of his grief.

"M-mother g-gave me t-two c-cents, and I-v-lo-o-s-t 'em!"

"Well, never mind, here are two cents," and the good man turned back into his yard.

But as the boy broke into fresh sobs, louder and harder than ever, the old gentleman returned an inquired:

"Well, well, what are you crying about now?"

"If I h-hadn't l-lost my t-two p-pennies, I'd h-have four n-now," was the reply.—Life.

Mrs. Gnaggs—Mighty few men can govern themselves. Mr. Gnaggs—I suppose that's the reason so many of us get married.

Child Needs.

"Every child should have mud pies, grasshoppers, water bugs, tadpoles, frogs, mud turtles, elderberries, wild strawberries, acorns, chestnuts, trees to climb, brooks to wade in, water lilies, woodchucks, bats, bees, butterflies, various animals to pet, hay fields, pine cones, rocks to roll, sand, snakes, huckleberries and hornets, and any child who has been deprived of these has been deprived of the best part of his education."

So says Luther Burbank, the horticulturist, in "The Training of the Human Plant," a book in which he discusses children, their rights, their needs and the potentialities of their development, adapting to human conditions his unique knowledge of life and growth in the world of plants.

"By being well acquainted with all these," he continues, "they come into the most intimate harmony with nature, whose lessons are, of course, natural and wholesome."

A TALK ON RHEUMATISM

Telling How to Actually Cure This Painful Malady

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured, not merely relieved—but actually cured. The most the rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or liniment ever did or can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood, take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich blood, which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. The truth of these statements has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada, and the following case is a striking instance. Mrs. F. M. Simpson, R. R. No. 1, Blenheim, Ont., says: "For a long time I was confined to my bed, and actually crippled with rheumatism. The trouble first located in my ankle which was much swollen. I thought it might be a sprain, but the doctor said it was rheumatism and advised me to go to bed so that the trouble would not be aggravated. I did as directed, but instead of getting better, it spread first to my right knee, then to my left knee, and then to my arms. The limbs were much swollen, and if I moved them caused me considerable pain. I seemed to get weak in other respects, and fell off in weight from 156 to 116 pounds. I had no appetite and seemed to lose interest in everything. One day, while reading a paper, I came across the case of a rheumatic sufferer cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to try them and sent for three boxes. By the time these were gone I had certainly begun to improve, and with help was able to get up. Continuing the use of the pills I was first able to go about with the use of a crutch, which, after I discarded for a cane, and then through the use of the pills I was able to throw aside the cane as well, and go about as briskly as I had ever done. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me, and I strongly recommend them to other similar sufferers."

You can procure these pills through any dealer in medicine or get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOING THEIR BIT.

Loyal Women's Record Knitting for Soldiers.

Mrs. J. H. DeCamp, [illegible], has been keeping track of the knitting done by some of our older women, for the boys at the front, and the following is a record of the names of some of them with the work they have accomplished:

Up to the end of August, 1916, Mrs. Naomi Hendrie, Bowmanville, now 95 years of age, has knit 57 pairs socks, 36 helmets, 19 pairs wristlets, 1 long muffler and 1 [illegible] band.

Mrs. Mary Ward, 1 Chester St., London, 95 years of age, has knit nearly 100 pairs of socks up to the present.

Mr. M. C. Reynolds, of Goderich, though totally blind and in her eightieth year, has knit more than 125 pairs of socks in the last 12 months, averaging 3 pairs a week.

Mrs. C. Larkin, 55 Clarence Street, London, has knitted more than 250 pairs of socks since a year ago last birthday. Along with the socks Mrs. Larkin sends [illegible] "Our Boys in Khaki."

Mrs. Pemberton, Brantford, has finished her 50th pair and is now finishing the century number.

Mrs. James Aiken, Sarnia, 84 years of age, has just finished 84 pairs and expects to keep on at the good work till the end of the war.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fraser, Middlesex Co., has knitted 75 pairs, and is still at it.

Mrs. Mary O'Neil, Kenwood, another lady over eighty, is practising her skilful hand on dozens of [illegible] the needles.

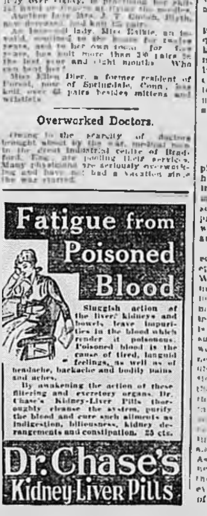
Another lady, Mrs. J. T. Gooch, Blyth, now deceased, had knit 125 pairs.

An invalid lady, Miss Eakie, an invalid, confined to the house for twelve years, and to her own room for five years, has knit more than 250 pairs in the last year and eight months. Who can beat her?

Miss Ellen Dier, a former resident of Forest, now of Springdale, Conn., has knit over 42 pairs besides mittens and wristlets.

Overworked Doctors.

Owing to the scarcity of doctors brought about by the war, medical men in the great industrial centre of Bradford, Eng., are pooling their services. Many physicians are seriously overworking and have not had a vacation since the war started.



Fatigue from Poisoned Blood

Sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels leave impurities in the blood which render it poisonous. Poisoned blood is the cause of tired, languid feelings, as well as of headache, backache and bodily pains and aches.

By awakening the action of these filtering and excretory organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse the system, purify the blood and cure such ailments as indigestion, biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation. 25 cts.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS

When in Hamilton do not fail to visit Junor's, the House for Gifts. See our display of China, Art Pottery, Cut Glass and Antique Furniture, Pictures, etc. You will be made welcome.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E. SOUTH SIDE
Hamilton, Ont.

Coming of the Alarm Watch.

The alarm watch has come, a product of war's necessities. Military movements must now be timed so exactly with a view to co-ordination that care is taken that the watches of the officers concerned agree to the second. It is necessary that they be warned the instant when the time for action has come, also that the watch be visible in the dark. The result is a British invention—an alarm watch with a luminous face.

It has also arrived in this country, for it is useful in business, society and travel as in war. A business man who has an appointment need no longer keep his eye on the clock, with his mind constantly diverted from his work; he need only set his watch and go on unperturbed till the alarm rings. The society woman can avoid missing engagements by unduly prolonging a tete-a-tete; she need just set the alarm of her wrist-watch. A person going on a journey may sit at ease till the tinkle-tinkle in his pocket warns him to start for the station. When a time limit has been set for public speeches, the bell in the chairman's pocket will ring for the long-winded bore.—Portland Oregonian.

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

INVISIBLE WRITING.

A Novel Experiment On Ordinary Paper.

Invisible writing smacks of hidden treasure and exciting adventures; it has a fascination that appeals to almost every one. Even if you see no way in which to make use of it you enjoy experimenting with it.

Here is a way that is not commonly known: Soak a sheet of ordinary writing paper in a basin of clean water until it is thoroughly wet. Then get a piece of glass and, after washing it clean, place the wet sheet of writing paper on it, smoothing out all wrinkles and being careful to see that the paper firmly adheres to the glass. Put a sheet of dry writing paper and place it on the wet sheet. If you have followed directions carefully you have a piece of clean glass with a sheet of wet writing paper firmly adhering to it, over which you have spread a dry sheet of writing paper.

Write on the dry paper with a well sharpened lead pencil, using considerable pressure. After you have finished remove the top sheet of paper and you will find an exact copy of your writing on the wet paper. Place this wet sheet in a cool place to dry. You will be surprised to find that the writing has entirely disappeared after the sheet has been exposed to the air a few minutes. You can be sure that no one, unless he knows the secret, can read what you have written. To make the writing visible soak the paper for a few moments in a basin of clean water.—Youth's Companion.

Knee Joint Stiff Three Years

CURED BY NERVILINE

"Anyone would marvel at my recovery," writes Mr. Leonard Lothum, a young man well known about Chatham. "I had inherited a rheumatic tendency through my mother's family, and in my early days suffered frightfully. About three days ago the pain and stiffness settled in my left knee joint. I was lame and walked with a very distinct limp. Nerviline was brought to my notice and I rubbed it into the stiff joint four or five times a day. It dispelled every vestige of pain, reduced the swelling, took out the stiffness and gave me the full use of my limb again. I don't believe there is a pain-relieving remedy, not a single liniment that can compare with Nerviline. I hope every person with pains, with sore back, with lameness, with lumbago, with neuralgia—I do hope they will try out Nerviline, which I am convinced will quickly and permanently cure them."

If Nerviline wasn't a wonderful painless remedy, if Nerviline didn't quickly relieve, if Nerviline wasn't known to be a grand cure for all rheumatic conditions, it wouldn't have been so largely used as a family remedy for the past forty years. No better, stronger, or more soothing liniment made. 25c. per bottle; sold by any dealer, anywhere.

RIGHT MUST TRIUMPH.

(Rochester Post-Express.)

If justice comes to wreck, said the philosopher Kant, human life will have no worth. This statement bears intrinsic evidence of truth and the mind accepts it as such. A state of society in which injustice permanently prevailed would be intolerable. It would be no privilege to live therein, and life would have no value.

Surveying the past with such knowledge of it as we have, we find no epoch in which injustice did not exist. We find no time when the selfishness of power and the passions and malevolence of man did not make many lives as intolerable as heartless tyrannies could make them. Nor is there an era known to history, when subjugated peoples somewhere in the world were not oppressed. We can never be sure, however, how much the discipline of servitude profited a particular people. The Israelites, to take the most familiar instance, learned all that Egyptian civilization had to teach in much less time than their oppressors learned it. And is it not apparent that our negroes have been civilized much more quickly than if slavery had not brought them here? As for individual suffering, there is never in any age a lack of that, and there are as many cases to-day as ever of what seems upon the surface of it to be injustice. Neither innocence of evil-doing nor excellence of intentions can guarantee anybody happiness or freedom from disease or length of days. Yet we know so little about the evolutionary process and are only so small a segment of life that we are not warranted in condemning the creative plan. We must assume, although we do not understand it fully, that it is just to the last degree.

Surveying the world and contrastir our own times with former times is not manifest that injustice and cru on a great scale, to subject pec races, states, is steadily lessening it not now the exception to the that weaker peoples are exploite oppressed? Turkey is barbarous no alien race as far as known is conciled to German rule. But ge ly speaking, civilized nations their dependencies kindly. Justi we have treated our Filipinos, im their conditions, and win their l

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Have used MINARD'S LINI for Croup; found nothing equal sure cure.

CHAS. E. SHAR
Hawkshaw, N. B., Sept. 1st, 1

as both England and Russia hav the respect and love of peo tribes who speak a hundred ton

Justice is not coming to wre our planet. Human history great and steady gain, an upwd and has persisted through t There has been, it is true, a cence of savagery during th There have been crimes tha shocked the world. There other Lusitania incidents or but can anybody believe that th come of this war will be agai the killing of non-combatants or enslavement of populations come legitimate and accepted of warfare in the future? Do intelligent American believe tha kind is to take that backwa into barbarism? The immedi look may seem dark. The is hang in the balance for month or more. This is the most de fight, with a continent for a field, in the annals of man. I believe that the forces which mak progress and righteousness mu umph and that in the future wh coming on "through the fight listing" there will be no possibili such a retrogression towards sav as we have seen in this war.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dand

The Shorter Term.

The burglar had just begun hi and was assigned to work in the factory. Near him was an oldis who studied him intently and s to be awaiting an opportunity something. It came while the ster was at the ice-water tank.

"How long are you in for" whispered.

"Twelve years," replied the comer.

The veteran looked around nervously and thrust a letter into the burglar's hand.

"I'm in for life," he said. "Mail this when you get out."—Johnson's Smoke Rings.

To Purify Sinks and Drains.

To one pound of [illegible] add a gallon of boiling water [illegible] dissolved. The copper[illegible] deadly poison, and should alwa[illegible] carefully labeled. This is one [illegible] best possible cleansers for pipes, [illegible] drains.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—GIRLS TO WORK ON knit underwear—seamers and finished stitchers preferred. We also teach learners, any girl with good knowledge of plain sewing; good wages, ideal factory conditions. Zimmerman Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Aberdeen and Garth streets, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—A GOOD GENERAL SERvant for small family, highest wages, comfortable home. Address, Mrs. John Flory, 5 Homewood Avenue, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—HELP FOR WOOLLEN mill spinners and weavers. We have several openings for inexperienced help where energy and ability will bring promotion. We will engage several female apprentices to learn weaving. A splendid opportunity to learn a trade which always offers steady employment at high wages. Special inducements to family workers. Write, stating experience, if any, age, etc., to Slingsby Mfg. Company, Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

FOR SALE.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN

2 POTTER CYLINDER PRESSES—A half sheet Double Demy and a half sheet Double Royal size. Make us an offer for them. Well suited for a Country Printing Office. Address, Times Printing Company, Hamilton, Ont.

PRINTING.

CARDS PRINTED. YOUR NAME in many ornamental styles, 25 for 15c. post paid. Low Price. Good work. J. Layton Cain, Woodstock, Ontario.

Are You Intoxicated

The question is not as impertinent as it sounds. You may be a real teetotaler and yet be "intoxicated"—that is, poisoned by the gases that come from imperfect digestion. The products of food putrefaction are taken up by the blood and often poison the entire system. Cut out meats and starchy foods for a while. Eat Shredded Wheat with milk or cream for breakfast; eat it with stewed fruits and green vegetables for dinner or supper. It will cure auto-intoxication and make a new man of you. All the meat of the whole wheat in a digestible form. A perfect meal at lowest cost. Made in Canada

CRUISE IN A BRITISH TANK

The whole crew climbs on board this fortress on wheels. I install myself in the narrow space, by the side of my machine gun, whose muzzle is pointing outside the steel-plate sides of the tank, and fix my eye to the loophole. "How hot it is!" said my neighbor. "It will be worse in an hour!" Through my loophole I can see just a strip of sky, which is as light to me, although the day has not yet fully dawned. In front of me I see undulating fields which have been ploughed up by guns of every calibre. Farther on, the Fourreaux Wood, where we are to operate.

"SEA-LEGS" NEEDED.

There is a crater to the left of the wood which, according to the reports of our airmen, the Germans have converted into a fortress. This is the objective of the "Tank" on our left. At the right of the wood there is a redoubt described to us as extraordinarily powerful; walls, interminable barbed-wire chevaux de frise, a formidable entanglement of all sorts of vile contrivances. A real "nest" of vile beasts! This is to be our job. By Jove, how stifling it is! Suddenly the glare of a rocket lights up the sky, following by ten, twenty, thirty others. A sharp whistle sounds strangely in our prison. The hour has really come; we are to start.

My heart was beating violently—I do not know why. One needs to have "sea-legs" to avoid knocking oneself against the sides of this carcase of steel, which is now waddling along ungracefully over ruts and uneven places. I take hold of the metallic handle of a case of machine-gun ammunition. The motor system of our "Tank" is gripping the soil, sticking to it, gliding and dragging itself along like a centipede. We move onwards, while the enthusiastic cheers of our infantry reach our ears, in spite of the fearful din. As we advance, the earth everywhere around our track is ploughed up and thrown aside. But, Heavens, how stifling it is, and how infernally far away the Fourreaux Wood seems to be!

Our "Tank" rolls down the slope of an exploded mine, breaking through a house en route. All goes well.

Now we arrive at the bottom. Without apparent trouble we climb up the other side. Once more the strip of sky shows itself, and the jagged trunks of the trees of the Fourreaux Wood are appreciably nearer. Bang! A shell has hit us "head on" and the noise of the impact and bursting of the shell makes the whole carcase vibrate, but otherwise no damage is done and we go calmly on our way.

A heavy thud, then a flash over my head. Our "tank" is trembling from top to bottom, and has stopped for the eighth of a second. We have just fired. This perpetual rumbling over my head has a disturbing effect: the machine resounds, the air vibrates. They are getting it, these Boches. Tock, tock, tock! "Tacatacs of tock, tock!" re-echo on the steel sides of our "tank." It sounds like a myriad of hailstones beating against the window-panes of a moving train. The German guns have opened fire on us. But, in faith, they are wasting shots. They have as much effect on our machine as pellets of bread against a wall.

GIGANTIC IRON WEDGE.

At last we are near the "nest" we are to destroy. I can distinguish the sandbags heaped up and the walls pierced with holes. Little white flakes are coming from these holes as though they were safety valves for the escape of steam. These are the guns of the enemy.

Our "tank" advances steadily and inexorably. A ditch—we clear it; an incline—we scale it; a heap of rubbish from a demolished house—we pass over it. And then we come to the first barbed-wire entanglements. Our "tank" does not even make an effort; everything breaks, everything is crushed; everything is torn up. Splinters of wood jump up on all sides of us, the chevaux de frise are beaten down. I have the sensation of being in the interior of a gigantic iron wedge which is cutting through something like butter.

As for us, we fire without ceasing, hand on gun and eye glued to the loophole pierced in the steel, with the sweat pouring down our foreheads.

A thud: a powerful planting, a last and almost imperceptible stop! The nose of our tank scatters sand and cement and cement bags and throws them right and left, as if it were ploughing up a field. Another violent shock. A heavy blow and a crashing. We are going straight through a wall. We are pulverizing machine guns. Grenades burst upon our armor. We are in the midst of the "nest". All at once, ugly German heads with terror on their faces appear on both sides of us! To work! Now it is my turn and that of my comrades! Our machine guns crackle; our bullets whistle in the German trenches, taken thus by enfilade, and in the underground passages leading from the "nest" to the rear.

The Germans are in the greatest disorder. They throw themselves flat on their stomachs, they raise their arms to heaven, some of them try to run away. A whistle sounds in the "tank," and it stops. Then wild cheers come faintly to my ears, and I soon see the dear old uniforms of our boys who are taking possession of the "nest" and gathering up everything living which remains—("One Who Was There," in the London Daily Mail.")

DANGERS LURK IN GUNCOTTON

What is guncotton?

Down at the big Du Pont plant at Hopewell, Va., they turn out several hundred tons of the explosive every 24 hours. But even the people who work with the explosive, and Hopewellians who speak familiarly of it as "cotton," do not know exactly what it is other than that it is one of the most powerful explosives known.

Statements to the effect that German scientists have found a substitute for cotton, from which is made an explosive even more powerful han that made with real cotton and an acid mixture, are not taken seriously by experts of the United States government or by chemists who know the method of making the explosive and know what materials yield the best results.

"Various substitutions for cotton in the manufacture of guncotton have been tried," remarked a chemist in Uncle Sam's employ. "Some of them give approximately the same product as that yielded by real cotton, though not so uniform in action, while others at first thought practical substitutes for the expensive cotton, proved on continued tests to be worthless. Cotton is still the base for actual guncotton, apparently serious accounts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Guncotton is known chemically as trinitro-cellulose. It is made by the chemical action of a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acid in supercleansed dry cotton fibre. It is the base of the best known "smokeless powders," and it is one of the quickest and most powerful explosives known in spite of the fact that if it is lighted in the open it will simply burn with a clear flame until it is consumed, not exploding or detonating.

In the manufacture of guncotton at the Hopewell plant the raw cotton is placed in a big washer, consisting of an iron cylinder mounted on a horizontal axis. The cylinder is pierced with a number of pipes carrying steam for heating the washing solution, which is caustic soda in water. In this solution the cotton is washed for four hours, the cylinder slowly revolving the while and the steam pipes maintaining a high temperature. This is to remove all grease, oil and dirt from the cotton.

From the washing machines the cotton is removed to a centrifugal wringer, where it is washed again, this time in clear, pure water to remove all of the alkali, and again wrung dry.

Simplicity of style is a marked feature of this navy serge suit, the trimming consisting of silk stitching in self tone. Large ball buttons fasten the coat in Russian style. The hat is of rose felt with velvet crown.

The cotton is then placed in a "picker," where it passes between toothed, horizontal rollers revolving in opposite directions. The cotton is drawn between the teeth of the rollers, which comb out the lumps, knots and tangles. In something like sheet form it is then removed to the drying house, equipped with big bins with perforated bottoms. The cotton is placed in the bins; hot air is forced through the cotton, and the mass is manipulated until every fiber of the cotton is thoroughly dried. This process requires about eight hours, when the cotton is taken from the bins and placed in air-tight cans until it is to be used. This is necessary, as the dry cotton absorbs from 1½ to 2 per cent of moisture simply from exposure to the air. It is taken in the cans to the nitrating house, where it is given the acid treatment that converts it into guncotton.

In the nitrating process the cotton is placed in centrifugal containers, into which the acid mixture is admitted and the spent acid removed by means of stopcocks. About 16 pounds of cotton are used at a time, to which is added 900 pounds of mixture of three parts of 96 per cent. sulphuric acid. The "charge" is kept in the machine for 20 minutes. In the process of nitration the cotton increases in weight about 50 per cent., the 16 pounds of pure, cleaned cotton fibre yielding about 24 pounds of guncotton or trinitro—cellulose.

To remove the free acid the cotton is taken from the nitrating machine and soaked for eight hours in pure cold water, the water being changed twice in eight hours. After this soaking it is placed in another centrifugal machine, which is started as soon as the charge is placed in it, and while it is revolving cold water is turned on it from a hose. After 10 minutes of this the water is turned off and the machine is revolved at its highest speed until the cotton is wrung as dry as possible. The nitrated cotton is then pressed into blocks, which look much like blocks of ordinary cotton compressed. There is no danger of its expanding or detonating except in confinement.

Guncotton is used in manufactures other than explosives, among them celluloid.

Hundreds of bales of cotton are received at the Hopewell plant of the du Pont company every week, and as much as 1,000,000 pounds of guncotton is made there in that period. Some of the guncotton goes direct to the purchasers, although the larger part is shipped to the company's plant at Carney's point, across the river from Wilmington, Del., to be converted into smokeless powder and other high explosives. The guncotton from the Hopewell plant that is shipped abroad is for use in torpedoes, mines and highly explosive shells.

In addition to guncotton the Hopewell plant turns out large quantities of trinitroleum, which is one of the most powerful and dangerous explosives known to science.—Washington Star.

Odd Timepieces.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employed a gourd on which the stars of the heavens were marked. As the constellation rose in the sky the Indian referred to his gourd and found out the hour. By turning the gourd around he could tell the order in which the constellations might be expected to appear.

The hill people of Assam reckon time and distance by the number of quids of betelnuts chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, the Dutch colonial assembly was invariably disposed of at the last puff of the third pipe of tobacco of Governor Wouter Van Twiller.

A Montagnais Indian, of Canada, will set up a tall stick in the snow when traveling ahead of friends who are to follow. He marks off with his foot the line of shadow cast, and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell, on arriving at the spot, about how far ahead the leader is.—Exchange.

School On Railroad Train.

The Southern Pacific Railroad provides transportation for the families of some of its construction gangs, who are compelled to move as the work progresses. The families include a number of children who do not remain in one place long enough to attend school. In order that they may receive an education, the company has turned a box car into a schoolroom, equipped with desks, blackboards and other essentials. A teacher is provided and a regular school programme is in progress even when the children are travelling at a good speed. The pupils are of several nationalities, but are being turned into true Americans under the American flag which floats over the school car.

DID JOAN OF ARC ESCAPE?

France found herself in dire straits early in the fifteenth century. King Charles VI, surnamed "The Well Beloved," had become deranged, and Henry V. of England had invaded the country, concluded the treaty which was to make him King of France upon the death of her mad king.

The rightful successor to the French throne, the Dauphin Charles, was a youth of 17 when this treaty was made. Two years later, when his royal father died, Henry of England came to claim the throne, and his legions were masters of the country north of the Loire, including Paris.

Now it happened that there dwelt in France at this perilous time a little peasant maid who could neither read nor write, but who had imbibed health from the great outdoors. She tended her father's sheep and rode his horses to and from the watering places. She developed alleged powers which in our days are called psychic or clairvoyant. Going into a trance state, 'twas said, she saw visions and heard voices which told her that she was to be the virgin who, according to current prophecy, was to deliver France from its enemies. Her name was Joan or Jeanne, and of her family, either d'Arc or Darc. When 17 she went to Chinon, where the Dauphin, Charles, held his court.

Charles, who in his subservience to the English, had not had the courage to be crowned king when his father died, was persuaded to grant Joan of Arc's wish to lead his army. He ordered her a suit of armor, and when her visions told her of a consecrated sword which lay buried in a certain churchyard, that weapon was dug up and placed in her hands. Then, at the head of an army of 10,000 soldiers commanded by royal officers, all of whom regarded her as a saint, she threw herself upon the English, then besieging Orleans. Her presence at the head of the French army struck terror to the enemy, and within three months she had Charles crowned at Rheims. During the ceremony she, in her full armor, stood at his side.

Joan of Arc's promised work was now done. She begged to be allowed to go back to her native farm at Domremy, but Charles commanded her to remain with his armies. He feared that her absence would turn the tide of his fortunes. Joan thought otherwise. She told him that her voices and visions gave her no further inspiration, only the warning that if she fought another battle she would be defeated. But she had to obey the king's command. Leading her forces in an attack upon Paris early the following winter, she saw the first part of her prophecy fulfilled. She was wounded, but recovered sufficiently to lead her legions into Compiegne, then in the hands of the English. She made an unsuccessful sortie and the second part of her prophecy came true, for her army was defeated. Taken prisoner, she was carried to Beauvais.

The divine power which had protected Joan of Arc thereto now seemed to have entirely deserted her. While attempting to escape her prison by leaping from the dungeon wall she was recaptured and taken to Rouen. The wise doctors then constituting the University of Paris obtained from the King of England letters patent to have her tried for witchcraft. The university gave a unanimous verdict that her acts were diabolical, meriting punishment by fire, and when the sentence of death was read to her publicly by the bishop of Beauvais he gave her the alternative of burning at the stake or submission to the church. Joan chose the latter means of salvation, but the bloodthirsty bishop repented the loss of an opportunity to view torture. He laid a trap for Joan by placing a man's apparel in her cell. She put on the disguise in the hope of escape, and the bishop seized upon her act as evidence of a relapse into unbelief.

ed in the middle of the market place at Rouen. Surrounding the pyre the English had a cordon of soldiers and ecclesiastics drawn up at a distance sufficiently far to prevent any of the populace from gaining a good view of the martyr at the stake. According to the history which we studied in school, the fair body of the sainted maid of Orleans was consumed in these flames and her ashes were thrown into the Seine.

But many chroniclers say otherwise. Indeed among some authorities there has grown a belief that the English frustrated the purpose of the Bishop of Beauvais by placing the circle of soldiers and churchmen at such a distance from the pyre that an effigy or substitute might be burned and Joan allowed to escape. An eminent French antiquarian, Gaston Sayo, after a profound study of all available records bearing upon the case, concluded that another woman was substituted at the stake for Joan. His theory would account for the French king's apparent ingratitude in making no attempt to rescue Joan, although he owed her his crown. An ancient chronicle of the city of Metz states that a woman claiming to be Joan of Arc appeared in Orleans eight years after her supposed execution, and was recognized by her brothers, Jehan and Pierre, as their supposedly dead sister. Thousands of people in Orleans recognized her as the missing Maid of Orleans, and the local authorities discontinued the annual memorial service which had regularly been held for the repose of her soul. Indeed, the records of the Orleans treasury at that very time, eight years after her supposed burning, show that 210 livres were presented to Joan of Arc during the month of July, 1439, "for the good that she did to the said town during the siege of 1429." To those who have seen these records it seems inconceivable that an imposter could have thus deceived not only the thousands who knew Joan's face intimately, but could have fooled her own brothers. There is also a record that Joan of Arc married Robert des Armoises, a country gentleman, and her reappearance, and a letter written to the Duke of Orleans by her brother Pierre, 13 years after her alleged burning, speaks of her as still living. Indeed, court records dated 1476 contain the testimony of a parish priest that in 1472, 40 years after her supposed execution, Joan of Arc's family was entertaining her as their honored guest.

The question whether Joan of Arc was burned at or rescued from the stake is branded by Andrew Laing as "the most surprising and baffling of historical mysteries," and an old manuscript in the British museum refers to the crisis of her picturesque career as follows:

"They burned her or another woman like her; on which point many persons are (and have been) of different opinions."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

TELEPHONE PIONEERING

Mr. L. B. McFarlane, President of the Bell Telephone Company, of Canada, has sent, as a Christmas greeting to the officials and employees of the company, a pamphlet containing the story of the telephone's pioneering days in this country. Extracts are here given, dealing with Hamilton's early experiences:

No adequate record has been kept of the beginning of things telephonic in Canada, and I shall not attempt the task. But it may be that some reminiscences of the early days of development of the art in Canada will be found worthy of place in our Society Journal.

The subject of this paper has been chosen because we, as Canadians, feel that we have an interest equal to Americans in telephonic history, the telephone having been first conceived in Brantford, Ont., where many of the early experiments were successfully carried out by the inventor and where some of the first knotty problems were solved.

While Professor Graham Bell was still seeking a means of bringing his invention to perfection and rendering it commercially satisfactory, he gave to his father as a present a three-fourths interest in the Canadian patent yet to be granted—a rather unusual instance of filial regard and affection and one to be commended. When the patent was issued, a general agent was appointed by Professor Melville Bell to control the Canadian field, and the business started as a private line enterprise.

HAMILTON BEGINS EARLY.

The first telephone contract secured was taken at Hamilton, Ont., 18th of October, 1877, and the line, forming part of the local District Telegraph call system, was equipped with six telephones and first tested on the 29th of August, 1877. The press of the day announced that this was the first instance in which more than two telephones had been operated six telephones on one circuit.

The opening of this line was attended by Professor Graham Bell, his father, Professor Melville Bell, and his uncle, Professor David Bell, all of whom expressed their surprise and delight on the successful operation of six telephones on one circuit.

The satisfactory talking qualities of this line immediately led to the opening at Hamilton of the first Exchange in Canada, and the second in the world, by the Hamilton District Telephone Company on its call box circuits. The license to operate was granted on the 28th of May, 1877, and the first line opened on the 18th of October, 1877.

About this date attempts were made to talk simultaneously on two circuits from Hamilton to Dundas, five miles distant. The cross-talk was very troublesome. Professor Bell being appealed to for help recommended that each insulator on the line should have a zinc thimble between it and the crossarm. This was tried, but no improvement was noticeable, and the cross-talk continued until metallic circuits were built.

EARLY EFFORTS AFTER SUBSCRIBERS.

The inducements offered to attract subscribers at that early date appear to us as highly absurd. A circular issued in February, 1879, at Hamilton requested subscribers to send orders or short messages to the operators to transmit to subscribers for whom they were intended. This was to be done whenever the subscriber did not particularly desire his line to be connected, but the company stipulated in the circular that it could not guarantee correctness as its business consisted of putting subscribers in communication with each other. One can realize what a staff of operators would be required today under these conditions.

The coat illustrated is of moleskin fur lavishly trimmed with skunk. The garment is three-quarter length, flaring noticeably from the waistline down. There is a suggestion of "fittedness" about the bustline. The lining is pussy willow pattern in grey, with a bird design. The turban is velvet with with pheasant trimming.

One of the first inducements offered the public of Hamilton was a Time Service to correct clocks at noon each day. At that hour a signal was sounded over the lines from central by means of a stick simultaneously pressing on and closing fifteen keys, one to each line. This service was soon abandoned as the lines outgrew the length of the stick.

EARLY LONG DISTANCE LINES.

The first Long Distance Line test in Canada took place in 1876, when Professor Graham Bell applied to the Dominion Telegraph Company for a permit to test his embryo telephone on its telegraph line between Paris and Brantford. When the formal application was received, the general manager of the Telegraph Company handed his assistant the letter, with the remark, "Another of those cranks; consign it to the waste paper basket." But the assistant, scenting a source of profits, suggested that the line be rented for an hour, which was done. Needless to say the rental was never collected, as the talking, though possible but one way at that time, was successfully carried out, and it led to the Dominion Telegraph Company acquiring a license to operate the Bell Telephone Patent in Canada for a period of five years from 18th February, 1879.

The first commercial Long Distance Line test in Canada was made on Sept. 1st, 1877, a distance of 125 miles between Montreal and Brockville, but it was not successful, as the listeners on the line reported that the principal sounds heard were like the noise in a rivetting shop.

On the 20th of September, 1877, a successful conversation was carried on by Edison telephones between Montreal and Quebec, a distance of 200 miles. This was certainly a record talk for that period.

On the acquisition of the Bell patent by the Dominion Telegraph Company, its competitor, the Montreal Telegraph Company, acquired the Edison patent. Keen competition for exchange business immediately ensued, and as this attitude meant a fight to a finish, exchange telephone service in Canada could be had in the year 1879 almost for the asking.

NO PREMATURE PEACE.

(Rochester Post-Express).

Suppose Great Britain had stood by consenting while Belgium was destroyed or incorporated against her will in the German empire. Suppose that England had broken her pact or engagement with France and had looked on in pusillanimous inactivity while France was over-run and despoiled, Paris taken and the French people forced to ransom their capital by paying the total war cost of the enemy which attacked them. Suppose Great Britain had taken this cowardly course, would any voice in all the world be raised in justification of her conduct? She might have bought a short-lived safety by deserting her allies, but would not even those who profited by her poltroonery have held her in contempt? And the professional tail-twisters and others who by embargoes and otherwise would hamper her conduct of the war, would they not have despised and assailed her still more bitterly had she kept out?

Yet now that she is in the war, now that she has spent ten billion dollars in getting ready to fight there are sentimentalists and pacifists who would force an inconclusive peace upon her, a temporary truce during which the nations would toil night and day in preparation for an inevitable, still mightier clash. The British people do not take kindly to these suggestions. It naturally seems mawkish drivel to them that nations on whom a war was forced should be urged to stop the fighting before they had secured themselves against another attack. British papers point out that America has grown rich out of a war which other nations are waging for her protection as well as for their own. Germany is ready for a peace, they say, which gives her a free hand in Central and South America, and the sarcastic suggestion is made that England need not object to that if the United States does not. The boiled-down gist of their advice to our sob and slaver pacifists is to leave the Allies alone to fight to the end this war for a lasting peace; nor do they hesitate to declare that they would regard this republic a traitor to the cause of world freedom if an armistice should be forced upon them by American intrigue.

In June of 1864, the great Lincoln said in his grave, impressive way that the North accepted the war for a worthy object, that the war would end when that object was attained and that he hoped, under God, that it never would end until that time. All the God-fearing people of the North agreed with him that the struggle must not cease until its object, the preservation of the Union, had been achieved. Copperheads and pacifists may have raised discordant voices, but the war went on, and this war will go on until results commensurate with the effort made have been attained. The only effect, as far as can be seen, of peace proposals made through neutral states will be to show the world just what the two belligerents are fighting for. The Allies have defined their object. They fight that every race and nation shall be free to develop along its chosen lines, and to bring about conditions in which militarists can no longer plunge the world into war. Is not that an honorable and proper object and ideals of liberty, desire the war to end before these things have been secured?

Pointed Paragraphs.

Even when a woman can't drive a nail she refuses to try coaxing.

An ounce of intuition may be better than a pound of tuition.

In his own case a man looks upon cowardice as a "safety first" idea.

Every woman is a born actress — yet only a comparatively few go on the stage.

After a girl has been married six months she doesn't use half so many adjectives.

If a girl is pretty and knows it she does not care arap if the world knows it.

Don't get into the habit of giving advice simply because you want to get rid of it.

Are you thinking of buying an aeroplane? It costs nothing to think about it.

Sometimes a man's judgment enables him to do a thing almost as woman can do it without any judgment.

Full-length fur coats are shown extensively among the new models for Fall wear. At first glance one would think the garment illustrated was a mass of sable fur. The general cut and style, however, are in the latest mode, the huge roll collar being made to roll in deep rever effect.

An immense pile of wood was pil

Is No Humor In the Huns

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, without doubt the greatest humorist of the war, is an unaffected young soldier—delightful raconteur of good stories. He is only 28 years of age. His friends are asking him how he manages to extract so much humor out of this, the most horrible of all wars. He tells them it's just what he sees. He is one of the war's greatest discoveries. His drawings are often made under fire. Their powerful appeal is shown by the fact that already over a million copies of his collected cartoons have been sold in different countries of the British Empire.

Some of his stories follow:

It is remarkable how difficult it is to persuade Tommy to take care of himself. He does not dream of fortifying himself with sandbags of his own accord. He would sooner lie down in a place and go to sleep, entirely oblivious of any danger.

I remember finding one man in the ruins of a house calmly sleeping against a papier-mache wall which was perforated from top to bottom by the enemy's fire.

In Plug Street Wood I sketched the picture which I captioned "I Will Have Your 'Blimin'' Ears Cut Off," showing the platoon barber at work with an enormous shell passing just overhead.

CUT GERMAN HAIR.

One of my machine gunners was the platoon hair cutter, and during the Christmas truce he went into No Man's Land and cut the hair of the German who, unlike his close-cropped brothers, had long locks like some famous virtuoso.

Just picture in your mind a group of [illegible], fat-headed looking Germans standing looking on while our man got to work with his clippers. Is it not a sight for the zoo?

Bert, Bill and Alf, the names of the characters that often appear in my cartoons, I think I can fairly say, are types of the dogged, humorous Tommies that one meets almost everywhere—the ever-lasting Britons, the kind of men who, however gruesome or exhausting may be their task, will stick to it, not because they are bullied into it, nor because they particularly like it, but because it's all in the day's work.

Once when we occupied a village which had been precipitately left by the Belgian inhabitants our men found some bowler hats and umbrellas. Judge of the amusement of the Germans in the opposite trenches when some of our men came out into the pouring rain disguised with these! Even the Germans laughed.

On another occasion I remember seeing a large Saxon sergeant leaning heavily on some barbed wire on our trenches. He was alive, and we found he was helplessly drunk. He was promptly put under arrest by one of our Tommies and placed in a trolley, with his fat legs dangling over the side, and carried to the rear, to the uproarious delight of the Tommies.

The offending sergeant subsequently explained that he had been on a prolonged visit to an "establishment," and on returning had mistaken our lines for his own. We held a mock court, found him drunk or found him "guilty of being drunk," and sentenced him to three years hard labor—during the duration of the war.

When asked if he had anything to say in his own behalf he at once pleaded guilty.

NEVER KNEW IT WAS FARCE.

Just think of the whole thing. During the whole bout when we were playing with him, he never once realized that the entire affair was a farce. Even when he was told that the whole affair was a mere joke, he simply shrugged his big shoulders and stood resigned.

I tell you these Germans have no sense of humor.

In the early days when telescopic sights were not available for our snipers, one of our officers used a pair of binoculars. He saw a large, fat German exercising with dumb-bells, and having got on the target that German's dumb-bells disappeared very suddenly.

You should have watched through the distance how that fat German raved. He was shaking his fist toward our direction, and I suppose threatening death and torture to his unseen "enemy."

Here is a sample of the kind of humor that assails one in the trenches.

Bert has toothache and one side of his face was swollen badly. "When you get the other side swollen," he was told, "we will have your top storey photoed and sent home to the papers to show how well they feed the army." That is as much as Bert got in the line of sympathy.

I have met many Huns in the trenches, and was on good terms with many of them in front of our lines—while not engaged in killing them—and I have never met a humorous Hun yet.

RISKY RUBBISH HEAPS.

Many Serious Fires Traceable to Such Accumulations.

More fires originate in rubbish heaps than from any other source. To permit rubbish to remain in the building not only invites a fire to visit your home or place of business, and render your family temporarily homeless, or cripple your business at a time when you can least afford it, but also endangers the lives of your family or employees. In addition to destroying an average of $23,000,000 in property value in Canada each year, fire caused the death of 141 persons in one year. The home is built to protect our loved ones, and we want to do everything to insure absolute protection to those who live in it. That rubbish heap in the attic, storeroom or basement is a menace to your household, because there is always a possibility of fire starting in it, and it may start when least expected. Consider what might happen, and then, without delay, eliminate the menace of the rubbish heap.

ONLY BASIS FOR PEACE

Undoubtedly Hall Caine spoke as a faithful representative of the English people, spoke the deep unchanging determination of all Britain, when in his cable despatch to the Times, in reply to the arguments of "Cosmos," he said that:

It is just because the war has thus far produced no definite military results that we think it cannot stop. We think that to end the war now after so much sacrifice and suffering by any form of inconclusive peace, which would prove and establish nothing, would be waste—wanton waste, irretrievable, inexcusable, blind, wicked and binding waste such as we dare not for one moment contemplate. We think such a peace would be treason to the dead, disloyalty to the living, an assault on the authority of government, an open appeal to the lawlessness of anarchy, a deliberate outrage on the principles of patriotism, and even on the sacred precepts of religion.

Mr. Caine has given expression to the actual feeling and convictions of the vast majority of Englishmen in respect to a premature peace. The war must go on until its purpose is accomplished. This is the feeling and the determination of the British people and their allies, because it is only when Germany has been made to realize that she is in the wrong that "we can approach a discussion of a peace that will be permanent because based not merely on military necessity but on practical recognition of the precepts of moral law." That is the only sure foundation. And "of such a realization we see no sign of in Germany at present."

Mere lip service profession of repentance, what we might call formal adhesion to the principles of moral law, is not enough. Peace must have a surer guarantee. Mr. Caine, and here he expresses the thought not only of all the Allies, but of the whole neutral world, save whatever small part of it may still be under subjection to the German way of thinking, tells what that guarantee must be:

But though such of us as know history and take a human view of war and its probable results have never hoped for or dreamed of the extermination of Germany as an empire, we have, indeed, hoped for and dreamed of the destruction of the German political ideal which is based, as we see it, on the idea that civilization, culture, and the general welfare of the human family are secured by the dominion and tyranny of the sword, with its inevitable consequences of the violation of the liberties of the little nations and the general Germanizing of the world. After two and a half years of war we see no sign yet that Germany has parted company with this ideal and, therefore, no indication of peace that could be built on Christian principles of the equal rights of all peoples."

With a people possessed of the unconquerable spirit that has made English history illustrious as the chronicle of achievements in the cause of human liberty, when great nations like Russia, stirred by the same resolve, enter upon and pursue in that firm temper so great an undertaking as the present war, some transforming change must be wrought in them or in their foe before any external influence can be exerted either with justice and propriety or with hope of success for the hastening of peace. The hope not merely of ending it, but of "ending it once for all," inspires and carries them on. "Only when the allies feel that the worst disasters which may result from going on with it may not be atoned for by the triumph of the principles they are fighting for can the favorable moment come for a peace that will be founded merely on calculations of loss or gain." To them life is not so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of enslavement to the Prussian political and military ideal.

Peace will come to France in one of two ways. Either conquered Germany will surrender her sword to her victorious enemy, or the German people through a late awakening to the truth that they are fighting not for themselves, but for a dynasty and a detestable political ideal, will end the strife by changing their government. The more probable way to peace, the better and more merciful way, is through the uprising of the German people against a war begun in wickedness and continued in desperation. It is upon the subjects of the German Emperor, therefore, that the forces of outside persuasion, if they are called into play, should be exerted. In that direction only lies hope.

For these reasons the proposed move of the American Neutral Conference Committee for a conference of neutral nations to "offer joint mediation to belligerents by proposals calculated to form the basis of a permanent peace" is most questionable as to its timeliness and its probable fruit. No offer of mediation will be listened to by the allied powers. The very tender of it would be resented as an unfriendly act. Certainly our Government would not now by an inopportune and unwelcome proffer of service impair or totally destroy the influence it may hope to employ with good effect at a more propitious moment. It is proposed that petitions shall be circulated throughout the United States, and that many organizations will be sought to give their aid in procuring signatures to a prayer addressed to the President in the sense of the committee's peace endeavor. The right of petition for a redress of curable grievances is unquestioned, but the propriety of petitioning the President to do an utterly vain thing is open to grave question. It is known to all the world that Germany wants peace, Austria still more. Peace now would leave the "German political ideal," the destruction of which Hall Caine says is the great object for which the war must be carried on, still vital and controlling in the great empire. Peace now, with the chief issue of the war undetermined, would be but the truce of Europe, a breathing spell to remarshal the forces for the next war. Let these petitioners address the German people with messages of enlightenment and exhortation. The war will end when the Hohenzollern surrenders to the allies or to his own people.

In using sugar of lead for setting colors, be sure to use it before the garment is soiled, as it will also set dirt and stains. It is better used on new cloth, setting the color before wearing. Ten cents' worth of sugar of lead to one gallon of water will set nearly all shades of blue.

Had Pneumonia

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

(A cough is an early symptom of pneumonia. It is at first frequent and hacking, and is accompanied with a little tough, colorless expectoration, which soon, however, becomes more copious and of a rusty red color, the lungs become congested and the bronchial tubes filled with phlegm making it hard for the sufferer to breathe. Males are more commonly attacked than females, and a previous attack seems to give a special liability to another.

On the first sign of a cold or cough you should get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent the cold from developing into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. E. Charles, North Toronto, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my husband had a very bad attack of pneumonia, and the doctors said he was getting consumption. A friend came in to see me and told me to get Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles, and they seemed to quite clear his chest of the phlegm, and now he is fine and well.

I shall never be without it in the house as it is a very valuable medicine."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

The genuine is manufactured solely by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

TORONTO.—Price changes continue to come into effect with unceasing regularity. Drygoods wholesalers report a steady upward movement of prices; their business is practically at a standstill now. One representative firm reported an increase in the annual turnover amounting to close to three-quarters of a million, and another wholesaler stated that this week was the first in eighteen months, for which an increase had not been noted over the corresponding period twelve months before. The holiday trade in hardware was stated to be very satisfactory. Bank clearings continue to give a favorable impression of the commercial situation, and payments are fairly satisfactory.

MONTREAL.—Wholesalers, jobbers and retailers are recovering from one of the busiest Christmas season that has been experienced. Textile mills are very busy. Demand for cured meats and all lines of provisions has been marked. Hardware and groceries are experiencing a moderate movement. The sugar situation is quiet, and an easier feeling is predominant.

OTTAWA.—In summing up the results of the business ending last week, retailers are practically unanimous in reporting very satisfactory conditions. Most wholesale and retail firms are able to announce increases on the total year's business. The money situation continues to be fairly good.

HAMILTON—A large proportion of this city's business men are satisfied with trade in year that is just closing, and in view of the liberal orders for spring delivery they are looking to the future with confidence, at the same time realizing that changed conditions are bound to result sooner or later. An attitude of caution is generally noticed, and large surpluses which were piled up this year being relied upon to tide over any temporary reverses which may easily result from a sudden break in values consequent upon the end of hostilities. Building in the last year was [illegible] more extensive than for 1915, but it [illegible] quite an extent to provide for the [illegible] of war business. Labor is [illegible] employed, and little or no distress [illegible] is felt in spite of the high prices [illegible] commodities. Drygoods, house furnishing[illegible] and shoes and fancy lines were particularly active [illegible] to the holiday.

LONDON.—The wholesale trade is anticipating an active turnover of goods for spring requirements. A hesitation about quoting prices for future delivery is being noted. Drygoods prices are still showing a tendency to advance.

WINNIPEG.—There is a fairly active demand for all staples. The transportation difficulties appear to be no nearer solution than ever and if anything they have become more complicated within the last two weeks. Grocery lines are fairly active. Country trade is reported generally good for the closing months of the year, and the same conditions are assured for the beginning of 1917.

CALGARY.—Trade in the Northwest was entirely favorable for the holiday season, and business is expected to go ahead with little interruption for the next few months.

VANCOUVER.—The trade situation is showing improvements, and reports of Christmas that have just come to hand indicate substantial increases over last year. Wholesalers appear to be quite satisfied with the conditions of the last few months.

QUEBEC.—Cold weather has livened business, [illegible] fairly brisk for the season. Owing to the holidays retailers report business good. The industrial condition is unchanged, manufacturers as a rule are well employed. Country and city collections are fairly good.

Using Up Magazines.

Have an old magazine handy on the kitchen serving table upon which to place hot or soiled dishes from the stove. As the top leaf becomes soiled it is torn off and burned. Because of the weight of the magazine it is often possible to tear off a leaf with one hand while the other hand is engaged. This is easier than scraping black and greasy rings from the table or having the white oilcloth scarred by stains and burns. When the youngsters want to paste things into their scrap books give them an old magazine to work on. As fast as a leaf becomes gummy it may be torn off and thrown away, and a clean one is always waiting. This saves the table from becoming sticky and smeared with paste.

The Lion Didn't Roar.

It is related that Pinnow, the faithful servant and personal valet of Prince Bismarck, once trod on his master's gouty foot. Instead of swearing at him or even declaring he was a clumsy fool, Bismarck, noticing that Pinnow himself was frightened, said: "Consider yourself honored. No other person, my dear Pinnow, not even the Kaiser himself, would have been suffered to tread on my corns."

FOR "LIVERISHNESS" USE MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

THEY NEVER FAIL TO DO GOOD.

Mrs. J. Shellsworth, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great value I have received by using your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills I have not been bothered with the headaches any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean away all waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all complaints arising from a liver which has become inactive.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, or 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance (50c for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance (1.00 for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, JANUARY 18th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A thrifty man is one who is still sifting ashes three months after the furnace season has started.

+ + +

PTE. Phil. Dennie of the 160th Batt. sends home some interesting clippings from Old London newspapers dealing with conditions at the Front. Judging by captured letters written by German soldiers to their families at home and republished in the London Eng. News the morale of the German troops on the West Front is not to be compared with what it was a year ago. In their despatching messages, they describe the order to attack in the West as their death warrant. Many show a thoroughly broken spirit and speak of "sitting all day under the earth just waiting for the end."

+ + +

FROM every nook and cranny of the Dominion come stories of how the Canadian Patriotic Fund has relieved distress and driven the wolf of poverty from the door. Take the following three cases told of by the Secretary of a small Branch up in the Laurentians.

Mrs........was stricken with tuberculosis after her husband went overseas, and without the aid of the Patriotic Fund would not have been able to pay for the proper treatment necessary for any hope of recovery.

The wife of one soldier was confined after her husband went overseas, and both she and the baby died. There were three older children and there must have been much distress but for the help of the Patriotic Fund.

One of our dependents.—a French Canadian—has eight children, the youngest 15 months old, also a grandfather to maintain during her husband's absence. Certainly this is a case where the help of the Patriotic Fund is absolutely essential.

+ + +

DO it now! Do what? Why, fill up your National [illegible] Card, of course! That [illegible] New Year's duty [illegible], if you are a man between the ages of 16 and 65. Do it why? Because your country requires the information, both for the proper conduct of your country's affairs during the war and for the difficult period just after the war. Having filled up your own card, see that it gets back through the authorized Postoffice Collector. Then do what you can to see that every other man in the house you live in, or the place you work does the same. The information will be of tenfold value to the country if everyone does this simple duty. It's a mere trifle that any of us at best can do, compared with what the men at the front are doing. This little thing we can do, and even if some of us think we could have worked out a better scheme, it is clearly our duty to turn to and help. If the scheme is not a total success it will be because of those who don't do the trifle now asked of them, and any lack of success would be a loss of most valuable time at the most critical time of our country's history. Don't let it be your fault. Do it now!

+ + +

QUITE apart from its immediate and local effect, the West Simcoe bye-election has been a significant one in defining once more, not only the policies but also the attitudes of the Conservative and Liberal parties in Ontario. It shows the tactics which the government adopts under panic and it shows that the Conservative Gov't under fear is neither admirable nor astute. The campaign carried on in West Simcoe was a particularly offensive exhibition and utterly unjustifiable, whatever the immediate political result of it might be. The campaign also gave the Liberals an opportunity to emphasize under the white light of publicity interesting policies. Very considerable attention for example, was given to the problem of agriculture and especially to one phase of it—the under representation of farmers in the legislature. Even before the West Simcoe election began the facts were the same and there were only 15 farmers in the legislature out of 111 members, but the bye-election with public attention turned upon it gave an opportunity of driving this fact home and again, quite apart from the immediate result of this election it is undoubtedly true that farmers all over the province have realized more clearly than before that they must have more representatives. The Liberals also had an opportunity of bringing before the public another aspect of the nickel question. The question of the taxation of the Nickel Trust, and in this campaign the Liberals were signally successful. They forced the government to say that they would tax the Nickel Trust more heavily than they have been taxing them, and more in accordance with the law.

Town Council Holds Inaugural Session

Hydro will be Only Big Undertaking

In 1917 Says Mayor Johnston — Will Endeavor to Keep Down Expenditure—Chief of Police and Cemetery Caretaker Get Raises—Hydro Commission Requested to Go Ahead.

Hang on tight to the purse strings in this War year of 1917, was the policy laid down by Mayor Andy Johnston at the inaugural session of the Town Council last Thursday night. The only big undertaking the coming year, said the Mayor, will be Hydro, on which the people have given their mandate. The new Council is not in favour of wasting any time getting hydro started, and passed a resolution requesting the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario to get busy at once. Mayor Johnston said he was proud of the intelligent lot of Councillors who had been elected with him. He appreciated the action of a gentleman like Rev. Mr. Sanderson, who might feel at his time of life that he was entitled to a rest, coming out simply because he felt it was his duty. The Mayor referred to the absence of two Councillors, Messrs. Truax and McGregor, who were out of town. It had been reported, said the Mayor, that these men would never take their seats at the Council, but he wished to say that both would be present at the next meeting.

The members present were:—Mayor Andy Johnston, Reeve Robt. Russell, Councillors McCarter, Vogan, Sanderson and McKinnon.

Opened with Prayer.

Mayor Johnston adopted the custom now prevalent in many towns and cities of starting the year's proceedings with prayer. The Mayor called upon Rev. C. W. Cosens who invoked the Divine Blessing upon the year's proceedings.

Standing Committees

The report of the Committee to strike Standing Committees, consisting of Reeve Russell, Couns. McCarter and Vogan, was adopted as follows:—

Finance, Salaries and School,—Messrs. Vogan, McCarter and McGregor.

Streets, Sidewalks and Drainage,—Messrs. Russell, McKinnon, and McGregor.

Relief and Cemetery—Messrs. McCarter, Vogan and Sanderson.

Market and Property—Messrs. Truax, McCarter and Russell.

Fire and Water—Messrs. McKinnon McGregor and Truax.

Railways—Messrs. McGregor, McCarter and Russell.

Printing and License—Messrs. Sanderson, Truax and Vogan.

Board of Industry—The Mayor, Truax, McCarter and Russell.

Street Lighting—Messrs. McCarter, Sanderson and McKinnon.

Court of Revision—Messrs. Sanderson, McCarter, Russell, McKinnon and McGregor.

Manager Burrows of the Merchants Bank reported that on Dec. 30th, the Town's balance was as follows:—$250.08 current account: $1008.07 sinking fund. As the payment of debentures coming due Jan. 1st, had produced an overdraft, Town Treasurer Collins asked that a by-law be passed, authorising the Mayor and Treasurer to borrow $15,000 from the Bank to meet current expenditures.

Tax Collector Crawford reported that the sum of $23,051.40 in taxes had been collected.

Chief Ferguson reported $15.75 police fees collected during the month of December.

Asked More Salary

Caretaker R. K. Sutton of the cemetery asked to have his salary raised from $375 to $450 and that the town pay for his postage and Telephone amounting to $25. Chief Ferguson asked for a raise in salary, stating that the cost of living had increased fifty per cent.

Mayor Johnston favoured no increases in salary for 1917.

Reeve Russell suggested allowing the Chief the County Court fees which he thought would amount to $30 or $40.

Coun. McCarter thought the Chief should be satisfied with a small raise considering that he got house rent, light and heating free.

On the motion of Couns. McCarter and Vogan, Chief Ferguson's salary was raised from $650 to $[illegible].

On motion of Couns. Sanderson and McKinnon, R. K. Sutton's salary was raised from $375 to $400.

Town Officials Reappointed.

Other officials were appointed as follows:—Town Clerk, A. Collins, $350. Town Treas., A. Collins, $100. Night Watchman Swanston, $1.00 a night. Waterworks Eng. Wilton, $365; M. O. H., Dr. Potter, $50, Chairman Board of Health, H. H. McKay, $10; Auditors Messrs. McBurney and Burrows, $10 each first audit, $5 each second audit. fence viewers, same as last year, with statutory fees.

The Clerk was instructed to advertise for tenders for the town printing and for a supply of wood, tenders to be in by January 20th, and to advertise for an Assessment at $150.

GO TO IT, HYDRO!

Moved by R. Russell, seconded by John McKinnon (1) that the Clerk be instructed to send the Hydro Power Commission of Ontario the result of the vote taken on the Enabling By-law on Jan. 1st, 1917. (2) That the Commission be requested to give us cost of distributing system and the amount that will be required to be raised by debenture. (3) That the Commission be requested to endeavor to adjust matters with the Walkerton Electric Light and Power Co. with regard to their power plant and arrange if possible with the Company the sale of their distributing system to the Municipality of Walkerton at a fair valuation.

Town Hall rent was rebated to the I. O. D. E., K. K. K. Club, and Patriotic Dance Club.

Mr. James Warren was appointed as the Council's representative at the Public Library Board for 1917—8—9.

Mr. Geo. H. McKay was appointed High School Trustee.

Motion re Hydro.

The following motion was unanimously carried:—moved by R. Russell, seconded by John McKinnon (1.) that the clerk be instructed to send the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario the result of the vote taken on the Enabling By-law on Jan. 1st 1917. (2.) that the Commission be requested to give us cost of distributing system and the amount that will be required to be raised by debenture, (3.) that the Commission be requested to endeavour to adjust matters with the Walkerton Electric Light and Power Co. with regard to their power plant and arrange if possible with the Co, the sale of their distributing system to the municipality of Walkerton at a fair valuation.

Council adjourned to meet again Friday Jan. 26th at 7.30 p.m.

CARRICK COUNCIL

Town Hall, Jan. 8th, 1917

Carrick Council met this date pursuant to Statute. Present—Moses Filsinger, Reeve; Louis Doerling, Deputy-Reeve; Joseph Montag, Arthur Lewis and Charles Wagner, Councillors. Having each made his declaration of office and qualification, Council was duly organized. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

Council then resolved itself into a Committee of the whole to strike the Standing Committees for the year.

Report of Committee of the whole.

Road and Bridge Com.—All the members of the Council.

Finance Com.—Filsinger, Montag and Lewis.

Salaries Com.—Filsinger, Montag, and Lewis.

Schools Com. — Montag, Lewis, Wagner.

Property Com.—Filsinger, Doering, Wagner.

Doering—Wagner—That the report of the Committee of the whole be adopted.—Carried.

Wagner—Lewis—That J. A. Johnston be retained as Clerk, Henry Keelan as Treasurer and John Diebel as Caretaker of Hall for 1917.—Carried.

Montag—Doering — That application for the offices of Assessor and Collector of taxes be received by the Clerk up to ten o'clock in the forenoon of the date of next meeting.—Carried.

Lewis—Wagner—That Messrs J. N. Schefter and George Helwig be appointed auditors for the current year—Carried.

Doering — Montag — That Jac. Schmidt be appointed sheep valuator for 1917—Carried.

Montag—Doering—That Dr. J. A. Wilson be appointed Medical Officer of Health, D. W. Clubine Sanitary Inspector, and Thomas Inglis a member of the Board of Health for the current year.—Carried.

Montag—Wagner—That John Coyles claim for loss for sheep killed by dogs be laid over until next meeting.—Carried.

Lewis—Wagner — That the Clerk subscribe for six copies of the Municipal World for the members of Council and Clerk.—Carried Wagner—Montag — That ten dollars be granted to the Bruce County Hospital and five dollars to the Sick Children's Hospital.—Carried.

By-laws Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 were read a first time.

Doering—Montag — That By-laws Nos 1, 2, 3 and 4 be now read a second and third and finally passed.—Carried.

FINANCE REPORT

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee and disposed of as follows:—

Geo. Kunkel, sal. as Coll Div 1	$35 00
C. Hill, sal as Coll Div 2	40 00
J. Dummond, gravl. acct	9 50
Mildmay Elec. Light Co. light	22 10
Mildmay Gaz. statements, adv.	13 00
J. A. Johnston, reg B. M. & D.	12 60
John Bell, 24 loads gravel	1 44
B. Kuntz, bal gravelling acct	17 00

PURITY FLOUR
MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD
We make it good-our customers have made it famous.
14

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war. Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in those cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war; our armies are still growing; the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund still must be maintained. And what do we find: in every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.

Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONTROL, BECAUSE—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum those families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part, by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden. Why take from them this task, and give it to all, rich and poor?

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

MEN AND WOMEN OF ONTARIO:

Bend your backs once again to this burden. If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally, taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty, your war-time part, in this day of national sacrifice.

The Fund requires $12,500,000 for 1917. Of this Ontario is asked to raise $6,000,000, being the estimated requirements of Ontario's families. If there is no local Fund to which you can subscribe, send your gift direct to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Victoria Street, Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

After Every Meal

WRIGLEY'S

The Flavor Lasts

IT'S Remarkable how children out-grow their smocks and frocks, their playthings their childish ways and most of all, their photographs. Only photographs will keep them as they are.

FRASER STUDIO

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.

MONEY to LOAN

REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies -- English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

Fall Clearing Sale of WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—

Dining Room, Parlor, Hall, Sitting Room, Bath Room, and Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

DENTAL

W. E. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Cotesm; Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Nothing more suitable than a Trunk, Bag or Suit Case for a Christmas present. See our nice stock.

McCARTER Harness Co.

The Best Newspaper Value
In Western Ontario
..The..
London Advertiser
All Mail Editions $3.00 Per Year

CENTRAL Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, B. Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, or Chepstowe
D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley.
45 t. f.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that a By-law was passed by the municipal council of the Township of Brant, on the 6th day of November, 1916, providing for the issue of Debentures, to the amount of $7 800, for the purpose of Hydro Electric Power and Light for the village of Elmwood, in the Township of Brant, that such By-[illegible] was regis[illegible]ed in the Registry Office [illegible]tered division of the County of Bruce on the 22nd day of December, 1916. Any motion to quash or set aside the same or any part thereof, must be must be made within three months after the first publication of this notice and cannot be made thereafter.

Dated this 26th day of Dec. 1916.

M. A. McCallum.
Clerk of Brant Township.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE: THOMPSON: BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
Solicitors for Applicant.

43—9.

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT

79 Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont.,
August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel rundown and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

WALTER J. MARRIOTT.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GIRLS WANTED!

For Office Work to fill the places of men who have gone or are going to the Front. Young women can render the Country real service by preparing to take positions in Bank and Business Offices, and thus relieve men for active service.

Special Courses of training in Bookkeeping, Shorthand, and all other Commercial subjects now in progress. Students admitted at any time. Illustrated catalogue free.

NORTHERN Business College
OWEN SOUND, ONT.
C. A. Fleming, - Prin.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL.

A. HEHN
City Bakery

POETS' CORNER

YOU AND I

If you would smile a little more
And I would kinder be,
If you would stop to think before
You think of faults you see,
If I would allow more patience, too,
With all with whom I'm hurled,
Then I would help—and so would you
To make a better world.

If you would cheer your neighbour
And I'd encourage mine;
If you would linger at his door
To say his work is fine,
And I would stop to help him when
His lips in frowns are curled;
Both you and I'd be helping then
To make a better world.

But just as long as you keep still
And plod your selfish way;
And I rush on and heedless kill
The kind words I could say;
While you and I refuse to smile
And keep our gay flags furled;
Some one will grumble all the while
That it's a gloomy world.

News About Town

Have you renewed your Telescope yet?

Fur caps worth $1.25 to $1.50 for $1.00 at Woodman & Co's.

Nat Fitzsimmons, an eighteen-year old six-footer of 12th con. Greenock, has enlisted in the Royal Navy.

Capt. Donald Martyn, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Martyn, of Ripley is home from France where he was wounded on Nov. 11.

Mr. John Wallace of Greenock delivered a nice pair of Clyde Colts on Monday to Mr. Chris. Cave of Elmwood for a good sum.

Mr. J. M. Fleming of River Bow, Alberta, who has been farming in the West the past twenty years, is spending the winter with his father, Mr. Richard Fleming, Chepstow.

Temporary reduction, passenger train service to facilitate freight movements, effective Sunday, January 14th, 1917. Particulars from Ticket Agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, or W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

✣ ✣ ✣

Former Pinkerton Lady

Mrs. Geo. A. Sutherland of Windthorst, Sask. writes:—I enjoyed the write-up of Pretty Pinkerton, my old home village, very much for I am familiar with nearly all the people and all the places you mentioned. I have cousins and old schoolmates in the 160th and don't like to miss a paper. We are having a beautiful winter here but very little snow. Wishing you a prosperous New Year.

+ + +

Passing of Culross Settler

The death of Mr. William Whyte, one of the oldest settlers of Culross, occurred on Wednesday last. Mr. Whyte had been poorly for some time. As a mere lad he came into the Queen's Bush in 1852 with his parents, settling on the bush lot which by dint of hard effort blossomed into a highly productive farm. Besides his sorrowing widow, he leaves to mourn four sons, William, of Greenock, Herb, Bert and Eldon at home, and one daughter, Mrs. John Whitehead jr. of Brant. The funeral took place Friday from his late residence to Greenock Baptist Cemetery, service being conducted by Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Riversdale.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

Winter Goods

Axes We have a good supply of Axes, ranging in price from 85c to $1.25. Try a Samson, fully guaranteed at $1.25.

Saws There is none better than the Celebrated Improved Razor Cross Cut Saw.

ts We have a full line of Winter Mitts and Gloves.

ware When in need of Graniteware, don't forget our "Old English."

Sausage Grinders and Saws, Butcher Knives.

VOGAN

Letters From The Front

Personal Messages From Our Own Boys Who are Fighting the Empire's Battles.

ALVIN WILTON WRITES.

Somewhere in France,
December 21st, 1916.

Dear parents and sisters:—

Your letters of Nov. 1st, and 16th, received yesterday and certainly was glad to hear from you as it is near two months since I had received any mail of any kind. I am glad to hear that you are well as this leaves me very much better. I have been at the Canadian Base for the last week, but am going back up the line to-morrow night. I suppose it will be Xmas in the trenches, but I do not mind when I am feeling well.

I had the good fortune to receive a bundle of mail yesterday containing fifteen letters and they most all stated that there was a parcel on the road and to be on the lookout for them. Well I sure will as a bite of homemade stuff will be a real treat. I think I will enjoy a very good Xmas if I get all the parcels that are on the way for me. There must be some there for the last month as Bertha and Gertie said they sent three in one week. They certainly have been good to me. I am sure I will never be able to repay them.

I am in bed writing this. In bed and it is just 7.15 p. m. We are in tents and by being in bed one can keep rather warm.

Father, you asked me if I ever see any of the Walkerton boys. I saw a few when we first came down this way but I never saw Charlie Sutton. I think there are quite a lot of them in the hospitals in England. The Walkerton boys with the same unit as myself are all right so far, but we got quite a bad cutting up, but it was after I left to go to the hospital.

I don't think it will be long until some of the 160th Batt'n are over as there are quite a lot of drafts coming over now. Well it is just about Xmas and I can hardly believe it, nohow, everything green, but still it is very cold and damp. I expect a pass to England before long so if I do I intend getting some good photos taken. I suppose things are very quiet around home now, but I think Bruce will have to give a few more boys yet before we win the war, but I don't think it will be much longer than the middle of next summer. Well, dear parents, news is very scarce so I must close, wishing you all a very Merry Xmas. From your loving son,

Alvin E.

+ + +

SERGT. NADJIWON OF 160TH

To the People of Cape Croker:

Dear friends,—For a good many years I and my dear boys have never been away on such an occasion, I thought that I would write you a short letter in behalf of all the boys. No doubt you all feel the absence of your boys, but you must remember that there are others who feel the same burden as you do, and you will please remember that the cause is worthy of the sacrifice, and I am sure that you will all enjoy yourselves and keep the home fires burning. I might say that with the exceptions of one or two of the boys we are getting along fine. Of course we all wish we could be with you all but, since we can't, we will make the best of it and I am sure you will do the same. We, Cape Croker boys, all live in a frame hut about 40 ft. long and 24 ft. wide, and you may be sure we have some high old times, and we are just like one family. In a camp like this we are all brothers and there are a lot of soldiers here. How long we will be here we do not know, but we are all very busy practising how to kill Germans, and believe me some of the boys know how to shoot, and it will be a busy day for them when we get over to France, and then we will be home to spend the next Xmas and New Years with you all.

Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, from all.

Sergt. Nadjiwon.

+ + +

PTE CHAS K. SUTTON

After spending a Christmas in Bermuda, a Christmas in Belgium, Pte. Chas. K. Sutton, one of the first Walkerton boys to enlist, writes home to his parents on the eve of spending his third Christmas as a soldier, in France.

Dear Mother and Father:—

Received your most welcome letters of the 16th and 24th of November, also the money and sweater coat, underwear, gloves and handkerchief. Tell Harvey Damm that I am very thankful for the handkerchiefs. The sweater and underwear and gloves are fine and the money came in just at the right time. I have the leather boots and gloves you sent last winter. It has been much colder the last few days and we have our old friend, the mud, back again. I have not seen any of the Walkerton boys lately and have not received Aunt Emma's Christmas box yet but have had several letters from her lately. Capt. J. M. Paulin's mother, whose home is in England, sent me a fine Christmas box, a big cake, a package of dates, package of chocolates, apples, tin of cigarettes, pair of socks, handkerchiefs and a letter thanking me for looking after her son, which I enclose. "Will you kindly accept the accompanying few things with best wishes for Christmas. Thanking you very much for all your kind care and attention to my son." I think it is very good of her, don't you? I received a fine Christmas box from Miss Black and her mother, from St. Thomas. I received several papers lately. Am glad to hear that Keyworth and Gladys are getting along fine at school and with their music lessons. Keep them at it as long as possible. Walter Pitt, who was wounded, has been away for some time but I have not heard from him. Does he write to his mother? and could you get me his address as I would like to write him? Also John Jerome's. We will soon have some of the Bruce boys over here. The last dugout that I was in was occupied by five of us. It was nice and warm, but it was some squeeze. We had to get up one at a time in the morning to dress, there wasn't room for rats, ha ha. The billet before this was in a cellar of an old Chateau which answered as a living room, and bed-room, furnished with an old box, that answered the purpose of a table and a bed made out of some old bags and two poles. I hadn't got a window so I had one candle power. The only decoration was my rifle and equipment and it was pretty comfortable with an overcoat on. We had no fire as Madame would not allow it as it would make the people out upstairs. Could you get me Cousin Will Fatt's address. I believe you said he was out here as Lieut. of the Cyclists.

No. 477, 808, Pte. C. K. Sutton,
c o. Capt. J. M. Pauline,
7th Can. Inf. Brigade, H.Q.
France.

Be sure to write with this address as I don't know where I am going next. I was sick with a cold a week ago but I am feeling fine now. It is only five days until Christmas and Spring will soon be here. I am sure this summer's campaign will finish the war. But there will be some hard fighting to be done. I see where the French are doing fine. Well, Mother, we sure have everything convenient around this billet, we have to go about three blocks for a meal and it is a tight squeeze at night to get room on the floor to sleep but we don't mind that as it is warm. I will have to close wishing that you all enjoy your Christmas and hope this finds you all well as it leaves me in the best of health. From your loving son

Charlie

P. S. I had a letter from Cousin Mel and he expects to be in France again before long. Will write when I get Christmas boxes. Had a letter from the I. O. D. E. Will write too when I receive their box.

+ + +

REV. JOHN MACNEILL IN ENGLAND

In a letter to Miss McCallum of Paisley from Witley Camp, Dec. 19th, Rev. John MacNeill speaks of his work among the soldiers: "I wish I had time and space to write you fully about this privilege I have of speaking to the men. My first five weeks were spent in the Shorncliffe area, where there are, roughly speaking, six different camps of men, and in each camp is a Y. M. C. A. hut. These camps I visited in turn, speaking in the Y. M. C. A. huts, which, according to size will accommodate from 400 to 600 men. As a rule our meetings have been packed to standing, with the interest very deep and, so far as one can judge, the results have been far reaching and most gratifying. It is a wonderful privilege to bring these men any moral uplift or word of cheer. And how splendidly they answer the challenge of the christian life! Let me give you a little glimpse into one of our meetings. Before six o'clock the men, having had their supper, begin to gather at the Y. M. C. A. hut in their locality to write letters or supplement their army rations with a cup of coffee or tea and a bun. Generally they like to congregate just for the good fellowship they find. At all events they are there. In most cases the Y. M. C. A. hut is a long, low building with a platform and piano at one end and the canteen and writing tables at the other. There is no partition between, and the place swarms with men standing, sitting, working, smoking, eating and drinking. It is that motley mob we must reduce to order and from them get a hearing. At 6.30 we begin. I have a song leader who travels with me everywhere, a sort of "Alexander" in song and a genius at getting men to sing. We have a good man, generally found in the audience, at the piano. We start out to "Hang the old Kaiser on a Sour Apple Tree" to the tune of "John Brown's Body." Then "Pack up Your Troubles in Your old Kit Bag," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning." Sometimes my song leader has them whistle it. Now he swings the right hand side of the house against the left, or the men under 25 years against the men over, or he may call on the "choir" to sing the verse, and as the choir consists of myself I stand up manfully and sing my solo, amid "thunders of applause" though there is no encore, at which my pride is laid in the dust. The spirit of good-fellowship grows. It is an easy slip to the old home songs that moisten the eyes and bring the lump into the throat, and not a far slip then to the good old hymns. Then comes the time to speak. You must GET them. The place is buzzing. A storm of coughing sweeps over the men from the desperate colds with which so many suffer. The clatter of cups goes on in the canteen. The hut is blue with cigarette smoke so that I cannot see the men at the back. It is a fair challenge to a man to win a foothold, and all the wits one has must be called into play. You can announce no text nor confide to your congregation at the beginning no firstly, secondly, thirdly. The supreme business of the moment is a point of contact—any point that seems nearest and easiest, and if you win out in the first three minutes you have them with comparative security for the next twenty minutes, though every moment is precarious till the end. But every night almost brings something one can turn to account. King "Tino" plays the traitor and we all agree we would soon wind up "that show" if we were in Athens; or another night Jellico is announced as first sea lord, and they join me in standing on the seats to sing "Rule Britannia" to the glory of the navy; or Lloyd George takes the helm, and we pledge ourselves afresh to follow him "through terror to triumph;" or Germany offers peace, which we scorn, and pass on to speak of the true basis of peace in the soul. Last night came the "great news" from the front of the French thrust at Verdun, and the capture of 12,000 prisoners, at which we gave three cheers and a tiger for wonderful, chivalrous France, and whistled the Marseillaise, and it was an easy slip to the "great news" I had from the front in my 'arm of the service," the good news of the Kingdom. So it goes. It is a great game, and never did I so appreciate Cromwell's words to his men, to "trust in God, but keep your powder dry." For it is little use to pray if you don't wake your wits to the utmost. Once you get their ear and prove to them that you have something to say they will listen with the greatest respect. I have seen again and again the caps come off quietly, the cigarettes die out, the hush of an unseen spirit fall upon the men, and it's a story then to talk to them. You may guess how busy I am when I tell you that in 28 days I spoke 39 times, passing on from hut to hut, from hospital to hospital, in the latter case speaking to convalescents, but generally speaking in the huts for three or four nights in succession. What a great body of men they are, the flower of Canada! What full grown men these boys have already become! What fibre of citizenship we shall have in them when they return if they stand the strain in their moral life! After my work here, which closes next Friday night, I go on to Bramshott, Ramsgate, Crowborough, Seaford, Shoreham camps. That will occupy my time fully all the early January, and on Feb. 1st I expect to cross to France for three months. That will be at "close quarters," and I am eager to get there.

DIED AT HIS POST

Corp. Ed. Huck, a Former Walkerton Boy, Killed by Concussion When Enemy Shell Exploded Near Him.

This is a letter received by Norman (Squee) Huck giving an account of the death of his brother Edward who was born and raised in Walkerton and later moved to Atwood then to Vancouver where he enlisted. He was highly thought of in Walkerton.

"Corp. Ed. Huck was killed Oct. 20th just prior to the successful operation which secured a portion of Regina trench. On the evening of the 18th the Batt. had been ordered into the front line but the weather conditions were so bad that the intended assault was postponed. Three companies of the 102nd were withdrawn but A. Co. of which your brother was a member was left to hold the line on the 20th. While your brother was carrying on his duties in the trench a high explosive shell burst close to him. He died from concussion. There was no wound on his body. Death was almost instantaneous, from all accounts given by men who saw what happened, he suffered no pain. He was buried later just outside the trench. That evening the other three companies returned and on the following day successfully carried out a brilliant assault. Your brother was a very capable N. C. O. He was one of my earliest recruits, joining my Batt. on the 9 1915 in Vancouver. He was the 202nd man on the batt. roll. In losing him we lost a valued N. C. O. and a good soldier. I beg to tender to you and through you to his widow and children my sincerest sympathy. If anything can alleviate their grief it must be the knowledge that Corp. E. Huck did his duty as a man and died faithfully at his post as a soldier should. His name appears on a commemorative tablet erected in the military cemetery at Albert in honour of those heroes of 102nd who died at the Somme. Signed.

J. W. Warden,
Lt-Col. 102nd Can. Inf. Batt.

The Mildmay Fire Department desires to tender its thanks to the Formosa R. C. Church for its cheque of $300 for the service of the Fire Company on Nov. 2nd, when the church was threatened by fire.—Mildmay Gazette.

Culross Tp. Council

Town Hall, Teeswater, Jan. 8th, 1917.

The members elected for the Council Board of the Township of Culross met on the above date.

The Members elected are as follows: Wm. Case Reeve; Jno. S. Armstrong, Jas. Thompson, Thos. McPherson, and Philip Keffer, Councillors. The Declaration of Qualification and of Office were subscribed to by all Members as required by Statute. The Members then took their seats at the Council Board, the Reeve in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting of Dec. 15th 1916 were then read.

McPherson—Armstrong—That the minutes of last meeting as read be adopted.

Thompson—Keffer—That Jno. S. Armstrong be chairman of finance.

Armstrong—McPherson in Amendment—That Jas. Thompson be chairman of finance.

For the Amendment—Armstrong, McPherson.

For the Motion—Thompson, Keffer, Case.—Motion Carried.

Armstrong—Thompson — That we refund Mrs. Louder one dollar over charge in taxes.—Carried.

Keffer—Thompson—That Kenneth McKenzie and Thos. McDonald be appointed Auditors to Audit the Books and Accounts of the Township of Culross for the year 1916.—Carried.

Thompson—Armstrong — That the Council as a whole and individually act as road Commissioners and that a By-law be passed to that effect.—Carried.

McPherson—Armstrong—That Jas. Thompson be appointed to keep the gravel road in the winter season north of Teeswater and Philip Keffer south.—Carried.

Keffer—Thompson—That a Board of Health be appointed for the Township. The Reeve by virtue of his Office, Robt. Grant a member and Dr. Ferguson as Medical Health Officer.—Carried.

Thompson — Armstrong — That a grant of five dollars be made to the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto.—Carried.

McPherson — Keffer — That John Armstrong have the timber sold on the road allowance at lot 14, Con 12 and 13.—Carried.

Thompson—McPherson— That the Mover and Jno. Armstrong examine the bridge at lot 23, Con 11 and report at next meeting of Council.—Carried.

Armstrong—Thompson — That we appoint the Reeve and Philip Keffer to examine the bridges at lot 8, Con. 2 and at lot 12 Con 4 and report at next meeting.

Armstrong—Thompson — That the Clerk notify Engineer Jones to have the Boundary line between Culross and Greenock surveyed as soon as possible and notify the Greenock Council when the Engineer arranges to have the work done.—Carried.

Thompson—Keffer — That we appoint John Clark as Treasurer for the year 1917 at a salary of $5.00. Chas. Button Clerk, at a salary of 125.00. Anthony McDonald Assessor, at a salary of 65.00 without any extras.—Carried.

McPherson—Thompson— That we appoint Jos. Murray to operate the Grader in the north side of the Township and Robt. Colvin to the south, their pay to be 2.25 per day. Also Jos. Murray to make all the cement tile required for the year and deliver the same.—Carried.

McPherson—Thompson— That this Council give a grant of $500.00 to the British Red Cross Fund and that this Council borrow the money and pay the same over by the first of February next.—Carried.

Keffer—McPherson—That the finance report as read be adopted and Orders issued for payment of the accounts. That we do now adjourn to meet again on Feb. 5th or at the Call of the Reeve.—Carried.

FINANCE REPORT

E. G. Kuntz, attending Council meeting	$ 8 30
Jos. Murray, for tile	60 10
Mrs. Louder, refund on dog tax	1 00
Fred Wocke, 52 yds. gravel and road	6 20
Jesse Johnston, Holding Poll	8 00
Fred Heldenby, " "	8 00
Wm. Colvin, " "	8 00
Dav. McDonald, " "	8 00
Robt. Colvin, " "	8 00
Robt. Balish, " "	8 00
B. Beingessner, " "	8 00
Robt. Colvin, bal. on contract	3 50
Sick Children's Hospital	5 00
Bruce County Hospital	10 00
Muskoka Free Hospital	10 00
N. Melvin, bal. contract gravelling	21 50
Ed Sillick, bal. inspecting contract	2 62
C. Button, delivering ballot box	5 00
Alex McDonald, 20 yds gravel	4 00
Municipal World supplies	14 20
Dormer & Co. spikes & nails	1 50

C. BUTTON,
Clerk.

Among the stories in the January Rod and Gun which is now on the news-stands is "The Pilgrimage," by H. C. Haddon. "Starting the New Year right" by F. V. Williams, "Camping in the Heart of the Rockies" by E. Anderson, "The Lost Cabin Mine of Calchas Creek" by Mike Jay, "A Hunting and Fishing Trip in British Columbia" by T. S. Scott, "With the Oceanographers" by R. J. Fraser, etc., etc. Reginald Gourlay contributes an article on "Our Passing Game Birds" to the Conservation Department and the other regular departments are well maintained. W. J. Taylor, Limited, Publisher, issues Rod and Gun at Woodstock, Ont.

Giant Flowering Carnation

FREE!

Address a postcard to us now and receive by return mail a copy of our new illustrated 80-page catalogue of Garden, Flower and Field Seeds, Root Seeds, Grains, Bulbs, Small Fruits, Garden Tools, etc.

SPECIAL — We will also send you free a packet of our 15c, of our choice.

Giant Flowering Carnation

This carnation is a great favorite, the flowers are large and fragrant and the plants do well outdoors. Transplanted into pots in the fall they bloom from October till the end of May. Extra plants are easily propagated from shoots by cuttings, "pipings" or layering.

Send for our catalogue and learn of our other valuable premiums. 18

Darch & Hunter Seed Co., Limited, LONDON CANADA

Wood-Cutters' TOOLS!

We have a good line of Shurley and Dietrich "Improved Racer" and Premier saws, also Disston's saws, 5 and 5½ feet long.

Try our True Set axe, fully guaranteed, with wedge and sharpening stone at $1.25. Also have a number of cheaper axes, handled axes and boys' axes.

We have a full assortment of saw gauges, saw sets, files, saw handles, axe handles, etc., always in stock.

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE STOVES PLUMBING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

"MADE IN CANADA"

The 1917 Ford Touring Car
$495.00
f. o. b., Ford, Ontario

You don't need extravagant claims to justify your choice when you buy a Ford.

The new model five-passenger Touring Car at $495 is standard automobile value. We don't need to make "claims" when offering you this car. We show you the car itself and give reasons. The quality, the price and the service it gives make satisfaction sure. You can always depend on the Ford.

Let us show you the new model today—

Liesemer & Kalbfleisch
Opposite Queens Hotel - Walkerton

AN EVIL HERITAGE

During all the peregrinations to all sorts of parts of London, which were a necessary part of the winding up of affairs, he had carefully avoided Laurel Road. He felt strong enough to make a new start in life, neither did he bear his Uncle James any grudge for the good fortune that had fallen in his lap, but he did not feel quite strong enough for a personal interview. It was two days before the one fixed for his departure, that, while returning in a hansom from the office of an attorney in the Northwest, he grazed another hansom in whose occupant he recognized Capt. Berrincourt. Instinctively he leaned back in order not to be seen, but scarcely had the other hansom passed, than he bent forward again and looked about him. So deep had he been in his thoughts that he only now became aware of being in Laurel Road. At sight of the familiar surroundings and of the well-known Number Thirty-one close ahead, a sudden impulse moved him. Was it not both cowardly and despicable of him to leave England without acknowledging his debt to Marian? Was it not his clear duty to express his gratitude as best he could? At that moment it seemed to him so, and, besides, his uncle had just left the house, which made the occasion favorable; so, without taking more time for reflection, Bernard called to his driver to stop.

In the drawing room, where, as Jemima informed him, the ladies were sitting, he found the Misses Honoria and Valeria busily engaged with estimates; or, to speak more correctly, it was Miss Valeria who was busy at the table with paper and pencil, while Miss Honoria's share of activity was confined to listening and acquiescing, but he did not find the person he was looking for. Miss Valeria believed Marian was in the garden, she explained, while somewhat guiltily pushing aside a litter of papers. To the garden, therefore, Bernard betook himself, very much to the relief of both ladies, who were painfully puzzled as to how to receive him, and had been vainly endeavoring to let their greetings be blended with a delicate shade of half-suppressed condolence. It had not been a success, as they both knew for neither of them was a good hand at acting. Of course they were sorry for him, but of course also it was quite impossible not to rejoice at the good fortune which had befallen their brother-in-law, and of which several good-sized crumbs could not fail to come their way.

It was not difficult to find Marian in the garden, considering that the bushes to hide behind were not many, and the paths to wander on fewer still. She was sitting on the bench under the laburnum-tree with a strip of embroidery beside her, and her hands lying idle in her lap. Neither in her attitude nor mien was there anything which betrayed the exultation of the new-made heiress. The fact was that she had taken refuge here from the conversation of her sisters and from those eternal estimates of the new life that was to be entered upon so soon.

Bernard, after stepping out of the house, stood still for a minute, looking at her unobserved. So this was the new Marian, the woman whom he had failed to recognize until his eyes had been torn open, whom he longed and yet dreaded to see. And, truly, this was a different Marian from the one he had known, or at so at least it seemed to Bernard in the excitement of the moment. Her brown head was uncovered, and one of the last sun rays darting over the brick wall, had powdered the soft hair with gold. The curve of what he could see of the cheek, the delicate line of neck and shoulders struck him as they had never struck him before. Had he been blind till now? By the side of the Dry River, when he had seen her kneeling between the two mules with hands clasped in prayer, it had for the first time occurred to him that his cousin was more than merely pretty; to-day he knew that when he said this to himself he had not been mistaken.

He was still standing thus, when Marian half turning her head, caught sight of him. Her first impulse was to rise quickly.

"Bernard," she said, and a happy smile lit up her face and made it beautiful.

She came forward a few steps, forgetful of everything except the joy of seeing him. But in the same minute the memory of all that had been come over her with a rush, and she stood still with burning cheeks, looking at him doubtfully, and asking herself how much he knew.

Bernard was too intently busy gazing into the serious face before him to think of speaking immediately. When a few more moments had passed in silence, Marian, disturbed by his eyes, turned and sat down again on the bench beside her, and even made a feint of taking up her embroidery. The movement roused Bernard.

"Marian," he said, coming up to her, "you are wondering at me, and it is only natural you should. I know I must look like a fool. I know fact is, I don't know what to say. I came in here with the intention of thanking you, but now that I am here it has come over me that anything I could try to say would really be ridiculous. After all I can't say anything except 'Thank you,' can I? And 'Thank you' is a thing one says when a person hands you a plate or passes you the sugar."

"But I haven't even handed you a plate," said Marian, with a rather uncertain attempt at jocularity, and smiling as well as she could. "So you needn't trouble about the 'Thank you.'"

"Let us have no fencing, Marian," and her eyes dropped before his serious gaze; "we both know what we are talking about. I am leaving England the day after to-morrow, and the chances are that we shall never meet again. Let us lose no time. You have run a great risk for the sake of preserving to me my fortune and my name, and I am here to thank you to-day, if I can. That you should have failed in your object cannot lighten my debt towards you by one grain."

"Then you know," sa'd Marian, almost crying with vexation. "I never meant you to know. Who told you? Not Miss McCrie?"

"Yes, it was Miss McCrie."

Marian started to her feet with blue eyes that flashed fire.

"I shall never forgive her that, I who trusted her so! It is the most horrid thing she could have done—to betray one in that way; surely she has not——"

Here Marian broke off abruptly with a frightened glance at Bernard and stood crumpling up her embroidery between her fingers. Some of the particulars of that last interview under the nutmeg trees were stirring again in her memory, and she felt the blood tingling in her cheeks. Surely it was not possible that that false friend had been as false as that? No, no, she would not, could not believe it; and yet there was about Bernard's look something that she did not know how to account for.

"I hate Miss McCrie," she said between her teeth.

"And I esteem her highly," said Bernard, smiling a little. "She is the first person who has ever spoken the plain truth to me—while I was Bernard Berrincoit, that is to say; now that I am Bernard Ingram, I shall be treated to plenty of the unvarnished article, no doubt."

Marian's anger had vanished already, chased away by another feeling.

"Oh, Bernard," she said, on impulse, "if only it had been possible! I was so happy when I thought I had done it. And it was so easy to do," she added, confusedly, in hopes of yet saving the situation. "You must not talk as if I had done anything great, and really and truly, there was nothing at all particular about it; I would have done it for anybody, I really would—I mean, of course, for anybody, I really would—I mean, of course, for anybody whom I cared for in the very least; for Miss McCrie, for instance or—for father."

Bernard made no reply, and Marian continued to crumple up her embroidery into a ball, in order not to have to meet his eyes. He was thinking of the cowslip meadow, and of the girl who preferred not to disturb her mind unnecessarily by dwelling on the question as to whether she had ever cared for him or not. There could be no doubt, certainly, that there were several very different sorts of women.

"Answer me one question," he said after a moment—"when you were doing this thing, which you tell me was so easy to do, did it by any chance occur to you that you were giving me your father's fortune, and therefore your own?"

"Yes, it occurred to me, but——"

"And did that make no difference?"

"Difference? Yes, of course it made a difference—in fact it made just the difference that was needed. If it had been anybody else's money that was in question, I might perhaps not have had the courage to do anything; but this way I felt as though I had a sort of right. Don't you see," she went on eagerly, "the whole thing was really quite simple—you needed the money because you were used to it, and father and I could do very well without it. I am sure that he won't even know what to do with it now; it would have been far better for him if he had never got it. It was partly that I was thinking of when I—I did the thing."

Again Bernard made no answer, and in face of his silence her courage failed her for any more of these pitiful attempts at disguising the truth.

"Are you really going away the day after to-morrow?" she asked in a low voice.

"Yes, I am really going away."

Marian appeared to be struggling with herself.

"And is she not going with you?" she asked hurriedly. "Can she let you go alone?"

"Apparently she can. I am going, and, please God, I shall not see English shores again until I am a good dozen years older than I am. Don't you remember how I used to listen to Uncle James' stories about his campaigns, and how I used to long to wear a uniform? Well, I am going to have my wish after all—I am going to be a soldier. Good-bye, Marian; think of me as kindly as you can, or, perhaps, I ought to say Miss Berrincoit," he added, trying to speak lightly, in hopes of making this difficult moment more easy, for the whiteness of her face alarmed him. "Now that you are a full-blown heiress, I suppose you expect to be treated with respect."

"Good-bye, Bernard," she said in a whisper, for fear of the tears that were very near.

"I hope you will be as lucky as I am unlucky; it's the best thing I can wish you, and the most likely thing, too, as matters stand. You will have the cream of everything to pick and choose from; the cream of eligible husbands, too, amongst other things. Wait till you are installed at Thornton and you will see. Let me hear soon that you have made a proper choice."

It was a laudable attempt at taking the sharpest edge off the situation, but it failed lamentably. She only grew paler by another shade, and Bernard saw that her lips were working. Snatching up her hands he pressed them between his own until they ached.

"It is no use," he said in another voice. "This cannot be our parting. I know everything, Marian—everything; do you understand? It is mad of me to say it, but I cannot bear that there should be the shadow of a veil between us. You must forget me, Marian. I was not joking now when I spoke of eligible husbands. In a few weeks' time there will be dozens of men at your feet; make the best and truest of them your husband, and forget that you ever had an unlucky cousin called Bernard. I am not worthy of such love as yours."

He spoke in breathless haste, and, having said the last word, flung away her hands, and, turning abruptly, left her standing alone upon the gravel path.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

It had been one of the first days of June that Bernard parted from Marian, in the back garden of 31 Laurel Road. When another June came round again with its roses and its thunderstorms, its pleasant evenings and its unpleasant caterpillars, the view which spread itself daily before Marian's eyes was vastly improved; stretches of smooth lawn instead of smoky chimneys, and giant beeches in place of the one poor, meagre laburnum which had formed the pride of the enclosure. After waiting what he considered to be a decent interval, the captain had taken formal possession of Thornton. But he did so neither joyously nor light-heartedly. This strange fortune which had met him on the threshold of his old age, perplexed and embarrassed almost more than it rejoiced him. If it had been anybody's money except Bernard's he would not have minded it, but the thought that his nephew, for whom he had always had a true fondness, was a loser by his gain, made him feel uncomfortable, do what he would. There was one obvious solution to the difficulty which of course would have made everything straight again, but this was unfeasible, as he soon convinced himself.

"It would be far the simplest if you two could get up a liking for each other," he had observed to Marian one day when the idea first occurred to him. "Don't you think you could manage it? He has always been more of a brother to you, I know, but perhaps if you get used to the thing you might get to like him in a different way. Hey, Marian?"

"No," said Marian, smiling a little wearily, "I don't think I shall ever like him in a different way."

"Of course he is what people call 'a wretched match,' but that doesn't matter, considering that you're a first-class one. Upon my word there's a great deal in the idea; it's only the newness that startles you. At any rate, there can be no harm in my writing Bernard and throwing out a suggestion."

"You shall not do that!" Marian had answered so vehemently that the captain stood still in his pacing of the room and stared in amazement at his daughter. "Do you hear, father?" she had added, coming close up to him, "whatever you do, you must not write that letter to Bernard. I shall never be his wife."

The poor captain left the room crestfallen, without another word. It was the first time in her life that Marian had openly rebelled, and, to his astonishment, he felt that he had no choice but to strike his colors on the spot.

"He is too small a catch for her, that is evident," he reflected within himself; "she has got her head full of all those titled fellows. And yet I never took Marian to be that kind of girl. Dear, dear, to be sure, I suppose there must be something, after all, in what they call the corruption of wealth. I'm blest if I don't feel some of it myself." By which the captain meant that, despite the feeling of mental discomfort that there was such a thing as physical comfort, to the charms of which he by no means felt superior. After all, it was quite a different thing to be able to indulge in your second and even third glass of port wine without feeling shy at the thought of your wine merchant's bill, and a valet could not help being a much superior article even to Jemima. With every day did the captain become more distinctly aware of his deep appreciation of the comfort of life. That he also had a certain leaning towards its Epicurean side, was to be surmised from his increasing corpulence, his reddening complexion and duller eye—changes in his appearance which the first half year had brought about, and which Marian watched with growing apprehension. Neither did she like his new habit of falling asleep after dinner—a weakness he never used to indulge in in former days.

In the appearance of the Misses Honoria and Valeria this same half year had likewise brought alterations, to the delight of the one, but to the gentle grief of the other, for Thornton was evidently not the place for doing a banting cure, as Miss Valeria gleefully observed. She had not been three months under her brother-in-law's roof—which, of course, she never meant to quit again if she could help it—before, in the postscript of a letter addressed to an intimate friend, she bashfully but joyfully confided to her the fact that the waistbands of all her gowns had been let out by half an inch. "But there is no hope for poor Honoria," she added. "This first-rate cream and these new-laid eggs are so delightfully nourishing and at the same time so irresistible. The dear creature is growing stouter every day. By this time she has given up struggling and has resigned herself to her fate. The only one among us who has not even grown plump is Marian. I have been looking out for the country roses in her cheeks, but she is paler and quieter even that she was in London."

(To be continued.)

Weather Kind to England.

Weather, which is again hampering the operations of our armies, has in all times influenced the course of battles, observes The London Chronicle. Its effect, however, has generally been one-sided, and some past examples form a hopeful precedent. At Crecy, for instance, the "great rain," which Froissart records, rendered useless the bowstrings of the Genoese archers, but the English bows, being kept in cases, were not affected. At Plassey, too, a heavy shower of rain damaged the enemy's powder to such an extent that his fire slackened, and Clive was enabled to avenge the massacre of the Black Hole. Bad weather materially contributed to the failure of Napoleon's expedition against Russia; and the Austrians, in the retreat at Solferino, were saved from annihilation by a hurricane so fierce that, according to the Moniteur of that day, "nothing could any longer be distinguished on the field of battle."

A pessimist is a son of the man who didn't believe there was any such thing as electricity.

He is an offspring of the man who was sure that the horseless carriage would never come, and a nephew of the man who was willing to bet money that men would never fly.

A pessimist is a direct descendant of the man who was sure that wireless telegraphy was a fool's dream and a submarine merely the creation of a fiction writer's brain.

The pessimist's ancestry scoffed at the telephone, the typesetting machine, the twenty-storey building, anaesthetics, and every forward step the optimists have taken from the betterment of human life.

There are men who will make you books, and turn them loose into the world, with as much dispatch as they would do a dish of fritters.—Cervantes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON II January 14, 1917

John the Baptist and Jesus—John 1 19-34.

COMMENTARY.—I. John the Baptist's testimony concerning himself (vs. 19-28). 19. The record—The witness or testimony. John—He is called John the Baptist because of his mission as the forerunner of Jesus. An important part of his work was to preach repentance and to baptize. His title, the Baptist, distinguishes him from the apostle John. He was the son of Zacharias and Elizabeth, and a relative of Jesus (Luke 1: 35, 36). Sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem—The report of the preaching of John the Baptist had become widespread, and when it reached Jerusalem, the Jews, who constituted the religious authority in Palestine, were aroused and curious to know whether the Messiah had come. Priests, who performed the religious rites about the temple, and Levites, whose duties there were secular, were sent out to make inquiry of John the Baptist and report the findings of the Jewish leaders. Who art thou—The records do not show whether this delegation was hostile to Jesus or was seeking honestly for the truth. The preaching of John the Baptist was in severe denunciation of the sins of the leaders of the Jews, and it is not unlikely that those who asked him, "Who art thou?" were prepared to bring him to account before the Sanhedrin if they could make out a case against him. His answer, however, gave them no basis for an accusation. 20-22. He told them frankly and positively that he was not the Messiah. He had no disposition to pass himself off for what he was not in reality. Pursuing their investigation further they asked him if he was Elijah or "that prophet" who was foretold in Deut. 18:15, and he answered in the negative. Having ascertained nothing from their questioning thus far, they asked him plainly who he was. They must have been struck with his rugged, manly and fearless bearing. He was a child of the wilderness, clad in coarse garments and feeding upon the simple food that the desert afforded. He was bold from a consciousness that he was fulfilling the mission to which God had called him.

23. I am the voice .... in the wilderness—John the Baptist was not in doubt as to his mission. His conviction was clear, and he had the necessary faith and courage to do the work assigned him and to give a clear and definite answer to his questioners. He called himself the "voice" because he was bearing a divinely inspired message to the world. He was fulfilling the prophecy uttered hundreds of years before (Isa. 40: 3-5). Make straight the way of the Lord—John the Baptist was the forerunner, or herald, of the coming Christ. He was six months older than Jesus, and commenced his mission of preaching and baptizing six months before Jesus began his public ministry. In ancient times it was the custom to prepare the road in advance of the approach of a king or other high official. Mountains were graded down and valleys were filled up, that a good road might accommodate and please the approaching dignitary. John was preaching righteousness, and the truths he uttered cut straight across many of the practices of the Jewish leaders, and uncovered their hypocrisy. Esaias—The Greek form of the Hebrew Isaiah. 24. Pharisees—The Pharisees were the most powerful sect of the Jews. They arose originally as a reform movement in the nation, and were known as separatists. They were orthodox, holding tenaciously to the teachings of Moses. However, they had become corrupt and were no longer true to their name. They were almost the embodiment of pride and arrogance. They were professedly religious, but at heart they were wicked.

25. Why baptizest thou then—Baptism was practised among the Jews in the case of proselytes who were received into the pale of Judaism, but John was baptizing Jews as if they were not already people of God. Since John the Baptist had declared that he was neither the Christ nor a prophet, those who were sent to question him wondered upon what authority he was administering this rite. "As he had just before applied to himself a prediction that they all considered as belonging to the forerunner of Christ, they might have understood why he did it; but they were blind, and manifested, as all sinners do, a remarkable slowness in understanding the plainest cases in religion."—Barnes. 26. I baptize with water—The Baptist does not answer the question of the Pharisees directly. He had given them an answer to their inquiry by declaring that he was the forerunner of Christ but he tells them that baptism with water was a symbol of the true baptism that was later to be administered (Matt. 3. 11). There standeth one among you—Jesus Himself was somewhere in the assembly that had gathered to hear the wilderness preacher, but He did not manifest Himself until the next day. He was undistinguished in the crowd. 27. Coming after me—John's ministry began half a year before that of Jesus. Is preferred before me—Although John was the greatest prophet up to this time, yet he took no honor to himself. His was a great ministry, but he realized his littleness compared with him whose herald he was. Whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose — This is a most striking comparison. It was the duty of the lowest servant to remove the sandals from his master's feet; but John the Baptist felt that Jesus was so exalted in his nature that he was not worthy to perform even this lowest service. 28. Bethabara—The exact location of this place is not known. This much is certain, that it was on the east bank of the Jordan, somewhere between the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea. It was probably within ten or twelve miles from where the river flows into the latter sea.

II. His introduction of Christ (vs. 29-31.) 29. the next day—The day after the deputation of Jews from Jerusalem visited John the Baptist. seeth Jesus coming unto him—John knew who Jesus was, for his baptism had already taken place. behold the Lamb of God—John did not introduce Jesus as a king to rule Israel in splendor, but as a sacrifice to die for the sins of the world. To the Jewish mind, the idea of a lamb was familiar. They knew the prophecy of Isaiah, which shows the Messiah as a lamb brought to the slaughter. They knew of the Passover feast, at which a lamb was slain and eaten commemorating the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage, and they were familiar with the daily sacrifices at the temple. which taketh away the sin of the world—Provision is thus made for the removal of sin from the heart and life of every believer in Jesus. These words of John the Baptist are a declaration of the fact and efficacy of the atonement that was to be made. The atonement makes possible the destruction of sin (1 John 3:8). 30. this is he—This was the Christ of whom John had spoken the day before. he was before me—John the Baptist had lived only about thirty years, but Jesus had always existed. 31. I knew him not—Although John was related to Jesus, he may not have been personally acquainted with him. Whether he was or not, it is certain that he did not know him in his exalted nature, office and mission until his appearing at Jordan for baptism should be made manifest—The twofold mission of John the Baptist was to preach repentance, and to point out the Messiah, to Israel—To the Jews.

III. His testimony concerning the descent of the Spirit (vs. 32-34). 32. bare record—Was a witness. I saw the Spirit descending—This took place at the baptism of Jesus some time before this (Matt. 3:16-17; Mark 1: 9-11; Luke 3:21, 22). 33. the same unto me—There was no uncertainty in John's testimony. He knew that God had sent him to baptize with water, and he knew that he was divinely instructed how to recognize Jesus when he came. baptizeth with the Holy Ghost—John's baptism was outward; the baptism of the Holy Spirit is inward, and is purifying in its effect. It gives victory over sin, and imparts spiritual power. 34. this is the Son of God—At Christ's baptism this declaration was made from heaven (Matt. 3:17). John here bears testimony to this great fact.

Questions.—By whom and for what purpose were priests and Levites sent to John the Baptist? What answers did John give to the questions? What was the two-fold mission of John the Baptist? What was John's estimate of himself in comparison with Jesus? Give reasons why Jesus is called the Lamb of God. How did John recognize the Christ? What is it to be baptized with the Holy Ghost? What great witness was given that Jesus was the Son of God?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Witness-bearing.

I. Concerning John's office and work.
II. Concerning Christ and his power.

I. Concerning John's office and work. Witness-bearing is a fundamental idea in Christianity. It marks a distinct place for human instrumentality in the promotion of Christ's kingdom. The claim by John the Baptist was very remarkable. He affirmed himself to be the fulfilment of prophecy. To him was given to utter by human lips the thoughts of the divine mind. He was therefore a divinely appointed herald. His only ambition was to occupy his own place and to work out his own mission in life. He did not aspire to a place for which God had not designed him. He felt that the work he had to perform entirely concealed the importance of his own personality. He lost himself in his office and in his message. He knew who he was as well as who he was not. It was not for him to be thinking of himself and what he might possibly be, but of his work, to fulfil his mission, to bear his testimony. He was willing to say something about himself only that he might introduce the great subject of his mission, the coming Messiah. He could not have given a better account of himself. He was a herald with a divine message, and he had a voice to publish it. His position was unique. He had strong individuality and transparent honesty. His ministry was such as to deserve and demand inquiry. He partook so much of the majesty of the coming King that it was natural to suspect that he might be the King himself. His work and its results would naturally come formally before the Sanhedrin. Their deputation was the result of their professional dealing with the matter. In John they recognized a natural leader, a man who met the traditional conception of what the Messiah was to be. From varying motives the Jews turned anxiously toward every person of distinction and influence who arose among the people. The query put to John by the leaders of the Jewish church at Jerusalem was natural and proper. It gave evidence of the interest which John's mission was exciting in the land. It gave him an opportunity of both declaring himself and of witnessing to his Master. His first duty was to give an unequivocal answer to their inquiry, which, according to the letter of the law, they were justified in making.

II. Concerning Christ and His power. John refused the honor the Jews were ready to give him. His honor consisted in the proclamation of his Master's glory. He not only declared the Messiahship, but he declared distinctly who was the Christ. He stood as a great, powerful, popular man, swaying a nation, and yet at the very crisis of victory he obliterated himself in favor of another. He exemplified the grandeur of self-mastery. He possessed the best qualifications for a witness to Christ, humility and courage. In the voice of John could be heard the need of the world and the will of God. Its first notes were stern and terrible as he came in contact with hypocrisy, infidelity and the vices of the age. Toward the closing of his ministry his voice grew more tender and mellow as he uttered the words, the climax of his ministry, "Behold the Lamb of God." John pointed to Jesus as a person standing among them whom they knew not, though they professed to be waiting for his manifestation. In taking on man's nature Christ so covered his glory with the veil of His flesh that He could not be known from other men without divine revelation and evidences from God. John referred to divine inspiration as the source of his knowledge. John's sermon was effectual for soul winning. He was summoning men in God's name to a higher life of righteousness and faith. He bade men get ready for Christ's coming and for the work of grace which He was to accomplish. To behold the Lamb of God, embraced the transference of the trust and affections of the whole heart to the object on which it looked, a look which drew after it the entire desire of the soul. The herald and forerunner of Christ perfectly comprehended his own relation to his Master and felt it a dignity to occupy a position of inferiority in respect to Him. Christ was to be offered as the world's sacrifice that all might be saved.—T.R.A.

◆

Calgary—Mrs. R. R. Jamieson has been appointed a police magistrate of Calgary, and will have charge of the women's court.

How Britain Is Solving War Financing Problems

bility at the time of its creation. There are the normal expenditures for the administration of the Government, the class of pre-war outlays. Concurrently there are the expenditures represented by the interest and sinking fund on the obligations that have been issued for the conduct of the war.

Upon a liberal estimate the total debt of the United Kingdom in August, 1917, is placed at 20,000,000,000 of dollars, without crediting her with $3,000,000,000 of advances which she has made to the allied nations. At 5 per cent, average interest and 1 per cent. sinking fund this indebtedness would call for the payment of 1,200,000,000 of dollars per annum, at least until the adoption of a funding basis has reduced the charge. To this demand (Edward Andrews in New York Sun.)

Among all the nations of Europe, the English nation is the wealthiest. Its trade embraces the globe. Its capital is incredibly large. Its resources are almost inexhaustible. —Frederick the Great.

I.

More than one hundred years ago this was the estimate of England's economic power by the greatest German of them all. The lapse of a century has confirmed this material primacy. During its progress Great Britain has become the possessor of one-quarter of the earth's surface, and has included under her dominion one-quarter of the world's inhabitants. Since the time of Napoleon she has been essentially an industrial empire. The diversity as well as the volume of her activities has been unique in the history of commerce. She was the pioneer inventor of the basic appliances of modern industry. By developing her vast stores of coal and metal she obtained the leverage for converting the raw material furnished by other countries into manifold values of manufactured products. The ownership of one-half the world's mercantile marine facilitated her trading in all markets. And the possession of these several factors of universal commerce constituted her the world's banker, gathering tribute from every international transaction. This long continued application of human industry has resulted in the accumulation of capital beyond precedent, and these garnered resources have been invested throughout the globe, wherever they could reproduce wealth for the motherland. Even colossal wars have been followed by emergencies into greater prosperity and have served to illustrate the magnitude and durability of financial Britain.

These prosperous conditions were strongly in evidence at the outset of the present war. Her commerce was at the highest level, having increased fifty per cent. in ten years. She had in the same period discharged $1,250,000,000 of obligations, including some issues made for the prosecution of the Boer war. Her national estate includes 90,000,000,000 of dollars of wealth in permanent form; 20,000,000,000 of dollars annual income, and sign and colonial securities, 15,000,000,000 of dollars annual income, and bank deposits ranging near the $6,000,000 mark. Her currency rests upon the solid ground of real and convertible value, fortified by two-thirds of the world's production of gold.

II.

Secure in the possession of these elements of economic strength, Great Britain is financing this great war.

Taxation and economy summarize her plain and direct methods.

Their keynote consists in making provision for payment of every lia- there should be added the ordinary expenditure of the Government at the rate prevailing in 1915 and calling for 1,000,000,000 of dollars. These total annual requirements of 2,200,000,000 of dollars are fully provided by tax receipts for the current fiscal year.

No country furnishes a standard for measuring the facility with which Great Britain can meet these revenue demands. Her annual savings, together with her income from accumulated investment, realize $17,000,000,000 each year. During the war permanent improvements practically cease and current investments are absorbed mainly by governmental securities. These gigantic income funds and their increments constitute the main tax sources of a surplus of $400,000,000 in the British Treasury for the present year.

This fiscal result is favored by the distribution of incomes among their owners, enhancing their desirable character as producers of revenue. Britain is preeminently the land of moderate fortunes as well as of large estates. Decades upon decades of prosperity have produced a mass of recipients of unearned and fairly substantial incomes, numerically far beyond this element in any other European country. Their owners can easily part with a large proportion of those receipts upon the call of the nation, merely by docking expenditures for superfluities, estimated at $2,000,000,000.

of disbursements each year. This condition, so favorable for the taxing power, is illustrated by the fact that the British Treasury receives 70 per cent. of the income taxes from unearned incomes. Twenty-nine thousand tax receipts of the Government for the year before the war. The average rate levied upon income is five shillings in the pound. Its broad application is effected by starting at low rates, producing $200,000,000 from small incomes, and progressing to 40 per cent. graduated intensively upon incomes exceeding $10,000. From the entirety of incomes two-thirds of the direct war tax of Great Britain are derived. Thus they justify the historic tradition from the time of Pitt to the time of Gladstone that this ever flowing unit of wealth is the final bulwark of the United Kingdom.

Indeed, the proposition was recently made in the House of Commons that fifteen shillings in the pound be levied on the great body of substantial unearned incomes. This plan would have probably obviated the negotiation of Government loans, but it would have been unjust to those income holders to concentrate the entire taxing power upon them. Besides it would unduly impair the resources that have been so largely volunteered in subscriptions for Government loans. However, the proposition illustrates the extent of this perennial resource, which England may continuously invoke for the prosecution of her part in this war.

Moreover, the existing subjects of taxation are sufficiently fruitful to permit the broadest distribution. The well established system of succession duties presents another instance of large productiveness combined with highly developed progression. Analysis of its 160,000,00 of dollars return to the Treasury shows that this collection likewise emanates in great part from large estates.

The 60 per cent. excess profits taxation is the exceptional revenue product of the war. Its $125,000,000 of outcome testifies to the large tribute which industry created by the war can return for its prosecution. As the Government is practically the sole customer or controller of these factories, this revenue is in its essence the division of franchise benefits. While it will cease upon the termination of the war, the Treasury will then no longer be called upon for that class of expenditure. Meanwhile this accruing revenue constitutes a valuable and increasing resource.

The taxes upon domestic and foreign commodities are covered by receipts from customs and excise, which supply about 400,000,000 of dollars. The product from these sources is reduced by their subjection to higher dictates of public policy. The importation of certain articles of luxury is prohibited, and the sale of intoxicants is limited by stringent legislation. Britain elects to forego revenue in order that her men may be fit and that her women may substitute deposits in savings banks for the purchase of adornments. The various personal luxuries formerly absorbed 1,700,000,000 of dollars annually, and the expenditure in these directions is still largely reducible for fiscal advantage.

Britain possesses a notable source of revenue not derived from any species of taxation. It is the result of public service, the principal being the profits from postal, telegraph and telephone utilities, the receipts in the above category aggregating $170,000,000.

III.

The foregoing recital presents a very imperfect outline of British financial forces in this war. The expenditure is not a mere subtraction from the resources of the country. Some great compensating factors counterbalance the extraordinary outlay. Great Britain is peculiarly the land of wastage. Her rate of consumption in time of peace vastly exceeded that of any other European country, and a large proportion of this wasteful expenditure was just as much subtracted from the reproductive power of the nation as if it had been assigned to military objects. Hence the taxes collected to carry on this war are in great part a mere transfer of wastage.

In addition positive economies are exercising a manifold bearing upon the resourcefulness of the country. The prohibition of unnecessary imports arrests extravagance at a tempting source. The reduction in the expenditures on intemperance and sumptuary excesses is estimated to exceed $200,000,000. Economy through governmental administration likewise figures as a reducer of public demands. Industrial England has been largely nationalized by the control of many departments of activity in the interest of the public. By colossal purchases of raw material in every quarter of the globe English authority has become the sole buyer in some instances for her civilian as well as her military requirements. In relation to certain products the Government also acts as the single vendor to her citizens. By fixing maximum prices for various articles of prime necessity she preserves the economic substance of the nation.

In short, the productive power of Great Britain, whether from her past savings or her present acquisitions, is the supreme test of her ability to maintain her credit. There are some unfailing criteria of her success. As the transaction of business implies profit, the immense total of business transacted by the United Kingdom during the war is unerring proof of her profitable accretions. Her foreign trade exceeds $5,000,000,000 a year. Thirteen millions of British tonnage is engaged in sea transportation, and her shipping earns annually far in excess of the above amount. Notably the yearly output of British domestic and pacific industries exceeds $9,000,000,000. Her large exports are a continuing source of financial strength, constituting payment toward her foreign purchases. These exports have decreased only 25 per cent. since the war began, and now exceed $2,500,000,000 in market value. Britain should likewise be credited with the familiar factors of interest, freights, insurance and commissions.

The receipts from this continued commercial activity and the main portion of the public outlays are still disbursed in the United Kingdom, even allowing for expenditures in the United States and elsewhere. This fact renders it quite appreciable that the income of Great Britain has increased 25 per cent during the war, until it has reached the sum of $15,000,000,000 a year.

IV.

The present rate of taxation assures the payment of all expenses and outstanding obligations. The future financing of the war, with its increase of liabilities, is assured by the constant and commensurate increase of taxable resources. With the existing rate of increase in national income, provision is effected for all Treasury payments to accrue, even assuming that they increase in the present ratio. And increase in the rate of income tax on a large class of incomes, added to the amount assessed for taxation as above indicated, would furnish a large surplus revenue for many years.

Great Britain realizes proximately the great goal of maximum productiveness during the war. With this basis for her fiscal system, she taxes neither her accrued nor accruing capital. She is living on her revenue in time of war as she did in time of peace. If we consider the ethical as well as the physical sources infusing Great Britain's energy, we can better understand that the increase of her prosperity during this war is not a paradox.

In a great emergency like the present struggle moral considerations enter directly into the economic as well as the military efforts of the nation. At this time the British Empire is politically transfigured. The antagonism toward Napoleon when Britain was opposing his vaulting ambition, is an adequate comparison with the present feeling. Not since the days of the Armada, when the name of Spaniard was synonymous with aticism and cruelty, has the determination of Britons burn ardently. The payment of a wa tribution is looked upon as it ion substitute for ability to en the line of battle. When this spires the wealthiest nation world, its poor as well as its citizens become identified w State in worldly substance as in thought and spirit. In Bri dur the overwhelming strength national impetus is everywh potent. It sends the wage earner to subscribe to war cates. It sends women by the m to work in war industries. It has listed the machinery of associ fort, from the Friendly Socie the villages to the clubland don. The financial outcome aroused British indignation is ed in the following language Exchequer in presenting to the of Commons the largest budget to English history.

In speaking of the country mands for heavier taxation Mr. Kenna said: "In ordinary occa I would not give reasons for asa more. But such is the willingne of our people to make sacrifices such is the determination of country to spare nothing to br this war to a successful issue that have made this statement."

V.

Britain is still the greatest natio al creditor in the world. Every norma nation is her debtor to the extent millions. During this war she raised and is raising from her o people all the money required herself and some billions for allies.

Her domestic supplies of capit have been increased during the by the diversion to home investme of $3,000,000,000 usually invested other countries. Her obligations eagerly sought within the Un Kingdom, as the most secure and munerative investments. There she has not the slightest occasion explore foreign countries for the pose of becoming a borrower per

The business relations of Great tain and the United States are sentially of a different nature. By phenomenal purchases in this country she has created an abnormal de for dollars. Their value has th this means alone become substa ly enhanced. Any constraint Great Britain to pay the enha price would not benefit anybody, even the American seller of the chandise. Therefore she is contr ing for the future delivery of st amounts of dollars. Whether sh for them in ingots of gold of credit, and whether that cre American or English, has no be upon the financial status of country. It is certain that no com in the world's histories have maint ed such vast commercial relati have ever been so dependent up each other for material prosperity human development.

HAD WEAK
COULD NOT W
COULD NOT

Many women are kept in fear of death, become weak, miserable and are unable to their household, social or bus on account of the unnature the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give promp manent relief.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St., Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I down with a weak heart I could sweep the floor, nor could night. I was so awfully sick I had to stay in bed all day weak. I used three and a ha Milburn's Heart and Nerve P am a cured woman to-day, and as anyone could be. I am doing housework, even my own I doctored for over two years no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pill 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, a dealers or mailed direct on recei price by The T. Milburn Co., Lim Toronto, Ont.

Science Jottings.

The deaths from accidents in the United States aggregate 35,000 per year, while the injuries are estimated to affect 2,000,000 persons every year.

Land covers 29 per cent of the earth's area, and 14 per cent. of the land is less than 300 feet above the sea level.

If a regiment of 1,000 men, with equipment of 60,000 pounds, marches 10 miles, it does as much work as laborers raising a weight 250,000 tons a distance of one foot.

If the sea should rise one-twenty-sixth part of its depth, one half of the land would be under water.

Rubber that has lost its elasticity may be rejuvenated by immersing it for five minutes in a bath of glycerine mixed with 25 times its volume of distilled water and heated to 70 degrees Centigrade, and then drying it with filter paper.

Punch bowls of molded ice, with delicate flowers encased therein, are being turned out for social functions by some ice manufacturers.

A bad headache can often be plint- [illegible] drinking a half glassful of water in which has been squeezed juice of half a lemon and a half teaspoonful of soda.

HAD INDIGESTION

BURDOCK
BLOOD BITTERS
CURED.

That grand old remedy, Blood Bitters, has been on for over forty years and out any fear of contradic is not another medic to-day that can c cure of all distu

Mrs. S. Tur "I am writi your Burdo period I nothing I t only for a sh bottles of Mr. Griff eat or experie may sa ever g

Burd only b Toron

RM GARDEN

RRY PATCH IN FALL AND WINTER.

regard to adaptation to soils, berries and raspberries are near- as cosmopolitan as strawberries. the best results with dasperries obtained in deep, moderately dy loams, or clay loams containing abundance of humus; blackberries often at their best when the soil slightly heavier. The soil should not too wet, as this condition is apt to rease the amount of winter injury. here is no particular brand of fer- izer best adapted to either raspber- or blackberries, under all condi- ons. The kind of plant food needed must be governed by the kind already in the soil, and also on the physical condition of the soil. In some soils there is a lack of nitrogen; in others a lack of potash, or phosphoric acid; and in many there is a deficiency in humus, which not only supplies plant food, but is a great help in holding moisture. For supplying humus, stable manure and cover crops are available. In making applications of nitrogenous fertilizers care must be used, or the resulting growth will not mature, and cause severe winter in- mnus. It would appear desirable in me cases to avoid the use of stable nure, and use instead commercial rtilizers. Where needed, wood ashes, uriate of potash, acid phosphate, etc., are valuable. The best way to ascertain what is needed, and the amount, is to leave check rows for comparison.

PREPARATION OF LAND.

Unlike strawberries, raspberries and blackberries occupy the soil for a number of years. It is therefore important that the preparation be very thorough. Where the land is too wet, it should be underdrained. If for one or two years preceding hoed crops have been used, there will be fewer weeds to fight. The land should be well plowed and thoroughly fitted to receive the plants.

Plant mainly only those kinds that appear to succeed in the immediate locality, testing newer ones in a small way. The varieties best suited for one set of conditions may be failures elsewhere.

Red raspberries are usually propagated by transplanting the numerous suckers which come up freely around the original hills. Black raspberries are increased by rooting the tips of the nearly mature canes in late August or early September. The ends of the canes are covered lightly with earth, and by late fall a large mass of of fibrous roots will be formed with a well developed crown. Varieties of purple raspberries are hybrids, produced by crossing red and black raspberries, and some of them may be propagated either by using suckers or by rooting the tips of the canes. Blackberries do not sucker as freely as the redraspberries. Three suckers have but few fibrous roots, and as a rule do not make such good plants as those started from cuttings of the blackberry roots.

The roots may be dug in the fall, cut into two or three inch lengths, stratified over winter and sown in nursery rows in the spring, and most excellent plants are usually secured after a season's growth. Only strong, healthy plants should be selected, and it is frequently an advantage to select these from a young plantation rather than from an old bed of plants which may have deteriorated in vigor and may be infested with various insects and diseases.

Blackberries and red raspberries may be set either in the fall or in the early spring. When set in late October or early November, the rows should be plowed up, too, making a back furrow along each row, of plants, which will afford a great protection against winter injury. The earth should be removed from the hills as soon as the ground is in working order in early spring. Such plants, as a rule, begin growth earlier than those set in the spring. They should be set as deep, or slightly deeper, than they where in the original beds. Black raspberry plants, and the purple kind roots from the cane tips, should be set in the spring instead of the fall, not covering the crown too deeply, and spreading the roots in a circle about the centre of the crown. It is an advantage to set the plants in the bottom of a shallow furrow, filling in as the plants develop. Under these conditions they withstand drought better, and the cane are not so easily blown over by the wind.

The distance apart of rows and of plants depends on the system of cultivation, the varieties, the natural richness of the ground and the location. In general, the plants should not be crowded. Red raspberries may be set closer than black raspberries, and blackberries should be set thosfarthest apart. There distances may vary from 3 by 6 feet to 4 by 8 feet, depending on conditions.

SUBSEQUENT PATCH TREATMENT

The ground should be kept well cultivated and the plants hoed as occasion requires. In young plantations, if the plants have been set properly, cultivation may be given both ways, thus [illegible] the expense of keeping down the weeds. The cultivation should be shallow, as the roots lie near the surface. On heavy clay soils it may sometimes be desirable in some seasons to plow early in the spring, following with the cultivator till fruiting time. During the picking of the fruit there a little opportunity to cultivate, but the ground should be thoroughly stirred as soon as the harvest is over. If desirable a cover crop may be sown in late August or early September.

During the first two years it is not always necessary to give the land ely to the berry plants. Potatoes, bbages, strawberries, etc., are often wn with advantage between the rows so that a considerable income from this source may be obtained before the berry plants fully occupy the ground.

Summer pruning is not generally practiced with red raspberries, but may often be done with advantage to black raspberries and blackberries. It consists in pinching or cutting off the tender ends or tips of the new shoots at a height that may vary from 18 inches to 24 or even 30, the blackberries usually being pinched somewhat lower than the black raspberries. The result of this pruning is the formation of rather low, stocky plants, with numerous lateral branches which will not require a trellis. As the young plants do not all develop at the same time it is necessary to go over the plantation several times in order to pinch the growth at the proper height.

The canes growing one summer, bear fruit the next season and then die, while new canes develop each year for the succeeding year's crop. Frequently the canes which have fruited are allowed to remain until the following spring before removal, but better results are usually secured by cutting them out and burning as soon as the berry crop is harvested. By this method the insects and fungus diseases frequently infesting these canes may be destroyed and the young canes have more room to develop. Each spring the plants should be gone over, cutting off the weak ends of the canes and thinning out some of the smaller ones where the growth is too dense. From three to five canes per hill are usually preferable to a larger number.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

Brood sows as often suffer from over-feeding as from under-feeding. An abundance of fat is the worst enemy of the litter. Sows that are to raise pigs should be taken away from the rest of the hogs and be fed a different ration. These excellent rations are: (1). One part high-grade tankage, 12 parts corn; (2). skim milk or buttermilk and corn; using three parts of the milk to one part corn. (3), wheat and shorts. Whichever one of these rations is used, a rack containing alfalfa should be so placed that the sows have free access to hay at all times. In addition, the sow should be supplied with minerals. It is a good plan to dump the wood and coal ashes in the lot where the sows run. A mixture composed of a basket of charcoal or fine coal, 6 pounds of salt, 6 pounds of air-slaked lime, and 2 pounds of sulphur will give good returns, it kept easily available.

Some dairies of 20 cows will often produce as much milk as others of 40 cows. There is something wrong with the 40 cow dairy.

WINTER WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Our Canadian winters are extremely hard on the health of little ones. The weather is often so severe that the mother cannot take her little one out for an airing. The consequence is that baby is confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms; takes colds and becomes cross and peevish. Baby's Own Tablets should be given to keep the little one healthy. They regulate the stomach and bowels and prevent or cure colds. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

UNIVERSAL TONGUE.

American Indians Had a Language All Could Know.

"The problem of a universal language, the need of which has been realized in this war," says a Cambridge professor, "was really solved centuries ago by the savage inhabitants of the Western world.

Should an Indian from northern Alaska go to Patagonia, he could by means of this universal language converse with his southern brethren almost as easily as he could with his neighbors at home. What would also be the case if he visited Central America or met the tribesmen of Western prairies and mountains.

When this language was invented no one knows, but every Indian learns it in addition to his own. Recently two chiefs of different tribes met in the Geographical Society rooms in Washington and held a conversation that lasted nearly three hours, and yet neither one knew a word of the other's language.

This universal language is, of course, made up of signs. For example, if an Indian is passing through a strange country and sees other Indians at a distance, he makes the "peace sign"; that is, he holds up his blanket by two corners so that it covers his whole figure. The same thought is expressed by extending the hands, palms outward, slightly inclined from the face.

Then there are the abstract signs by which those "savages" can express their thoughts with regard to the Great Spirit, heaven, good, evil, life and death, sickness, health, riches and poverty. Life is expressed by drawing an imaginary thread from the mouth, and death by chopping this thread off.

Another sign for death is to hold the tips of the fingers of one hand against the palm of the other, and let them gradually slip downward, and at last drop beneath the palm.

Most white people think that the Indian word of greeting, "How," is merely the abbreviation of the question, "How are you?" But that is not so. The word is really "hou," which means "brother" or "friend." So when he comes up and growls out his seemingly inquisitive "How," he is not asking after your health, but telling you that he is a friend.

An Efficient Restorer.

It could hardly have been caused by age—the man had been bald-headed, very bald-headed, for years. There had been a time when some of the innumerable preparations calculated to prevent the falling out of hair had been tried, but his hair had ceased to fall only when not even a fringe remained.

But the man was contented. He wore a wig—not a small, tight-fitting one, but a large, bushy one. But one day on the street, as a wind caught away the man's hat, his wig was snatched, too. Bareheaded, indeed the owner made a futile grab, then waited while a small boy gave chase.

"Sonny," said the man, as he gratefully rewarded the boy, "you're the quickest hair restorer I have ever found."—The Christian Herald.

"We should all learn to forgive and forget," said the Wise Guy. "But it's so hard to do two things at once," replied the Simple Mug.

S, SOPER & WHITE

Wate
B.

Pimples, Skin, Kidney Diseases to 1 p.m.

HITE

Paper.

A CANADIAN SOLDIER SAYS

"Tell my friends, if they want to help me, to send some Zam-Buk. The boys here say it is very good, and it is much in demand." This is an extract from a letter received from Pte. J. R. Smith of "The Princess Pats" in France.

There is certainly nothing so good as Zam-Buk for the accidents and ailments incidental to a soldier's life. It is splendid for all kinds of sores, blisters, burns and cuts, and it is equally good for frost bites, chilblains, cold cracks and chapped hands. Nothing ends pain and heals so quickly, and being antiseptic, an application of Zam-Buk to a wound as soon as sustained, will prevent all danger of blood-poisoning.

If you want to send your soldier friend something he is sure to appreciate—put a box or two of Zam-Buk in your next parcel.

All druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

ZAM-BUK

A BOY'S BIG GAME

BY H. [illegible]

I had the ill luck to get a thorn in my foot while hunting in the lion district of the Transvaal and was laid up at the house of a burgher named Kloopenfeldt for a full week. The burgher had but one child, and he was a boy 11 years old and named Carl.

I thought myself something of a hunter for big game, but I soon discovered that the boy, young as he was, knew a thing or two in that line.

I am going to tell you what he did on two occasions. The farmer had 100 head of cattle, which were turned out during the day on the rich grass and at night were herded in a strong pen. Those cattle were exposed to one enemy by day and another by night. If a wandering rhinoceros came near the herd by day he would select an animal and charge him. Once in awhile one would be overtaken and killed, but in most circumstances, being more agile than the rhinoceros, the cattle made good their escape. The boy, Carl, had watched these performances for some time, and on the second day of my arrival he was to put a plan into execution. There was a big white ox among the cattle who had been chased several times, and he always ran for the pen when charged. He did not run in a straight line, but zigzagged, while the rhinoceros in pursuit never deviated from a straight course. At a particular spot the boy dug a pit. It was long and wide and deep, and it took him a week to complete it. Half a mile to the east of this pit was a thicket from which the rhinoceros had always charged. Just after noon on the second day the boy caught the white ox, and, tying a rope around his horns for bridle, he mounted him and rode away to the thicket. He was going to "draw" for a rhinoceros.

"If a rhinoceros charges the boy he may be overtaken and killed," I said to the parents.

"I have no fear for Carl," replied the father.

For half an hour the lad rode the ox along the edge of the thicket, and then a rhinoceros suddenly broke cover with a fierce snort. He was after the ox like a wild locomotive, and for the first two minutes my heart was in my mouth. Then the ox got his speed up and held his own, while the boy kept laughing and shouting. By means of the horns young Carl held his "steed" straight for the pit, but just before reaching it he swerved to the left and passed it in safety. Not so with the rhino, however. The big beast ran in a straight line with his head down. Instead of following the swerve of the ox he kept straight on, and in five seconds he had landed at the bottom of the pit.

The old gun was brought out, and the bullets were fired into the rhinoceros until he was dead, and he was then covered in. I tried to pat the boy on the back and magnify his deed, but I couldn't make him believe that he was a hero.

Each night as soon as the sun went down there was a great howling on all sides from hyenas and jackals, and an hour or two later the lions would begin to roar. On the second night of my stay I wounded one by firing from a kitchen window, and on the third I killed one that was prowling within thirty feet of the back door. The Boer was glad enough to have them disposed of, but yet he had an eye to business. A dead lion was worth only his skin, while a live one could be sold for $150 cash to the men supplying zoological gardens and menageries. I was asked not to do any more shooting, and on the afternoon of the fourth day the boy set about preparing a trap. The cattle pen was 12 feet high, constructed of stones, logs and thorn bushes. At one spot it was pulled down until about five feet high. On the inside was constructed a stout pen of stakes, having a length of 10 feet and a breadth of five or six. The idea was that if a lion leaped the wall he would land in this pen. It was open at the top, however, and I pointed out to the boy that the lion would be no sooner in than out again.

"But you shall see how I will keep him in," he replied, and it was true that I soon did see and was amazed over it.

He constructed a sort of net of stakes and old telegraph wire, and this net was to be drawn over the top of the pen after the lion was caged. To draw it one must be inside the cattle pen.

Just at nightfall the boy took up his position in the pen among the cattle. An hour or so later we heard five different lions roaring at once. By and by I caught sight of two skulking around, and but for the remonstrances of the Boer I should have fired upon them. He wouldn't hear of it and we had a big male lion full under our eye when the animal approached the opening and leaped the wall. The frightened cattle bellowed and roared about in their terror, and it was fully 10 minutes before we heard from Carl. Then he came out of the pen by the big gate and calmly informed us that the lion had been safely trapped. I tried again before I left to make the boy understand that he had exhibited the greatest bravery in doing what he did, but he modestly replied:

"But I had to be there to draw the net or the lion would have escaped."

And the father quietly added, as he puffed away at his big pipe:

"He had to be, of course. You can't catch lions if you are in bed."

Fractured His Cork Leg.

Royal Flying Corps friends tell me (writes "Quex Senior" in the London Evening News) of an excruciatingly funny incident which recently befell one of our gallant aeroplane observers. He had lost his right leg before the war, and when he joined up in the Air Service a year ago he wore a cork substitute. A fortnight ago his machine came a cropper, mowed down a tree in falling, and buried him beneath, fracturing his cork leg. Calmly lighting a cigarette, he sat among the debris, awaiting rescue, with his false limb flapping idly back and fro—much to the astonishment and admiration of a large crowd, dumbfounded at so marvellous an exhibition of "endurance and pluck!"

A SUGGESTIVE COINCIDENCE

An interesting fact has developed in connection with the Patriotic Fund. It has been found that, broadly speaking, the sums granted from the Fund, as supplementary to the separation allowance and assigned pay, bring the total income of families on the Fund, in each province, to a parity with the cost of living as estimated by the Dominion Government's Labor Bureau. This result goes to confirm the substantial accuracy of the Labor Bureau's estimates, and also indicates that the administrators of the Patriotic Fund in each province are keeping their grants reasonably close to the actual wants of the people dependent on it.

Naturally, the cost of living increases as we move westward, and therefore the grants from the Fund increase also. For illustration, the average grant in Prince Edward Island is about $10 per month, while in British Columbia it is nearly $21. The average over the Dominion is about $16. It is estimated that the degree of comfort ensured by the Patriotic Fund is practically the same in each Province, notwithstanding the difference in the average grants.

Their New Act.

"What became of the [illegible] Brothers?"

"The ones that had the English comedy troupe?"

"The same. They were really brothers, were they not?"

"They were. But the act wasn't going so well."

"And now?"

"Well, they split up. Two of them are Japanese acrobats and one is doing well as a Russian dancer."

"They took advantage of the current craze, eh?"

"Just so. Another is a Hawaiian artist on the ukulele, and the rest of them have formed a Guatemalan marimba band."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A WOMAN'S MESSAGE TO WOMEN

If you are troubled with weak, tired feelings, headache, backache, bearing down sensations, bladder weakness, constipation, catarrhal conditions, pain in the sides regularly or irregularly, bloating or unnatural enlargements, sense of falling or misplacement of internal organs, nervousness, desire to cry, palpitation, hot flashes, dark rings under the eyes, or a loss of interest in life, I invite you to write and ask for my simple method of home treatment, with ten days' trial entirely free and postpaid, also references to Canadian ladies who gladly tell how they have regained health, strength and happiness by this method. Write today. Address, Mrs. M. Summers, Box 8, Windsor, Ontario.

The Cat and the Owl.

"Metaphysics," said a clergyman, "is a subject that always make one think of the cat and the owl.

"A cat, you know, once set forth in quest of happiness. She wandered up, she wandered down. She questioned this animal and she questioned that. Finally, wrapped in meditation in a tree, she perceived an owl.

"'Owl,' said the cat, 'tell me, most wise bird, where happiness is to be found.'

"'In meditation,' the owl replied. 'Meditation alone is the true secret of happiness.'

"'But,' said the cat, 'on what subject am I to meditate?'

"'On the subject,' the owl answered, 'which has occupied the race of owls since the beginning of time, namely, which came first, the owl or the egg, for, while the owl comes from the egg, so also does the egg come from the owl.'"

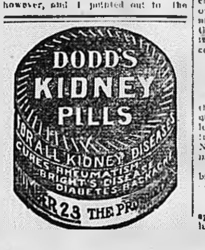
Reporter Was Right.

The editor was pretty mad.

"Are you the chump who wrote up that recruiting rally?" he said to the quaking reporter. "Oh, you are? Well, look here. 'Among the prettiest girls in the room was Colonel Oldun.' Nice rubbish, that is. The colonel's a man, I suppose, isn't he?"

"He may be," said the reporter, brazenly, "but that is where he was."—New York Times.

Man, a man has come back in spite of the fact that he has burned his bridges behind him.



A SICKLY WIFE NO FIT MATE FOR ANY MAN

GIRLS AND WOMEN SHOULD LOOK WELL TO THEIR HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

Never before was physical health and vigor so highly esteemed and so eagerly sought for as to-day.

No man finds happiness in a sickly wife, and the woman who wishes to enjoy the pleasures of life should spare no effort to maintain perfect health.

Is your daughter growing up strong and ruddy? Has she strength to drink in greedily all the pleasures that youth so zealously seeks—or is she compelled to use the street car instead of enjoying the delightful exercise of walking—does she after the ball arrive refreshed and vigorous, or is she exhausted, indifferent, and perhaps irritable?

When strength and vigor can be so easily maintained by Ferrozone, when the glow of health is so quickly brought to the cheeks and elasticity to the step, it is plainly a mother's duty to see that Ferrozone is on hand to assist her daughter back to health.

Upon the wake of Ferrozone quickly follows a stream of rich, nourishing blood which imparts that power and surplus energy so earnestly desired by those in ill-health.

Stop and think what this means for your daughter—certainly a great deal, and it can be accomplished by Ferrozone.

Every growing girl and young woman derives enormous benefit in many ways from this nutritive, vitalizing tonic.

It is specially suited for young women and is an guarantee of health and regularity as long as it is used.

Ferrozone is free from alcohol and perfectly safe to use. Prepared in the form of a chocolate-coated tablet and sold in 50c. boxes, or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE NIGHT THAT WILSON WON

(By Mary Mortimer Maxwell.)

London Daily Express Special Correspondent, under Chicago date, writes as follows to the Express—

"Vote for Wilson." This is the legend which has adorned a motor car in which I have been touring the various polling places to-day. Also, I ate oyster [illegible] for luncheon in a restaurant called "The Berlin," in the windows of which I was informed that within I should find the best German cooking.

No! I haven't been working for Wilson, whose campaign for some city office in Chicago and whose name is found on the same ballot paper as that of Charles E. Hughes, the Republican candidate for President of the United States. I have merely been out in the [illegible] among the Germans, and the [illegible] were voting the Republican ticket.

WITH THE ENEMY.

In the State of Illinois the women have voted to-day for the President of their choice. This is one of the reasons I came to Chicago for this important day. Another reason being that I wanted to get into the enemy country and obtain some idea of the German vote, and why it was going, as predicted, for Charles Evans Hughes, a Welsh-Welsh American. During the past week I have been in several hyphenated cities of the Middle West. In one of these cities I had a queer experience. My hostess told me that she had telephoned to the various newspapers in the town to say I was her guest, and that these newspapers were to send reporters to interview me, one of them, she added, laughing, being "an out and out pro-German sheet." That morning a delightful young woman called and handed me the card of her paper.

"Are you the pro-German who was to be set on to me?" I asked.

"Yes," answered the young woman. "My paper's supporting Hughes."

In the midst of our interview another young woman was shown in, and the first reporter, who seemed to be a friend of the second one, said by way of introduction:

"You'll like her, I know. Her paper is pro-Ally."

"Yes," said the second young woman, "my paper is supporting Wilson!"

HUGHES—AND WHY.

The little incident led me to investigate, and during subsequent days of search and inquiry I have found little reason to doubt the assertions of these two charming American girls, who earn their living by interviewing the various "celebrities" who visit their town.

Down in one of the voting precincts, I have just been talking with a man who would, I suppose, be called a Republican "Ward Boss." He seemed a kindly, decent sort of man of the common people. I asked him why he was so strong for Hughes and so bitter against Wilson. Said he, "Wilson didn't take care of the Catholics down in Mexico, and he insulted one of their leading prelates. I'm a Catholic, and I feel it."

"Are you Irish?" I asked. "No. My father and mother were born in Germany, but I was born in Virginia."

"Tell me," I said confidentially, "how you, an American of German descent, felt when the Lusitania was sunk?"

"Glad of it! The Germans are fools that they don't sink more ships like it. Very kind of Bernstorff, I say, to warn the Americans off, and if they went, it was their own lookout."

"Do you want Germany to win?" I asked. "I want to see a draw and nobody win," was his answer.

I went on to another precinct and asked another [illegible] why he was working for Hughes.

"Because," said he, "Wilson has sold us to Great Britain. He's the tool of the British."

"What about his notes to Germany and doing nothing else in that line?" I asked. "I wasn't talking about Germany," was the answer.

In Chicago, as I have said, the women are voting to-day, and I wish that every English anti-Suffragist could see them vote. Husbands and wives are going to the poll together, the husbands standing aside, hat in hand, while their wives go into the little polling booths to mark their ballots.

"MOTHER" AT THE POLL.

Charming-looking women have come to the poll accompanied by their little sons or daughters, and the children have stood at the door or been taken in charge by one of the city officials, while "mummy" voted. Women have brought their babies in perambulators, and husbands have minded the perambulators while wives polled. I held a baby in my arms for one poor woman who went in and voted. "How did you vote?" I asked her when she returned and relieved me of the fascinating baby.

"For Wilson," she said. "Why?" I asked. "He kept us out of war! It's terrible over there where the war is!"

"Yes," I answered, sadly. "It's terrible over there. I come from there." Then we talked, and she explained that though she did not want her own country to join in the war, she was for the Allies, because Germany had sunk merchant ships with innocent babes in them. She voted for Wilson, she said, not only because he kept her country out of war, but because Hughes was supported by the Germans, and the Kaiser wanted Hughes to win.

FACTS FOR THE CURIOUS.

The jack pines planted in Nebraska's sand hills by the government forest service some 10 years ago are now more than 15 feet in height.

Wireless waves have been utilized to light and extinguish gas lamps in Germany.

More than 12,000 students are taking courses in agriculture in the colleges of the United States.

An English artist sketches submarine scenes by descending with a diver's helmet and using waterproof paper and crayons.

About 25 words of five letters each can be sent by the Morse signals in a minute, about 60 a minute by the Hughes' system and about 320 by the Wheatstone system.

The forthcoming revised edition of the United States pharmacopoeia will make use of the metric system of weights and measures exclusively.

All Austrian and Hungarian newspapers now arrive in Switzerland without their advertisement sections, which are said to have been removed by order of the censor.

Some hen or hens laid a couple of eggs in the nest of a dove in the pigeon loft of Jacob Solare, of Pittsfield, and the dove hatched them.

Mrs. M. L. Vacus shot a large hawk at her home in Weybridge, Vt., while it was on the wing. It measured five feet and five inches from tip to tip.

An Egyptian nobleman's tomb built 4,500 years ago, and preserved in its entirety, has been placed on exhibition in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

When the old depot Maranacook, Me., was torn down the workingmen found in the ruins about $5 in small coins. The discovery of the money inspired a great many to become volunteer wreckers.

Thirty-six thousand pounds of cascara bark were cut in the Siuslaw National Forest in Oregon during the latter half of last year. The product possesses medicinal properties.

Russia leads the world in the production of flax fibre and Argentina of [illegible].

Production of [illegible] in the United States is more than 25 times what it [illegible].

It is said that a single drop of nicotine will kill a rabbit in three and one-half minutes.

The color of magenta is named for a battle which was fought in the year of its discovery.

In early Italian playing cards cups took the place of hearts, swords of spades and coins of diamonds.

With care, there is timber enough in the United States to last 441 years, according to a government expert.

The peak of Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands, throws a shadow stretching across the sea for a distance of [illegible] miles.

No More Corns

Cure Guaranteed

Never known to fail; acts without pain in 24 hours is soothing, healing, takes the sting right out. No remedy so quick, safe and sure as Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sold everywhere—25c per bottle.

Two Visiting Cards.

In 1844 when M. de Lagrene was sent under Louis Philippe as Minister extraordinary to China the courtesy of the ambassador greatly impressed the Chinese statesmen, particularly their "doyen." After the negotiations had been completed and M. de Lagrene was ready to embark a delegation brought him a great roll of paper. The ambassador seeing this parcel at once thought it was a present, knowing Chinese methods, but to his surprise they started to unroll the cylinder, which extended to about 24 meters of paper, over 102 feet. Then he learned that it was the visiting card of the "doyen." In returning his modest little bristol board the humiliated ambassador added a few words, which read, "The ambassador of France regrets that he is able to offer only these simple words to your excellency."—Exchange.

Showed Her the Door.

Thomas had been a carpenter, but owing to the dullness in trade he engaged as a footman in the "big house" in the village.

On the day of his engagement his mistress, having a lady visitor in the drawing room, rang the bell for the footman.

"You will show this lady the front door, Thomas," she said.

"Yes, ma'm," replied Thomas, and, bowing to the lady, he requested her to follow him. On coming to the door Thomas opened it, and the lady was about to pass out when Thomas tapped her on the shoulder, and remarked:

"This is the door, mum; gold pitch pine, inch, framed, two and a half inches thick, with raised mouldings; and cost about two pound ten, mum."—London Tit-Bits.

Secret of "Chips."

The secret of delicious crisp Saratoga chips is first to slice them as thin as paper, letting them drop into a pan of cold water. Take them from the water and lay them on a cloth to drain, then drop them into boiling fat. When they are a golden brown, skim them from the fat and drain them on a piece of brown paper. Do not salt until finished.

Poultry World

ANIMAL MATTER NEEDED IN FOOD.

The most important point connected with the management of poultry is insuring productiveness to a very high degree. This does not consist in fertility of the eggs set, which may be quite a large percentage, but in the raising of a high percentage of chickens from the eggs. As a matter of fact, there is not more than about ten per cent. of the eggs set which have not been fertilized, but owing to the eggs not being naturally balanced there is failure of the healthy development of the embryo chickens, and they perish at various stages of their development or of after emerging from the shell.

Most persons fail to perceive that the proportion of elements in eggs when they have been fertilized are not always the same, yet they should be about the same in order for chickens of good stamina to be developed from them. They should have just the right proportions of elements necessary for the perfect development of a chicken with good stamina. Unfortunately, a large proportion of the chickens hatched have a great excess of cheesy, fatty matter in them, owing to there having been an excess in the diet of the birds which produced the eggs. As a rule there is a deficiency of muscle-forming elements.

When one is aware of there being a very great deficiency in the usual diet of poultry one hardly could fail to perceive that there must be a shortage in the eggs produced, especially when there are four, or many more times as many, produced as would be the case were the birds living in a naturally wild state with wholly natural environments. Living under natural conditions they at least would have three times the proportion of muscle-forming elements in the digestible solids devoured as poultry usually have in their diet, the high percentage being chiefly due to the large quantity

This brings us to the point it is so necessary for keepers of poultry to perceive—the need of a considerable quantity of animal matter of some kind being in the diet of poultry right from the shell on. The quantity which it is necessary to provide depends upon the circumstances and the environments. When being kept where they can obtain a considerable quantity by foraging for it, it may not be necessary to provide any except when there is a scarcity, owing to inclemency of weather or other causes. Breeding stock should have animal matter from the shell right on, and it is much more important for chickens to have it than birds which may be mated up for breeding from. It is most important for chickens developing to have a suitable diet in order to insure good stamina. If chickens do not develop into birds of good stamina they hardly can be considered fit to breed from.

Chickens which have developed unsuitably until arriving at maturity, though suitably dieted for a considerable time afterward, may produce eggs from which chickens may be raised, and be, apparently, quite good breeders, but not as good as birds which had been fed unsuitably to maturity, even when fed fairly suitably afterward, are not likely to produce eggs from which robust chickens could be hatched.

To an expert, the plumage of a bird indicates to a considerable degree its fitness for raising chickens from its eggs. Animal matter, including a fair quantity of fat, promotes a good condition of plumage. Keepers of poultry should not breed from birds which "hand in the moult"—moult slowly—because it denotes an unhealthy condition of the skin. This is the result of an excess of lime-salts and starchy matter being in the diet, as the birds being fed too exclusively with dry foodstuffs, or foodstuffs containing an excess of digestible solids.

In regard to animal matter, there is the point of suitability to be taken into account. Bone is animal matter, but it is unsuitable for poultry when they are not producing eggs, because it overtaxes the kidneys and skin of birds. This should make poultry keepers careful to avoid feeding the birds not producing eggs foodstuffs containing bone. Poultry are omnivorous, but they prefer animal matter, and in their wild state it forms the chief portion of their diet.

NOTES.

See that the growing chicks have plenty of feed.

Separate the sexes as soon as the cockerel begins to get attentive to the pullets. The age at which this will be depends altogether on the breed. Leghorns begin their attentions at a very early age, whereas some of the heavier varieties may be nearly full grown before they get troublesome.

When you are through with your brooders for the season, see that they are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected and safely stored until required next season.

Keep your eyes open for vermin. A lousy chicken is a stunted chicken. A little vaseline rubbed on the head will kill head lice.

If you have to keep the chicks on sod, see that there is a spot kept dry for them, where they can scratch and dust to their hearts content.

Don't allow the chicks to crowd. It will ruin the color of the plumage, and, if persisted in, the fall roup will inevitably result.

Don't allow the water pans to stand in the sun. Put them in the shade. Change the water often, and be sure you wash out the pans when you are doing it.

If the chick run is an old tough sod, see that they are supplied with fresh rape or other tender green food daily.

Cull early and often. The early cockerels will often bring as much money as broilers as they will if held over until fall and held as roasters, and the cost is much less.

New Style Life Belt.

A new style of life preserver, recently patented, and described in the December Popular Mechanics Magazine, is designed to keep the wearer in an upright position in the water under all circumstances. It consists of an ordinary cork life-belt to which is attached a combination breast piece and chin rest. These, like the belt, are made of cork, in sections, covered and hinged together by canvas. The chin piece is so attached to the upper part of the breast that it serves as a headrest and at the same time allows the wearer to bend forward or backward.

WIT AND HUMOR

DESERVES HIS FATE.

(Baltimore American)

"The early bird catches the worm."

"That's because the worm is fool enough to get up early, too."

SEVEN THE LIMIT.

(Life)

Knicker—One family out of eight has an automobile.

Bocker—Then a motorist can run over seven families.

NOT PARTICULAR.

(Boston Transcript.)

"Casey is me pertickeler frind, d'ye know?"

"Phwat! If he was perticoler, he wouldn't be yer friend."

A FELLOW FEELING.

(Life)

Wife (to seasick husband in steamer chair): "Come quick, Henry. We're passing a volcano."

"Don't bother me, Jane. I know just how a volcano feels."

IMPORTANT THINGS FIRST.

(Baltimore American)

"Jane, there is a friend of mine who is very anxious to know if you will marry him."

"Tell him of course I will. Who is he?"

A BIG ADVANTAGE.

(Washington Star)

"Wonderful time that aviator made!"

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "But think of the advantage she had. Not a traffic policeman on the entire route."

A FOOLISH QUESTION.

(Boston Transcript)

Mistress—In your last place, Bridget, did you pay for the dishes you broke?

Bridget—Pay for them? Av course not. D'ye think I'd be after workin' for nothin'?

CLOSED SEASON NEEDED.

(Life)

"Doctors can operate, vaccinate, and inoculate at any time, can't they?"

"Certainly. Why not?"

"Don't you think there ought to be a closed season for human beings—as with deer?"

ONE LETTER ADDED.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"So you were invited to participate in a profit-sharing scheme?"

"Yes."

"How did you come out?"

"I discovered that the purpose of the scheme was not sharing but shearing."

EFFECT OF HIGH PRICES.

(Washington Star)

"Dese high prices is workin' a heap of injustice," remarked Erastus Pinkley.

"In what way?"

"Poultry an' eggs is gettin' so precious dat if you happens to give shelter to some homeless pullet dey's liable to charge you wif grand larceny."

AN ACTRESS' ABILITY.

(Life)

An exchange asks: "Can an actress make a good wife?"

If she's a good actress she probably can.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

(Baltimore American)

"Your wife's aplomb is very becoming to her, Mr. Comeup."

"That's all very well, but wait until I get the bill for it."

EDITH'S SHARE.

(Boston Transcript)

"So the lawyers got about all of the estate. Did Edith get anything?"

"Oh, yes, she got one of the lawyers."

MARY'S COME-BACK.

(Puck)

The Lady of the House—I trust that you are always truthful, Mary.

The New Maid—Yes, mum. I am on my own account. I only lies to the callers for the missus.

FOR A RAINY DAY.

(Washington Star)

"Are you saving up anything for a rainy day?" asked the thrifty citizen.

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "In a little while I expect to have enough to buy a brand-new top for my automobile."

A PHILANTHROPIST.

(Washington Star)

"What makes you keep boosting the price of commodities under your control?"

"Philanthropy, my boy," replied Mr. Dustin Stacks.

"Economy makes people happier and better, and we're teaching economy to people who never had any previous idea of what the word meant."

MUCH IMPRESSED.

(Birmingham Age-Herald.)

"Was the editor much impressed by your poem on optimism, Scribbles?"

"He must have been. I didn't suppose he could write anything that would make a human being look so dejected."

GETTING WISER.

(Judge)

"Do you know why the bridegroom's attendant at the wedding is called the 'best man'?"

"I did not know before I was married," replied skinny little Mr. Meek, "but very soon afterwards I began to suspect."

SURE TO BE LATE.

(Buffalo Express)

"Here are the theatre tickets you asked me to get for you. But you are sure to be late for the first act."

"How do you know that?"

"Your seats are exactly in the centre of the row."

NOT HER FIRST.

(Boston Transcript.)

Kid Brother—How soon are you and sis going to be married?

Accepted Suitor—She hasn't named the day yet, William. I hope she doesn't believe in long engagements.

Kid Brother—She doesn't. I know 'cause all her engagements have been short!—Boston Transcript.

THE REAL TROUBLE.

(Puck)

Agent—What part of your car is it that doesn't seem to work right?

Motorist—The part that works.

HARD-HEARTED.

(Boston Transcript)

"Why didn't Rastus marry dat Coopah gal?"

"Oh, she come flunk at de last minute—wouldn't lend him a dollah fo' to git de license wif."

UP-TO-DATE.

(Life)

Willis—What kind of a school is your son attending?

Gillis—Very fashionable—one of those institutions where you develop the mind without using it.

ECONOMY OR SARCASM?

(Baltimore American)

"I see where some of the coal experts are advising people not to buy great quantities of coal at a time."

"Is that advice economy or sarcasm?"

An exchange prints the following: "A customer has hanged himself to the bedpost by his suspenders." The verdict of the coroner's jury ran: "Deceased came to his death by coming home full and mistaking himself for his pants."—Galveston Tribune.

STOCK TAKING

The first two or three weeks of the New Year we devote to Stock Taking and during this process we find lots of odds and ends which we will clear at a fraction of the original cost.

Sale of Ladies' Misses' & Children's Winter Coats

This week we start a special Sale of Ladies' Misses' and Children's Winter Coats. Everyone a fashionable up-to-date garment, some with only one size, but every size in some garment. Prices: $5.00, $7.50, $11.50, $13.50 and $16.50.

Clearance of Furs

In Furs and Fur-Lined and Fur Collared Coats and especially small Furs, Collars, Throws and Fur Ruffs, we find after Christmas selling that we have a lot of odd pieces in stock. Some swell Neck Pieces without muffs to match and also Muffs without the Neck Piece to match. Every one must go if prices will move them. Prices from $2.50 Up.

Remnants of Dress Goods, Etc.

In Dress Goods and Coatings, Remnants, scores of splendid ends for skirts, dresses and children's wear will be sold at about half-price.

STEPHAN BROS.

Yours For Big Business
"Quality Groceries"
They are "Good" to-day
They are "Good" tomorrow
They are "Always Good"
at the Leading Grocery, Walkerton.

Goode & McKay

TEAS! TEAS!
Package Teas at Old Prices While They Last.

Salada Tea 40c lb. and 50c lb. Black, Green or Mixed.
Red Rose Tea 40c lb. and 50c lb. " " "
Lipton's Tea 40c lb. and 50c lb. " " "
Not more than 5 lbs. to a customer.

BULK TEAS

I have a large stock bought before the advance in price, to be sold at the old prices of 35c 40c and 50c. Now is the time to secure your tea.

C. PATRICK

OUR Stock-Taking Sa
Is Proving a Great "Crowd Bringe
The Interest Keeps Up Wonderf
Anticipate Your Wants Before I
Too Late. . . .

20 per cent off reg. prices on Men's Winter Underwear.
20 per cent off reg. prices on Men's Winter Overcoats.
Big reductions 25 to 50 per cent off reg. prices on Ladies', Mis and Children's Winter Coats. See this line while we have your size.
10 per cent off reg. prices on Men's and Boy's Suits.
Special reduced prices on all Boy's Overcoats.
If you are going to need a Comforter buy now. $2.00 for $1.60; $2.25 for $1.85; $2.50 for $2.00; $3.00 for $2.50; $4.00 for $3.50; $4.5 for $3.95.
Every day brings its new pile of short ends and remnants of all kinds out on the table at a big saving in price.
Cashmere Hose 60c for 49c, 50c for 39c, 35c for 25c.
20 per cent off reg. prices on all Yarns and Corsets.
Saving opportunities stare you in the face throughout the whole store. Come early and often. We are always glad to see you.

McBURNEY & CO.

Have You Started the New Ye Right?
BY RESOLVING TO SHOP AT
OUR STORE
You will find here much to interest you, much that you need, all at excep tionally low prices.
NEVER OVERLOOK A BARGAIN
Everything we sell comes under that heading.
THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRICE AND SERVICE.
Put us to the Test.
Butterick Quarterly
Complete forecast of the latest Paris and New York fashions as interpreted by exclusive Butterick Designers.
25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR 15 IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.
J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerto

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

PINKERTON

Mrs. N. Garland returned from Marlette, Mich., where she has been visiting the last two weeks.

Corp. Harold Pinkerton went to London on Monday where he has obtained a commission in the 160th.

A number from here went to Paisley on Saturday night to skate.

Mr. Thos. Birrell, who has been quite ill, is improving and will soon be able to resume his usual duties.

Mr. Harold and Miss Jennie Pinkerton visited friends at Inverhuron last week.

The Pinkerton Red Cross Society is very grateful to the Township Council, who at their first meeting granted them $60 to carry on their work. Mrs. T. Birrell and Miss Gibb have also donated a handsome patriotic quilt for which tickets will be sold, 10cts a ticket or 3 for 25c.

Mrs. (Rev.) Gale went to Alma on Tuesday, where she will visit for some time.

The Presbyterian church held their annual congregational meeting last Thursday. The yearly report was very gratifying to the members, who in spite of the many demands for money for patriotic purposes, have given an increase of $300 over the previous year for the church work.

EAST BRUCE

Mr. Joe Irwin is under the doctor's care.

Mr. M. Sturgeon of Bervie spent the week-end at Mr. John McKinnon's.

Miss Anne Stanly of Burgoyne is visiting friends on the 6th.

Mr. Arch. McIntyre has installed the Bruce telephone.

The people of West Bruce riding are taking great interest in the charges that are made against Chas. M. Bowman M. P. P., their member. Chas. has always been a good man as a member.

The box social held in S. S. No. 10 school house Br. and Gr. was a decided success. The programme was second to none. A. P. Mewhinney was chairman. Those taking part in the programme were:—Misses Fullerton, McKinnon, McIntyre, McLennan and Messrs. John Thornburn, D. McLennan, H. McLean, McLean Young, Jas. McKay, John McKay, Jno. T. Graves, and a number in the section took part in dialogues. The pupils sang and gave a couple of flag drills. Auctioneer Preaze sold the boxes. The highest priced box was sold at $6 to Mr. D. Wittig. The proceeds amounted to $128 which goes to the Red Cross Fund for the workers in the section.

MILDMAY

Miss Mary Ulrich is now teaching at S. S. No 1 Carrick, on the Elora road, north of Mildmay.

Mr. Simon Walter sold his farm on 6 Con. to Mr. Alex Becker of Culross.

On Wednesday night Jan. 10th, the death occurred of Albert Hunt, who had been suffering for a long time from cancer of the liver. Mr. Hunt was 28 years of age. The funeral took place on Saturday morning to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Quite a number from here drove to MacIntosh's church on Wednesday evening Jan. 10th, to attend the tea-meeting there. A splendid time was enjoyed by all. The proceeds amounted to the grand sum of $92.

A load of young people drove to Walkerton on Monday evening to take in the Tom Marks Concert.

On Thursday night last week, Mildmay and Teeswater played the first hockey game of the season in the local rink. The game was short, lasting 40 minutes as the Teeswater boys did not get here till after nine o'clock. It was a fast and exciting game of hockey though. The Mildmay puck chasers showed better class than the visitors and piled up a tally of 7 goals to Teeswater's one. Mr. Harry Young refereed the game. Mildmay's line-up: Goal, Alf Sauer; defence, Wm. Kraemer, Chas. Schmidt; Rover, Pete Lobsinger; Centre, Sport Schefter; Wing, Wm. Wendt; Herb Weiler.

Mr. Chas. Wendt has been ill during the past week.

Revival services are being held in the Evangelical Church for a few weeks. They began on Jan. 8.

RIVERSDALE

Mrs. Tolton, Bella Campbell and two daughters are visiting friends here.

Mrs. L. Beninger and son Cleo visited friends in Toronto and Grand Valley last week.

Misses Belle Chatteau and Cecelia Dietrich are visiting friends in Gorrie.

Miss Eva Beninger is visiting her sister in Hepworth.

Miss Melia Caskanette has gone to Stratford to spend a couple of months with her auntie, Mrs. Coplain.

Mr. Ambrose Baldstein of Chepstow Sundayed at Frank Caskanette's.

Mrs. Dougal McDonald is sick with la grippe. We hope for a speedy recovery.

We hear from our boys in England they are quarantined with mumps. They seem anxious to get out to the Front.

Mr. Roy Abbott is visiting at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Caskanette are visiting friends in Teeswater.

EDEN GROVE

Winter has arrived. Better look up your winter underwear, boys.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell and Miss S. Gallinger visited friends in [illegible].

Looks as if our neighboring scribes were going to have a little tit for tat on paper. Why not get into a ten-acre field? We will hold the stakes.

Mr. Gregg from the West returned last week. He thinks there is no place like the West but this is good enough for mine, thanks.

Mr. Mack Scott has a gang of men busy loading logs for the Knechtel Furniture Co. Walkerton.

Red Cross Box Social in S. S. No. 7, 13 and, Eden Grove, on Friday evening, Feb. 2nd.

Mrs. Connors and Miss Tracey Desmond visited Walkerton friends last week.

On Friday Mrs. Killen was moved to the hospital at Walkerton suffering from a stroke. We wish her a speedy recovery.

When Sunny Jim received the results of West Simcoe election Monday evening, he got an old tin pan and played "It's a Long Way to Toronto" for the Grits, and started a bonfire, and now some people are wondering if he really is a Grit.

Miss Frances Seiler called on a Paisley friend Monday.

Messrs. J. J. and R. Donnelly shipped a car of fine cattle to Toronto last week.

The only change in time of trains in this division: the late train is timed to arrive at 9.45 p. m. It's well named the late train as it is always late.

Mr. and Mrs. Shouldice of Calgary, Alta., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perdue "Model Farm" this week.

Do you notice the days growing longer and your supply of black diamonds growing shorter?

Mr. Lawrence Stansel left Monday for London for a short time.

The minister didn't preach the missionary sermon Sunday. Guess the heathens and fair weather Christians didn't show up.

Mr. Orno Stansel is home from the West visiting friends.

Mrs. McCutcheon and son from the West visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pearson, Quality Hill, this week.

Quite a number of our young people enjoyed a skate in the Paisley rink Saturday. Must be some attraction, boys.

Between sleighriding, skating and practising for the box social, the kiddies are working overtime these days.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeeman and sons took in the Marks show at Walkerton on Monday evening.

Owing to the stormy weather the Red Cross Society met at the home of Mrs. Pearson last week.

Mr. T. Desmond received a letter Monday written at Springfield, N. S., from his son Dan, 158th Batt., expecting to remain a few days at that town on route to Halifax.

Miss Jennie Killen is spending a week with Walkerton friends.

GLAMIS

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCormick, of Kinlough, visited in the burg on Saturday.

The Red Cross Society here are arranging for a Box Social on Tuesday evening, Jan. 30th. Dont forget to keep the date free. Further particulars next week.

Miss Lottie McNally and brother visited Chesley friends last week.

Mr. Duncan Rowan of Kincardine, visited in the vicinity the end of the week.

Messrs Moulton and Young have finished their gravel contract on the Kincardine and Greenock Boundary.

Miss Cora Purdy has been visiting her friend, Miss Mabel Mooney on 15th Con. Greenock.

A large number from here attended the Red Cross Box Social in Miss Flossie McLennan's School, 6th Con. Bruce, on Friday evening. All report an excellent time.

Mr. Will Bradley has been visiting relatives near Tiverton.

Kincardine and Bruce Twps. have donated sums to the Red Cross Society here. They expect to receive a grant from Greenock Twp. also.

Miss Nora McNally, returned to her duties at Faculty, in Toronto this week. We are pleased to report her brother John's condition is slightly improved.

Mrs. A. Osborne of Saugeen is visiting her mother, Mrs. Owen Webb.

Word has been received from Glamis Boys of the 160th Batt. that their Xmas Boxes have been received. Hearty thanks to all, for the boys enjoy the goods from home.

Mr. A. J. Smith's young son who was ill, is not improving as fast as all would like to hear.

JOHNSTON'S CORNERS

Since the winter has set in, cutting wood and taking out barn timber seems to be the main business in this locality.

Mr. Milton McLean has returned after spending a week in Toronto and Welland and other places. He reports a good time.

A box social was held in our school on Friday evening last and like McNab's Weddin' it was a grand success. Mr. John Rowland of Walkerton as Chairman made a big hit with the audience. The different numbers of the program, which consisted of instrumentals, solos, readings and short speeches were exceptionally well rendered. The duties of the auctioneer were ably performed by Mr. Purvis. Although the attendance was not large, what was lacking in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. About one hundred dollars was realized, which was granted to the Bruce Preparedness League.

How could the box social be a failure! Did you notice who was on the managing committee.

A certain married lady made a remark at the social, that box socials were not the thing. It gave the married men too much freedom. For the love of Pete what are we going to do?

The burning question of the day is, who put the names of Mr. Frank Rennie and Wat Kent on the program. They both refused to act. Wat said he left his music at home and Mr. Rennie said he didn't care to talk on the subject of essay writing.

Some of our South Line sports failed to attend the box social. It appears that they are suffering from a severe cold in the feet.

After hearing Mr. Rowland's speech the other evening, several of our bachelor friends have voiced their intention of getting married at once. Cheer up girls. Things are looking brighter for you.

Just as Mr. Rowland says it is not the fault of the ladies that there are so many bachelors in this country. Why, not long ago a certain young couple was married in a church, after the close of the regular service. At the close of the regular service the minister asked those who wished to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony to come forward. Thirteen ladies and one man went forward. Come on, boys, don't keep the girls waiting.

CARGILL

Mrs. C. W. Keeling and Miss Gladys were in Listowel on Saturday.

Mr. Joseph Clancy who has been visiting his brother in Brantford returned to his home here on Monday.

James Alexander Sr. and Wm. Cliff made a business trip to Oshawa last Wednesday. Mr. Alexander remained there having secured employment in a factory.

Mr. James Clancy, G. T. R. agent Walkerton, is home on vacation.

Mrs. C. Briggs of Paisley visited at the home of Mr. C. M. Keeling on Friday.

Messrs. G. F. Saunders and M. T. Ziegler made a business trip to Toronto last week.

Our skating rink was opened last week and is making the burg lively again.

Mrs. M. Bell visited in Walkerton on Monday.

A load of young people attended the patriotic box social in Chepstow on Thursday night and report a good time.

Mrs. G. F. Saunders entertained a number of the ladies on Thursday evening.

Mr. Jack Hanmore of Moose Jaw, Sask. visited his brother, A. J. Hanmore here the latter part of last week.

Mr. W. J. Loughleen returned from Woodstock on Friday night after attending the funeral of a relative there.

The annual meeting of the Public Library was held on Monday night and the following Directors were elected for the coming year. Messrs. W. D. Cargill, John Clancy, W. J. Loughleen, C. W. Keeling, F. F. Balsdon, Charles Kyle, R. A. Fowlie, Miss Francis Newman and Miss Marie Martin. Officers: John Clancy Pres. and Treas., W. J. Loughleen Sec'ty., James H. Alexander Librarian. Auditors:—C. W. Keeling and W. D. Cargill. The library will be open on Wednesday and Saturday nights instead of Thursday and Saturday nights as formerly.

Mr. Jacob Hogeland and Charles Thompson have secured employment in Brussels.

Letters have been received from a number of the boys in England and France stating that they received their Xmas boxes in good condition and certainly enjoyed the contents.

According to the new G. T. R. time table the evening train is 15 min [illegible] later than before. It will now be due at 9.11 p. m.

GREENOCK TP. COUNCIL

Knox's Hotel Pinkerton, Jan. 8, 17.

Council elect for the Township of Greenock, for the year 1917, as follows; D. Phelan, Reeve, Jas. D. Campbell, G. W. Gilchrist, Thos. Sawyer and Thos. Symon, Councillors, met as per statute and after taking declarations of qualifications and of office, took their seats, the Reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. The following accounts were presented for payment.

Jas. S. Dewar, 7 12 inch tiles per order of T. Sawyer	$ 5 25
H. Moffatt contract 165 yds gravel at 64c less half insp. on side line 5, con. 15	[illegible] 00
J. Mottie insp. Moffatt cont. 6 days at $1.75	10 50
Jos. Keany 81 yds gravel per Moffatt contract	8 10
J. Desmond 81 yds gravel per Moffatt contract	8 10
Municipal World, Election supplies, Asst. and Coll. Rolls, minute book and Clerk forms	22 80
H. Kroeplin, com. work Dec. 15th to the 31st	5 00
A. E. Knox Room for Council meeting	2 00

Campbell—Sawyer—That the foregoing accounts be paid and that the Reeve be instructed to sign checks for same.—Carried.

Campbell—Sawyer—That the D. R. officers, Poll clerks and owners of polling booths and nomination hall be paid.—Carried.

Checks were issued for above motions as follows;—

J. J. Cassidy	D. R. O. div.	1	$ 5 50
J. G. Carter	" "	2	5 30
T. P. Mullin	" "	3	4 80
F. Taylor	" "	4	4 70
A. E. Kuez	" "	5	4 30
G. J. Davidson	" "	6	4 60
W. Pinkerton	" "	7	4 70
D. McDonald	" "	8	4 80
R. Chestnut	Poll Clerk div.	1	$ 2 00
John White	" "	2	2 00
J. M. Graf	" "	3	2 00
T. Hood	" "	4	2 00
J. Clark	" "	5	2 00
W. Stewart	" "	6	2 00
H. Moffatt	" "	7	2 00
A. McFarlane	" "	8	2 00
W. Petteplace	Poll Booth div.	1	2 00
J. G. Carter	" "	2	2 00
M. McNab	Poll Booth div. 3 and Hall for Nomination		6 00
T. Hood	Poll Booth div.	4	2 00
W. Trotter	" "	5	2 00
G. J. Davidson	" "	6	2 00
N. C. McFarlane	" "	7	2 00
Sam Moulton	" "	8	2 00

Mrs. T. Splan and Mrs. O. Russell representatives of the Kingarf Red Cross Society waited on the Council asking for a grant to assist them in their work.

Sawyer—Gilchrist—That the Council grant the sum of thirty dollars to the Kingarf Red Cross Society.—Carried.

Check was issued to Mrs. Wm. Stringer, Sec. of Society for $30.00.

A communication was read from Miss Laura Cunningham Sec. of Glamis Red Cross Society thanking the Council for their offer of Dec. 15, 1916.

Communication was read from Mrs. Mrs. Flora McKee, Sec. of the Pinkerton Red Cross Society asking for a grant to assist them in their work.

Also a request was made for assistance for the Narva Women's Institute to assist them in their Cross work.

Sawyer—Campbell—That this Council grant the sum of $10 to the Narva Women's Institute and $10 to the Pinkerton Red Cross Society.

Checks were issued to Cora M. Purdy and Mrs. Flora McKee the Secretaries of above societies for amounts as per motion.

Symon—Gilchrist—That this Council go into Com. of the whole for the purpose of fixing Officers Salaries.—Carried.

Sawyer—Campbell—That the report of the Com. of the whole be adopted and that the Clerk draft a By-law confirming the same.—Carried.

By-Law No. 551 was drafted and read a first time fixing the Officers salaries for the year 1917 as follows viz.

The Treasurer's Salary	[illegible]
The Clerk's Salary	200 00
The Assessor's Salary	100 00
The Collector's Salary	[illegible]

The Auditor's $6.00 each and 10cts per mile one way, D. R. Officers $4.00 and 10cts per mile one way returning ballot boxes, Poll Clerks $2.00 each, Selectors of Jurors $4.00 each, Medical Officer of Health $100.00, Sanitary Inspectors $1.00, Insp. Schools and Slaughter Houses and $2.00 disinfecting Houses and 10cts per mile one way, Secretary of Local Board of Health $10.00, Members of Council $3.00 per day and 10cts per mile one way.

Gilchrist — Symon — That John Meagher be appointed a member of the Local Board of Health, and that the Clerk draft a By-law confirming the same.—Carried.

By-law No 552 was drafted and read a first time confirming the appointment of John Meagher as a member of the local Board of Health for the year 1917 A. D.

Symon—Gilchrist—That J. B. McKinnon and Thos. Houston be appointed Auditors to audit the Books and accounts for the year 1916, and that the clerk draft a By-Law confirming the same.—Carried.

By-Law No 553 was drafted and read a first time appointing J. B. McKinnon and Thos. Houston Auditors for the current year.

Campbell—Symon—That the Clerk be instructed to draft a By-law for the purpose of authorizing the Reeve and Treasurer to borrow from the Royal Bank of Canada such sums of money as may be required from time to time to meet the current expenditure up to $5000.—Carried.

By-Law No. 554 was drafted and read a first time authorizing the borrowing of five thousand dollars to meet current expenditure until taxes are levied and collected.

Sawyer—Symon—That By-laws No 551, 552, 553 and 554 be now read a second and third time and finally passed.—Carried.

By-laws No 551, 552, 553 and 554 were duly read a second and third time and finally passed.

Campbell—Sawyer—That this Council do now adjourn to meet at Chepstow on Monday 5th day of Feb. for the transaction of general business, and to receive applications for the Office of Assessor and Collector and to receive tenders for Township Printing for current year.

Thos. H. Purdy,
Clerk.

CHEPSTOW

After spending a month's leave at the home of his parents, Pte. W. Coumans of the 207th Battalion, Winnipeg, commenced the return journey on Tuesday. He expects to proceed overseas shortly.

Mr. Anthony Hehn of Youngstown, Alta. spent a few days of last week with his brother Henry.

Mr. Ambrose Fritz who during the past two months has been employed in Donnelly's lumber camp at Trout Creek, returned home on Saturday.

The local quartette of livestock magnates each shipped a choice collection of cattle to the market during the past week. As a centre for this industry this place is bound to outrival Chicago, and the railway Company has already been obliged to extend its yard to cope with increased business.

The Patriotic Box Social and dance held in the Hall here on Thursday evening was a successful enterprise financially, as well as from the view point of attendance, a very pleasant time having been spent by those present. The proceeds which [illegible] substantial have been forwarded to the Red Cross.

Miss Olivia Schnurr of the Hartley House staff, Walkerton, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Jos. J. Scherter.

Miss Blanche Wingefelder of Walkerton, spent the week end at King Edward.

FORMOSA

The funeral takes place here to-day of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Hoefle of Carrick, whose death occurred on Tuesday.

The Formosa Fire Insurance Co. will hold its annual meeting on February 6th.

HANOVER

Evangelistic services are in progress in Hanover Evangelical Church.

Dr. J. Frank Adams of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Adams of Hanover, has joined the colours as an M. O.

Wm. [illegible] has sold his livery business to Sam M. [illegible].

Mr. Fred Dentzel
the icy sidewalk last week and ered the bone in his left arm healing nicely.

The following officers of Lodge, I. O. O. F. Hanover w stalled by D. D. G. M. Fil
Chesley:—Noble Grand—Rich
ahl, Vice Grand—Chas. Falcon
Sec.—Herman Huehmiller. F
—Alex Zummach, Treas.—Neal
mer.

The Town Council appoint ing Committees for 1917 as f
Finance: W. A. Mearns, J
Hahn.
Board of Works: J. Frook
bach, O. B. Ha
Forester.
Charity: The M
Hahn.
Fire and ste
Ligh
He Prop
tm
Prin
Licen
Indu
Mes
Cour
A.
J.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

L. XLIX, NO. 5 | WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, FEBRUARY 1st 1917 | $1.50 A YEAR.

All Kinds of DAINTY
OILET REQUISITES

Every Toilet requisite is here. Quality abounds. he assortment is complete for choice selections.

Toilet articles, face and hand lotions, beautifiers, tooth preparations and brushes, nail polishes, hair tonics, powders, creams and perfumes.

It matters not what you want—get it here and know satisfaction both in quality and cost.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks | Phone 35 | C. P. R. Ticket Agency

Belfast
Linen ish n y hite

splendid values
10 cent Writ-g Tablets, only
m

A.P.SIEVERIGHT
The Rexall Store

BOOKS
STATIONERY
WALL PAPER
OFFICE SUPPLIES
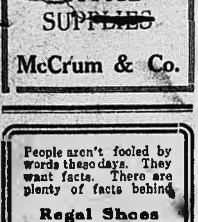
McCrum & Co.

People aren't fooled by words these days. They want facts. There are plenty of facts behind

Regal Shoes
National Style

Backed by real leather and honest workmanship Sold by

Ramsey
The Shoeman



What You See

When you look at the reflection of yourself clad in a suit we have tailored for you.

Our Tailoring

Insures the best Materials, Fit, Workmanship, Style, and Entire Satisfaction. Our bill is right. Give us a trial.

Men's Wear

That you can always depend on fill our store. Hats, Caps, Shirts, Collars, Ties, Mitts, Gloves, Sweater Coats, Underwear, Sox, Overall, Smocks and Work Shirts.

Call and see us. We will please you.

G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

BRUCE COUNTY COUNCIL

Gives Good Roads Measure a Six Months' Hoist—Hundred Thousand Dollar Patriotic Grant Carried Unanimously

The regular meeting of Bruce County Council was held at Walkerton, opening on Tuesday. Roll call showed nine changes from last year's council, Arran, Brant (3), Lucknow, Paisley, Walkerton, Tara, Southampton, and Culross. The election of Warden was at once proceeded with and Messrs Izzard (Port Elgin), Douglas (Hepworth), Cass (Elderslie), and Wilkinson (Huron) were nominated. All others, however, retired in favour of Mr. Izzard who was thus elected by acclamation; the first acclamation in the County of Bruce for many years. Mr. Izzard thanked the members for the double honor done him, electing him Warden by acclamation. He paid a tribute to the abilities of Mr. McNab and other Wardens who had preceded him and outlined matters likely to come before Council, mentioning particularly Patriotic Matters and Good Roads, the claims of both of which he strongly advocated.

Standing Committees for 1917

Finance—Messrs Doering, Johnston Jas. Brown, Hunter, Kastner, Ferguson and Forbes.

Roads and Bridges—Messrs Filsinger, Craig, Wilkinson, Christie, Phelan, Routledge, Cass, Willoughby, Case, Scott and Dobson.

Equalization and Salaries—Messrs Brown, Douglas, Dobson, McDonald D. A., Scott, Johnston B. and Steele.

House of Refuge—Messrs McDonald D. A., Filsinger and the Warden.

Petitions and By-laws—Messrs McDonald D. B., Munn, Russell, Whitworth and Johnston Jos.

Education and Printing—Messrs Douglas, Bell, Whicher, Steele, Johnston Jos., Johnston Robt. and Munn.

Property—Cass, Rowand, Phelan, Hunter and Russell.

Warden's—Messrs Christie, Forbes and Ferguson.

The usual grants were made—Agricultural Societies, $15.00; Women's Institutes and Boards of Agriculture, $25.00; Teachers Institutes, $50.00; Libraries, $15.00 and 30.00; School Libraries $3.00; Children's Aid Society, $150.00; four Northern Townships, $500.00, divided equally; National Sanitarium Association $10.00.

The Patriotic Grant loomed strong, and the Finance Committee recommended a grant of $100,000 to be divided—to Patriotic Fund, $75,000; to Canadian Red Cross $8,000; Belgian Relief $1,500; Sailors Relief Fund $2,000; and to hold in reserve for similar purposes $14,000. All payments to be made quarterly. The whole amount to be raised by 20 year debentures. This report was unanimously adopted.

It was found that the Road and Bridge Committee, which consisted of nine members, was not large enough to allow a proper representation of the different districts of the county and was increased to eleven members.

H. McLaren, Port Elgin, and W. J. Taylor, Tara, were reappointed County Auditors. A. E. McNab and N. Robertson were appointed members of the Board of Audit of Criminal Justice Accounts. High School Trustees—O. E. Klein, Walkerton; J. S. McEwen, Chesley; H. H. Stevens, Port Elgin; Wm. Mitchell, Kincardine; Dr. Wigle, Wiarton; Wm. Gillmore, Tara, and Wm. Douglas, Southampton, were appointed to Board of Examiners.

Each newspaper in the county was ordered for the inmates of the House of Refuge.

The Question of Good Roads, left over from December Session, was again before Council and took up considerable time. Wm. Hunter, Kincardine, strongly supported Good Roads. The Council had now had the question before it for some time and should deal with the matter. Some of the members said the municipalities were opposed to Good Roads but he was satisfied this was only because they did not understand the matter

THE THIRTIETH YEAR

Of His Appointment as County Treasurer, Mr. Norman Robertson Presented With Address Expressing High Appreciation and Gold Headed Cane

A pleasing incident took place at the conclusion of Thursday evening's session of the County Council, when County Treasurer Robertson was summoned to the Council Chamber, and there in the presence of the County Councillors presented by the Warden with an address expressing the Council's high appreciation of his valued services to the Council the past thirty years. Reeve Kastner of Wiarton then presented Mr. Robertson with a handsome gold-headed cane, and Reeve D. B. McDonald of Kinloss, presented for Mrs. Robertson, a case of beautiful pearl-handled fruit knives. The members of Council showed their feelings by making the building ring with three hearty cheers and a tiger for Mr. Robertson, followed by "He's a jolly Good Fellow," several ordinarily dignified members climbing up on their chairs to give sufficient emphasis to their approval. Mr. Robertson has occupied the position of treasurer for thirty years, just half the length of time that Bruce has been a County. Mr. Robertson's thorough capability combined with his high ideals of public service, have made him a most valued official and it goes without saying that he has held the greatest confidence and respect not only of the various County Councils who have sat in his time, but of all who have had anything to do with County business, and of the general public as well.

It was a graceful tribute for the Council to pay to Mr. Robertson and one that was thoroughly appreciated by the recipient. The Telescope takes the liberty of making a further suggestion to County Council in the editorial column this week.

The address presented to Mr. Robertson was as follows:—

Walkerton, January 25th, 1917.

To Norman Robertson, Esq.,
Treasurer County of Bruce,
Walkerton, Ontario,

Sir:

The members of the County Council of the County of Bruce for the year 1917 desire to extend to you their hearty congratulations upon the completion of your thirtieth year as Treasurer of this Corporation. We feel we cannot let this occasion pass without expressing to you our appreciation of the excellent and efficient services you have rendered this County during your long term of office. During all those years you have at all times held the entire confidence of the respective Councils under which you have served and we think yours indeed is a record you can well be proud of. The County of Bruce has been fortunate in having had a Treasurer who has conducted its business in so capable and satisfactory a manner and we sincerely trust you will be spared many more years of usefulness to the County.

We desire you to accept this cane as a small token of the esteem in which you have always been held by the members of the past and present Councils.

We feel also that some recognition is due your worthy helpmate, Mrs. Robertson, and desire her also to accept the accompanying gift with the best wishes of the County Council.

Signed on behalf of the County Council.

D. J. Izzard, Warden.

BORN

ROURKE—In Walkerton, on Jan. 25th, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Rourke, a daughter.

WEILER—In Carrick, on Jan 16th, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Weiler, a daughter.

DEVLIN—In Mildmay, on Jan. 21st, to Mr. and Mrs. John Devlin, a son.

✣ ✣ ✣

MARRIED

McRAE—McVITTIE—At the Manse, Walkerton, on Jan. 31st at 0.30 a. m., by Rev. Thos. Wilson, Miss Jean McVittie of Arran, to Mr. Fraser McRae of Saugeen.

✣ ✣ ✣

DIED

COOPER—At Bruce County Hospital, Walkerton, on January 20th, Mrs. Rhody Cooper, of Greenock.

ROBERTSON—At Barrow Bay, on January 17th, Mr. Peter Robertson, aged 73 years.

KEYES—At Guelph Hospital, on Sunday, Jan. 28th, Robert Keyes, con. 12, Greenock.

WRIGHT—At Glenella, Man., John Wright, formerly of Greenock, aged

Biggest Shipment Yet

The biggest shipment of horses that ever left the town of Walkerton were shipped on Tuesday morning by Irwin Bros. to the West. The consignment consisted of 10 good quality work-horses, making up five carloads. The Irwines are preparing to make another big shipment next week.

✣ ✣ ✣

Dislocated His Shoulder

Mr. Eamer, ledgerkeeper at the Bank of Commerce, had the misfortune to fall and dislocate his shoulder while climbing over a fence on snowshoes a few days ago. Mr. Rayburn of Wiarton is relieving him at the Bank while he is recuperating.

✣ ✣ ✣

Killed In Action

"Jim" Cunningham, at one time a foreman with the Canada Saddlery Co., was reported Killed in Action in Tuesday's casualty list. Cunningham lived here for a couple of years and has many old friends in Walkerton. He had been at the Front since early in the War and was wounded several months ago.

✣ ✣ ✣

Only Two Turned Down

The 160th Battalion came through the physical examination in England with flying colors. Only two men out of the entire battalion were turned down. This information was received here on Tuesday from a senior officer of the Battalion. His letter states that the recent report in the Toronto dailies that 120 men or 13 per cent of the 160th Batt'n were turned down by the examiners is absolutely wrong and the officers of the battalion are preparing to publish a contradictory statement.

✣ ✣ ✣

A Narrow Escape

Mrs. H. Tovell was the victim of an accident Wednesday evening which might easily have been much more serious. A lamp fell over causing the curtains to ignite and while she was standing on a chair to extinguish the blaze the chair tipped over and she fell striking her head sharply against the edge of the table. Fortunately she did not lose consciousness from the blow, as she was alone, and the fire would have burned away unchecked. As it was, she was able to put the fire out before it had got beyond the curtains and one end of the rug. Mrs. Tovell suffered a nasty wound by the fall, requiring several stitches and she is also suffering slightly from nervous shock.

✣ ✣ ✣

Hill—Tegler

A pretty wedding took place at St. John's Lutheran Church Carrick, on Wednesday, January 31st, when Miss Lilian Tegler, elder daughter of Mr. John Tegler, was united in marriage to Mr. William Frederickton Hill, of Carrick. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Brackebusch, pastor of the Church at three o'clock p. m. The groom's sister, Miss Hilda Hill, acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by Mr. Robert Kahl. The wedding march was played by Miss Olive Tegler. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the Tegler home, where a bountiful repast awaited them, followed by dancing and games. The popular young couple will reside on the groom's farm in Carrick.

✣ ✣ ✣

Mystery Still Unsolved

It is now four months since a chum of Albert Ballantyne's wrote home that on getting out of the hospital he had heard that Albert was reported missing but had really been killed in action. Nothing appeared in the casualty lists. Mr. Robert Ballantyne has not since heard from his son, but on Friday last he had an official telegram from Ottawa stating that Albert had been wounded on Sept. 4th last and that further particulars would be sent when received. This does not help much to clear away the mystery and as the boy has not been heard from for several months, the outlook is not very hopeful. Mr. Ballantyne wrote to Ottawa about the matter some time ago and Friday's telegram came as a reply to his inquiry.

✣ ✣ ✣

Capt. Reid Twice Wounded

Capt. J. A. Reid, son of Mr. Adam Reid of Pinkerton, who has been ill in a Military Hospital, in England writes home that he has recovered and although not fit for further service in the A. M. C. in France is now attached to Shorncliffe Military Hospital, Kent, England. Capt. Reid was twice wounded, first in the Ypres Salient, and later at the Somme, but on account of the death in action of his brother, Lieut. A. E. Reid D. S. O. about that time, had his name omitted from the casualty lists so as not to cause too much worry at home. It was only lately that the family learned of the second casualty. Capt. Reid writes that his experience at the Somme was far worse than when he was first wounded. He was badly shaken up and still feels the results of the mud and cold. A shell buried him and two members of the Princess Pats, with which Battalion he was working, and he got a cut on the head and one on the leg from a piece of

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Renewed your Telescope yet?

Try the Telescope for job printing.

Mrs. Farquhar Shaw has gone to Fergus.

Rev. Thos. Wilson was in Toronto over Sunday.

Tailor made suits at old prices.—S. A. Rife & Co.

Miss Tena Lobsinger went to Detroit on Tuesday.

If you have visitors, let the Telescope know about it.

Warden Izzard was in town Tuesday on County business.

Mrs. Hobson of Guelph is visiting her niece, Mrs. N. C. McKay.

Mr. Cress Farrow, of Saskatchewan visited friends in town the past week.

Old-timers remark that this is the pleasantest winter they can remember.

The interior of the G. T. R. Station is in the hands of the painters this week.

Mr. N. C. McKay is concluding the Agricultural classes at Underwood this week.

Miss Mae Hyslop left Tuesday to visit her sister, Mrs. M. Grainger of Chatham.

Rev. Mr. Speedie, agent of the Bible Society, spoke in several town Churches on Sunday.

Three rinks of Durham curlers are playing here Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Warden Of Bruce County

MR. D. J. IZZARD

Warden of Bruce County for the year 1917.

Alex McLennan bought a nice driving horse from Irwin Bros. this week for about $300.

An excellent stock of Table Figs, Cooking Figs, Dried Peaches, Prunes, Dates, at Goode & McKay's.

Mrs. William Merchant and son, James, are visiting the former's brothers in Toronto and Brantford.

Rev. Mr. Hogg of Southampton has accepted a call to the Presbyterian Church at Clinton at a salary of $1800.

Art Diebel, who works at Hahn's bakery, was taken to the County Hospital on Tuesday to be operated upon for appendicitis.

Miss Rotha Schwindt attended the annual At Home at Stratford Normal School where her brother, Oscar, is in attendance on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Tolton, Mrs. Pound and Norman, who have been visiting relatives here, left yesterday morning for their home at Oak Lake, Manitoba.

It is reported that Pte. Joe Chesney of the 160th Batt'n. failed to pass the physical examination in England but has been retained there for guard and picquet duty.

Are you interested in Tomato Catsup, the new Process Tomato Soup, Salad Dressing and Chili Sauce—on sale at the People's Grocery. Goode & McKay.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed in Knox Church next Sunday morning. Preparatory services will be held on Friday evening of this week at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. H. M. Lay had word that her mother, Mrs. John King, who went to Ottawa recently to visit her son, Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, was very ill the past week. Latest report is that her condition is improved.

"Mac" McLean, formerly of the Bank of Commerce Staff, called on old friends in town on Tuesday. Mac signed up with the 228th Batt'n at Cobalt and expects to leave with his Battalion for the Front soon.

The best apples we have seen this year were a nice sample of Northern Spies, which our good friend, Mr. Thomas Wilton of Brant, left at the editorial sanctum this week. After all the Spy is not only the King of Apples, but the nicest fruit on top of Mr. W. A. Clark was in Fergus on Monday.

Mrs. James Smith, who has been laid up for several weeks, is able to be out again.

A shipment of "Toilet Paper" just arrived—best quality—selling at $7.00 to $8.00 a case at the People's Grocery. —Goode & McKay.

Now is the time to buy your Canned Goods—while the price is down. Peas Corn, Tomatoes, Beans, Beets, Pork and Beans and Pineapples—at the leading Grocery, Walkerton.—Goode & McKay.

Letters from boys of the 160th refer to a visit to the Camp lately by Norm. Denny, Frank Zettel, and Jack Anderson, Walkerton boys who went across in 1915 with the 34th Batt'n. Jack Anderson returned to England lately suffering from shell-shock.

Coal has been rather scarce the last month but no less than seven cars have been received in town the past week to relieve the scarcity. One car came through from Black Rock N. Y. via G. T. R. in less than forty-eight hours, indicating that freight has begun to move a bit faster.

✣ ✣ ✣

Discharged from Hospital

Mr. J. A. Gregg of Pinkerton had a wire from Ottawa the past week stating that his son, Elmer, who received a gunshot wound in the shoulder last September has been discharged from the hospital.

✣ ✣ ✣

Experienced Maid

Experienced Maid Wanted for general housework in Kitchener. Should be able to cook. No washing. $15.00 a month to begin, will pay railway fare.—Mrs. D. A. Bean, 19 E Hand St. Kitchener.

✣ ✣ ✣

Visiting Curlers Here

Curlers from Port Elgin and Paisley, one rink from each town, came down last Thursday and played afternoon and evening matches with the local curlers. The ice was pretty good and there were some close contests. The homesters were 9 shots up on the day's play.

✣ ✣ ✣

Record Prices

Hogs are the best price in record this week, selling for $13.50. Duncan R. Smith got $41.50 for one porker from a local butcher, which must be about a record too. Cattle are also holding up well. For five head of butcher Cattle Mr. F. J. Wilton got the nice sum of $615 one day last week.

✣ ✣ ✣

Cordage Machinery Shipped

The last of the plant of the old Cordage Co. which has been lying idle for several years, was removed this week. Mr. John Connor of St. Johns, N. B., was here on Friday and Saturday and made arrangements for having it shipped away. The building is now available for a new industry and would make a good stand for almost any kind of factory.

✣ ✣ ✣

Back From West

Mr. Ben Whitehead, who went West with Irwin Bros.' shipment of horses two weeks ago, arrived home Monday night. He spent only a few hours at his destination, Saskatoon, taking supper with Mr. Robert McCarter and calling upon another old Walkerton boy, Arthur Gordon. He made a quick trip back home, covering the distance in 72 hours from Saskatoon to Walkerton.

✣ ✣ ✣

Bruce Publishers Meet

The publishers of Bruce County held their annual meeting at the Walkerton Town Hall last Thursday. The men had a good sociable time together and discussed a number of editorial topics as well as the problems arising out of recent tremendous increase in the cost of blank newspaper. Eight hundred country newspapers in United States were forced out of business the past year by the increase in price of newspaper. On February 1st, the price increased 00 per cent more in Canada and the result will be that a large number of small weeklies will give up the ghost. One Bruce Weekly, The Lions Head Peninsular News has already expired. Many of the Publishers were in favor of cutting out the ready print pages and devoting more space to strictly local news. That is a question which each publisher will have to decide for himself. In the meantime representations have been made to the Dominion Government and it is hoped that if the Canadian mills persist in charging extortionate prices which are not at all justified by any such increase in cost of production that the Government will slap on an export duty on news print. J. J. Hunter, publisher of the Kincardine Reporter, and President of the Bruce County Press Association, occupied the chair. Both he and the secretary, Mr. D. McKenzie of the Paisley Advocate, were re-elected for the coming year.

Off To Florida

Judge and Mrs. Klein and little daughters, Beatrice and Bettie, left Monday to spend the remaining winter months at Miami, a winter-resort in Florida. Since his nervous breakdown some months ago the Judge's progress towards recovery has been slow and it is thought that the climate and change of scene will prove beneficial. The Judge's many friends in Walkerton and throughout Bruce County earnestly hope so, and look forward to his speedy restoration to good health.

✣ ✣ ✣

Late Mrs. Plowright

The late Mrs. George Plowright, whose death was reported in our last issue, was born at Spaulding, Lincolnshire, England. Her father was a farmer and in fact is still conducting the business of his farm at 92 years of age. She was a well-informed and cultured woman and was highly esteemed in the neighborhood to which she came with her husband from England six years ago. For years her health had been poorly and for the past two months she had been confined to her bed. Besides her sorrowing husband she leaves three children, Thomas and Mary at home, and John with the 160th Bruce Battalion at Bramshott Camp, England. Deep sympathy is felt for the family in their sad bereavement. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon, service being taken by Rev. R. Perdue, rector of St. Thomas Church, the remains being taken to Walkerton Cemetery for interment. The pall-bearers were:—Messrs. T. H. Wilson, Norman Brockelbank, Louis Eckenswiller, W. T. Ellis, W. J. McNally, Robt. Simpson.

✣ ✣ ✣

Oddfellows' Installation

Last Friday was installation night at Walkerton Oddfellows' Lodge. Bro. J. Kempas of Southampton, D. D. G. M., was present and installed the newly-elected officers for the ensuing term. He was assisted in the ceremony by Bro. J. Douglas, as Grand Marshall, Bro. C. Pettyplace as Grand Secretary; Bro. John Crawford as Grand Treasurer; Bro. T. Pye as Grand Junior Warden. The officers installed were:—J. P. G., T. Boss; N. G., N. E. Hiscox; V. G., G. Henderson; Warden, J. Bichler; Conductor, P. Bremner; R. S. S., G. T. Rourke; L. S. S., N. C. McKay; Fin. Sec., F. Spearan; Rec. Sec., F. Godwin; Chaplain, W. Wells. R. S. N. G., C. Pettyplace; L. S. N. G., H. G. Hunter; R. S. V. G., J. Holm; L. S. V. G., H. Stephan; I. G., S. Earwaker; O. G., J. Crawford. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of the Veteran's Jewel to Mr. Arch. Campbell who has been a member for nearly forty years. The presentation was made on behalf of the Lodge by Bro. Chas. Petteplace. Afterwards oysters and coffee were served and the Brethren spent an enjoyable social hour. The Lodge is in a flourishing condition. Bro. Boss' term has been a busy one, and the prospect for the coming year is good.

✣ ✣ ✣

Death Of Jacob Waechter

A well-known and highly respected pioneer of Greenock Tp. passed away in Walkerton on Saturday in the person of Mr. Jacob Waechter. The deceased was in his 79th year had enjoyed fairly good health up to a few days before his death, when he caught cold and inflamation of the lungs set in with fatal results. Mr. Waechter was born in Waterloo Co. but in early manhood came and settled in the Greenock bush. In 1 he brought his young wife to lot in Greenock, where by di work, which only the early have experienced, he cleared and turned it into a highly pro ive farm. Mr. Waechter was only a capable and thorough farmer but a handy man as w could turn his hand to buil necessary work of the place was always kept n and altogether he was most successful farme ship. Of a quiet di no active part in t was highly respect by neighbors and as a man of good soul of honor. H passed to her rew ago. About 8 yea ter left the farm with his daughte Nine members all of whom w sble the last da Formosa, Georg Greenock, Alex. Greenock, Mrs. Peter stow, Mrs. John Swa Mrs. Frank Giesler of A. Schuett of Walker are also 33 grandchildre 3 great grandchildren. A larg concourse of relatives and friends attended the funeral on Friday morning. After service at the R. C. Church, the remains were taken to Formosa for interment. The pall-bearers were:—Messrs. Ed. McIntee, A. E. McNab, John Bruder, Louis Yack, Andrew Waechter, Geo. Giesler.

WOMEN'S

Walkerton Lad serve Every P Encourage Situatio
E

We hear a goo patriotic work t
these times but preciate the exte are accomplishi
they are cheerf women in this working like pa that only the g ate the necess very little is he between 80 and the trenches, in and to keep send sort and anothe are bearing the providing funds
withal, is only women of the to One young lady fessionally duri to write to sixty trenches, in the many, sending greetings and t
from the I. O. D
way. In some c arrive before th
the letters did not appreciated to read the rep
published elsew
Telescope. Th of what the wo doing. It could number. The n creasing and th their utmost to mands. This w sent another bi bout sixty boxes lars each, and th another 140 pa
sox. Thus the and on. Can an hold from the l port in this mos
sary work?

Former Greenoc

A telegram re
Wright of Gle noon announce father, Mr. Joh
resident of Gre and 10 months received last Fr
Mr. Wright w illness must
The late Mr
Aberdeen,
this ood wh ided o
The p be h
with his son near Glene
Wright was respected sterling principles by him. The surviving f on:—George of Greeno
Manitoba; James of Sask. and Mrs. Shire of funeral will leave th his son, Robt. Wrigh
14, Greenock on Satu
at two o'clock for Pur

Walkerto

(Revised.
Hay, per to
Oats, per bu
Wheat

the W cession, B. is a desirabl three miles particulars
Patric

N EVIL
RITAGE

II.

his second an Berrin to fail, and had run to ments and a ce of dying
it that can n the little
, for the ld to rest

pt for her the most many miles etage of her resolved to a so hateful very first liberty and should she uately," Miss have me as if you have ot country

r I have no
ir acquired
Why should you not all in all this nevertheless hich she felt

Miss Valeria
d made up ara her face
l have much way, for in ure in lock canes," she quite inde-

as a sugar

ing her own n way; and s gone from ria scarcely light dresses at before she n board, the hich was the s resolve had the Lot 13

ing to lock erself would y why she
Miss McCrie,
e supposed;
her mind on ght to the s would feel because of d partly be-the only per-talk openly e than a and wraps

g to be dis-ablished one air enjoying had yet had of a familiar ew acquaint-d taken her keeping aloof dy entertain-her as much knew that e her were me sort, re-
r a leave an un-

Marian

who ha
w many things it
d!
is life has been a beginning with the nd ending with his

on of his bad luck
t himself to thank,
f fitting sail, when tell you—and the s know best—that ing over the hills miles an hour?"
ad about as much ough it were an which there is t of late years reckless than y spoken convers-

the cone turned time

pose, began to feel cramped. As she looked out over the intensely blue water and marked the intensely white arches which were probably flying-fish, she was thinking of the evening when she had watched this same sight with Mr. Hibbert by her side. The thought that he was no longer of this earth moved her more than she would have believed possible. That man had loved her truly and deeply, of this she was certain—who knows? more deeply, perhaps, than Bernard had loved Sybil. Why had she not been able to love him? Her common sense told her that she was not guilty of his death, and yet her fancy would not admit that she was quite innocent. It seemed to her that even on closing her eyes she could not help seeing before her the soaked and draggled figure of the District Magistrate lying dead in the fantastically twisted arms of the "Big Mamma." The question as to whether John Hibbert's life were a comedy or a tragedy was settled now at last beyond all manner of doubt.

When, after a prosperous voyage, St. Clara was reached, Miss McCrie was waiting to receive her favorite. This was exactly as Marian had expected, but what was not exactly according to her expectations was the little lady's expression of face and general manner of bearing herself. Considering that her father had been dead for scarcely two months, Marian had naturally looked for the element of condolence as chiefly coloring the moment of meeting; to her astonishment, however, when the first hurried phrases were over, nothing more was said about the captain, and no enquiries made about his illness. Miss McCrie even seemed to have some difficulty in maintaining an expression sober enough for the occasion, which was all the stranger considering how kind and sympathetic she had always been two years ago. During the voyage Marian had had visions of exceedingly confidential talks between her and Miss McCrie, but these visions began to fade. In face of this want of sympathy she would never have the courage to unclose her heart. She immediately resolved that not even Bernard's name should cross her lips if she could help it. Almost she began to repent having come to St. Clara. Once being here, however, there was no escaping from Miss McCrie. Though the ex-Registrar-General's iron gray hair had grown sparer, and her sallow skin covered by a yet finer network of wrinkles, she had lost none of her energy and briskness; within an hour of having disembarked, aunt and niece had been packed into a buggy, by which means they reached Prospect that same evening.

Prospect was that same empty house beside the sea between whose bare walls Marian had first made the acquaintance of the [illegible] Jess Collins (now Mrs. Phillips, and the proud mother of two flourishing babies), amidst medicine bottles and pill boxes, and the peaky faces of her little brothers and sisters. The rooms now were not less bare than they had been then; [illegible] they were barer still, owing to the absence of both the bottles and the boxes, for Miss McCrie required no medicines.

"And who lives now at Cane Hill?" enquired Marian when they had strolled into the garden after supper, [illegible] leaning over the same bit of wall which she and Jess had leaned over side by side on the day when the picnic had been planned. Looking down, as she was now, upon the bright green creepers—bright enough to be distinguished even through the dusk as they trailed over the dark sand below, it almost seemed to her that all that lay between this moment and that other must be a dream.

"Tanner & Co. live at Cane Hill themselves," answered Miss McCrie. "At least, I believe so, but I never go near the place; I could not bear to see it so changed."

"There must be a good many things changed about the island," said Marian, thoughtfully; "even you are different from what I had expected."

"Am I really?" and Miss McCrie laughed light-heartedly. "Well, so are you, for the matter of that. I have a notion that to meet you at present would not further your cousin Bernard's peace of mind."

"What do you mean?" asked Marian, who in the uncertain light could ee that Miss McCrie's eyes were g with mischievous enjoyment.
what I mean is very simple.
things have once again natural course. It is the of cross purposes—

ling liebt ein Madchen, elsen Anderen gewahlt.'

ed to be fond of your cousin, and of him, as the registry but that was in days, when you had the world. Now surrounded with ld scarcely be his memory should u."

companion ree dusk, but half-turned sy with the top of the she should elly, and by ose sympathy

Crie went on t it is easier
it is your at is counot the t be the mind too

all his right
a little uneas-

ed not to have ere it would end that continued, quickly. "I

for the sound of that big haired Sybil; I am sure she is all outside, and no inside, the sort of woman to go to a man's head, but not to keep possession of his heart. Poor Bernard reminds me rather of a child that has pricked open its toy balloon to see what it is made of, and is left g with but a shrunken bladder is hand."

"Then you do not think he has got over his disappointment?" asked Marian with a stormily beating heart. "Is he comforted? Is he fancy-free once more?"

"No," said Miss McCrie, boldly, "he is nothing of the sort."

"Then I don't understand——"

"Don't you? I think it is simple enough."

And suddenly, taking Marian's hand, she looked into her eyes as well as the dusk would allow. "Is it really you who ask me this?" she earnestly enquired, "Are you honest, or only counterfeiting?"

As Marian snatched away her hand she felt the hot blood coursing over neck and face.

"This is all nonsense," she said, unsteadily. "If he cared for me ever so little, why should he not say so? He found words enough for wooing Sybil."

"Oh, blessed innocence!" sighed Miss McCrie. What! Say it now, and have the finger of scorn pointed at him, as at the man who waited to find out that he loved his cousin until that cousin had got his money, too? What man could be indifferent to such a suspicion as that? I tell you that, though he were dying for love of you, he would not open his lips so long as you are the mistress of Thorn-on. But that cannot make much difference to you, since you must have your suitors by the dozen now. You have not told me anything about them yet, by-the-by."

For a few moments Marian stared down in silence at the sands below; then she shook her head.

"It is not possible; it can never be."

"What can never be?"

"I can never marry Bernard."

"I know you cannot," readily assented Miss McCrie, to the disappointment of Marian, who had hoped to be contradicted. "I should consider it as violating the duties of friendship to urge upon you so wretchedly bad a match, having, as you have, the elite of England to choose from. Ever since you wrote to me about your success at the ball, I have given up all hopes of my poor protege. The only thing I should like to plead for is that if you chance to meet him, you would not snub the poor man more than you can help."

"Meet him?" said Marian, paling a little; "but I thought he was in South America, in the Bolivian army?"

"So he is—so he is; I forget what I am saying. Not that there is any excuse for my memory, seeing how the Bolivian war telegrams are coming to the fore again. They had one or two pretty serious skirmishes last week, and some rather heavy losses."

"And have you heard of Bernard since then?"

"No, I don't suppose he has much time for letter-writing just now; but even supposing there is a more serious reason for his silence, I am not sure that it would not in some ways be the best solution of the difficulty. You see, what between want of money and want of friends he is having rather a hard time of it altogether. But how have we got back on to this subject? I want to hear about England. Your not being married yet must mean that you are terribly difficult to please. A big heiress like you won't take anything under a duke, I suppose?"

"Do you think his life is very wretched?"

"Whose? Bernard's? What if it be? He will learn to live without either money or friends in time, as [illegible] lots of people do. At any rate, it serves him quite right that you should have given him a successor in your heart. You must tell me more about the successor, but not to-night—to-morrow. It is bedtime for travellers."

"But I never said that I had——"

"Of course not; those sorts of things are generally betrayed without the help of anything so clumsy as words. I will hear all about it to-morrow, no doubt. Come along now, it is high time."

Marian followed without resistance, and without any further word except the final good-night spoken at the bedroom door. She was far too puzzled to think consecutively, far less to speak. Was Miss McCrie possessed of an evil spirit that she should so persistently misunderstand every word she said? And why should every one insist upon Bernard being fond of her? Could there possibly be a grain of truth? No, that way she dared not turn; the light was too dazzling to be looked at steadily.

Meanwhile Miss McCrie was descending the staircase somewhat hurriedly with her watch in her hand.

"I think she will do," she said to herself with a sigh of satisfaction. "Now, all ye match-making geniuses, stand by me to make as good a job of him. Nine o'clock; he must be at the gate by this time."

(To be continued.)

Jutland Hero's Story.

The blue-jacket had been in the battle off Jutland, and in the railway compartment every one addressed him respectfully. Incidentally he was the recipient of numerous fine cigars. He conducted himself with becoming dignity, and when the foreign-looking gentleman who had kept silent went out at a roadside station the audience settled down to hear the yarn. Nodding his head toward the dark stranger on the platform, the bluejacket remarked with a grin:

"'E thinks 'e 'as lost something 'e'd like to hear, 'e 'as. But hall Hi saw of the bloody battle was coal—nothink but coal. Hi'm a stoker, you see, that's what Hi am."—"Argonaut."

UNSIGHTLY PIMPLES
COVERED HIS FACE.
B. B. B. Cured Him.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, a medicine that has been in use for over 40 years, so you do not experiment when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. My face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B. B. B. so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson IV., January 28, 1917.

Reverence of Jesus for His Father's House.—John 2. 13-22.

Commentary.—I. Christ cleansing the Temple (vs. 13-17). 13. The Jews' passover was at hand—From the fact that John speaks of this feast as "the Jews' passover" it is inferred that he wrote the Gospel outside of Palestine, and possibly while he lived in Ephesus. The Passover in the year A. D. 27 occurred April 11-17, only a few months after Jesus began His public ministry. The Passover was one of the principal feasts of the Jews. It was held yearly in Jerusalem in commemoration of the deliverance of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt. It continued eight days and was a season of great gladness. Jesus went up to Jerusalem—The law provided that all males should go to Jerusalem three times each year to attend the great feasts, the Passover, the feast of Tabernacles and the feast of Pentecost, and they were to take an offering to the Lord. The women were not commanded to go, but they often went, especially to the Passover. We have the record of the attendance of Jesus at the Passover when He was twelve years of age. John records his attendance at each Passover, but one during His public ministry, and it is possible that He attended that one also. The expression, "Went up to Jerusalem," is literally true to the geographical situation of Capernaum and Jerusalem. The latter city is more than three thousand feet higher than the former. Jerusalem was thronged with visitors at this feast. Josephus declares that at times as many as two million strangers were in the city.

14. Found in the temple—The entire temple enclosure is included in the term temple as here used. The buildings and various courts covered the temple platform, which contained something like twenty-five acres. The court of the Gentiles is said to have contained fourteen acres, and in this large space the trafficking which Jesus rebuked was carried on. Those that sold oxen and sheep and doves—The law required each worshipper to bring a sacrifice to the Lord. Those who lived near Jerusalem could bring their own animals for sacrifice, but those whose homes were remote could not conveniently do this. Hence it was an accommodation to them to be able to procure suitable animals after arriving at the place of the feast. This gave rise to an extensive system of trading in the city, which gradually became established in the very temple area. "The court was filled with a noisy assemblage. Dealers were advertising their stocks in loud and lusty voices; buyers were wrangling and disputing, and coarse shouts of the drovers added to the general uproar, while the clink of coins and the cries of animals rose above the din of the jostling crowd."—Howard. The changers of money sitting—Each adult Israelite was to pay the half-shekel temple tax, equivalent to thirty-three cents, annually, and it must be paid in Jewish money. Those who came from other lands had the money of their respective countries, hence they were under the necessity of securing the Jewish coins in exchange for their own money. Money-changers were on hand to accommodate them and at the same time enrich themselves. Both the dealers in animals and the money-changers were in a position to exact exorbitant prices of the pilgrims and the temple officials were in league with them.

15. A scourge of small cords—A whip, the lash of which was composed of several small pieces of small cord, or rope. He drove them all out of the temple—Jesus exercised the authority of which he was possessed by virtue of his divinity, and there was no resistance. Both the sheep and the oxen (R. V.)—Evidently Jesus used the scourge to drive out the animals. The dealers themselves fled. They knew they were out of place trafficking in the temple, and the very presence and appearance of Jesus awed them into submission to his authority. Poured out the changers' money—He threw the money of the dealers in animals upon the pavement. 16. Take these things hence—The doves were enclosed in cages, hence they must be carried out. Make not my Father's house a house of merchandise—Convenience and profit had led to this gross desecration of God's house. It was to be a house of prayer, a place of worship. Religion was at so low an ebb and of such poor quality, that the people were not getting much out of it. The priests and the traders were reaping a financial harvest, however. It has been the tendency of worldly professors of the religion of Jesus to introduce into the church schemes for raising money by appealing to the people's love of pleasure. God's house is dedicated for sacred uses and no one has a right to use it for worldly business or amusements. 17. His disciples remembered—The five or six disciples whom Jesus had thus far gathered were with him on this occasion and witnessed the cleansing of the temple. Zeal for thy house shall eat me up (R. V.)—The quotation is from Psa. 69: 9. Jesus was intensely in earnest to honor the Father, to purify his house and to bring about a condition of righteousness. "The zeal of Jesus was not an occasional ebullition, a fire kindled in grass or thorns, but like a fire in a coal mine. But it consumed him. It exhausted his strength; it burned up all other aims and ambitions; it brought him to the cross."—Peloubet.

II. Christ's authority (vs. 18-22). 18. What sign showest thou—In cleansing the temple Jesus had not consulted the officials, but acted in a manner that indicated his full authority in the case. The Jews naturally inquired what miracle he, as a prophet, would perform to substantiate his right to break up the traffic in the temple. He was interfering with an established custom, and they did not purpose to allow the course that Jesus had pursued to go unchallenged. 19. Destroy this temple—In v. 21 John tells us that by the term temple Jesus meant his own body. Jesus here utters the prediction that, the Jews would put him to death, but he would rise from the dead in three days. He did not say that he would destroy the temple, as was later falsely charged (Mark 14: 59), but he spoke of his own body. His resurrection from the dead would be a convincing proof of his authority over the temple in Jerusalem. 20. Forty and six years was this temple in building—The temple in which Christ stood was the third temple erected on Mount Moriah in Jerusalem. The first [illegible] and dedicated in B. C. 1004, and it was destroyed about 400 years later by Nebuchadnezzar. The second temple was built by Zerubbabel after the return of the Jews from captivity. Herod the Great rebuilt Zerubbabel's temple, hence it is spoken of as Herod's temple. The Greek implies that thought it had been forty-six years in process of construction, it was not yet finished. Wilt thou rear it up in three days. The Jews failed to comprehend the declaration that Jesus made. It would have been a marvellous work for Jesus to build up the destroyed temple in Jerusalem in three days, but it was infinitely greater to rise from the dead. This he did three years later.

21. He spake of the temple of his body—That the body is a building has been recognized by both the science and the literature of all the world. And religious thought specially recognizes that it should be a temple, the temple of the Holy Spirit. And Christ's body was the temple, of which the Jewish material temple was the type. When, therefore, the disciples subsequently found that after three days of destruction Christ revived his bodily temple, a new inner meaning flashed upon their minds. Before fulfillment it would indeed have taken a prophet to extract this inner meaning; yet, none the less, we see after the fulfillment that none but a prophet could have uttered the prediction.—Whedon. 22. When therefore he was risen from the dead—John here introduces an event that took place three years after the demand of the Jews for a sign was made. He was able to speak with full authority of the fulfillment of the prediction uttered by the Master. His disciples remembered—John was one of the disciples and he could speak for himself. The disciples had but a vague idea of the import of Jesus' words to the Jews at the time when they were spoken, but after Christ's resurrection they understood clearly what he meant. They remembered his words and became fully convinced that he had uttered the prophecy of his own death and resurrection. As the disciples treasured up the words of their Master and were profited by them in after-years, so it is important that we should store away in our memory the word of the Lord that we may be directed, encouraged and blessed by meditating upon it in all of our after life.

QUESTIONS.—What did the Passover feast commemorate? How was it observed? From what place did Jesus go up to Jerusalem? Who accompanied Jesus? What did Jesus see in the temple enclosure? What course did he pursue? What is the proper use of the Lord's house? What is said of Christ's zeal? What question did the Jews ask Jesus? What answer did he give them? What did he mean? When did the disciples comprehend what Jesus said?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Christ's defense.

I. Regarding the claims of God.

II. Regarding man's highest need.

I. Regarding the claims of God. Christ's attendance on the Passover showed that he honored every ordinance of the old dispensation as long as it lasted, thus fulfilling all righteousness, and thus entering into fellowship with believers of the Old Testament, unto whom he would reveal himself and his mission to the nation. Holy memories of national history gathered around the sacred edifice. The temple was the centre of religious life, the place where God manifested himself to man and where man dedicated himself to God. Jesus attached to the sanctuary a holiness greater than was conferred upon it by all the associations of its use and its history. A breach of trust had been committed. Both the claims of God and the religious needs of man were utterly neglected. Divine worship was exchanged for human interests. The offering to God was forgotten. Only the making of good bargains was remembered. The building was abused and profaned in being diverted from sacred to secular uses. Where there should have been only sacrifices there were sales of beasts and birds. Where there should have been only offerings, there was money-changing. There was an abuse of the place, an abuse of privilege, an insult to God, his authority, purity and honor. The profanation affected by these uses of the temple courts was indicative of widespread secularism, an outward indication of the corruption of the entire idea of worship. Jesus made a public demonstration of his loyalty to the theocracy, to the temple and to its worship. In a special manner he felt and proclaimed God to be his Father. It was profoundly significant that Jesus should demand from the temple worship a right presentation, rather than a corrupt defilement, of its true significance.

II. Regarding man's highest need. Jesus yearned over those who had destroyed themselves. He longed to rescue the world from its degradation and to build up its desecrated fragments into a temple of the living God. He was misunderstood by the Pharisees through their slavish adherence to the letter of scripture; through their spiritual blindness occasioned by hypocrisy; through their positive aversion arising from inward moral corruption. The scourge in Christ's hand was a conspicuous object and expressed his indignation and augmented the force of his command by an indication that he must be obeyed then and there. His act was designed to be a revelation to the ecclesiastical authorities of his Messiahship. The scourge was only an emblem of power and chastisement, the sight of which was sufficient, and at which they all unhesitatingly fled. The startled Sanhedrin recognized the Messianic character of the act. They were dumb and helpless because conscience stricken in the presence of incarnate righteousness. They trifled with their consciences by asking for a sign. The disciples supplied a most appropriate text to the symbolic sermon of their master, which confirmed their recently-formed convictions. His attitude was the subject of prophecy. It was in keeping with his character as John had declared him. It was an act of supreme courage and holy zeal. Jesus purified the temple at the risk of his life. He fearlessly confronted combined opposition. He met the opposition of the dealers, the rulers of the temple and the people. Jesus was supported in his act by the very consciences of the Jews themselves, who knew that he was right while they were wrong; but because he was different from what they expected, they declined to receive him and questioned his authority by demanding some further sign. They preferred the darkness, though the light has conspicuously dawned. The authorities of the temple, by their question, espoused the cause of the traffickers. In Christ's answer there was an exalted claim, a striking prediction and a wonderful declaration. The temple he had just [illegible] something greater than itself. Compared with his body, the temple in all its glory, beauty and service was but a poor, profitless structure.

T. R. A.

Chats With the Doctor

BY A PHYSICIAN

COLD FEET.

Cold feet are responsible for many sleepless nights, and are often a contributory cause of all kinds of ailments. A lowering of the general vitality is the result of any part of the extremities becoming chilled, and it is easy to see that this, coupled with lack of proper sleep, may have serious results. To sleep well it is necessary that the brain should be anaemic—that is to say the reverse of congested with blood. This condition is impossible if the feet are bloodless—and many people would say much in the way of draughts, narcotics and "nightcaps" if they would pay attention to warming their feet and let sleep come naturally.

Even those people who go to bed with warm feet often wake up some hours later with icy feet, and are consequently unable to go to sleep again. Bed socks, which should be loose fitting, are one of the best means of keeping the feet warm throughout the night, and a blanket wrapped round the legs will be useful in preventing the knees and legs from getting chilled. Of course, it is useless to place the feet on a hot water bottle, and let the legs become chilly—as so soon as the bottle grows cold there will be nothing to stimulate the circulation in the extremities.

Another reason why cold feet are harmful is that the condition leads to abnormal congestion of the internal organs. Large boots and thick woollen socks or stockings—and better still, large boots worn with thick woollen soles inside—will do much to keep the feet warm. Anything which tends to check the circulation, such as tightly laced boots, or tight gaiters should be avoided. A brisk rubbing before putting on boots or shoes is helpful—and regular massage will stimulate the circulation.

All these measures are of course intended only for those with a pronounced tendency to coldness of the extremities. For the great majority of people in good health, such measures as I have advised are necessary only in quite exceptional circumstances.

THE TREATMENT OF EPILEPSY.

Epilepsy is one of the oldest diseases of which we have any historical record, and is one of which it can be truly said that it being in many cases even before the birth of the person afflicted. In a great many cases there is a well-established family history either of epilepsy itself or of nervous or mental diseases nearly akin to it. It is, in fact, one of the few diseases which have been in all ages recognized as hereditary.

But this does not mean that the disease is necessarily transmitted in its present form from parent to child. In many cases a family history of alcoholism is found, or syphilis, or lead poisoning. In fact, any condition in the parent which tends to weaken the germs may lead to epilepsy in the child. The latter almost always shows abnormalities in development; the skull is queerly shaped, the teeth come irregularly or late, and other signs of faulty development appear. And it must be remembered that these outward and visible signs are but the surface indications of internal deviations from the normal more serious still.

The same causes which go to produce inherited epilepsy are naturally likely to produce it in the interval. And, as a matter of fact, they do so, the alcoholic epileptic being a common visitor to our hospitals. Lead poisoning, again, shows itself here. But there is another form of epilepsy, other than inherited, which arises firstly as the sequel to some illness in childhood or infancy, such as scarlet fever or typhoid. In these cases the convulsions which accompany the acute stage of the disease have a direct effect on the brain and nerve centres, and do, in some cases, unfortunately persist into later life and inflict permanent injury. The inflammation which caused the convulsions has in such a case set up changes in the substance of the brain, which, although perhaps slight in themselves, are sufficient to start the epileptic seizures.

These injuries to or abnormalities of the brain do not necessarily occur in all cases at the same spot, or in the same part of the brain affected in all cases. Various symptoms are produced, and various forms of treatment called for. But in the main the line of treatment is the same, and be directed towards the restoring of the abnormal brain and body to as nearly a natural condition as possible. To this end the epileptic should lead a perfectly healthy outdoor life, avoiding all excitements and living on simple, nourishing food. No overwork should be thrown on the mind or body, and to spare the latter as much as possible certain precautions should be taken in the matter of foods. Red meat is better avoided altogether, and carbon hydrates in general partaken of sparingly. White meat, eggs, vegetables and milk should form the basis of the diet. Plenty of cold water should be drunk between meals, constipation should be carefully guarded against, and a lukewarm sponge bath should be taken daily in order to promote a free action of the skin.

As regards drugs, the ordering of these must, of course, be left to the doctor in charge of the case, but it is generally found that the one series of drugs which has a good effect on this condition, controlling and diminishing the seizures, is the bromides. These have a cumulative effect, that is to say, the drug remains in the tissues for a certain time, and the longer it can be induced to remain the less of it need be administered. For this reason it has been found that a reduction in the amount of salt taken by the patient in his food is followed by good results, as the salt in the blood and tissues is apt to assist in the elimination of the bromides quicker than

Hindenburg's Worst Enemy

It is not the Grand Duke Nicholas nor Gen. Brusiloff, who is the grimmest foe of the chief of the German staff. It is a man who has slipped like a wraith in among the German lines and done more than any of these generals. His name is Earless Peter, the guerilla king, and the Kaiser has offered a reward of £10,000, for his capture, dead or alive. Peter is said to be supernatural. He is able to be everywhere at once. No sooner had the German army discovered his depredation in one corner and thrown a cordon around a district, than he reappears in another locality and makes things as uncomfortable as ever for the Teuton forces. All along the 1,000 mile front between the Baltic and Bukowina he ranges, busy with raids, cutting wires, tearing up roads and railways, spying—and always escapes in the nick of time.

Altogether there are 50,000 guerillas organized in about 300 brave bands with grim and relentless leaders. Bravest is the band of Earless Peter, and grimmest, most relentless of leaders, is Peter himself.

Earless Peter is in Russian Piotr Besukhi. Both of Peter's ears exist and are painfully sound. Peter in fact, can hear, smell, see and feel with the abnormal intensity of a Pawnee. He is "earless" merely because he is deaf to appeals for mercy. Earless Peter's two brothers were killed at the battle of Krasnik, the first stiff fight between Russians and Austrians; and to-day Peter gives no quarter and asks for none. He slaughters no prisoners, but he refuses to take them. If an enemy wants to surrender, Peter gives him a fair fight, which often ends in the enemy going under, for Peter tolerates in his band only picked fighters. Peter is careful about his men's food, clothes, arms, accoutrements. Having private funds, he outshines in these details the hard-up rival guerrilla chiefs. He punishes ruthlessly any of his men who shirk or offend. In general, he shows himself as careless to Russian weaknesses as he does to the cries for quarter of German and Austrian foes.

Peter obtained money from his rich father, a manufacturer of Smolensk. The father was in despair at the loss of two of his three sons who were killed in battle, and he gave their intended fortune to Peter on condition the money should be spent in fighting Russia's invaders. Peter was much attached to his brothers. He went to Smolensk, prayed on his knees with his father, and vowed that he would slay 2,000 Germans and Austrians for each brother killed. This was a big order for a band numbering eighty. Peter began in winter near Dvinsk. His eighty men were in white uniforms, or covered with sewn sheets; their boots were covered with white fur, and their rifles painted white, so that nothing but dark eye-slits showed.

Before the year was out Earless Peter and his gallant band had accounted for near upon 1,000 German troops.

But Peter is not fortune's babe. He nearly lost his life, the account goes on to say, when he began this new year with an offensive in Galicia. His band was cornered and surrounded by one of Austrians with superior numbers, and thirty of his men were killed. Peter escaped, as he has always escaped but with an ugly wound in his thigh. This, however, only served to make Peter turn cavalryman, for he declares that his ill-luck was due to his slow legs, and seeing that the majority of those left of his band were horsemen, he decided to recruit only those who could ride well.

This extraordinary young man, who was less than two years ago a merchant leading a quiet life in a provincial town, has acquired all the habits and weaknesses typical of the Slav outlaw.

He is religious, a drunkard, charitable, fierce, grim, frivolous and pleasure-loving. He has done no military service, and as he could not get taken as a volunteer he started a guerrilla corps of his own.—London Tit-Bits.

Facts About Naval Fliers

Canadians have done a vast deal to give Britain her present supremacy in the air. It is said that sixty per cent. of the officers in the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service are colonials, and a large percentage of these from Canada. Perhaps it is the glamor of the warbling and the prospect of fighting Zepps, and German destroyers and sneaking subs, that draws Canadians to the navy. Anyway one remarks on the number of young chaps in the smart navy blue and gold lace, whose accent proclaims them from the land of the maple leaf.

Like its mother service, the Royal Navy, the R. N. A. S. is more difficult of entry than the Royal Flying Corps, the army's branch. They are great sticklers in the senior service. Before a man proves his right to wear the golden albatross, emblem of the dominion of the air, he must have passed a severe test. Moreover, a probationary sub-lieutenant may be discharged at any time. "This will not necessarily indicate that any blame is attributable to the officer," states this regulation. "The special nature of the duties peculiar to the air service renders essential a very high standard of mental and physical fitness."

As with Canadian hockey and lacrosse players, the age at which most men are best fitted to start the nervy work of flying ranges between the years of nineteen and twenty-three. The navy prefers them to be within these years. No nomination by an M. P. or other potentate is necessary. If quite physically fit (and the stringent medical requirements which lay great stress on eyesight, give the doctor a loophole for getting rid of a sound but otherwise undesirable candidate) and in possession of a good education, the aspirer to the air service applies to the Secretary of the Admiralty at Whitehall, London. Here, several stern old sea dogs scrutinize him, question him, and examine his references, which must be satisfactory. Later an air service committee interviews each candidate. The commissioners and the candidat[e is in]formed of his fate.

Life in a naval air station co[nsists] largely of practice and patrol. [At] 6.30, the airmen get busy a[s] for this time of the day is best [for] daily run out over the cold sea. Work goes on steadily [all day] and often at night the aviators [st]ay by their machines waiting [for a call] to go after Zepps. Night flying, [is] nearly as dangerous adventure [as it] used to be. Though even in [it] green pilots sometimes lose th[eir] [b]odrome.

Testing the nerve of tyros [...] came is a little task entrust[ed to] older hands. One young Canadi[an ...]er delights in taking up a gre[en ...]tor and spiralling straight d[own ...] several thousand feet.

"Many a chap cracks up [...] test," quoth the adept. "The [...] is nasty over on its side, o[f course] and though you are always [strapped] in, the strap is superfluous [as] the [cen]trifugal force presses you a[gainst the] seat. In fact weak seats [have been known to] break under the strain. [Some] get seasick in their fu[st flights] I will defy the novice to te[ll where] the ground is. The motion utt[erly con]fuses one, and a beginner a[llowed to] take the controls doesn't kno[w where] to steer for."

Soaring upwards the aviat[or reaches] the first layer of clouds [at] 5,000 feet. Emerging fro[m this he] finds another layer at from [...] 10,000 feet. Thus, on the [dullest] day of winter, when other [people] sojourning in damp Engla[nd ...] the loss of Old Sol for wee[ks, the airman] or can have bright sunshin[e when] he wishes, for above the [clouds ...] level the sky is blue and [...] the wettest day.

The aviator's wardrobe [is extens]ive. In winter he wears fly[ing suit of] lamb wool lined, leather breec[hes ...] coat and fur gauntlets, fur-lin[ed hel]met and goggles. Even the[n he feels] cold. Apart from this, among[st his] kit one Canadian told m[e he had] two jackets, three pairs of so[cks ...] caps and about seven pairs [...] to say nothing of thick wool[lens] in abundance. There is real [...] in all the gold lace which [...] sleeves and cap.

Young Canadians, erstwhi[le] clerks, students or commer[cial men, ...] in this new sphere of [...] companionship of the [...] pleasant. Often there [is ...] Canadian at a station. But th[e] airman is never lonely [...] hours. Good comradeship [...] Should there be no baracks [...] [offic]ers' quarters are situated [in ...] comfortable [...] where th[e men have] their own dining and sittin[g rooms] and generally a billiard table. In war time there is no unele[ss cere]mony at the mess. At dinner [the of]ficers wear stiff collars and jackets, not working clothes, [and] at a few stations a dinner j[acket is] worn. At mess dinner the p[resident] always says: "Mr. Vice, the [King]." Mr. Vice replies: "Mr. Preside[nt,] gentlemen, the King." All [re]main seated, however, to drink the [toast,] largely done in non-intoxicants. [The] mention of a woman's name, ga[mbling] or swearing is a direct breach of [the] al mess etiquette. All must [remain] at table until the King's heal[th has] been honored. After dinner th[e] men while away the time sn[ooker,] chatting, or playing billiards. [Early] to bed is the rule where sue[...] hours of rising are kept.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER
FOR FIVE YEARS.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the [...] does not work properly, and then [...] the violent sick headaches, the so[urness] of the stomach, belching of wind, h[eart]burn, water brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. The[y] clear away all the effete matter [which] collects in the system and thus do [away] with constipation and all its [...] trouble.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Britt, Ont., writes: "I have been [troubled] with my stomach and liver for five years, and have had con[stipation] causing headache, backache and [...] spells, and sometimes I would also [...] down. I tried all kinds of re[medies] without obtaining any relief.

I commenced using Milburn's L[axa-] Liver Pills, and they have cured [me.] I have recommended them to ma[ny of] my friends, and they are all very pleased with the results they hav[e ob]tained from their use."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, 25c. [a vial,] 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or m[ailed] direct on receipt of price by Th[e T.] Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, [Ont.]

HORSES THAT FISH

And These Equines Do Someth[ing] Like Thinking.

Along Albemarle Sound, on [the] North Carolina coast, says Green [Bag] Review, there is mile after mile [of] low, sandy shore, where noth[ing] grows except a coarse grass, a [few] saltwater weeds and wild parsley, [says] an exchange. On these banks live [a] strange breed of half-wild horse[s] known as "banker ponies." T[hese] creatures are generally about [...] the size of Shetland ponies.

Every year the herd owners dr[ive] the "bankers" into pens, brand t[he] foals with the proper mark, and sel[l] some of the older animals to [...] the dealers. North Carolinians [say] that the beasts must be starved [be]fore eating grain, hay or grass, for th[ey] have always lived on the rank ma[rsh] grass of the marshes and on fish.

They catch the fish themselves [at] low tide; with their hoofs they [dig] deep holes in the sand below [the] water mark; when the tide falls [they] greedily devour the fish that [are] stranded in these holes. Often [...] fight briskly over an especially te[mpt]ing morsel.

In captivity these strange horses are intelligent, but seldom are even in temper. Once tamed, they make excellent draft animals, for they have a strength that is disproportionate to their size. Foals that are bred from "bankers" in captivity make valuable animals—strong, healthy, intelligent and far less vicious than their parents.

Glad Discovery.

An Irishman went out to Australia seeking two brothers who had been living there for some years. They were known as Pat and Ted. While walking at the railway station he saw on chests with the word "Patented, 189-" "Begorry," said he, "I have found thim bhoys after all. They are Shiller manufacturers—Pat-en-Ted, 189-and it was the very year, bejabers, they came out here!"—Pittsburg Chronicle.

ute unleviathe

STUDIO

me Place
e Price
the time, ur range loths is e place

Vinter
N IN OUR Tailored covered by entence "The t to be had in to ery

Ties, Shirts, all furnish er prices.
& CO.
Hardware

NCE
T,
LE,
E, AN
r sale,
urchase.
AIL
OF Northern eamship can and ntario at-sale
20 Con-for full ster, Paisley

grad from P pply to O'Hagan
xecutor,
Charlottetown

Yank Out Those Stumps

Send To-day For This Book

The Kirstin method clears your land for the plow.

our sullen, gloomy, eating stump lands into smiling fields that bear and put money into the you.

book, "The Gold in Your Stump Land," shows you transform your barren stump fields into rich virgin ult shows you photographs of immense stumps it has ontains letters from the men who pulled them; and it will you that the easiest, quickest and cheapest way is with a

Kirstin Stump Puller

Man — Horse Power

p power machine for the the fields of many ill pull anything it tack- (use of its triple power, up to its promise. We guarantee the Kirstin method to clear land ready for the plow from 10% to 50% cheaper than any other method.

Money Back Bond
15 Year Guarantee
Warranted saving of 10% to 50% over all other methods.
Profit Sharing Plan

Big Money to those who Order Now. To early buyers in each locality we offer a special opportunity to join in our profit sharing plan. No canvassing; just a willingness to show your Kirstin to your neighbors. Don't wait — send the coupon today.

tin guaranteed for 15 no flaw, your money rtin bond does not live

KIRSTIN
IAN CO.
nis Street
Marie, Ont.

Send me free copy of "The Gold in Your Stump Land"

Name.........

Address.........

Largest Stump Puller Manufacturers in the World

GARDEN

RE OF COWS.

ilk cannot be produced na cows. It is increa- that the dairyman iny herd and provide maintaining them in anner.

le there must be good insure proper health the herd. Oxygen is as ss meat and plenty of air apply it. Carbonic acid ities cast off daily by poisonous and must be ble for the cow to reach production or long , in the absence of pro- It has been advised should have as many pace as the number of light. Space, however, ntial as the frequency e air is changed. We able is properly venti- fail to detect any agreeable odors upon en- when we find no mois- on the ceiling and walls. ows are used the cold air stable near the ceiling. arm air out at the other rold air at the door is bed.

VENTILATE STABLE.

the heat derived from the animals, and at the remove the impurities, the em of ventilation is to be ed. That consists in al- to 1,000 cubic feet of space nimal, and making provision ge of air at the rate of 3,000 per hour for each animal, the fresh air at the ceil- emoving the cold air from of the stable.

windows should be pro- is a disinfectant, and invigorator and a tonic. Light able facilitates work, and by up the dirt is a stimulus to . It is suggested that square feet of window glass be to each animal. Windows be placed both sides of the and the number can scarcely individual in the herd must be and any animal suffering constitutional disease should To guarantee the absence of the herd must be sub- tuberculin test and any animals eliminated.

fresh cows should until from three to birth of the calf.

FOR THE HERD.

should be ample in balanced. Changes in be infrequent, but should be made grad- Feeds which have soured, or in any way spoiled, should not be used, nor those that will affect the character or taste of the milk.

Rape, cabbage, turnips, if fed at all should be given immediately after milking. Malt sprouts should be fed in limited quantity. Wet brewery grains should be fed in tight mangers, in limited quantity and should be obtained frequently from the source of supply.

Silage should be fed after, and not before nor during milking, in order that it may not taint the air of the stable, and be absorbed by the milk. Silage, no doubt, affects the taste of milk, as do other foods, but this taste is not objectionable. Garlic and other weeds in the pasture often cause undesirable flavors in the milk. In these cases the trouble may be neutralized by taking the cows from the pasture several hours before milking.

The impure air of the stable is one of the main causes for the bacterial infection of milk. For this reason no dry or dusty foods should be fed during or for one hour before milking.

Cows should be supplied with water from wells, springs or running streams. All pond holes in the fields should be fenced off so that the cows cannot gain access to them in any case. Cows should not be permitted to drink from pools of stagnant water in the fields or in the barnyards. Watering troughs should be kept clean and supplied with fresh water from day to day.

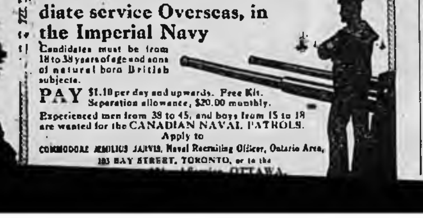
FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

Following is the dry cure for hams as recommended by President H. J. Waters, of the Kansas Agricultural College: For each 1,000 pounds of meat use the following: Forty pounds common salt, 10 pounds New Orleans sugar, four pounds black pepper, one and a half pounds of saltpeter, half a pound of cayenne pepper. Weigh the meat and take such part of the ingredients as that is a part of the 1,000. Let the meat cool thoroughly. After mixing the ingredients, half the amount should be rubbed well into the meat. Put the meat in a dry, cool place —never in a cellar. Let it remain two weeks, then rub on the remainder of the cure and let it lie about six weeks, when it is ready to hang. It is important that the meat be well rubbed each time the cure is applied, and that plenty of the cure be forced into the hock end and around the joints. Less cure should be used on thin sides than on the joints. The heavier and fatter the meat the longer the time required for curing. The warmer the weather the quicker the meat will take the cure. These arrangements are estimated on the basis of about 300 or 325 pound hogs, and ordinary January February and March weather.

It does not necessarily follow that an imported sheep is a superior animal. Look for something beside the record of importation.

Sheep raisers should have two pastures and several small lots. Two pastures are beneficial. In making a change. Ewes, when raising lambs, should be put in small lots to prevent their disowning them.

The United States Department of Agriculture in 1855 found that it required four hours and 34 minutes of human labor to produce a bushel of corn. In Minnesota it has been found that 46 minutes is the time required to produce a bushel of corn now, or only one-sixth as long as in 1855. In other words, a day of human labor now is worth more than six times as much as in 1855, due to the use of more and better machinery, better varieties of corn and better soil management.



Men Wanted for the Navy

The Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve, wants men for immediate service Overseas, in the Imperial Navy

Candidates must be from 18 to 38 years of age and sons of natural born British subjects.

PAY $1.10 per day and upwards. Free Kit. Seperation allowance, $20.00 monthly.

Experienced men from 38 to 45, and boys from 15 to 18 are wanted for the CANADIAN NAVAL PATROLS.

Apply to

COMMODORE AEMILIUS JARVIS, Naval Recruiting Officer, Ontario Area, 103 BAY STREET, TORONTO, or to the OTTAWA.

DON'T GET "BLUE."

They're a Disgrace to the Average Healthy Person.

To give way to the "blues" is worse than folly—it's the quintessence of selfishness; and instead of the sympathy meted out to a person in the doldrums, what he heartily deserves is a thorough good shaking and a real bad time. Truly troubled persons, people who've been through the mill, are the ones who grumble the least; they know when they're well off. The other, and major portion of the community, only think they're badly done by. You'll generally find a cripple or otherwise afflicted person quite cheery. Then think shame of yourself that you, a strong, healthy individual, permit yourself to grizzle and growl, and be your own devil, driving yourself out of your Eden.

"Blues" arise either from liver or selfishness. If the former, take a dose of medicine; if the latter, take yourself seriously to task. Look within; don't try to find out why you're not happy, but why you're not happy, but why you're miserable. Is it that you expect too much from life? The happiest man is he who is content with little from the present, and expects much from the future. Go out into the world, and instead of comparing your misfortunes with other people's successes, realize your own blessings in life as contrasted with some poor thing's downright bad luck.

Don't think so much about what you haven't got, as what you do possess. This is the way not to think "Here am I, twenty—thirty —forty years of age. Not many men have worked as hard as I. I flatter myself I've got my fair share of brains, and I'm only earning a few dollars a week, while that absolute young idiot, Jones, who's never done a day's work in all his life, has more money than he knows what to do with!" Well, what if Jones is better off than you! There's nothing in that to make you unhappy! Instead, think how good God's been to give you your fair share of brain and your health!

Now, this is really the best way to treat your "blues." Go for a stroll in any street in any city; go with your eyes very wide-open and power of observation very alert. In a few minutes you'll see a dozen poor unfortunate beings who are truly to be pitied—poor, deformed poverty-stricken wretches who might say with truth they've never had a chance in life. These "blues!" they're a disgrace to any healthy man or woman; and, besides, a doleful person becomes so wearisome. He may meet with a little superficial sympathy, but his acquaintances soon learn to avoid him. The "bluer" you feel, the cheerier you should be.

Dangerous Throat Troubles Prevented by Nerviline

IT ENDS MISERY OF COLDS QUICKLY.

Don't wait till night.

Get after your cold now—this very minute, before it grows dangerous you should apply old-time "Nerviline."

Rub your chest and throat, rub them thoroughly with Nerviline. Relief will be immediate.

Nerviline will save you from lying awake to-night, coughing, choking and sufferin— from congestion in the chest and acute pain in the throat.

Nerviline will break up that dull neuralgic headache—will kill the cold and chill at its very beginning —will save you from perhaps a serious illness.

To take away hoarseness, to break up a grippy cold, to cure a sore throat or bad cold in the chest, you can use nothing so speedy and effective as Nerviline. For forty years it has been the most largely used family remedy in the Dominion. Time has proved its merit, so can you by keeping a bottle handy on the shelf. Sold by any dealer anywhere, 25c per bottle.

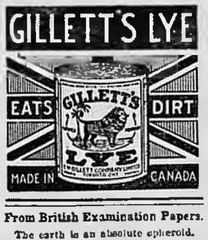
HIS SOLDIER MOTHER.

(By Margaret Yandis Bryan).

A quiet night, with just a distant roar
Of cannon! So it is with war.
Life goes on in the same old way.
And as the dawn must usher in the day
So we must find our hopes and hold them true,
Our hopes for victory, for home, and you.
If we are brave, dear one, who gives us courage to keep us
Our way, and to be manly, to be strong?
Whose letters bring to us most joy and cheer?
Who tells of home news, never letting fear?
Creep in those lines? She, who has put us in God's care,
Must reflect strength and love to us in prayer.
Who gave her sons with all a woman's grace,
And left a memory for them—her smiling face,
Her faith, her trust, her love? There may be heroes, dear,
Upon the the battlefield; but those speak no fear,
Who fight their battles silent and alone,
Sitting beside the firelight at home,
They, too, are heroes; for it is most true
God made the bravest of the brave in such as you.

—From the Canadian Magazine for January.

Those who would rejoice at the correction of a thief are yet shocked at the thought of destroying him. His crime shrinks into nothing compared with his misery, and severity defeats itself in exciting pity.—Samuel Johnson.



From British Examination Papers.

The earth is an absolute spheroid.

Lord Raleigh was the first man to see the invisible Armada.

Shakespeare founded "As You Like It," on a book previously written by Sir Oliver Lodge.

Tennyson wrote "In Memorandum."

Louis XVI. was gelatined during the French Revolution.

Gender shows whether a man is masculine, feminine or neuter.

Geometry teaches us how to bisex angles.

Parallel lines are the same distance all the way and cannot meet unless you bend them.

Horse-power is the distance one horse can carry a pound of water in an hour.

Gravation is that which if there were none we should all fly away.

A vacuum is a large empty space where the Pope lives.

A deacon is the lowest kind of Christian.

A renegade is a man who kills a king.

In India a man out of cask may not marry a woman out of another cask.

The Salic law is that you must take everything with a grain of salt.

The Zodiac is the Zoo of the sky where lions, goats and other animals go after they are dead.

The Pharisees were people who like to show off their goodness by praying in synonyms.

An abstract noun is something you can't see when you are looking for it. —Independent.

Mine Gas Detector.

A new electric instrument to detect explosive gas in mines has just been patented. Such an instrument is necessary because of the greatly increased use of electric mine-lamps instead of the old-time Davy safety-lamps. The Davy lamp gave the miner warning of the presence of gas, but the electric flash-lamp of course does not. The new detector consists of two glowing electric wires connected in series. One wire is treated so as to burn more brightly in gas-laden air than in pure air. In perfectly pure air the two wires glow with exactly the same brightness. By noting the difference in the brightness of the two indicators the miner cannot only detect the presence of dangerous gas, but can also tell almost exactly how much of it is present.

WINTER HARD ON BABY

The winter season is a hard one on the baby. He is more or less confined to stuffy, badly ventilated rooms. It is so often stormy that the mother does not get him out in the fresh air as often as she should. He catches colds which rack his little system; his stomach and bowels get out of order and he becomes peevish and cross. To guard against this the mother should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. They regulate the stomach and bowels and break up colds. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHALING DAYS OVER.

A Once Thriving Industry That Has Nearly Vanished.

At the outbreak of the American Revolution and for a period of seventy-five years following the conclusion of that struggle whaling was the most important branch of the American fisheries. From 500 to 700 vessels sought whales in all the oceans and seas of the world, and in one year New Bedford alone sent out 300 vessels, whose cargoes of bone and oil were the basis of the industrial life of the city.

The pursuit of sperm whales reached its climax in 1857, when oil valued at nearly $4,200,000 was brought in, mostly from the south Pacific. The height of the industry was in 1846, when 70,000 persons derived their support from whales and 720 vessels, valued at $21,000,000, were engaged.

For more than fifty years the fishery has been declining, and in numerous ports that once derived most of their wealth from the industry there have for a long time existed only memories of former greatness. For a number of years the sperm, right and bow head whales that supported the fishery in early years have been very scarce and their pursuit has been unprofitable, and the present importance of the whale fishery, amounting in value to less than 2 per cent of the American fisheries, depends on the taking from shore stations of species of whales that formerly were for the most part neglected.

Charity's Reward.

There is going the rounds of the clubs where certain of the town's physicians and surgeons meet a story of of a young doctor who had number of charity cases. This young doctor, as runs the narrative, had occasion to visit a woman who was very poor, with several children. He prescribed for her cases and, touched by the evident poverty of the family, gave the woman $5. "Buy the medicine and use what is left for food," he said, kindly, going his way. The next day he returned to see how his patient was getting along.

"Mother's doin' fine," said one of the children, who met the young doctor at the door. "She took that $5 and got a real doctor."—San Francisco Chronicle.

PILES.

You will find relief in Zam-Buk! It eases the burning, stinging pain, stops bleeding and brings ease. Perseverance, with Zam-Buk, means cure. Why not prove this? All Druggists and Stores— 50c box.

Zam-Buk

Know the Signs.

Among the callers upon a certain grouchy art editor in San Francisco was a very timid young man who diffidently laid a cover design before the great man.

After a moment the editor growled: "Have you shown this drawing to any one else?"

"No, sir," said the timid one.

"Then," demanded the editor, "what is it makes you stand so close to the door?"—Exchange.

Care With Ashes.

During the winter months the disposal of ashes from stoves and furnaces demands attention. Though many fires are caused by the disposition of hot ashes against frame buildings, wooden fences, etc., the practice is still continued.

Too much care cannot be given to the disposal of ashes. Either metal containers should be used, or the ashes should be placed at a safe distance from anything combustible.—Conservation.

Pale Cheeked Women Told About Restoring A Rosy Complexion

A few years ago the girl with pale, drawn cheeks scarcely knew what to do in order to restore her fading appearance. At that time there was no blood-food medium made that really would put color and strength into systems that were more or less worn out.

To-day it's different. The blood can be quickly nourished, can be made rich, red, and healthy. All you have to do is take two Ferrozone Tablets with a sip or two of water after meals. The effect is almost magical.

Mothers, look at your children. Are they ruddy and strong—do they eat and sleep well, or are they pale, weak, and anaemic?

FERROZONE will rebuild them. Take your own case — is your blood strong and rich? Have you that old-time strength and vigor, or are you somewhat under the weather?

FERROZONE will supply the strengthening elements you require. It is a blood-forming, nourishing tonic that makes every ailing person well.

FERROZONE is a marvellous remedy, it contains in concentrated form certain rare qualities that especially fit it in cases of anaemia, poor color thin blood, tiredness, and loss of weight.

Every day you put off using FERROZONE you lose ground. Get it to-day, sold in 50 cent boxes by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

SONG OF TRUE PATRIOTISM.

Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high;
Where knowledge is free;
Where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls;
Where words come out from the depth of truth;
Where tireless striving stretches its arms towards perfection;
Where the clear stream of reason has not lost its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit;
Where the mind is led forward by Thee into ever-widening thought and action—
Into that Heaven of freedom, my Father, let my country awake.

(It has been written of the Hindu poet and thinker: "He is the first among our saints who has not refused to live but who has spoken out of Life itself, and that is why we give him love. . . . We are moved because we have met our own image. . . . The Deity to Whom these songs are offered is at once the striving spirit of Creation, and that Creation's eternal source and end.")

—Rabindra Nath Tagore.

IF YOU CANNOT FIGHT, PAY, PAY, PAY!

Fight or Pay! These are the alternatives that are before the people of Canada to-day. From taking one or the other of them there is no escape for the man of military fitness.

All of us must make sacrifices if the war is to be won. That is so self-evident a proposition that it should not be necessary to make it. Yet there are people who even yet do not accept it as applying to themselves. In the matter of financial sacrifices, many a man is beginning to say to himself that he has given as much as he should be expected to give. But where is he to draw the line if he is in earnest about "Doing his bit" to win the war?

Plainly, there is one place at which he cannot draw it, and that is where the claims of the Canadian Patriotic Fund present themselves.

If there is one fund more than another that must be maintained, at cost of sacrifices, if need be, it is this one. The work it has undertaken cannot be allowed to drop. The dependents of our soldiers must be protected against want, privation or unnecessary suffering. All Canada has pledged itself to the men at the front that their families will be looked after, and that pledge must be fulfilled.

For 1917 the call on Ontario will be $6,000,000. Of this large sum about $4,000,000 will have to be raised from individuals. It is clear, therefore, that no good citizen can say that his subscription will not be needed. If he cannot Fight, it is up to him to Pay.

Way He Put It.

Two friends were talking over the good fortune of a mutual acquaintance who had succeeded in gaining the hand of a rich girl, relates the Boston Globe.

"I didn't think Edward had it in him," said one friend. "It must have taken a lot of diplomacy on his part to win out in that venture."

"Oh, I don't know," said the other. "As a matter of fact, I happen to know that he told her the simple truth."

"You don't say so!"

"Yes, he told her he couldn't live without her."

Spanish Titles.

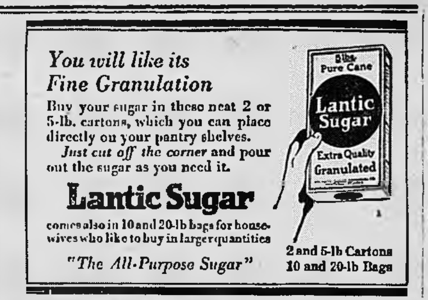
The Spanish military attache, Colonel Don Nicholas Urcullu y Cereljo, said at a dinner in Washington:

"Yes, Spanish titles are very, very elaborate. I heard recently of an American girl who wrote home from San Sebastian to her millionaire father.

"'Well, I'm engaged to three dukes, five marquises, seven counts, four barons and a don.'

"'What on earth do you mean?' her father cabled.

"'Don't get excited,' she cabled back. 'It's all one man. He's a Spaniard.'"— Philadelphia "Bulletin."



You will like its Fine Granulation

Buy your sugar in these neat 2 or 5-lb. cartons, which you can place directly on your pantry shelves.

Just cut off the corner and pour out the sugar as you need it.

Lantic Sugar

comes also in 10 and 20-lb bags for housewives who like to buy in larger quantities

"The All-Purpose Sugar"

2 and 5-lb Cartons
10 and 20-lb Bags

POULTRY NOTES

A PROFITABLE DUCK.

(C. S. Valentine, an authority on the Indian Runner, in Buffalo News.)

No student of economics will deny that the bird that grows twice as fast as all others is making for first place as a business proposition. Money thus invested can be turned over twice as fast. Then, too, the everyday layer outdistances the alternate layer. The everyday layer is the duck.

The Indian Runner is pretty thoroughly established in the United States and Canada. Mexico sends many inquiries and the largest order reported by the Cumberland Pencilled Runner Club in 1915 came from Alaska.

It is also reported from Hawaii that the duck industry there had taken a new lease on life, having passed out of the hands of the Chinese. The present demand is for Muscovies; while a large demand has sprung up for duck eggs, especially those from the Indian Runner breed.

Wherever the attention of consumers is called to duck eggs and to young duck meat in the right way, a brisk demand soon follows. The meat of the 10 to 12-week-old duckling is excellent. Some claim the young runner duck is the best poultry meat to be had.

When the layers are properly handled duck eggs are so sweet and rich that they equal hens' eggs. No market informed as to the quality and value of duck eggs, will neglect them, especially those of the Indian Runner. The eggs of the Pekin and Aylesbury crowd the large goose eggs for size. The runner egg sometimes reaches four ounces, averaging nearly three ounces, while the Pekin eggs average four to five ounces.

Add to this three other facts, viz., (a) that ducks thrive on a goodly proportion of cheap feed; (b) that the skillful grower seldom loses a duckling; (c) that there is now a steady demand for these products, and it will be seen the duck industry holds a favorable place with the heretofore popular hen.

Many growers who raise green ducks for market look askance at the Runner, or at any of the small breeds of ducks. They want Pekins, which weigh ten pounds or more to the pair when ready for market. Pekins, Aylesburys and Rouens, with a standard weight of nine pounds for adult males, are probably the only birds, except geese, that will make an average of half a pound a week of growth for the first ten weeks.

Producers of green ducks want a bird that grows rapidly, fattens easily, has white "plus" and of which the male and female are nearly equal in size. Even these meat producers demand a breed that lays well, else they cannot get enough young stock.

Despite their size, Runners lead all other ducks, even for meat. Some have said, the smaller the Runner the better. For instance, a grower of Runners for high-class hotel or restaurant trade may be found urging that round-bodied birds smaller than standard should be selected as breeders. There are several reasons for this. One is that the wild birds for which they are sometimes substituted are usually of a small, round-bodied type. Another reason is, if there is too much weight, the charge per portion must be increased to the customer, or the restaurant feeding by weight will get a very small profit.

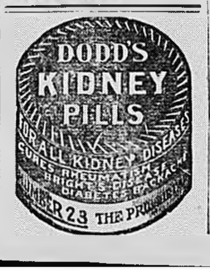
An important factor in favor of Runner ducks lies in its gamy qualities, which enable restaurateurs to substitute it for real game.

The grower who produces eggs as a specialty wants small eaters with not too large bodies. Yet he wants a fair carcass to sell when he has obtained the best part of the egg yield from each bird. The quicker this can be done, the greater the profit. And because ducks lay almost fully during the last of the season, they are ideal subjects for crowding for eggs till the moult, when they can be sold for more than it costs to replace them with young stock. A Canadian breeder reports returns of $7 each from his first flock of Runners, in less than a year from table eggs.

The utility grower needs to think more than has been his custom that he must breed his stock along the lines of weight and type, in preference to feathers. In all breeds weight tends to run down, unless the birds are bred to a standard weight. Moreover, typical birds are likely to be better layers. Agricultural schools claim this is especially true of the Runner duck.

Charcoal is one of the most essential articles of food for poultry.

Clean the poultry house once a week at least. It is useless to spray and powder a dirty house.



WHO AM I?

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world.

I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the world.

I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns.

I steal in the United States alone, over $300,000,000 each year.

I spare no one, and I find my victims among the rich and poor alike; the young and old; the strong and weak; widows and orphans know me.

I loom up to such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labor from the turning of the grindstone to the moving of every railway train.

I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage earners in a year.

I lurk in unseen places, and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not.

I am relentless; I am everywhere, in the home, on the streets, in the factory, at railway crossings, and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me.

I destroy, crush or maim; I give nothing, but take all.

I am your worst enemy.

I am Carelessness.

Not Equal to Bridge.

A well-known bridge player who imagined himself an authority on the game, and who had proved to be a perfect bore among his friends by his verbal comments, suggestions, and advice upon methods of play, decided to write and publish a book. One copy was sent to a famous player for his opinion about it. In about ten days the book was returned to the author with the following note:

"My Dear Sir: Your favor of the eighth inst., accompanied by your book, was duly received. I have read it very carefully. It seems to be a very good game, but I don't think it as good a game as bridge."—Exchange.

NERVOUS DISORDERS

Are Promptly Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If your hand trembles or is unsteady, it is a sure and early sign that your nervous system is at fault. The trouble if not taken in time will develop slowly to a worse stage, and there is no person more to be pitied than one suffering from nervous trouble. You feel unaccountably weak after exertion, lose flesh, turn against food, and suffer palpitations and indigestion after eating. Sometimes sharp pains shoot down your spine and legs, and often neuralgia robs you of your sleep at night. These are some of the troubles that indicate [illegible] of nervous disorders. If they are neglected they result in a complete nervous collapse, sometimes in paralysis. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have won a great reputation in curing all forms of nervous diseases. The nervous system depends entirely upon the blood supply for nourishment. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually increase the supply of rich red blood; feed, strengthen and tone the nerves, enabling them to perform their functions and dispel all signs of a breakdown. Mrs. D. Walncott, Beaver Bank, N. S., says: "I was sick run down and awfully nervous. The slightest noise would startle and annoy me. I suffered pains around the heart, and every particle of color left my face and hands. I always felt tired and slept poorly at night. I was so poorly that my friends thought I would never recover. I tried many medicines but they did not help me. Then I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to drop all other medicine and try them. It was fortunate I did, for in the course of a few weeks I found them helping me. I continued taking the pills for some weeks longer and them completely cured me. I earnestly advise every weak woman and girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and I am sure they will not be disappointed."

You can get these pills through [illegible] medicine dealer or by mail at [illegible] a box, or six boxes for $2.50 [illegible] Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., [illegible] ville, Ont.

PLANS FURTHER EXTR[illegible]

The Canadian Pacific has [illegible] wharves at Vancouver which [illegible] cost $1,500,000. These plans will [illegible] fall into those which the city [illegible] plate to carry out at the [illegible] latter is growing in value [illegible] all he time. There is great [illegible] from shippers of congested [illegible] couver is becoming a [illegible] city is going to [illegible] wharf extension in [illegible] ture, and the railway [illegible] own account, has [illegible] extension of the [illegible] will use for its [illegible] east and west [illegible] Railway has now [illegible] terests, facilities [illegible] solutely independent [illegible] ence making for [illegible] ficient service [illegible] business, which [illegible] notably extensive [illegible] years. The fleet [illegible] numbers, all [illegible] but it has expanded [illegible] Atlantic and Trans [illegible] latter years—recognizing [illegible] the possibilities of [illegible] between this continent and Asia, an intimate [illegible] of communication which [illegible] built by the war, are results [illegible] urgency and importance from [illegible] to day.

"All things come to those who wait," quoted the Wise Guy. "Well, the fellow who expects to have greatness thrust upon him must be a pretty good waiter," added the Simple Mug.

WRONG PRES

AVOIDING M

NO DIFFI

MORE THAN

DISAPPO

A REASONABL

LOA

AN OPT

WORKED O

WIFIE KN

CAUSE OF TH

A SLO

DIFFE

WISE, A

NOT CO

THE ONL

A BUSY

USE

TON TELESCOPE
ed Every Thursday
EEDY - PUBLISHER
No. - 48
No. (Night) 146

RIPTION RATES
dvance $1.50
Advance $2.00
, paid in advance ..$2.50
(50c for Postage)
, paid in advance..$1.50
in advance... .....$2.50
(1.00 for Postage)
if not paid in advance.

ON, FEBRUARY 1st, '17

IAL COMMENT

d Canadian factories are shells, and 400,000 bands

+ + +

0 weekly or semi-week pers have adopted a sub-of $1.50 or higher,

+ + +

ion Government has at something to win the ppointed seven Senators, age of The Guelph Mer-

+ + +

rdine Reporter makes suggestion that intern churches in the winially, as private houses
y large enough to ac-who attend, and the many contract severe mething worse.

+ + +

o keeps the baby quiet
e store while his wife ry department, looks
, tries on a couple of and gets an idea of g styles are going to s well the meaning of
"They also serve who wait."

+ + +

:—A good story is told whisky spotters who and asked a jitney
d drive them where t drink. The driver nd after he had driven hill they asked him
oing and he replied to ost them six dollars
lence.—Bradford Wit-

+ + +

ates of out-of-town ail to recognize the t character of markets. The farmers have in the upbuilding of et town as the towns-
s. The convenience
t is a factor in calculattheir farm property.
point should not be he out-of-town resi-

+ + +

the Canadian Ren England was man-ally as that of New k would be occupying
' It actually shel-
lile ago, 4,000 officers is only one of many hen the soldiers come extravagance, ramp-aces across the At-a Canadian political ntry.

+ +

y is fortunate in hav-asurer one of those ublic servants who satisfaction, not in
, but in performing lly and well. It is r there is a more
y treasurer in Can-Norman Robertson, which the County
on his thirtieth an-k was well deserved.
ll credit for their elieve they should
For thirty long has given the he value of asure to pur-ith a loop of lasso the collar lies.

The 160th. Bruce Battalion "Christmas at Bramshott"

Written By One of the 160th. Boys.

'Twas the week before Christmas and all through Bramshott.
The soldiers were sighing as they thought of their lot.
Twas "Stand at Ease", "Shun" "Slope
Arms" and "present";
From nine in the morning, till all were near spent.
They'd shine their boots brightly before each parade
Then wallow in mud of a very brown shade
They'd shine all their buttons, then out in the rain
Away they would trudge. It would give you a pain.
Our Major took stock of all this, as he wondered
"How can I cheer up the boys who are sundered,
From home and from loved ones, who are left far behind
And with thoughts of Xmas dinners, still fresh in their mind"
"I've got it," said he, "it's work,"(the wise guy)
I'll have them complete in the old fashioned way
And offer a prize, for the hut which is neat,
All decorated, scrubbed and in order complete.
We jumped at the bait and for hours without number
We ploughed through the rain and the sand like a plumber
For Holly, and Ivy and green leaves by the armful
Nor thought of the work as being at all harmful
We scrubbed all our bunks and our mess tins likewise
And our floors were as clean as a bake board for pies.
We painted the walls and hung banners galore
All entwined round with holly as in days of yore
On Saturday morning inspection took place,
When the officers arrived and summoned up our case
We were sure of one thing we had worked hard and well
And were satisfied now to let our work tell.

They praised up our mess tins so shiny and bright
And also our bunks and our floors which were white
They saw our equipment and blankets
so neat
Then said the "Band Hut is surely a treat.
Then forth came the list, as we sat at our bacon
The Band and the Transports the prizes had taken
And rejoicings were many by every band boy
Likewise the Transports who were all filled with joy.
Then all the next week we were sorely bothered
By Sergeants and officers who in our Hut gathered
For our fame had gone forth and from far and near
They came from Battalions to see and to hear.

We waited for long expecting to hear
Some news of the prize which did not appear.
The Major took "mumps" and there was no one to see
That our Hut got the prize, wonder, what's it to be.

But prize or no prize we will not feel hurt,
For the thing was a blessing and kept us at work
When feeling downhearted as thought turned to a land
All covered with snow, but loved by our band.

The land of Maple, the pine, and the plain
Where loved ones are waiting to greet our return
That land of our Fathers, beloved by each one
Of our boys who enlisted to fight in her name.

TELESCOPE LETTER BOX

FROM GUNNER C. E. VANHATTEN

France, Dec. 28th, 1916.

To the Secretary of the Daughters of the Empire.

I take this opportunity to thank you for the parcel sent to me by you. I received the same a few days ago and can assure you it was very much appreciated. It is kind acts like this that make us realize that we are not forgotten by the people at home.

I have not had the pleasure of meeting any of the Walkerton boys up to the present. I passed Ed. Eidman on the road some time ago, but did not have a chance to speak to him. I think he was with the 2nd Pioneers and if I am not mistaken he was on his way to the trenches.

I think at times the general public get the wrong idea as regards modern warfare for one often reads of the boys being in the trenches for months. It is quite impossible for no human being could stand it. It is all done in short reliefs, that is how the boys meet one another so often. I am with the artillery and I must say that while this war is practically one of artillery we must take off our hats to the infantry, for they surely bear the brunt of it all, and no matter what the conditions are you will always see the same smile.

I have always been on the wires for the battery and that work takes you to the trenches more or less and have watched the boys go "over the top" and have seen them come back but never heard a complaint.

The prisoners that we have taken lately seem to be quite satisfied to be taken. In fact I have seen them coming along behind our front line without escort, or probably one Tommy would bring 25 or 30 without any trouble. We had one drop in on us one morning while we were having breakfast and he told us he had been lying out in No Man's Land all night and had had enough so he thought he would come out wey and wandered across by himself. The heart of the Hun seems to be broken but I would not like to leave the impression that he is not a good fighter for that would be wrong.

I do not suppose this kind of truck will interest you, so I will close. But I will again thank you for the very nice parcel. I would just like to say that a little note from anyone at any time would be greatly appreciated. It is a long time since I was in Walkerton but I have never forgotten my home town and I hope I am not intruding by making such a request. Will close wishing you all a very Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Yours sincerely,
C. E. Van Hatten.

No. 334,155. Gunner C. E. Van Hatten, 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, 1st Can. Division, B. E. F., France.

+ + +

LETTER FROM VICTOR BELL

Friedrichsfeld bei Wesel,
Dec. 15th, 1916.

Dear May:

Just a few lines hoping you are all well as it leaves me at present: I have had no word from any person yet and they tell me to expect none until the middle of next month. It certainly seems a long time to wait for a letter from home. I received two loaves of bread from the Red Cross last week: They certainly were a treat and am looking forward to hearing from the R. C. again this week. A lot of the boys who have been one or two years are very good to me. Some of the others have not a soul to look after their wants so as soon as my parcels start to arrive I will share up with them. I have been here nine weeks. Send some soap next time that will take the black off. It reminds me of the time I was at Cobalt, Ontario. We have a little bit more harder work to do here than what we had at Dulmen. You will notice that we have changed our address to Friedrichsfeld. It will not be long before Christmas is here. Last Christmas I was in France, the one before at Tobermory and this Christmas in Germany. Wonder where the next one will be. We certainly do see something of life and all for nothing. It is a free trip all over, but let them land me in dear old Canada again and it will take a lot of coaxing to get me out. Remember me to all that ask for me and give Mother my address when you write to her, please. Hoping to hear from you soon I will close, with love from

Vic.

Canadian Prisoner of War, Pte. Victor M. Bell, 407465, Royal Canadian Regiment, Prisoner of War Camp, Barracks 32 J. C., Friedrichsfeld bei Wesel, Rheinland, Germany.

Get your auction sale bills printed at the Telescope.

Shoe dealers have been notified this week of a further advance in rubbers of twenty per cent.

A number of local Oddfellows drove out to Hanover on Thursday evening and saw the initiatory degree put on in fine shape by their Hanover brethren.

Mr. Nicholas Durrer, Shorthorn breeder, sold two yearling heifers last week to Mr. Archie Tolton. This is a pair that Mr. Tolton can be proud to add to his herd. He also sold a young bull calf to Mr. Inglis of Brant to head his shorthorn herd. Mr. Inglis also purchased a two year old heifer from Mr. Durrer, which is equal to the best.—Mildmay Gazette.

News About Town

bruary.

ed your Telescope yet?

chool beat the Bankers at Wednesday night by a

Henry Tarlor, East-laid up with a severe

, Victoria St. is days, assisting his g his plumbing business.

brought six pigs resold them for $180, feeding 80 to 90
are making ded to Major recent copy of the soldier's paper pub-

Front, of which the in-Chief.

riage of Mr. Adam St. Mar-rick, to Miss Maud, daughter
r. and Mrs. Richard Cronin of Culross took place Wednesday morning Jan. 21 at the Teeswater R. C. Church, Rev. Father Cappe officiating. The happy young couple will reside on the homestead on the first concession of Carrick.

Mr. N. A. Eckel, of Didsbury, Alta, who is home on a visit to his father, Mr. Geo. Eckel, underwent a slight operation on Thursday, having his tonsils successfully removed.

More and more it is being demonstrated that the merchant who works consistently at newspaper advertising is getting the business. It is the other fellow who is the victim of delusion.

The coming season is going to be marked by high prices for all farm produce. It will be in your interest to watch the markets closely. The Farmer's Sun, Toronto, as a farm market paper has no equal. It has saved its readers many dollars by keeping them posted as to the trend of prices. There never was a time when this information was of such value to the farmers of the Province as now. Those who read The Sun regularly find it a business proposition that means money to them. Your subscription for The Sun can be left at this office.

+ + +

Doing Her Bit

Many old Walkerton friends will be interested to know that Mrs. Latchford Sr. of Calgary, mother of Mr. Frank Latchford of the G. T. R., is enjoying good health in spite of advancing years. All her spare time is devoted to knitting for the soldiers which she is able to do without the aid of glasses.

THE CHIEF CHARM OF LOVELY WOMAN

Soft, Clear, Smooth Skin Comes With The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

NORAH WATSON
86 Drayton Ave., Toronto.
Nov. 10th, 1915.

A beautiful complexion is a handsome woman's chief glory and the envy of her less fortunate rivals. Yet a soft, clear skin—glowing with health—is only the natural result of pure Blood.

"I was troubled for a considerable time with a very unpleasant, disfiguring Rash, which covered my face and for which I used applications and remedies without relief. After using "Fruit-a-tives" for one week, the rash is completely gone. I am deeply thankful for the relief and in the future, I will not be without "Fruit-a-tives".

NORAH WATSON.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CENTRAL Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

GIRLS WANTED!

For Office Work to fill the places of men who have gone or are going to the Front. Young women can render the Country real service by preparing to take positions in Bank and Business Offices, and thus relieve men for active service.

Special Courses of training in Bookkeeping, Shorthand, and all other Commercial subjects now in progress. Students admitted at any time. Illustrated catalogue free.

NORTHERN Business College
OWEN SOUND, ONT.
C. A. Fleming, - Prin.

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

Do You Bake Your Own Bread?
If You Do

Let us tell you that NEVER BEFORE could you SAVE so much by starting to get your bread from us. Flour has DOUBLED (increasing from $2.50 to $5.00) and all ingredients have gone up while the price of bread has only increased one-third in the last three years.

A. Hehn
City Bakery

A Safe, Sure and Quick Ro to a good business posi
ELLIOTT Business College
TORONTO, ONT.

Shorthand, Typewriting, Bookkeeping, Banking, Higher Accounting, Correspondence, Penmanship, Spelling, Office Routine, Business Forms, Commercial Arithmetic, Business Law, Civil Service &c., taught quickly and correctly. Experienced teachers; careful attention; moderate rates; best results. Demand for our graduates is far in excess of our supply. Enter now, Catalogue free.

Yonge and Charles Sts. W. J. ELLIOTT, Prin.

Your Photo

There is no gift that more truly carries the sinc of the donor.

FRASER

The T
The
Th

NOW i Men, while of Spring C complete.

THIS is t
for ordered clothes.
Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher

Read the Ads.

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war. Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in those cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war: our armies are still growing: the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund still must be maintained. And what do we find: in every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.

Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONTROL, BECAUSE—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum those families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part, by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden. Why take from them this task, and give it to all, rich and poor?

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

MEN AND WOMEN OF ONTARIO:

Bend your backs once again to this burden. If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally, taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty, your war-time part, in this day of national sacrifice.

The Fund requires $12,500,000 for 1917. Of this Ontario is asked to raise $6,000,000, being the estimated requirements of Ontario's families. If there is no local Fund to which you can subscribe, send your gift direct to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Vittoria Street, Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

The W Styles

AS SHO
Superi
Clothing a one brief and cheap town."

We'd li you for yo overcoat a ed prices.

Hats, Cap
Sweater Coat
ings at Slaugh

WOODMAN
Next to Vogan

INSURA
FIRE, LIF
ACCIDEN
AUTOMOB
GUARANT
MONEY to LO
REAL ESTAT

Town and Farm Property
See my list before making a

OCEAN and R
TICKETS TO ANY PART
THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Railway and all ocean companies — English, Amer
Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE
T. E. ATTW
GENERAL A
Walkerton

FARM

The Executors of the Will of rich O'Hagan, deceased, offer
the West Halves of Lots 19
cession, B. Elderslie, 100 ac is a desirable grass farm sit
three miles from Paisley.
particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, D. Forse
Executor, or Bar
47 t. f. Chepstowe

After Every Meal
WRIGLEY'S
The Flavor Lasts

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

Fall Clearing Sale of WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—

Dining Room,
Parlor,
Hall,
Sitting Room,
Bath Room,
and Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

Tenders for Printing Contract

The undersigned will receive Tenders for the contract of all ordinary printing for the Township of Brant for year 1917; tenders to be placed with the Clerk before noon of the 5th of February 1917. The printing contract to include the sending of a printed copy of the minutes of Brant Council to each of the following papers in time to have them appear in each of them the same week in which they appear in the paper securing the contract, viz:—The Walkerton Telescope, Bruce Herald & Times, Hanover Post, Chesley Enterprise and Paisley Advocate.

M. A. McCALLUM, Clerk.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE: THOMPSON: BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building,
Ottawa, Ont.
Solicitors for Applicant.

48—9

Giant Flowering Carnation

FREE!

Address a postcard to us now and receive by return mail a copy of our new illustrated 80-page catalogue of Garden, Flower and Field Seeds, Root Seeds, Grains, Bulbs, Small Fruits, Garden Tools, etc.

SPECIAL.—We will also send you free a packet (value 15c) of our choice

Giant Flowering Carnation

This carnation is a great favorite; the flowers are large and fragrant and the plants do well outdoors. Transplanted into pots in the early fall they bloom profusely from October till the end of May. Extra plants are easily propogated from them by cuttings, "pipings" or layering.

Send for our catalogue and learn of our other valuable premiums. 18

Darch & Hunter Seed Co., Limited, LONDON CANADA

The dawn of
"More bread and better bread" arrived the day the sun first shone on PURITY
MORE BREAD and FLOUR
BETTER BREAD
10 years of better home-made bread. 5

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application. 804

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

Winter Goods

Axes We have a good supply of Axes, ranging in price from 85c to $1.25. Try a Samson, fully guaranteed at $1.25.

Saws There is none better than the Celebrated Improved Razor Cross Cut Saw.

Mitts We have a full line of Winter Mitts and Gloves.

Granitware When in need of Granitware, don't forget our "Old English."

We also carry Sausage Grinders and Fillers, Meat Saws, Butcher Knives.

S. W. VOGAN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA

POETS' CORNER

BRAMSHOTT CAMP

(Written By One of the Boys of the 160th.)

There's an isolated, desolated spot I'd like to mention
Where all you hear is "Stand at Ease," "quick march," "slope arms," "Attention."
It's miles away from anywhere, by Jove it is a rum un.
A man lived there for fifty years and never saw a woman.

There's lots of little huts all dotted here and there
For those who live inside of them I have offered many a prayer,
It's mud up to your eye-brows, you get it in your ear,
But into it you've got to go without a sigh of fear.

There's soldiers living in the huts, It fills my heart with sorrow,
With tear dimmed eyes they said to me, it's Bramshott Camp tomorrow,
Inside the huts there's rats they say as big as any goat.
Last night a soldier saw one a-trying on his coat.

For Breakfast every morning its just just like Mother Hubbard,
You double round the hut three times and dive into the cupboard.
"Sometimes" they give you bacon
"Sometimes" they give you cheese
Which marches up and down your plate;
Slope arms and stand at ease.

At night you sleep on straw and boards just like a herd of cattle,
And if perchance you turn around your bones begin to rattle;
And when you hear Reveille blow, it makes you feel unwell;
You knock the icebergs off your feet and wish the bugler—"Oh well."

Now when this war is over and we've captured Kaiser Bill;
To shoot him would be merciful and absolutely silly;
But send him down to Bramshott Camp among the rats and clay,
And let the Crown Prince watch him slowly fade away.

WALKERTON COUNCIL

Appoints J. A. McGill Assessor for 1917—Local Firm asked for Statement.

Mr. John A. McGill was appointed town assessor for 1917 at a Special meeting of the Town Council on Friday night. His salary will be $125, same as paid last year. Mr. McGill's application was the only one received but the Council was satisfied to give him the appointment as he has had previous experience on the job, is a builder by trade, and should be a good man for the position.

Mayor Johnston brought up the matter of no statement having been received from S. A Rife & Co. He could see no justification for ignoring the terms of the By-law. A motion was passed asking Mr. Rife to submit a statement for the years 1915 and 1916 in accordance with terms of By-law.

Coun. Sanderson asked what was to be done with an old woman who lives by herself opposite the Apple Evaporator. It appears that this woman is without sufficient means and applied to the town for Relief. Mayor Johnston was of the opinion that she should go to the House of Refuge. Chief Ferguson took her up on a vagrancy charge Friday afternoon and had her remanded for a week. It is probable that she will be sent to the House of Refuge. She is an eccentric person and is reported to have shook her fist under the nose of her spiritual adviser the other day and accused him of trifling with the truth.

The town printing contract for 1917 was awarded to the Telescope.

The members present were:—Mayor Johnston, Reeve Russell, Couns. Truax, McCarter, Sanderson, Vogan, McKinnon.

Board adjourned to meet Monday, Feb. 12th at 7.30 p. m.

BRUCE PRESS BANQUETTED

Town of Walkerton Extends Hand of Welcome to Visiting Publishers.

The newspaper publishers of the various towns of Bruce paid a visit to Walkerton last Thursday and if they did not take home kindly recollections of the County Town and its people, it was not the fault of our chief Magistrate, Mayor Johnston. "Andy" made it his business to welcome the men of the Press to Walkerton personally and had a noon-day spread arranged in Erdman's best style when the Publishers were the guests of the town. After the visitors had feasted on a repast fit for Kings, Mayor Johnston took a few minutes to extend a hearty official welcome on behalf of the town, and to remind the guests of a few little features which makes our town one of the nicest on the Map. President Hunter, who is known as one of Bruce's best stumpers, and is even more at home in making after dinner speeches than in attending to roast chicken, made a happy response. Wm. McDonald M. L. A. publisher of the Chesley Enterprise, gave an extempore biographical sketch of some of the newspapermen present. Mr. E. Roy Sayles, Chairman of the Weekly Section, Can. Press Association, spoke briefly on the duty of the press and public to serve at the present hour. Mr. Sayles has had a large part the past three years in bringing the publishers of the Eastern and Western provinces into active co-operation through the Can. Press Association. Mr. D. McKenzie of the Paisley Advocate, recalled the time when his paper referred to Walkerton as filled with "pride, poetry, and pianos." He considered it auspicious that Municipal affairs here at the present time were under the direction of the plain people—the workers—of the town. Coun. Sanderson drew attention to the necessity for serious thinking on the part of all in these times. The Town Council was also represented by Couns. McCarter and McKinnon.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE
REQUESTS
THE PEOPLE OF CANADA TO BEGIN NOW
TO SAVE MONEY FOR THE
NEXT WAR LOAN

JAN. 9, 1917

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE
OTTAWA

News About Town

License Inspector J. White, Walkerton, was in Kincardine on Thursday last. He visited all the hotels and gave them an inspection to see that they were properly equipped. Mr. White also made it plain that he was not satisfied with the way the law was being observed here as regards men being intoxicated on the streets and he proposes to see that it is better kept. Mr. White is a fair officer, but he says the law must be respected no matter who the offenders.—Kincardine Reporter.

+ + +

May Scrap Plant

The Wiarton people have been given to understand that the immense plant of the Crown Cement Co. of that town will likely be scrapped unless something "happens" very shortly. It is estimated that nearly a million dollars has been sunk in the proposition and a Wiarton junk dealer estimates that as a junk proposition, about $3000 would be realized.

+ + +

Eric Robertson Married

The marriage took place in England on January 3rd, of Capt. Eric Robertson, youngest son of County Treasurer and Mrs. Norman Robertson of Walkerton to Miss M. Zimmerman of Milton, Ont. Capt. Robertson left Walkerton last year to take a commission with the Royal Flying Corps. He has since been promoted to a position on the War Staff.

+ + +

Southampton Firm in Difficulties

The firm of Knechtel Bros, Ltd. of Southampton is in financial difficulties. The Town Council secured an injunction restraining the company from shipping away its machinery as the town has guaranteed a loan of $10,000 of which the Knechtel firm has paid off $2,000. The town council had to meet the instalment of interest and principal due on January 2nd amounting to $800. All the town

FIFTY YEARS AGO

First General Session Was Held In Bruce County—Interesting Facts Recalled.

We have heard no one mention the fact that this is the fiftieth year of the organization of the County of Bruce. Before the first day of January 1867 it constituted a part of the County of Huron and Bruce.

From Mr. Thos. Dixon, Clerk of the Peace, we have secured interesting information regarding the first General Sessions held in Bruce County.

In those days the General Sessions was held quarterly in March, June, September and December, for some years they have only been held half yearly in June and December.

The County put on its war paint by holding the first General Sessions on Tuesday the twelfth day of March 1867 presided over by the late John Jucherau Kingsmill, supported on the bench by John Gillies, the then Warden of the County, other justices of the Peace being present. The Sheriff was the late William Sutton. The Clerk of the Sessions, the late D. W. Ross. The Clerk of the County Court, the late William Gunn, and the Crier the late Samuel Roether, afterwards the late William Richardson was appointed the crier of the Courts. High Constable the late Ezra Auson Healy. Twenty Grand Jurors attended, of whom the foreman was the late Diman Bricker.

The Grand Jury brought in a true bill against Archibald McKinnon for Common Assault who upon arraignment pleaded not guilty on which a jury found him guilty and the judge sent him to gaol for a month with hard labour. Peter Sinclair made claim to a patent for lot one in the second concession of the Township of Bruce.

The jury who tried McKinnon was composed of Addison Vickerman, Angus Bowie, John Connell. James Coll, Wm. Clydesdale, Adam Fisher, Jas. Gray, Jno. Gray, Dunc. Kerr. Arch. Morrison, John McKay and George McKay. On the second day a true bill for assault (common) was brought in against George Minard, who upon arraignment pleaded not guilty.

The jury who tried this prisoner and found him guilty was Thos. Barry, Vickerman Addison, Thos. Hogg, Robt. Wilson, Alex McGillivray, Geo. Kerr, Duncan Kerr, William Meadows, Duncan Ross, William Johnson, John Gray and William Johnson. The sentence was one week without hard labour. On the fourteenth the Court audited the Criminal Justice accounts, those present besides the judge being Jno. Gillies, Wm. Rastall, Wm. Hall, James Rowand, Michael Fischer, Peter Reid, Robert Purvis, Robert Pinkerton, Donald McLennan, James Brocklebank. J. C. Eckford is the only surviving justice whose name appeared on the commission of the peace read at the opening of the court.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.75
Year	1.50

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00

France, Greece and other

Liquor Inspector White, who made the House of Refuge famous as a desirable home for the aged and infirm, was in town on Wednesday and gave us a call. Mr. White is now Government Liquor Inspector for the County of Bruce, and is calling on all the towns and villages in the interest of prohibition.—Ripley Express.

+ + +

May Move To Witley

William B. Thompson of the 160th Band writes the Telescope publisher from Bramshott Camp:—"We are still at Bramshott and still intact. There are rumors that we are to be moved to Witley in the near future to form part of the Fifth Canadian Army Division. Whether it is true or not I cannot say but believe there is some truth in it. I trust you and all Walkerton friends are in good health and

House
Furnishin

WHEN in need of any sm house, call on us, w such as mouse-traps, c wash-boards, towel-racks, kitchen utensils of every ki ware and galvanized ware.

We always carry a ful
Williams paints and varnis on the market.

PATTERSO
HARDWARE PLUMB

Shingle

New Brun
White Cedar les, Grades,
and Clear.
large stock o ish Columbia
les in grades,
3, 4 and 5 X.
and get specia
es.

R. Truax &

6

MAKE YOUR D
FIGH
AT THE FR
BUY
DOMINION OF THREE-YE
WAR SAVINGS CE

$ 25.00 FOR
50.00 "
100.00 "

INDIVIDUAL PURCHASES LIM

FOR FULL PARTICULARS A
OR ANY MONEY ORD

JAN. 9, 1917

G digs

Gold D
Soa
a gre
G absol sanat
• S ha

to just to cle
ously, to fabric, ut

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

The footmen move to and fro with the tea and coffee cups; there is the usual little pleasant preliminary chatter at the whist tables. Lady Bumbleby, who dislikes whist because, as she explains, it makes her think, settles down in her chair and coaxes Hector Warren into talking—into telling her some more of his stories about the wonderful people he has met, and the more wonderful places he has seen, and Sir Frederic still bends over his photograph album. And Signa, nestling in the capacious armchair just beside which Hector Warren stands, listens with half closed eyes, and is happy. Perhaps Hector Warren knows that she is within hearing, for certainly every now and then he turns his head and addresses his story as much to her as to Lady Bumbleby; and at such times Signa's eyes meet his with a rapt attention, and sometimes with a smile, which repays him in more precious coin than Lady Bumbleby's laugh.

Yes, she is very happy as she nestles back and listens, and lets her eyes wander idly around the beautiful room, so cheerful and pleasant with its many wax candles and subdued brightness. There is no spark of unworthy vanity in her composition, or else she would have noticed the motionless, awkward figure at the table, and understood why the not unhandsome face is heavy and the glance that he sometimes lifts to Hector Warren sullen and angry. In her innocent unconsciousness, she really thinks that Sir Frederic is deeply interested in the presentment of Lady Rookwell's friends and relatives, and idly wonders how on earth a man can grow absorbed in a photograph album for the half hour together.

"What a wonderful memory you must have, although you couldn't recollect Lady Rookwell's niece," says Lady Bumbleby to Hector Warren; "but I don't want to keep you talking all the evening. Weren't you going to sing, Miss Grenville? I believe she is asleep," she says, craning her neck to catch a glimpse of Signa.

"Are you?" he says, bending over her so low down that he almost touches the top of her head, and makes Sir Frederic wince as if some one had stabbed him.

"Not in the least," says Signa, looking up and meeting his eyes. "I have been listening to your stories. You never tell Archie and me any," she says, reproachfully.

"Doesn't he, my dear," puts in Lady Bumbleby. "Then that makes me all the more grateful. You must be a very agreeable sort of man, Mr. Warren, to exert yourself to amuse an old woman like me."

"There, you see what you have done!" he says, to Signa, in that low, confidential tone, which makes Sir Frederic mad. "You have tempted Lady Bumbleby into direct libel. Now the best thing you can do is to atone for it by singing her something."

Signa nestles still closer.

"I am so comfortable," she says, then she laughs and gets up, and he goes with her to the piano.

A sudden inspiration falls upon Sir Frederic. He is nearest the instrument. Why should this man, this adventurer and dinner-table wit, coming from heaven knows where, monopolize the most brilliant and beautiful girl in the room? He, Sir Frederic, will slip in between. So, with a couple of long strides, he reaches the piano, and opens it before either Signa or Hector Warren can get near, and stands tall, but awkward and ungainly, trying not to color and frown.

"Oh, thank you!" says Signa, in the low, sweet voice which, though it is the same in which she would express gratitude to a cowboy for opening a gate for her, thrills to the very centre of Sir Frederic's heart.

"Have you—have you got your music?" he says, and he knows that his voice is harsh and hurried compared with the calm, easy tones of Hector Warren.

"It was put in the carriage," says Signa, looking round at the card-table.

But Hector Warren, with many apologies for interrupting the game, has inquired of Mrs. Podswell, and comes up to the piano with the information that the music is in the says Sir Frederic, hurgets it, nearly knockchins ornament;

as he does so.
gratefully, as and hot. "What shall I play?" and with a kindly over the music
a song haphazard,
that Hector War-with careful
"I'm afraid—
you wish it."
says, shyly.
ly. Pray
so grate-
Signa,
piano,
clear, softly be stamon and Lady her head, gently, and that he could go and kiss the edge

can turn over music myself," she says as he arranges the song on the stand again. "How well it would be if they printed it so that it didn't require turning over, but every thing is made awkward, isn't it?"

He stammers something in his gratitude, and she sings again. This time knows, or thinks he knows, that Hector Warren has been looking on and enjoying his awkwardness and mortification.

There is a murmur of applause as the song finishes, and Lady Rockwell calls out:

"Mr. Warren knows all your best songs, my dear."

"This was Sir Frederic's choice," says Signa, and Sir Frederic colors to the roots of his hair again.

"Do you not sing?" she asks him, as he stands trying to find some one word to say to her.

"No," he replies, "I can't sing, and I wouldn't if I could, after—after you had sung."

"Then will you ask Mr. Warren?" says Signa, innocently; and, with compressed lips, he goes across the room awkwardly.

"Miss Grenville wishes you to sing," he says, without lifting his eyes to the handsome face.

"Certainly," says Sir Hector Warren immediately; and he goes to the piano as if obedience to Signa's wish was the first duty of his life. Sir Frederic stalks off, instead of remaining at the piano, as he should do, and throws himself down beside Lady Bumbleby's chair, and watches the two at the piano. Why cannot he look and move like Hector Warren? He does not drop the music, does not color and stammer like a shy hobbledehoy. Why cannot he, Sir Frederic, bend over her and look into her eyes with that calm, gentle, reverential smile? And what are they whispering about? Why doesn't he sing and have done with it? And poor Frederic thrusts his hands into his pockets, and glares at them from under his heavy brows.

"I dare not attempt it," says Signa, shaking her head, in answer to some pleading question of Hector Warren's: "It is most difficult, and—and I should put you out."

"No," he says, "I will chance that. Do try. I shall be so grateful."

And he places a piece of music upon the stand.

"Then you must play," says Signa, getting up resolutely. "I dare not attempt it unless you play."

He sits down, and then Sir Frederic, with a cruel pang, understands that they are going to sing a duet.

With a faint color in her cheeks, and with lowered eyes, Signa begins. It is an old fashioned duet, a dialogue between a shepherd and his mistress, exquisitely simple and therefore touching and effective; and as their two voices mingle—hers so clear and sweet a soprano, his so light and musical a tenor—the card players cease playing and turn on their chairs to listen with keen enjoyment of what is really a very fine execution; but every note fills Sir Frederic with an anguish of jealousy and envy; his face grows white with the effort to maintain his composure; and when, at the close of the song, a burst of applause such as is not usually heard in drawing-rooms greets the performers, he half rises and utters an inarticulate cry.

"What's the matter, Sir Frederic?" says simple Lady Bumbleby, breaking off in the midst of an exclamation of delighted enthusiasm. "Are you in any pain?"

"No, no," he says, huskily.

"Oh, I thought you were. Wasn't it beautiful? I never met any one like Miss Grenville! Lady Rookwell may say what she likes about her niece, Laura Derwent, but I'm sure she couldn't hold a candle to this girl! What a prize she would be for a young fellow! I declare, if I were a man I should be simply madly in love with her—I should, indeed! And do you know" and she leans forward to whisper, with a confidential little chuckle,—"I think one young man is already, and that's Mr Warren."

Sir Frederic mutters something unintelligible.

"And what a wonderful man he is!" she goes on, with a shake of her head. "One of the most charming and well-informed men I ever met; sings like an angel, too! Really, looking at them as they stand there, I think they would be a suitable pair, don't you?—I love match making!—Really, very suitable!"

Sir Frederick wipes the perspiration from his brow, and stammers something; then he gets up with a jerk that makes Lady Bumbleby jump.

"I—it's very hot," he says; "there is no air in the room——"

"No? I was just thinking it was so comfortable and nice," she says, innocently. "I wish you'd go and ask them to sing again, Sir Frederic."

But he doesn't answer, and stalks to the car-table, standing over Lady Rookwell, with his back to the piano, to shut out the sight of the pair that Lady Bumbleby thinks will make such a good match.

"Curse him!" he mutters. "It—it shall not be! Never! No, never! I'll—I'll find some way to prevent it! I—"

"What's the matter—am I playing wrong?" asks Lady Rookwell, looking up; and driven away again he mutters a negative, and with a scowl that takes in the whole room, goes straight out into the hall. But even here there is no rest for him; Hector Warren's voice reaches out like a tormenting fiend's, and fills his jealous soul with fury.

Then, as he reflects that he has lost two chances; that he has sat with her at dinner, and had the opportunity of hovering near her at the piano, he curses himself for not having made the best of those chances, and, remembering his mother's advice, he struggles hard to be calm and composed.

"After all," he mutters, leaving the hall, utterly indifferent to the astonishment with which the butler and a stray footman regard him, "the chances are all on my side. If I could but keep cool! I am playing into his hands! I feel it! I feel it! But I will keep cool and self-possessed. He shall not have another opportunity of crowing over me! Here," he says, turning to one of the footmen, who instantly tries to look as if he were quite unaware of Sir Frederic's presence, "bring me something to drink; a glass of water—champagne—anything! The room is hot—"

"It is hot, Sir Frederic," says the man, with ready sympathy for a man who asks for a drink. "Champagne cup, sir? Yes, Sir Frederick," and he brings a cool cup in which the frosted returns the cup to the man, with half a sovereign accompanying it, and waves him away.

"That will do," but the man hesitates a moment.

"If you'd like a cigarette, Sir Frederic—begging your pardon—they're on the table in the conservatory."

"No, no," he says, impatiently, and he takes a step toward the drawing-room; but the hated one is still singing, and he stops short.

"I—I—think I will have a cigarette," he says, ashamed that the man shall see his weakness; and he goes into the conservatory, but he does not help himself from the little white box which Lady Rookwell considerately supplies for those of her guests who are devotees of the Goddess Nicotina; instead he opens the door of the conservatory, and, leaning against the frame, stares at the dark, summer sky moodily.

Suddenly he hears Signa's voice close behind him, and he starts and thrills.

"Do not mind," she says, with a soft laugh. "I am quite sure I shall not catch cold; besides, you will never find it amongst the others!"

Then Hector Warren's voice replies: "I think I shall. I know your shawl amongst a thousand."

"I don't suppose Lady Rookwell and the others have brought quite so many as that," she says, "but I wish you would not trouble; why, the night is so warm!"

"I do not care!" he says, "I will not leave it to chance. Will you wait here? There is an awful draught," he adds, not seeing Sir Frederic leaning against the open door.

"Please don't close any doors!" says Signa. "I will wait here," and she sits on a low wicker-chair, "if you will insist upon going for the stupid shawl."

"That is the word," he says. "I insist."

And he goes.

Sir Frederic looks round the stand of flowers at the figure seated so near him. If that hated Hector Warren were not coming back, there might be a chance of having her to himself for a few precious minutes. He looks round, and is just thinking of retreating, when he sees one of Lady Rookwell's wraps lying on a chair near him.

Even such a head as Sir Frederic's has inspirations, for love will quicken the dullest brain.

With a thrill of hope and determination he seizes the shawl and comes up to her.

"Miss Grenville, I beg your pardon —"

For naturally Signa, whose thoughts are miles away, and who is unaware of his presence, starts.

"I didn't know any one was here," she says, with a laugh. "It was so hot in the room that Mr. Warren proposed that we should come into the conservatory; and he has gone for my shawl, though really it is hot enough here."

"Yes, yes, I know," he says, hurriedly, in mortal dread of the reappearance of Hector Warren. "It is awfully hot even here, but it is cool outside; and here is a shawl. Will you come?"

Signa cannot refuse, or say, "I am waiting for Hector Warren, and I will go with no other gentleman but him;" so she rises, and with a trembling hand he puts the shawl around her shoulders, narrowly escaping an accident with the [illegible] daisies in her hair.

"Ah, yes, this is better," says Signa, as with her hand just touching his arm, they pass out under the veranda. "What a lovely night! I wonder they do not have open air fetes in England as they do in Italy—the weather is often beautiful enough."

"Yes," he says, absently, his ears strained to catch the dreaded footsteps. "Yes, yes, it would be an improvement on the usual dinner party, wouldn't it? If—if you like—if you care in the least about it, I will have one at the Park."

"Oh, no, not at all," says Signa, laughing. "It was merely an idle expression of opinion, and meant nothing."

"Your opinion can never mean nothing to me," he says, his breath coming quickly, his voice almost inaudible, so nearly that Signa does not catch the full meaning of his response, and does not heed it.

"What lights are those?" she asks. "How pretty they look."

"Those are the lights of the Park," he says; "they can be seen from almost all parts of Northwell."

"Yes? It looks very pretty from here."

"You make me very proud to hear you say that," he says. "I—I have always been proud of of my home, but I shall value it from this hour more than before, now that you have praised it."

As he speaks, he hears the dreaded footsteps; but it stops suddenly at the conservatory door, where Hector Warren stands with the shawl on his arm.

He stands looking at the two figures in the light streaming from the drawing room windows—looking at them with a strange expression on his face, that is neither that of jealousy nor envy, nor even fear, but of deep, almost solemn gravity. For a moment it seems as if he means to join them; then, with compressed lips, he murmurs:

"No! It must come, sooner or later. Why should it not be now?" Then he looks at the Park lights, just as they are doing, and murmuring: "Will she refuse?—will she?" he turns and leaves them, his head bent, his face very grave and set.

Signa turns her head rather uneasily at this speech of Sir Frederic's.

"Oh, every one must admire such a place," she says, trying to speak carelessly. "What a delightful old lady Lady Rookwell is, isn't she?"

(To be continued.)

Blobbs—Maude is very enthusiastic about football—Slobbs—Yes, lay your heart at her feet and she will promptly kick a goal with it.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $2.00, $3.00 and $4.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $15.00 and $18.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.

$25.00 FOR A LETTER

CAN YOU WRITE ONE?

Thirteen Prizes to Be Awarded In a Letter Writing Competition.

Some years ago the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., offered a series of prizes to residents of Ontario for the best letters describing cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Hundreds of letters were submitted in this competition, yet there must have been thousands of users of the pills who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to win a prize. To all these another letter writing competition is offered. Thousands of cures through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have never been reported. These will furnish the material for the letter to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts and facts only.

THE PRIZES:

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 17th day of February, 1917, from residents of Ontario, on the subject, "Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received; a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter, and ten prizes of $2.00 each for the next ten best letters.

THE CONDITIONS:

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case, or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.

The letter should not be longer than is necessary to relate the benefit obtained from the remedy in the case described.

Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, it must also be signed by the person whose cure is described as a guarantee of the truth of the statement made.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.

It is understood that The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so, whether it wins a prize or not.

The contest will close on February 17th, 1917, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure write your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully, or your letter may be thrown out.

Address all letters as follows:
The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co.,
Brockville, Ont.
Letter Contest Department.

Wrong Quarry.

With a wild sweep the wind tore round a corner and removed the hat from the head of a respectable and near-sighted citizen, who chanced to be passing, says Tit-Bits.

Peering wildly round, the man thought he saw a hat in his yard, behind a high fence. Hastily climbing over he started to chase it, but each time he thought he had caught it it got another angry move on. Then a woman's angry voice broke on his ears.

"What are you doing there?" she demanded, shrilly.

He explained mildly that he was only trying to retrieve his hat. Whereupon the woman said, in wonder:

"Your hat! Well, I don't know where it is, but that's our little black hen you're chasing!"

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

Bottle Tricks—Old and New.

Ever see a bottle with full-sized eggs inside? How did they get in there? Simplest thing in the world. If you let an uncooked egg stand in vinegar for about twenty minutes you can elongate it enough to get it into a small-necked bottle. Pour in cold water, says the Popular Science Monthly for January, and the egg will return to its original shape. How do they get a ship inside a bottle? Another easy trick. The ship is built outside and then placed in the bottle through a false bottom. Is there anything simpler?—Exchange.

Spanking Doesn't Cure!

Don't think children can be cured of bed-wetting by spanking them. The trouble is constitutional, the child cannot help it. FREE I will send to any mother my successful home treatment, with full instructions. If your children trouble you in this way, send no money, but write me to-day. My treatment is highly recommended to adults troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Address
Mrs. M. SUMMERS,
Box 8, Windsor, Ontario.

SCHOOL IN THE HOME.

Problems of Homework and Parents Are Discussed.

Parents who encourage their children to carry out experiments learned at school, and generally to utilize the knowledge gained there at home, are doing a wise thing. There is, on the whole, too great a gulf between home life and school life. It is a constant cry, nowadays, that the children do not learn anything at school. After many years of what is considered the best education, we find much to be desired in the child's equipment. The boy is often a disappointment to his employer, and the mother is surprised to find that her daughter knows less than she knows herself. One of the chief reasons for this failure is to be found in the fact that too much is attempted during the child's school life. Another reason is that there is little interest of a practical nature taken in the child's work at home.

The cry, "Have you finished your take the trouble to ask, "What lessons have you to do this evening?" and the children do not often volunteer the information. Very frequently the child is stopped in his recital of the day's doings at school by an impatient request to "be quiet," and the telling of the tale is never completed. Those who have had experience in teaching, know at once when there is any interest taken in the child's lessons at home. Some children, though they may not be quite so bright as others in the class, always get on more rapidly, and have a clearer understanding of their work. Where a child is naturally gifted, and where at the same time there is an intelligent interest taken in his work in the home, his progress is made very rapidly indeed.

The child with an unsympathetic home circle, or an apathetic or unintelligent one, loses very often the interest that he would otherwise have in this work. He feels that at home it matters little or nothing how he gets on at school. He cannot discuss his work with anyone there, and he cannot get help when it is wanted, or give information—for this fact is never needed. We all know that a fact once heard is soon forgotten. We know, too, that a fact heard, and then repeated once or twice to others, will linger for a long time in the memory. The child learns by teaching, and if we will allow our children to teach us what they have learned at school, if we will allow them to use their knowledge at home, we shall find that they make much more progress, and are far happier into the bargain.

Some parents, on the other hand, take, if possible, too great an interest in their children's school life. They ask all the questions, without waiting to be told anything. And, worst even than this, they "drive" their offspring to such an extent that jaded and worn, the children can never hope to do themselves or their parents credit.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

The Word "Boche."

The word "Boche," a new one in the French language, introduced since the beginning of the great war as a designation to be applied to a German, is regarded as a most offensive expression when applied by any one to a French man or woman. It has figured frequently in French courts as a term of abuse for which the user sometimes pays a money penalty or as much as eight days of imprisonment. Recently nine women were brought into court, and the complainant, a man, asked for 2,000 francs as damages because these dames had called him a "boche." One definition of the word says that it is a shortening of the word "caboche," which, interpreted into English, means a numbskull, a nincompoop, a blockhead, a numskull, an ignoramus, a mutton head and several other things which the German is not. It is in no way related to the American word "kibosh," which has not been accepted by lexicographers.

Keep Firm.

Your red kimono loosely hangs,
Your Turkish slippers slam around,
Your auburn hair is in strings and bangs—
'Twere better far to keep it bound!
To your excuses I may bow
You're "[illegible] that and can't run tent!"
But Thistle, dear, 'tis but a step
From negligee to negligent!

Sore Corns Go! Absolutely Painless

No cutting, no plasters or pads to press the sore spot. Putnam's Extractor makes the corn go without pain. Takes out the sting overnight. Never fails—leaves no scar. Get a 25c bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor to-day.

TO CANADA.

Our neighbor of the undefended bound,
Friend of the hundred years of peace, our kin,
Fellow adventurer on the enchanted ground
Of the new world, must not the pain within
Our hearts for this vast anguish of the war
Be keenest for your pain? Is not our grief,
That aches with all bereavement, tendered for
The tragic crimson on your maple leaf?

Either our lot, in this world crisis of faiths,
To stand aloof and bide our hour to serve,
The glorious dead are living; we are wraiths,
Dim watchers of the conflict's closing curve,
Yet proud of human valor, spirit true
In scorn of body, mounted on the crest
Of consecration, dearly proud of you,
Who sped to arms like knighthood to the quest!

From quaint Quebec to stately Montreal,
Along the rich St. Lawrence, o'er the steep
Roofs of the Rockies rang the bugle call,
And east and west, deep answering to deep,
Your sons surged forth, the simple, stooping folk
Of shop and wheat field, sprang to hero size
Swiftly as o'er your Northern Lights awoke
To streaming splendor quiet evening skies.

Seek not your lost beneath the tortured sod
Of France and Flanders, where in desperate strife
They battled greatly for the cause of God;
But when above the snow your heavens are rife
With those upleaping lustres, find them there,
Ardors of sacrifice, celestial sign,
Aureole your Angel shall forever wear,
Praising the irresistible Divine.

—Katharine Lee Bates, in New York Sun.

ASHAMED OF THE PIMPLES

How embarrassing it is to have pimples and blackheads break out on the face, and particularly just when one is trying to look the best.

You will find a friend in Dr. Chase's Ointment, for it not only cures pimples and blackheads, but also makes the skin soft, smooth and attractive.

In a score of ways Dr. Chase's Ointment proves useful in every home as a treatment for eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, ringworm and all forms of itching skin disease.

All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper.

Dr. Chase's

THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS

When in Hamilton do not fail to visit Junor's, the House for Gifts. See our display of China, Art Pottery, Cut Glass and Antique Furniture, Pictures, etc. You will be made welcome.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E. SOUTH SIDE
Hamilton, Ont.

The Subconscious Conscience.

Tired and dusty, the excursionists were returning from a Sunday at the shore. One of them, a bald man with big ears, overcome with his day of recreation, dropped off to sleep. In the hat-rack above another passenger had deposited a ferocious crab in a basket and when the little man went to sleep the crab woke up and finding things dull in the basket started exploring.

By careful navigation the crab reached the edge of the rack. The next moment it fell down, alighting on the little man's shoulder. Not feeling quite safe it grabbed the voluminous ear of the little man in order to steady itself and the passengers held their breath and waited for developments. But the little man only shook his head slightly.

"Let go, Mary," he murmured. "I tell you that I have been at the office all the evening."—New York Times.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—My daughter, 13 years old, was thrown from a sleigh and injured her elbow so badly it remained stiff and very painful for three years. Four bottles of MINARD'S LINIMENT completely cured her and she has not been troubled for two years.

Yours truly,
J. B. LIVESQUE.

St. Joseph P. O. 18th Aug., 1900.

THE CLOWN'S FACE.

Pathetic Incident From Which the Use of Black Lines Come.

"One of the greatest tragedies of the theatre," said a prominent comedian, "is connected with the clown.

"In the time of Louis XVI there was a famous clown known as 'Fat William' (Gros Guillaume), who held his audience in the Rue Favart by his wonderful eccentricities of gesture, voice and mimicry. One night, so the legend runs, his wife was dying, and he was still obliged to go on and entertain the clanking, clashing, ribald Parisian mob that stood in the pit. It was in the days before there were seats in the orchestra.

"Like all imitators of the Italian 'commedia,' his face was whitened with flour. Under the burden of his great domestic sorrow he was stupid and slow in his performance, and in order to stir him up his companion on the stage hit him a resounding whack with a heavy cane. The combination of his sentimental troubles and the physical pain caused Gros Guillaume to weep. As the tears streamed down over his whitened face the aspect was so comical that the audience cheered and laughed itself into hysterics. And ever since then every clown has black lines on his whitened face.

"Many are the black lines of the face of the actor that the audience know not of."—Chicago Tribune.

Grand Complexion Improver! Better Than Cosmetics

When it's so easy to bring back the bloom of youth to faded cheeks, when skin disfigurements can be removed, isn't it foolish to plaster on cosmetics?

Go to the root of the trouble—remove the cause—correct the condition that keeps you from looking as you ought. Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills and very soon you'll have a complexion to be proud of. How much happier you'll feel — pimples gone, cheeks rosy again, eyes bright, spirits good, joyous health again returned. Never a failure with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, get a 25c box to-day.

Science in the Kitchen.

Thomas A. Edison was praising the excellent native dyestuff plants that have sprung up since the war, relates the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

"There was a lot of silly, ignorant talk among us at the beginning," he said. "Who'd have believed that such talk would have borne good fruit—good dye fruit?"

"Yes, the talk was so silly and ignorant at the beginning that it reminded me of the cook who said to her mistress:

"'That there new butler you've got in is certainly a fine scholar, ma'am.'

"'Yes?' said the mistress.

"'O, yes, ma'am,' said the cook. 'The servants' sitting-room is altogether a different place of an evening since he came.'

"'Yes?'

"'Oh, yes, indeed. He talks science—science—all evening long. It is certainly fine.'

"'What kind of science does he talk, cook?'

"'Well, ma'am, last evening, for instance, he showed us how we was all descended from Mr. Darwin.'"

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

"Why is it," queried the fair widow, "that they always say a man 'pines' for a woman?" "I suppose," growled the fussy bachelor, "it's because the

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—GIRLS TO WORK ON knit underwear—seamers and finished stitchers preferred. We also teach learners, any girl with good knowledge of plain sewing; good wages; ideal factory conditions. Zimmerman Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Aberdeen and Garth streets, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—A GOOD GENERAL SERvant for small family; highest wages; comfortable home. Address Mrs. John Fley, 2 Homewood Avenue, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—WOOLLEN SPINNERS ON Davis and Furber and English Mules. Medium and heavy yarns—steady work. For full particulars apply to the Slingsby Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

Breaking the News.

Young Michael and his father were both employed in the same stone quarry. One day a bank caved in and killed the father.

No one cared to break the news to the widow, so the foreman eventually went over to young Mike and said to him:

"Mike, you'll have to go home and tell the mother. It's your place to do it, but whatever you do, boy, break it gently to her. Let her know of it easy like. Understand?"

Michael nodded his head and slowly made his way home. As he came up to the door he saw his mother busy in the garden. Thus he said to her when she looked up with surprise.

"That's a fine gold watch fayther's ownin', mither."

"He never owned wan in his loife!" was the sharp rejoinder.

"Then I'm glad of it, mither, for it 'ud be smashed now under twenty tons of rock!"—Exchange.

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

The Brook Cherith To-day.

This desolation doubly desolate is the gorge of the Brook Cherith in the Jordan valley, whose limestone cliffs hid the prophet Elijah from the wrath of Ahab. Here the ravens fed the prophet while the wicked king and the people over whom he ruled suffered the pangs of famine. The rain ceased, the crops failed, the king raged in his impotence but the prophet, solitary and alone beside the dwindling brook, had daily proof of the watchful care of Jehovah whose word he had obeyed. Then, when the brook failed for lack of rain, God led Elijah to the home of the widow of Zarephath. The place is still desolate, and you wonder what living thing the Arab in the foreground can be aiming at. The gorge is now called the Waddy Kelt, and in a snug corner of the canyon walls nestles the old Elijah convent, in which Greek monks commemorate the long vigil of the prophet of Israel. Possibly instead of ravens, they are fed by tourists—who knows?—Christian Herald.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Sing Sing's Funny Side.

I got my first laugh in Sing Sing from Johnny Connaughton, our "P. K."—I suppose I ought to write "Principal Keeper," now that he is dead. They had just brought in a man for his first bit and he was angling for a soft berth by showing off his erudition.

"I'm a linguist," said he, "and I talk 27 languages."

"Well," retorted Connaughton dryly, "we talk only one here, and little of that!"

The joke was on the newcomer by this time, but soon after the boot was on the other leg and it was our chaplain who got the laugh. He had been talking in chapel about the prodigal son, and of how he was ragged and unshaven and starved, and in desperation he took a job tending pigs.

"And," says the chaplain, "there was nothing to eat and he had to eat the stuff they threw to the pigs."

"Why didn't he kill one of the pigs and eat pork?" asked a convict, so simplelike that we knew he wasn't kidding.—New York World.

Electrolysis to Boil Eggs.

The latest device in electric cookery is an egg boiler in which the heat is generated by electrolysis—that is, by passing an electric current through water. Four eggs can be cooked over one and one-half teaspoonfuls of water, and as soon as this is converted into steam the current is automatically cut off.

Who's to Blame for the High Cost of Food? It may be the farmer, it may be the middleman, it may be the weather—but never mind—you have Shredded Wheat at the same old price, the same high quality, the one perfect, complete food, supplying more real nutriment than meat, or eggs, or vegetables, costing much less and more easily digested. Cut out the high-price foods. Eat Shredded Wheat for breakfast with milk or cream. Eat it for dinner with stewed fruits and green vegetables. A deliciously

Denizens of the Deep

Vast through the surface of old ocean may be, there is no portion of it that is not inhabited by abundant fish and their equally abundant food. [illegible]o matter how remote from land your vessel may be, if she remains quiet for only an hour or two, little powers of observation will be needed to see the surface population of the sea clustering about her. Indeed, it is not possible for a thoughtful mind to avoid arriving at the conclusion that these relatively small creatures feel [illegible]mely in the midst of that immensity of space, and seek with instinctive desire such companionship as a ship can give. I have even known of whales, not merely porpoises (whose love for accompanying a ship is well known) but whales of nearly a hundred tons in weight, judging from their size, lying by a ship for days of calm, and occasionally rubbing themselves against her as if by an impulse of pure affection.

I have also seen in the middle of the Indian Ocean, during a stark calm, a tiny crab, with a carapace of [illegible]uch exceeding a half-crown in size, alternately swimming and walking on the vessel's side. Not a strange uncouth species of crab, but just such a crab as any rock pool at your favorite seaside place will furnish. And at the same time there will be noticed groups of well-formed, handsome little fish, in nowise outre to behold, but clustering closely round the rudder, not in the least scared by the great noise it made, now and then, as the vessel lifted itself upon a casual swell. It often gave me much food for meditation—where did these cowering little beings come from, and how did they fare when a breeze plucked their great shelter, or whatever we served for, away from them. It is a problem I have never known to be solved.

Of course, every old-time sailor knew and loved the many pelagic fish, such as dolphin, bonito and albacore which came, so gleefully, under the bows as the vessel surged through the waves. Catching [illegible]m the jib-boom was one of [illegible] of deep-sea sailing, and [illegible]eed, are the folks ashore who [illegible]lize how grateful and comfort[illegible]e the succulent steaks of fish [illegible] in fat after the long and dreary [illegible] of appallingly salt beef and pork. [illegible] chief beauty of these fish to us [illegible] their being met with in the deep-[illegible]ater, as long as that water was [illegible]y warm, so that we could thus al[illegible]ate our otherwise hungry condi[illegible]

[illegible]rom personal experience in many [illegible]mote parts of the sea, I have no [illegible]oubt whatever that, could we have ventured on a little scientific fishing, we should have been rewarded by many more species than the three I have named; as it is, I have known of barracouta and yellow-tail, both caught from land in the deepest of blue water. Flying fish, of course—although sea conditions forbid any systematic fishing for them. Still, the occasional belated wanderer that does fly on board, unless caught by the ship's cat, is, indeed, a sweet and welcome morsel, and would be anywhere. Incidentally, I may mention that for an enormous majority of the larger pelagic fish, the flying-fish furnishes the bulk of their sustenance; the rest is practically made up of the ubiquitous cuttle-fish or loligo, [illegible] is found on the surface all over [illegible]ocean.

[illegible]HE FOOD OF THE WHALE.

[illegible]t this brings me to a consideration of what, perhaps, is the most marvellous of all the pelagic fish, the myriads of tiny [illegible] which furnish the food of the great whale of the Arctic seas, but are not confined to those icy waters. As might be expected from the part they play in the vast economy of the ocean, these creatures are found in incalculable numbers massed together. From the mast-head their serried lines, many feet wide, reach to the horizon. They appear as blood-red bands binding the globe, and must be many feet deep. Along these bands the sea-shouldering whale dredges his way, the wonderful mechanism in his mouth separating this tiny food of his from the sea, and an almost continuous current of writhing, tickling little shell fish go gliding down that exiguous throat of his into the vast area of his stomach. However he manages in this way to keep up that enormous wealth of fat, thirty inches or so at the shoulder, is one of the miracles of Nature, of which one can only speak with bated breath.

Chief among the pelagic people of the sea is, of course, the whale in all his varieties, about which I have written in earlier articles, and to which I shall revert presently.

But the whale's attendant demands attention because he holds what is probably the chief place among pelagic fish. I allude to the shark. Perhaps I had better qualify what I have said about his being attendant upon the whale, by saying that, although I have never seen a shark in attendance upon a school of whales, I have never seen a whale hurt without the appearance upon the scene, as if suddenly materialized, of many sharks. They vary in size, of course, according to the part of the ocean, the largest I have ever seen, nearly thirty feet long being in the South Pacific.

Now, the shark may often be seen lazily gliding around a becalmed vessel in mid-ocean engaged in the universal task of seeking food. He seems to know that there are possibilities of food attaching to a ship, and as he has no predilections, anything is welcome apparently edible or not. But these are always single specimens, and give one the impression that sharks are very few. It is only when they are seen congregated round the body of a dead or dying whale that one realizes their immense numbers. And when it is remembered that their reason for existence is that they fill the necessary office of scavengers, and scarcely ever catch living food, unless of a special nature, as when a man falls overboard it becomes a source of amazement that there are so many of them.

PELAGIC POPULATION.

The sun fish, great, helpless, useless creatures, unable to do more than just lie and bask on the surface, must not be forgotten, nor, although not a fish, can we pass over the turtle in silence, seeing that he is often met with sunning himself upon the calm ocean as remote from land as possible. And thus it will be seen, although the list is far from exhaustive, that the pelagic population of the sea is very great, and everywhere in evidence.

Ever since the undaunted heart of [illegible] the great plain has perverted this magnificent privilege to the base uses of warfare. But from the earliest times, when the law of the strongest was the only rule that obtained upon the no-man's land of the ocean, until to-day, when the sea strength of Britain keeps the peace, and enables mariners of all nations to come and go upon their lawful occasions, the conflict of man with men upon the surface has been trivial, occasional, only indulged in within the severe limits set by the sea upon the intruder man. Compared with the daily life of its denizens, man's so-called tenure of the sea franchise is hardly to be noticed, so small and accidental is it, even as his frequent disappearance beneath the waves, with the latest and finest of his efforts for their subdual causes only a momentary ripple among them.

But the stupendous never-ending warfare of the sea-folk themselves, which is a law of their being, and without which they cannot live, needs an epic to describe even the remotest fringe of its all-embracing activities. But as briefly as possible, it is the sole business of every sea creature (for the exceptions are really so insignificant as to be negligible) to kill and eat some other living creature, and thus a pyramid of interdependence is created, having for its apex the sperm whale, above the fear of any enemy but man, and its base—nobody knows where, down among the microscopic fauna of the sea.

Of that fierce collision between man and whale I have given instances elsewhere, both from personal experience and from the tales told by others, though your whale fighter is, singularly enough, one of the most reticent of mankind concerning his exploits. I have been in company with a dozen old whaling captains in Nantucket, not one of whom owned less than forty years' experience of the great game, but they would not or could not talk of anything but petty local politics, which made one writhe to hear about. So that first-hand knowledge of the way of the ocean monarch when fighting for his life against his only foe is not easy to obtain.

Personally, I am compelled to believe that as an exhibition of gigantic strength nothing can compare with the upward leap of a sperm whale from the sea. It then appears as if the law of gravity were reversed, or as if the gigantic body were suddenly converted into an airship, so easily and lightly does it soar skyward and so difficult is it not to believe that it hangs for an appreciable space of time in mid-air. Only the terrific concussion when it falls, shatters all such fancies instanter; there is then no shade of doubt remaining as to the reality and ponderousness of that stupendous mass. Such a sight in the broad golden sunshine is sufficiently impressive, heaven knows, yet I have heard of a case where the whole scene was rendered greatly more so because it took place at night.

Also, be it noted, that into this unceasing conflict, altruism, not to say love, scarcely enters. Indeed, some of the fiercest foes of many genera are their own kind, who devour their offspring with the greatest gusto, all unconscious of any relationship. Earth affords no parallel to this, for even among the most ravenous creatures there is a law which forbids them to feed upon their own offspring not merely when they are young and helpless but when they have grown able to fight their own battles. And this law is only confirmed by the occasional breaches of it by frantic mothers such as the rabbit and the sow under stress of some desperate fear.

In attempting to understand what goes on in the depths of the ocean, we must needs call imagination to our aid, and add that to what we can see going on upon the surface. If the appearance of the deep-sea denizens be any guide to their habits, we are forced to the conclusion that they are not less, but more fierce in their pursuit of each other. Verily, the aspect of most of them is apt to be terrifying, even to the accustomed observer, albeit only small and immature specimens are, or can be, brought to the surface in the deep ocean travel. The full-grown specimens, with a gape large enough to take in a fish bulkier than themselves, must be appalling in appearance, especially when we know that they can and do devour bigger fish than themselves, gorging them as does a python its prey.

But the warfare which we are permitted to witness is sufficiently terrible. Watch an albicore (tunny) hurl himself into the midst of a school of bonito, smaller editions of himself, and in a moment fill the adjacent sea with sanguinary fragments dropped in his haste to devour. Or the same bonito, having reformed their company after the sudden onslaught, such as Gulliver might have made upon a crowd of Lilliputians (had no moral or ethical considerations restrained him), pursuing precisely the same tactics towards a school of flying-fish. Or the latter, having escaped the pursuit, of their numberless enemies in the sea, and their watchful bird foes of the air, busy recouping their strength by devouring their weaker kindred.

THE SLAUGHTER OF HERRING

But for the wholesale slaughter which may be witnessed by ourselves, befalls a shoal of herrings. They apperhaps nothing equals that which bear in countless masses, bent only upon visiting their favorite spawning grounds, and upon them prey all the sea-denizens larger than themselves with insatiable ferocity. How feebly futile are the adjectives—remorseless, relentless, ruthless—applied here. The aggressors have but one motive force—hunger; and given the means of satisfying that, nothing else counts. From mackerel to man the great feast goes on, and by the bounty of Mother Nature there is enough and an immense overplus for next time. Only let it be remembered that most of this food is devoured alive; it goes down quick into the pit.

A grampus among a school of porpoises fascinates those privileged to witness the result, by the sheer immensity of its brutality. To see the huge sea beast swallowing alive a 200-pound porpoise, knowing the astounding vitality of the victim, to realize that before the awful appetite of the grampus is appeased, a dozen or more of such huge morsels must glide down its maw, is to instil a curious contempt for the devouring capacity of any land beast. But I have always felt a great curiosity as to how the walls of the eater's stomach could stand the strain of holding a number of animals of such a size, while still alive, and [illegible] feats of strength. It is one of the many puzzles of the sea.

In this connection it must be noted that none of the sea-mammals, vast as their appetites are, and painful as their hunger must be, are ever scavengers—that is, eaters of thi[illegible]. Practically all fish are, al[illegible] of them prefer their food alive. I do not know of any that will refuse to eat things dead. Some even confine them[illegible] to carrion, but these [illegible] feeble folk of the sea. Where [illegible]carrion-eater has strength and ferocity like the shark, nothing comes amiss that he is able to obtain, however vigorously alive. Yet, as [illegible] the much-abused shark, while living under the stigma of unimaginable ferocity, is one of the very few fish that have a tender solicitude for their offspring and is unique among the sea-people in that he has been able to inspire a beautiful species of mackerel with such affection that only the death of one of them can sever their association.

Finally, we must not forget that in the immense economy of the sea, the cuttle-fish, in all its innumerable varieties, plays a most important part, perhaps the most important part of all, since it would be hard to name half a dozen useful species of fish for whom the cuttle-fish is not a staple food. That he is at the same time hideous and omnivorous may be set down as one of those secret decrees of Nature with which man has no concern, and in which, at any rate, he has no voice.—Frank T. Bullen, in Wonders of Land and Sea.

On the left is an evening frock of black and pearl grey satin elaborated with hand-made roses. On the right is an adorable lace and gold affair with coat of coral velvet and fitch fur. It is a tea-gown.

PLAN YOUR CROPS FOR 1917--NOW

Don't be Misled into Growing Grain Crops at the Expense of Roughage—Remember at War Prices Silage and Roots Are Worth $5.50 per Ton for Feeding Purposes—Follow a Definite Rotation.

It is a good thing to plan things ahead—forewarned is forearmed, as the saying goes—and now that work is getting slack, it will be both pleasurable and profitable to spend some of the long winter evenings planning out next season's work. By giving one's work a little thought and figuring out how is the best way to go about things, one can usually see where mistakes have been made and how they can be remedied in the future.

The first thing to do in planning for next season's crop is to decide to have a definite rotation—and stick to it. Too many farmers do not have a systematic rotation. They grow the crops which are the essentials of any rotation, that is, hoed crops and clover or some other leguminous crop, but the rotation is not systematic, with the result that some fields are more fertile than others and some fields have scarcely a weed in them, while others are "chuck full" of them.

If it looks certain next spring that the war will last for at least another year, many men will be tempted to put in wheat and other grains, where normally they would put in roots or corn for fodder. If a man has only a few horses to feed he is perhaps justified in doing this, but if he is in the live stock business at all extensively he would be most foolish to grow grain at the expense of corn for silage and roots. The amount of roots grown should be only enough to supply the pigs, but enough corn should be grown to allow each full grown animal at least 15 or 20 pounds of silage per day.

With wheat selling for about $1.50 per bushel and oats selling for about 60 cents per bushel, as they are at the present time, silage has a feeding value of $5.50 per ton.

Suppose we get 30 bushels of wheat per acre. At $1.50 per bushel that means we get $45 from an acre. Say it costs us $14 per acre to produce the wheat, this means that we make $31 per acre.

SILAGE CORN WORTH $60 ACRE

This looks pretty good business. But consider the other side of the question. Suppose we can get 12 tons of silage from an acre, which is not at all a large yield. A ton of silage when wheat is selling for $1.50 a bushel is worth in round figures $5 per ton. That means that we grow $60 worth of corn for silage per acre. Subtracting $18 for the cost of production, we see that w make $42 per acre. That is $42 from an acre of corn for silage as compared with $31 when wheat is grown.

Some may object that we do not really make $42 from the silage corn, for we do not sell it, but compared with bran, feed corn and feed barley, and other feeding stuffs that we buy, this is what it is worth, and if we did not grow it we would have to buy more of these expensive grains. With cattle selling for $10 per cwt. lambs for $12.25 per cwt., and hogs for $12 per cwt., cheese at 25c pound and butter at 44 cents per pound, it should not take one long to decide that growing crops to feed to animals is just as profitable as growing them to feed to human beings.

It is hard to emphasize too strongly the importance of growing leguminous crops such as red clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, and sweet clover. Sweet clover has really now got past the experimental stage, and if one has got some land which is run down and will not grow red clover, it will be well to try some sweet clover. If the land is at all acid, however, the sweet clover will not catch any better than the red clover, so that an application of lime to correct the acidity should be given the fall before the clover is sown.

Clover selling for $12 per ton is the cheapest feed we have. For every dollar spent on clover hay at this price we get $1.52 worth of nutrients as compared with only $0.82 worth in bran at $32 per ton and $0.86 worth in oat straw at $9 per ton. One pound of alfalfa hay has practically the same feeding value as one pound of oats.

Not only do clover and alfalfa make first class feed for cattle, but they make first-class feeds for the soil at the same time. Through the work of the little nodule bacteria that they have on their roots they enrich the soil with that most important soil constituent—nitrogen. The four essential elements of fertility are nitrogen, phosphoric acid, potash and lime. In some English experiments, when a four-year rotation of roots, barley, clover and wheat was used, and none of the manure made from the clover or roots returned to the soil, and the only fertilizing treatment it received was a regular application of fertilizer containing phosphoric acid, potash and lime, but no nitrogen, it was found that after sixty years the amount of nitrogen in the soil was practically the same as when the experiments were started.

The average yields of crops during the sixty years of the experiments were: wheat 35.1 bushels, clover 2.3 tons, roots 9.3 tons and barley 31.5 bushels per acre.

When it is remembered that a 35-bushel crop of wheat removes about 50 lbs. of nitrogen per acre from the soil, it will be seen what a marvellous effect clover has in renewing the nitrogen supply of the soil.

Just what kind of rotation to adopt will depend on one's system of farming, whether one has a large number of animals to feed, and also on the fertility of the soil and its freedom or otherwise from weeds.

If the soil is poor and full of weeds, a short rotation may be used and a leguminous crop may take its place.

The following rotations are given as suggestions, and, of course, may be altered to suit one's particular conditions.

Three-year Rotation—First year, hoed crop. For corn apply manure in the winter or early spring at the rate of 15 tons per acre and plow shallow before planting time, turning under both clover and manure. For roots the land should have been plowed the previous fall.

Second year, grain. Seed down with 10 lbs. red clover, 2 lbs. alsike, 6 lbs. alfalfa, and 6 lbs. timothy per acre.

Third year, clover hay or pasture. The second crop might be used for seed.

This rotation is well suited where dairy farming is practised on a large number of cattle are fed during the winter, as it supplies a large amount of roughage. It is better suited for heavy than for light soils.

Four-year Rotation—First year, hoed crop. Apply manure at the rate of 20 tons per acre during previous fall or early in the spring.

Second year, grain. Seed down with ten pounds red clover and 10 lbs. timothy per acre.

Third year, clover hay. The second crop may be used for seed.

Fourth year, timothy hay or pasture.

Plow the field shallow early in the fall, and cultivate from time to time to germinate and kill the weeds. Just before the freeze up ridge the land in preparation for the hoed crop the following year.

This rotation is very satisfactory in every way and is the one that would probably suit most mixed farmers. It provides abundance of hay for the stock, and the land is pastured once in four years.

Five-year Rotation—First year, hoed crop.

Second year, grain. Seed down with red clover and timothy as in four-year rotation.

Third year, clover hay. Top dress in the fall with barnyard manure available.

Fourth year, timothy hay or pasture. Plow shallow in fall, cultivate and ridge up just thing in preparation for the grain crop the following year.

Fifth year, grain. Seed down with 10 lbs. of clover per acre to be plowed under for green manure the following spring, when the hoed crop is [illegible]

This rotation will be favored by those who wish to grow a relatively large amount of gra[illegible], but still wish to maintain the fertility of the soil by carrying [illegible] live stock to make manure and by the growing of clover.

Six-year Rotation—First year, hoed crop. Give a heavy application of barnyard manure.

Second year, grain. Seed down with the following mixture: red clover, 6 lbs.; alsike 3 lbs.; orchard grass, 3 lbs.; meadow fescue, 3 lbs.; timothy, 3 lbs.; making a total of 18 lbs. per acre.

Third year, hay.

Fourth, fifth and sixth years, pasture.

This rotation is especially suitable where land is cheap and labor scarce.

—CANADIAN COUNTRYMAN.

PECULIARITIES OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES

It is now realized that armies in the field are using many different kinds of explosives, of which the most consists of nitrocellulose, manufactured from cotton. For this purpose, as the late Sir William Ramsay pointed out, the guncotton must be "nitrated," or converted by the action of nitric acid into a gelatin-like material, which may or may not be combined with nitro-glycerine. It is a frequent mistake to suppose that nitroglycerine usually supplies the propulsive force of modern ammunition. It has been found, on the contrary, that it is inferior to some other explosives, while it has certain objections, such as the space it occupies, and its tendency to explode when struck or when a concussion takes place near it, as during the firing of a heavy cannon. Hence, the material made by nitrating cellulose and cotton, when reduced to a very fine powder or to threads, known as cordite, is employed for the purpose of generating the force which propels a projectile out of a gun. This modern ammunition is far more effective than ordinary gunpowder, made from charcoal, sulphur and saltpetre. It develops an enormous amount of energy. The pressure of the gases liberated may equal twenty tons to the square inch in the chamber of the gun, and the porjectile may leave the barrel with a velocity of 1,000 yards a second.

Cotton, however, is not the only form of woody fibre from which nitrocellulose can be made. Wood pulp, straw and substances like coke dust have been used, for example, in Austria, but these substitutes have various drawbacks. First, they have the defect mentioned before of occupying too much space and, secondly they ignite too quickly, and thus the pressure is raised so suddenly that they cannot be used to expel a bullet from a gun. They are manufactured for other purposes, however, being excellent explosive material for shells, since they are not so easily made to explode as guncotton is, and because this property enables them to pass through the barrel of a gun without exploding; whereas the concussion of firing, as Sir William Ramsay says, is apt to explode a shell filled with guncotton.

Another objection to nitrocellulose prepared from straw or wood pulp is that, though it possesses similar properties to guncotton, the powders made from it have not the same propulsive power as has an equal weight of guncotton, from which it is apparent that a bullet propelled with one of these substitutes will not have the same velocity as if propelled by an equal weight of guncotton. It is probable, however, owing to the great demand for explosives that much nitrocellulose made from wood pulp is now being used, and as it will be necessary to compress it into a smaller bulk to fit guns already designed for guncotton there is a new danger due to this confinement.

Whether this confinement of nitrocellulose could have been one of the causes of the explosion in New York is, of course, more or less conjectural, but is is quite likely that some circumstance like the compression of explosives may have been a contributing cause. It will be noticed that there were several explosives reported. The concussion produced by a single explosion would initiate a state of the elements of such substances as mercury fulminate or picric powder sufficient to cause their detonation, a condition of things which would immensely increase the unstable properties of high explosives like trinitrotoluene and picric acid, otherwise not easily made to explode by burning or ordinary percussion.

Now the packing or confinement of explosives, as in railway cars and barges, can produce other effects that heighten the danger of what may be called spontaneous explosion. If these explosives should contain picrates or picric acid, there is the danger that compounds of a highly explosive nature will be formed. Picric acid, for example, forms dangerous compounds with lead, and for this reason it is necessary to pack it in shells or receptacles which contain no lead, nor even lead paint on the screw threads of the plugs. To avoid this danger manufacturers commonly varnish the interior of shells which are filled with picric acid, but at the best it has a capricious chemical character and may explode even after such precautions have been taken.

In the present war picric acid is used on a great scale. It is reported that lyddite shells were stored in barges in the harbor. Lyddite is picric acid, either uncombined—that is, mixed, say, with other substances—or molten and "cast" picric acid. Cast picric acid is a treacherous substance with a dangerous and wholly unwarranted reputation for stability. In fact there are chemists who say that it is the safest explosive for transport. This is quite a mistake. The French have found that it has an unstable nature, sometimes exploding after a very slight concussion, though at others it requires a considerable detonation to make it separate into its gaseous elements.

An expert of the "Conservatoire des arts et metiers" describes it as the perfect type of explosive. He means that in ordinary circumstances it does not explode under violent shocks, and it is not easy to ignite. But there appears to be no absolute security for this stability. "Without any apparent reason," he writes significantly, "it exploded spontaneously by detonation." (Revue Scientifique, p. 463, 1915). He then says: "If we examine the causes of this singular property with more care we find that this capricious explosiveness is due, in the first place, to the formation of picrates. Picric acid, which is made by nitrating phenol or carbolic acid, combines with most metals, forming salts which are more unstable than picric acid itself."

Picric acid, when detonated, is one of the most powerful of known explosives. The violence of the explosion in the harbor would indicate the true origin of the unhappy occurrence. It is also quite likely that the picric acid and its mixtures were improperly packed and stored, and certainly the presence of such a large quantity of this explosive in one place, under bad atmospheric and other conditions, is a wonderful example of imprudence and that happy go lucky system of guarding such things under which we live.

There is still another peculiarity of this explosion to be noticed. The question of relative bulk has had a great influence in the selection of the charges for shells. We have plenty of modifications of picric acid which are known, like shimose and mellnite, and doubtless other modifications which are unknown, and due to the genius inspired by the war.

Modern inventors have tried to make an ammunition which concentrates the greatest energy in the smallest space and the greatest explosive power in the most manageable form; nitrocellulose is a type of the first; picric acid and picrates, ammonium picrate and others are types of the second. But, according to Sir William Ramsay guncotton cannot be compressed to a greater density than [illegible] but picric acid and other shell [illegible] can be compressed to a density [illegible] In other words, a shell which [illegible] hold a pound and a quart[illegible] cotton would hold one and [illegible] ter pounds of the denser pi[illegible] and trinitrotoluene.

The explosion is therefore [illegible] in violence because the [illegible] is used as well as the more [illegible] plosion of the shell filling. [illegible] liam Ramsay is an [illegible] thority, and his views on [illegible] throw much light on the N[illegible] catastrophe. As usual we have [illegible] business in a modern, up to date manner, which is a melancholy satisfaction, if such a reflection can support our optimism in this mess.—N. Y. Sun.

Some Good Sandwiches

Triple Sandwiches—These are both filling and appetizing. Take two thin slices of white bread and one of graham (all bread used in sandwiches should be at least one day old, it cuts so much nicer). Spread the slices of white bread with butter, then with snappy cheese, and put them together with the graham slice between.

Knolly-Knoll Sandwiches—Those who like olives will relish this kind. Spread slices of rye bread with a generous coating of peanut butter and then add slices of stuffed olives. Spread the top slices of the sandwich with plenty of peanut butter, too. These are good energy furnishing sandwiches because of the fuel value of the [illegible] butter.

Mock [illegible] Sandwiches—Spread white bread [illegible] butter, not being too careful to spread [illegible]. Then cover the butter on the lower [illegible] sandwich with good [illegible] golden brown syrup. Spr[illegible] the grated cheese (rich and [illegible] cheese is best). The top slice of bread should be buttered [illegible] have no syrup. Indeed, in [illegible] all sandwiches, the rule is to put the filling in the lower slice only; only buttering very thin the top slices. And some prefer, when making most sandwiches with a salad dressing, to butter the lower slice of the sandwich only.

Cheese Sandwiches—These may be made of white bread, rye bread or graham bread, according to the taste of those for whom they are intended. Butter slightly the slices and spread with grated cheese or rich cream cheese and dot here and there with slices of stuffed olives. Sift a little paprika over the cheese. Paprika, by the way, is good on nearly all meat, egg or cheese sandwiches.

Nut and Cheese Sandwiches—These furnish a good deal of nourishment. Take equal parts of grated cheese and chopped nuts, mix well and spread on thin slices of graham or rye bread. White bread may be used, of course, but the other breads give a distinctly different flavor. English walnuts are good nuts to use.

Chopped Egg Sandwiches—Chop hard-boiled eggs, whites and yolks together, until reasonably fine, then chop together until quite fine a few leaves of parsley and some mixed sweet pickles, stir eggs into this and spread on buttered slices of white bread. Those who like peanut butter will find that especially nice to use in this combination.

Currant Bread Sandwiches—[illegible] all children are fond of these. Spread moderately thick slices of currant bread with a little butter. Then put on a good thick spreading of firm currant jelly or jam.

Lettuce and Cream Cheese Sandwiches—These are nice when made just before serving. If they stand, the lettuce wilts and becomes tough. [illegible] ter white or brown brea[illegible] butter or peanut butter [illegible] these. The bread shou[illegible] thinly with butter, the [illegible] placed on it and then [illegible] spreading of cream [illegible] with paprika.

A satisfactory [illegible] is good for [illegible] may be mad[illegible] ful each of [illegible] one tablespo[illegible] together. Put [illegible] butter, then ad[illegible] yolks of two [illegible] vinegar, and [illegible] of milk. B[illegible] time until [illegible] is thick whe[illegible] and [illegible] yellow [illegible] cream[illegible] If [illegible] some[illegible] single [illegible] paper, [illegible] 10 cents a [illegible] nice after [illegible] in this way.

Nature [illegible]

Nature is ruthless, and [illegible] is uncontested; there is no [illegible] peace of death, and the [illegible] of life, especially [illegible] levels, flows like an [illegible] of nonexistence fo[illegible] before the enorm[illegible] it as composin[illegible] laws of [illegible] shadow.—[illegible]

E BIGGEST SNAP OF THE SEASON IN OMEN'S AND MISSES' CLOTH COATS

They number about 25 in all and the regular selling prices of these coats are $10.00, $12.00, $15.00, $16.50 and $18.50. They are now all reduced to one price:

$5.00 Each.

These are the kind of coats that defy the chilliness of the worst of wintry weather and they're well and nicely made. Mostly fancy tweeds and curl cloths and some black Kerseys. The cloths are the kind you can depend on—splendid all-wool quality.

Take advantage of this special sale of coats.

Sizes 34 to 40 and any coat in this particular lot at $5.00.

A SPECIAL EXTRA SNAP FOR SMALL WOMEN

We have in stock a number of cloth coats in sizes to fit women up to 34 bust measure. They're worth all the way up to $12.00. Our special clearance price is $2.50.

Now is Your Time, Men, For a Good Fur Coat or Overcoat

Bought twelve to eighteen months ago, our stocks at the regular selling prices are 50% below actual value.

We will give you special clearing prices on all Men's and Boys' Overcoats and Men's Fur Coats.

STEPHAN BROS.

"GROCERIES"

That embraces a great many things, and a list would fill a newspaper. So we simply want to impress the fact that our Stock embraces all the lines needed in a home and usually carried in a Grocery.

We always make our prices well within the closest, reasonable margin.

GOODE & McKAY
"The People's Grocery"
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

CANNED GOODS!

I am often asked "What do you charge for Canned Tomatoes, Corn and Peas?" My answer is "I WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD"

Tomatoes, always the best brands 15c
Corn " " 12c
Peas " " 10c
Figs, new, - 10c or 3 lb for 25c

If you buy 25c worth or a sack of Sugar, you always get the best Redpath or St. Lawrence.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

CLEARING UP AFTER THE BIG SALE

Our Stock-Taking Sale was a huge success, and as is often the case, we have some Odds and Ends left that we will clear at quickly moving prices.

Sweeping Sale of balance of our Sweater Coats.

Boys' Overcoats going now at surprising reductions.

We have a big pile of short ends of all kinds of materials on one Remnant Table. Some good lengths for waists, dresses and coats at prices that mean swift selling.

See display of Misses' and Children's Winter Coats in window, all at reduced prices.

Sale of Comforters still on at reduced prices.

Travellers' samples and odd lots of Hosiery, Mitts, Gloves, Underwear, Toques, Scarves, and many needful winter garments at fraction of regular values.

Stock Taking brings to the front many lines that are useful to you and we make the price worth while to you to make room for the new goods coming in.

Come in and See and be convinced.

McBURNEY & CO.

Have You Started the New Yea Right?

BY RESOLVING TO SHO
OUR STOR

You will find here much t you, much that you need, all tionally low prices.

NEVER OVERLOOK BARGAIN

Everything we sell comes under heading.

THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRIC AND SERVICE.

Put us to the Test.

Butterick Quarterly

Complete forecast of the latest Par and New York fashions as interpret by exclusive Butterick Designers. 25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerto

NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

Mrs. Herman Doerr of Hanover, arrived home Monday from England where he has been recuperating for some time from injuries received. Pte. Doerr who is 23 years of age, enlisted at Walkerton on Sept. 15th 1915, in the 31th battalion, going Overseas in October 1915. He went to France in Jan. 1916 and went into the trenches after 10 days training at Havre. He was wounded on June 16th at St. Julien, receiving shrapnel in the back and arm. He then put in 3 weeks in a hospital at Boulogne and then went back to the firing line. He was wounded again in the severe fighting on hill 60, receiving a bullet in his left leg. His nerves were also shattered to some extent and he was sent to St. James Hospital, Liverpool, where he stayed about 3 months. He was then transferred to the Convalescent Hospital at Epsom, England, where [illegible] until he sailed for Canada [illegible]. He is home on 10 days [illegible], and expects to be discharg[illegible] about 3 months. Pte. Doerr [illegible] at Formosa. He was an [illegible] of the Knechtel Furniture [illegible] here up to about 4 years ago when he went to Cargill. Pte. Doerr says that in England they call the Canadians the "Billionaire Soldiers."

Mr. J. H. Adams has been appointed Chairman of the Public School Board for 1917. At the last meeting Inspector J. P. Hoag reported the work of the School to be of a high order. He congratulated the Board on the character of the accommodation provided and of the teaching at the school.

A meeting of the Grey County Secretaries of the Patriotic Fund held a meeting at Saugeen Junction last week and decided to ask Grey County Council to grant [illegible] a month to the Canadian Patriotic Fund during 1917.

At the Annual Meeting of the Hanover Fair, R. H. Richardson was re-elected president and S. B. Clarke, secretary-treasurer. The Fair dates for 1917 are Thursday and Friday Sept. 20 and 21st.

The teachers of South Grey have contributed over $300 to the Patriotic Fund. This is the result of a decision at the last convention, when it was agreed that each should give one [illegible] based on a year of 200 days.

[illegible] H. V. Rorke, second in command of the 20th battalion which has [illegible] France for the past couple of [illegible] [illegible]ntly mentioned in dis[illegible] [illegible] the field by [illegible] Rorke is the [illegible] Major Joseph [illegible] member for [illegible] Legislative As[illegible] [illegible] senior major of the [illegible] and for years had [illegible] civil service at [illegible] Major [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] has [illegible] past [illegible] and is [illegible] McFarland and [illegible] self. The 11th [illegible] petticus [illegible] now consists of 8 [illegible] is 2,000 strong. Major [illegible] resigned and six of the [illegible] officers, including Maj- [illegible] have gone with [illegible]

EDEN GROVE

There is Harry Thaw and Evelyn Thaw and other Thaws but this is what we call a January Thaw.

Messrs. Mac Scott and R. Clark were business visitors at Paisley last week.

Never mind the bear. Let us see your shadow at the box social Friday evening.

Some of our young men want to practice dancing so as not to be stepping on their partners' corns while doing the waltz act.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Perdue spent Sunday with friends in Cargill.

We hope Alick will not see his shadow Friday and go back again.

The young ladies are making an autograph quilt which will be sold at social Friday evening. The pillow will also be presented to the lucky ticket holder.

Mr. R. Donnelly shipped a car of cattle Saturday.

Last Thursday Mr. William Todd of the B. & B. dept. working on the Grand Trunk at Hamilton, along with two other men was working on a scaffold when it gave way. Mr. Todd who belongs to the Grove, came first, the other two falling on top of him. He is suffering from a badly bruised thigh and broken toe and is under doctor's care at Paris.

Mrs. Tennant and daughter Martha called on Paisley friends last week.

On Wednesday morning Mr. Robt. Keyes was moved from this station to the hospital at Guelph for treatment and passed away Sunday morning. The remains were brought here Monday noon and thence to his late home near Narva. The funeral will take place on Wednesday at one o'clock. The bereaved family have the sympathy of their friends in this vicinity.

There must be some old maids on the box social committee as we notice a hat song on the programme.

The many friends of Mr. Solomon Childs will be sorry to learn that he is seriously ill.

Thursday will be citizens night at the Epworth League. Mrs. Seiler handles the topic. It is hoped that a goodly number of our citizens will take advantage of the treat in store.

Senator J. J. Donnelly shipped a car of cattle from his farm Monday. Mr. P. O'Reilly shipped a car of four-legged Irishmen Tuesday. We took off our hat to them as they were nearly millionaires.

Yes, Tommy, there is lots of driving shed space, the church shed only a stone's throw from the school and the hotel sheds near by.

The Rev. Mr. Homer, Cargill, was in town last week calling [illegible] some of his [illegible].

[illegible] Sunday being Quarterly meeting Sunday, Sunday school will be at 9.30 a. m. and church service commence at 10.30 a. m.

A lively week. Between the cow sale, box social and Sunday [illegible] getting a hair cut. Things are going to be moving in the Grove alright.

Mr. Joseph Clancy of Cargill called on friends in the Grove Sunday.

Feb. 2nd—"For the love of Mike what are you doing up that telegraph pole Jimmy?" "I'm looking for the polar bear." "Come down and get ready for the box social."

Rev. Mr. Almack called on friends in town Monday.

A fellow with a Methodist head and Presbyterian feet can make it go but the Methodist feet will never go the tango.

Mr. John Seiler had the misfortune to fall and sprain his leg badly while running for a train.

On Tuesday Mr. Robert Wright, residing near Purdy's Church, received word of the death of his father at Glenella, Man. The remains will leave Winnipeg Wednesday and will probably arrive here Saturday.

Miss Lily Alexander was the guest of Walkerton friends Tuesday.

CHEPSTOW

Mr. Jos. Fritz who for the past half century has resided on his farm west of here has disposed of it, consisting of 156 acres to his son Ambrose for a price in the neighbourhood of $6500, and is arranging for a large sale shortly. Mr. Fritz is still undecided as to what point he will return, and is awaiting the recovery of his wife who for some time has been under the doctor's care, before making his decision.

We are sorry to report the death after a prolonged illness at her home in Owen Sound, of Margaret, second daughter of Angus McDonald a former resident of here.

Miss M. Schill of Formosa is on a week's visit to Mr. and Mrs. Massel.

Miss Melinda Commans is on an extended visit to relatives in Toronto.

A number from here attended the funeral at Walkerton and interment at Formosa on Monday of Jacob Waechter, who prior to retiring to Walkerton conducted the farm at present occupied by his son, Ralph.

Mrs. Jno. Commans spent the past week visiting her son Jim of St. Mike's and relatives at Toronto.

CARGILL

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Sparling of Goderich spent the week-end at the home of Mr. R. Sparling here.

Mr. G. F. Saunders made a business trip to Walkerton on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Keeling were in Listowel on Friday.

Mrs. Vansickle, (nee Miss Agnes Paul) of Swan River, Man., renewed acquaintances here on Saturday.

Mrs. McCutcheon and son of Prosperity, Sask. are visiting at the home of Mr. S. Cargill.

Mr. Joseph Clancy shipped a fine load of "Grunters" on Tuesday.

Mrs. John Seeley and son of Harbour Springs, Mich. are visiting relatives here.

Mr. F. H. Smith of the Royal Bank staff visited in Walkerton on Monday.

Mrs. D. Greenway of Eden Grove visited friends here on Friday.

The Red Cross tea which was held at Mr. Jas. Garland's on Tuesday was well attended.

Mr. M. L. Ziegler had the misfortune to fall while skating on the rink on Friday night and hurt his ankle. He is now compelled to use a cane. We all hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. W. D. Cargill returned from Toronto on Monday night.

Mrs. John Hall Jr. who has been visiting relatives in Emsdale returned to her home here on Monday.

Mr. Wm. Knox of Pinkerton is assisting Mr. Hanmore at the livery barn this week.

A number of the ladies were out on a snowshoeing expedition on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Henry Sparling sold a fine team of horses to Mr. Geo. Craig of Paisley.

PINKERTON

Rev. Mr. Gale spent last Friday in Paisley.

Mr. Wm. Trotter Sr. was quite ill last week with pneumonia and we are glad to know that he is recovering.

Miss Mary Desmond of Toronto who has been quite ill for some time came home last week to recuperate.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McRae of Paisley spent Sunday with Mrs. McRae's mother, Mrs. Murray.

Rev. Mr. Gale and Mr. Thos. Birrell went to Toronto on Monday to attend the Social Service Congress held in that city this week.

The Red Cross Society here packed and shipped the following articles to Headquarters last week:—16 Hospital shirts, 4 suits pyjamas, 12 Surgical shirts, 40 Huckaback towels, 3 pillows, 2 quilts. For Hospital use:—2 old table covers, 1 old sheet, various old white articles. Soldiers' Comforts:—10 Khaki shirts with collars, 8 Khaki shirts without collars, 58 pr. socks, 12 boxes of stationery donated by a member.

CLAMIS

Miss Flossie McLennan resumed her school duties this week.

Miss Verna Hock has returned home from Kincardine.

Miss Laura Wilson of Paisley was a Sunday visitor at her home on 14th con. Greenock.

Miss Lottie and Mr. Jack McNally returned to their home in Sarnia on Friday after a month's visit with relatives and friends here.

Mr. Frank McLennan was in Kincardine on Saturday for a load of coal.

Mr. James Gilchrist who worked for the past three years for Mr. Archie Bell, 10th con. is home now.

Mr. Robert Keyes of 12th con Greenock, was taken to Guelph Hospital last week, passed away on Sunday. The remains were brought to his home on Monday. His sister, Mrs. Rhody Cooper, passed away at the Walkerton Hospital on Friday. To all the bereaved ones in this their double bereavement, deepest sympathy is extended.

Miss Jean Davidson has returned to her home in Beamsville.

The Glamis Red Cross Workers' Society began work on November 14th, 1916. Mrs. Deehan is the capable and energetic president of the society and Mrs. Dave Robertson, treasurer. The following will show money collected and donations for the two months, Nov. 14—Jan. 15:—36 members at $1 each, $36.00; proceeds from tea given by Mrs. Cunningham Nov. 14th, $9.20; proceeds of lecture given by Rev. Gilmore, $25.15. Donations as follows:—Mr. McCauley $2.00; Capt McKinnon [illegible]; Rev. Ecker 50c; Miss Symons 40c; Mr. Russell 50c; Mr. Doupley 25c; Mr. F. Walpole 25c; Mr. T. Webster 25c, Miss M. Kirkton 25c; I. O. O. F. Lodge $10.00; [illegible] Twp. Council $35.00; Kincardine Tp. Council $[illegible]. Donations as follows:—[illegible] Robert Russel, cotton for packing [illegible] pillows; Mrs. Deehan, flannel for [illegible] covers, 1 pillow; Mrs. Cunningham, cotton; Mrs. McKeown, flannel; Mrs. McLure, 1 pair socks. The Society forwarded to headquarters at Toronto as follows:—3 pillows; 7 dozen pillow covers; 1 dozen towels; 1½ dozen bottle covers; 30 suits pyjamas; 6 pair bed socks; 51 pair socks; 6 trench caps. The Society is looking for more members and would receive gladly any contribution given them. They meet fortnightly in the basement of the I. O. O. F. hall which has been kindly given to them by the Society for their meetings.

Laura Cunningham, Sec'y.

SOLWAY

Mr. Jas. Crawford is moving his household effects to Walkerton this week.

La Grippe has found a number of victims in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat. McGarity have received word from their son John, saying that he is ill in a hospital in France.

Mr. Robert Cunningham of Burgoyne was renewing acquaintances in this vicinity last week.

A number of the neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Crawford on Thursday evening last and spent a most enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marshall visited friends in this vicinity on Sunday.

Mr. Dave Coates and little Miss Mabel Craig spent the week-end with friends in Durham.

COUNTY COUNCIL

(Continued from page 1.)

and many thought it was an expensive undertaking whereas it really is not. If it was understood, he was sure no municipality would oppose it.

Mr. McDonald, Kinloss, moved the question be shelved until after the war. He thought that no doubt the Good Roads would be adopted but it was time to consider it then and not enter into any large undertaking during the war. He thought it would cost from $5000 to $8000 a mile and some people would not get as much benefit as others. He admitted that it would be a good thing for towns and villages and had doubts about the townships.

Mr. Douglas, Hepworth, pointed out that the government made estimates based on large experience and that for a county like Bruce it would cost from $1000 to $2000 per mile.

Mr. Kastner, (Wiarton), has larger interests in Townships than in towns, and knew it was a good move for all. Many other counties had adopted it and not one of them would go back to the old way. We had sent representatives to the meetings of the Good Roads Association, some of them strongly opposed to the movement, but every one of them came back and reported in favor of it when they understood it and found from representatives of other counties how well it worked out.

Mr. William McDonald, M. P. P., was present and, at request of Council, addressed them. He strongly advocated Good Roads, and that the travelling public should be taken care of in this way. No member should take the narrow view and see it only from the standpoint of how it affected every member of his township, but should take the broad view—the greatest good to the greatest number. The money now being paid was out of the third $1,400,000 Government had raised for this purpose. The County better get their share. There may be no more raised.

Messrs. Case (Elderslie), Brown (Chesley), and McDonald (Tiverton), all strongly urged the adoption of Good Roads, pointed out that the Government paid 40% of the cost of construction and 20% of maintenance of these roads. That the statute labour on such roads was available for other roads in a township, and that there was no use waiting until after the war. The money was raised now by the Government, and if we did not start now we would not be ready until some time after the war ended. That if we started now we would be in shape to go on at once after the war, and thus help find employment for labour at a time when it would be badly wanted.

It was finally decided to leave the question over until the June Session and in the meantime to send Messrs. Christie, Willoughby and Johnston (Bruce), to the Good Roads Association to get all possible information.

At the request of Messrs. Willoughby and Rowand a committee was again appointed to investigate the bridge on the 10th Con. of Brant, to see if it is a County bridge.

Mr. John Rowland entertained the Council at the rooms of the Young Ladies for the benefit of the Red Cross and Warden Izzard announced that it had been his intention to entertain Council at a supper but he thought they might have too much of a good thing, so he would, instead, donate the cost of a supper to the Young Ladies.

Wonderful Invention -The New Edison

It is not a talking machine. It is a wonderful invention which baffles detection from the original.

Superiority of the New Edison
NO NEEDLES TO CHANGE
NO PARTIALLY REPRODUCED MUSIC
INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORDS

No unevenness in playing, no harsh, discordant qualities, no shortened records.

Won't you please call or write for further information about this new invention. I shall esteem the privilege of giving you a free demonstration at your home.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER - WALKERTON

The Central Gro

Fish

Fresh Frozen and Salted Herrings. Haddies. Fillets and Smelts.

Meats

Pickled Pork, Bacon, Bologna, Cooked Ham.

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

Winter Footwear

The Latest Styles and the Best Qualities. No misrepresentation here. Repair department in connection.

C. PETTEPLACE

Assessor Wante

The undersigned will receive applications for the office of Assessor of Township of Brant for the year 191 Salary $125.00, to include posta Applications to be placed in bands of the Clerk before noo Monday, the 5th day of Febr 1917.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 7 | WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, FEBRUARY 15th 1917 | $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

A GUARANTEED
HOT WATER BOTTLE

YOU NEED ONE—every home will find a Hot Water Bottle one of the best investments, as there are many times when the prompt application of heat is the best immediate treatment for many ailments.

We have a guaranteed bottle that has given our customers the best of satisfaction, and we believe it a little better than any other of similar quality.

Combination attachment to use as Fountain Syringe, sold separately.

Everything in Rubber Goods at

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks | Phone 35 | C. P. R. Ticket Agency

50c.
Buys a Box of Butterfly Chocolates
A Fine Assortment
Other price Boxes
10c to $1.50
A.P. SIEVERIGHT
The Rexall Store

BOOKS
STATIONERY
WALL PAPER
OFFICE SUPPLIES
McCrum & Co.

People aren't fooled by words these days. They want facts. There are plenty of facts behind

Regal Shoes
National Style

Backed by real leather and honest workmanship.
Sold by
Ramsey
The Shoeman

Our Semi-Annual Slack Season Sale
Starts Saturday, Feb 17
Ends " " 24

16 Suits and 16 Overcoats will be Sold at a $5 00 Cut

$28.00	Suits at	$23.00
27.00	"	22.00
26.00	"	21.00
25.00	"	20.00
24.00	"	19.00
23.00	"	18.00
22.00	"	17.00
21.00	"	16.00
20.00	"	15.00

Overcoats Cut the Same
Best of Trimmings and Workmanship Guaranteed.

Remember
This is a chance to save at least $7.00 on your Spring Suit and Overcoat, as Spring Goods will be high.

20 per cent Off All Winter Wear
Sweater Coats, Caps, Heavy Odd Pants, Mitts, Gloves, Work Shirts, Sox, Etc., Etc.
Watch for window display.

Only 7 Days' Sale! Don't Miss It!

G. T. ROURKE
"Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

News About Town

The Catholic ladies held the last euchre of the season last night.

Miss Emma Latchford is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Lynch, at Guelph.

Mr. Andrew Rae, well-known Brant farmer, is reported to be seriously ill.

Mr. David Robertson has been confined to the house by illness the past week.

Peter Livingston, an elderly farmer of Eastnor Tp. was admitted to the House of Refuge on Friday.

Mr. Roy Moore, a young farmer of Alberta, is visiting at the home of his uncle, Mr. Thos. Cunningham.

Mrs. Tony Zittel and two children of Lethbridge, who have been visiting Mrs. Zettler's mother, Mrs. Montag, since Christmas, left for their home to-day.

+ + +

Wanted

All kinds of scrap iron. 60 cents a cwt. cash. Walkerton Foundry.

+ + +

Making Good Progress

Mrs. D. Ellinghausen, who underwent a serious operation at Bruce County Hospital last Thursday morning, is reported to be progressing splendidly.

+ + +

McCarty—Hinsperger

Miss Bella Hinsperger, a former Walkerton lady, who has resided at Saskatoon lately, was married on February 6th to Mr. McCarty of Regina. Mrs. McCarty is a sister of Ex Warden A. E. McNab of Walkerton.

+ + +

"Some" Christmas Dinner

Mr. Henry Williams received a brief letter the other day from Victor Bell, who is a prisoner of War in Germany. He gave his Christmas Menu, which included:—Sauerkraut, cabbage and a ladle of soup.

+ + +

Patriotic Concert

A Patriotic Concert will be given in the Town Hall, by the children of the town under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. on Friday, Feb. 23rd. There will be fancy drills, choruses, tableaux etc. The plan will be on at McCrum's on and after Feb. 21st. Admission 25c. Reserved seats 35c.

+ + +

Walkerton Nurse For Overseas

Many Walkerton friends will be glad to learn that Miss Edith Jolliffe, formerly Superintendent of the Bruce County Hospital, was accepted recently as a nursing sister, and left last Saturday for Overseas. She will be connected with the Queen Alexandria's Imperial Military Nursing Service.

+ + +

Mr. Walker's Condition Serious

His many friends here will regret to learn that Rev. D. A. Walker's condition is very serious. Mr. Walker, who is suffering from nervous break-down and heart-trouble, has been removed from Galt Hospital where he was a patient the past month, to the parsonage at Preston. No one is permitted to see him except the nurse in charge.

+ + +

Twenty-three Dead

Mr. Robt. Irwin returned on Friday from Fort William where he went earlier in the week to see about the horses which were killed in the railway smash. He reports that so far twenty-three animals had died, at least two others may die and a number of others were injured. Mr. Hank Irwin went on to Saskatoon.

+ + +

Operator A Bad Speller

An Edna, Sask. man is wondering why his wife telegraphed her congratulation and best wishes in response to a telegram of his. He had engaged a berth ahead of time and was comfortably fixed. At one of the stations an aged woman boarded the cars, but the berths were all taken. The Edna man's chivalry came to her rescue, and he gave the old lady his berth, while he sat up all night in the smoking compartment. The next morning he sent his wife a telegram, which when it reached her read as follows:—"Gave birth to an old woman last night. Am all in."

KNOX PASTOR WILL STAY

Gives Reasons for Declining Call to Big Church Across the Line—Will Help Keep the Home Fires Burning.

Rev Thomas Wilson, pastor of Knox Church who received a flattering offer to accept the pastorate of a large Presbyterian Church at Williamsport, Pa., announced to his Congregation on Sunday morning that he had decided to decline the call. His decision was received by his Congregation with much satisfaction. Mr. Wilson briefly outlined his reasons for and against accepting the call, his main reason for deciding to remain in Walkerton being that he did not care to leave Canada and the British Empire in these momentous times. He dealt with the points in favor of accepting the call first. (1) He had been here 14 years and he did not believe in long pastorates. (2) The call was to a growing Field of service. (3) He would be going to a great church, the American Presbyterian Church being strong and aggressive, its men furnishing the outstanding leaders in world Presbyterianism. (4) It was a call to the Eastern States to a portion of the United States where the people are conservative, where ideals such as ours prevail largely. But he had decided not to accept because (1) while he had been here fourteen years, they had been years of unbroken peace. No man could be happier with his congregation than he had been. (2) He did not care to leave the Canadian Church while the need for workers here was great and the Church was calling for more men. (3) He did not care at a time like this to leave his country where he felt that every citizen should be on hand to do his duty. Two weeks ago the great American Eagle, sitting on the fence, had raised its wings and fluttered. Would it fly off on the right side or would it settle down again? (4) The speaker took great pride in the Honor Roll of the Church. He had helped to recruit these boys. He had wished them Godspeed and told them he hoped to be here to welcome them home again. He intended to stay and help "Keep the Home Fires Burning".

Cuts Filled Again

Tuesday's storm again filled up the cuts on the roads and railroads, threatening to paralize traffic. The afternoon train from the north became stuck in the snow beyond Cargill and arrived here seven hours late. Several rural mail routes in South Bruce were also tied up as a result of Tuesday's blow.

+ + +

A Live Town

Wingham has organized a Board of Trade which is right up on its toes all the time. At a meeting of the Board held last week one of the members, who has been investigating the possibilities of manufacturing lead pencils, made a very thorough report, and at the same meeting a telegram was read from the president, who was in Chicago on business at the time, reporting that he was interviewing big manufacturers there who intend starting Canadian branches, and was meeting with some encouragement. Wingham folks appear to have the spirit that makes a town go ahead.

+ + +

Had A Good Year

Reports presented at the Annual meeting of the Baptist and Christian congregation last Wednesday evening indicate that the past year has been a prosperous one for the church and the various departments of the work have all had an encouraging year. The Congregation passed a hearty resolution of appreciation of the faithful service of the pastor, Rev. G. C. Rock during the year. Officers were appointed for 1917 as follows:—Fin. Sec., E. Walford; Rec. Sec., A. S. Royce; Corr. Sec., C. S. Stephan; Treasurer, R. Richardson; Miss. Sec., H. A. Stephan; Board of Management (reduced from 14 members to 5) James Whitehead, Chas. Petteplace, H. A. Stephan, E. Walford, R. Richardson.

+ + +

The Cold Snap

With the snow piled high in every direction and the mercury trying to hide below the zero mark, we have been having some real winter in this part of the world the past week. The cold snap started off on Friday morning when local thermometers showed as low as 28 below. For the next four days the frost king did not ease up a particle, the coldest being early Monday morning when some thermometers ducked to 32 below. Common thermometers are inclined to exaggerate but the self-registering Govt. instrument at N. P. Schmidt's fruit farm, may be depended to tell the truth although not situated in so cold a spot as thermometers down town near the river. Mr. Schmidt's showed 21 below zero on Monday morning, the coldest in years. On Friday morning the mercury went down to 16 below. The lowest temperature registered by this thermometer last winter was 17 degrees below.

Brothers Meet In England

Adam and Philip Dennis of the 160th Batt'n, write home that they had a visit at Bramshott Camp from their brother, Norman, who was on ten day's leave in England after spending fourteen months in the trenches.

+ + +

Recruits Wanted

The 256th Battalion, Railway Construction, wants teamsters, labourers, pile drivers, men accustomed to pile driving. The physical requirement is lowered for such things as eyesight. Flat feet is no objection. A. Stapton 36 Ontario St. Stratford, is looking for recruits in this section.

+ + +

Bread And Milk Social

A bread-and-milk social was given by the Ladies' Association of the Methodist Church on Friday night at Mr. Wm. Long's, Durham Road. A novel feature was that each person had to go armed with a bowl and spoon. The people were taken from the town in sleighs. All enjoyed the informal good time arranged by the ladies. About $10 was realized.

+ + +

Off To The Front

Barney Ettell and Oswald Lumley who were home from Toronto last week on their farewell visit before leaving for Overseas with a special draft of the University Company, were each presented with $5 by Mayor Johnston on behalf of the Town Council. Both boys have tried several times to get into khaki but persistence won and the boys will now have a chance to show their good fighting qualities.

+ + +

Gordon Hogg Improving

Mr. John A. Hogg received favorable news on Monday, of his son, Pte. Gordon Hogg, who has been hovering between life and death at Perth, Scotland, where he was taken down with pneumonia and spinal meningitis seven weeks ago. The cable, sent by his daughter, Marion, who had just arrived at Perth, states that Gordon is "still progressing favorably. Good hopes."

+ + +

An Appreciative Reader

Here is the sort of appreciation that makes a publisher feel good. A Telescope reader, Mr. J. S. Wilhelm, sends five dollars to renew his subscription to July, 1919, and adds:—I get the Telescope every Sunday morning and assure you it is always a welcome visitor. Would write a letter for publication but could only repeat what better correspondents send you. Wishing the Telescope every success etc.

+ + +

Have Hogs To Sell

As the price of hogs keeps climbing higher and higher the farmers in this locality are fortunate enough to have a fair supply of porkers on hand to sell. One farmer informed the Telescope last week that he was feeding sixty-five hogs and another that he has eighty on hand. Few men of course are so well supplied. Feed is high but the farmer with the hogs is certainly reaping a handsome profit. Alex Waechter was in on Thursday with a load which he got over $700 for.

+ + +

Removing From South Line

Mr. T. H. O'Neill, one of the stalwart pioneers of the South Line, is preparing to leave his old farm which he sold last year to Mr. T. Blake, and will retire to a smaller property on the Gravel Road, a mile west of Hanover. In his 70th year, Mr. O'Neill is as active as most men in middle life and although he intends taking things easy from now on, will retain a bit of stock on his new fifty acres to keep him occupied. As he is moving only a short distance, Mr. O'Neill is really not leaving the old neighbourhood where he has lived the last sixty-three years and where he is held in the highest respect as a good neighbour and man of sound principles.

+ + +

Oddfellows' Big Night

Walkerton Oddfellows enjoyed a visit from their brethren of Hanover Lodge on Friday night, Forty-five members braved the zero weather and drove over in sleighs. The visitors put on the first degree for Walkerton in good style, the work of Bro. R. H. Richardson as Past Grand being particularly good. Afterwards the Walkerton Second Degree team initiated three of the visiting brethren into the mysteries of that degree. The work was put on in their usual good style, which elicited much favorable comment from the visitors. The local degree team consisted of the following members:—N. G., Norman Hiscox; V. G., H. G. Hunter; R. S. N. G., T. Pye; L. S. N. G., P. Bremner; R. S. N. G., D. Wallace; L. S., James Crawford; Conductor, F. Spearan; Warden, T. Boss; I. G., John Crawford; Instructor, F. Godwin; R. S. S., G. T. Rourke; L. S. S., C. Reichenbach; P. G., C. Petteplace; S. S. Justus Holm, S. Earwaker, B. Kennedy, Frank Bolden, Amos Leech, N. M. Norrish. Afterwards refreshments were served and the brethren spent a sociable hour before dispersing. Gramophone selections by Bro. R. L. Gibson and a comic song by Bro. Wells were much appreciated.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Miss Cora Rife is visiting friends in Toronto.

Latest styles in Wedding Stationery at Telescope.

"Keep the Home Fires Burning." Yes, we will if we can get the fuel.

Mr. Chas. Madden of Chepstow left Saturday on a visit to Chicago.

Mr. W. M. Shaw went to Woodstock and Hamilton on business first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Schultz of Wiarton are visiting their son, Mr. Fred Schultz.

Mrs. Chas. Fuller of Bolton is visiting her sister Mrs. David Thompson for a few weeks.

Mr. John Bickle underwent a couple of minor operations at Bruce County Hospital last week.

For one week commencing Feb. 15th, snaps in canned vegetables at W. G. Searle's. See ad

Mr. P. J. O'Connor of Preston spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Connor.

Mrs. Wm. Bourke, who has been visiting at Mr. L. H. McNamara's, returned to North Bay yesterday.

Pte. John Stewart of Chesley was reported among those who died of wounds in Monday's casualty list.

Miss Rhea Baker who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baker, left for Regina on Tuesday.

Mayor Johnston went to Harriston Monday night to pay his official visit to the Masonic Lodge there as D. D. G. M.

Write Michigan Carbon Works, Detroit, for free book and particulars about their Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer.

Miss Marcella Weiler left on Friday to resume her studies at St. John's College, Kitchener, after several weeks' illness.

Town Council met Monday night and adjourned until Friday owing to the absence of Mayor Johnston, who was out of town.

Those sanguine persons who in Aug. 1914 started to clip the war summary from the daily paper would have quite a pile now if they had kept it up.

Vegetables are scarce and very hard to get at present. Our prices on canned goods means a saving on every can. Enquire at the Central Grocery.

The Methodist Sunday School gave a ten dollar collection for the Sailor's Missions on Sunday. This amount will furnish two new travelling libraries.

Ernest L. Hudson, Editor of the Beamsville Express writes:—"This has been some winter down here—twice as much as usual for this section."

Miss (Kit) C. Alice Price who has been teaching at Oakville, has quit the teaching profession for the present owing to ill-health and has gone to Blyth to recuperate.

Mr. Francis Freiberger of the Catholic Seminary, Montreal, was home on a visit last week. Mr. Freiberger is studying for the priesthood and acting as Instructor in Italian at the same time.

The House of Refuge Committee of the County Council held a meeting here last Thursday. The report of the last Government Indicates that a lot of alterations are necessary about the building.

Stan Johnston of the 198th Can. Buffs, Toronto, has been home to spend his last leave with his parents Mr. and Mrs. David Johnston of Dunkeld. He was in town visiting his uncle, Mayor Johnston on Monday.

Daniel Knechtel, head of the big furniture factory in Hanover, was married about the New Year to a Mrs. Pfeiffer of Toledo Ohio. They are enjoying their honeymoon among the orange groves of California. Mr. Knechtel is about 73 years old.

Miss Mary Frame of LaVallee, Ont. and Mrs. W. G. Miller of Teeswater and little daughters, Vera and Margaret spent the past few days visiting their uncle Mr. John Frame, and are now visiting friends and relatives near their old home on the 8th con.

Miss Annie Ferguson, Nursing Sister, who is on duty at the Military Hospital, Wolsey Barracks, London, was home on week-end leave visiting her parents, Chief and Mrs. R. B. Ferguson. Nurse Ferguson expects to go Overseas shortly. She wore the smart-looking military uniform of the nurses while home, and has the rank of senior lieutenant.

Mr. G. B. Miller, who has been keeping store at Southey, Sask. for several years, sold his business last Fall, and along with Mrs. Miller took an extended trip through the Southern States. In a letter to a Walkerton Mr. Miller states that he is now back in Winnipeg. Mr. Miller is a well-known in Walkerton, having been in the jewelery business here for a number of years.

Renewed your subscription yet?

Miss Pearl Rife spent Sunday with friends at Paisley.

Mr. Wm. McLellan of West Toronto was a week-end visitor here.

Miss Olive Zettler of Neustadt is visiting Miss Edna Kahn of Brant.

Dr. Houston of Paisley was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Robert Smith of Hanover was in town on business several days this week.

Mrs. Jas. Fairbairn left Monday to spend a couple of weeks with friends in Wiarton.

Miss Adeline Flatbrook leaves to-day for Oshawa where she will attend the Bishop Bethune College.

Mr. A. Austin and daughter Bell of Imperial, Sask., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams last week.

Truax's mill has been shut down for several days this week owing to a break in the main shaft of the driving machinery.

Major Moffat, of the 160th, who has been laid up for a couple of weeks at Bramshott Camp, is visiting Scotland on sick leave.

Mr. Wm Trotter, who has been confined to his house by illness the past two weeks, is reported to be considerably improved.

Some real snaps are offered in the Telescope advertising columns this week. You will be the loser if you fail to look them up.

George Hyslop, an old Walkerton boy, a nephew of Miss Joanna Hyslop, enlisted at Edmonton recently, and is now in England with his Battalion.

Mrs. Wm Lane, who has been visiting relatives in Walkerton and vicinity the past two months, left on Tuesday for her home at Grand View, Man.

Mrs. Joseph Lindsay who underwent a serious operation at the Bruce County Hospital last Thursday morning is reported to be doing as well as might be expected.

Several local papers in this district were published three or four days late last week through the non-arrival of their supply of newspaper owing to the storm.

Fire destroyed the large wholesale and retail grocery and fruit establishment of the Good Co. at Lethbridge, in which Miss Hilaire Schumacher is engaged as head book-keeper.

Miss Mosack and Mr. Elroy Hergott were the prize-winners at the Catholic ladies Euchre party last Wednesday evening. Miss Lambertus and Mr. Herb Weiler got the booby prizes.

Mr. Ed. Pengelly had an interesting letter the other day from Pte. George Wells of the 160th. Among other things he mentions a visit to the Camp by two Walkerton boys, John Ernest and Frank Oliver, who have been in the trenches. Both boys were looking remarkably fine.

Miss Annie Robertson of Southampton, who is at the Bruce County Hospital recovering from a very serious operation, received a beautiful birthday reminder on Monday from her friends of the W. M. S. of Knox Church in the form of a nice note accompanied by a lovely bouquet of flowers.

Miss Jessie Ross, daughter of Rev. Dr. Ross of Norwich, formerly pastor of Walkerton Methodist Church, is visiting at Mr. L. H. Benton's. Miss Ross, who is a Domestic Science Specialist, has been teaching at Underwood in connection with the recent winter course conducted there by the Agricultural Dept.

The regular business meeting of the I. O. D. E. will be held in the armories on Tuesday evening, Feb. 20th, at half past seven. As the election of officers for the coming year will take place, all members are urged to be present. This meeting will be entirely a business one, but the work of surgical supplies will be resumed on Tuesday, Feb. 27th, and will continue as formerly.

Three rinks of Durham curlers visited Walkerton last Wednesday and in the afternoon and evening games finished 1 up. The return match was played here Wednesday of this week, when four rinks of Walkertonians came over to turn the tables, but in more tight games Durham was again up, by 2 on the 4 rinks. The visitors are good sportsmen and all thoroughly enjoyed the two meets.—Durham Review.

Mrs. H. L. Fountain of Druid, Saskatchewan has been spending a few days at the home of Mr. D. K. Smith. Within these last few months Mrs. Fountain has been doubly bereaved, her youngest brother, Corp. W. R. Coleman was killed in Sept. last by a Sniper, also her father died after about six months' illness a few days after Mrs. Fountain's return to her old home at Cookstown. Dr. Herbert B. Coleman of Palmerston is a brother.

New House To Rent

With all modern improvements, Apply to J. J. Schumacher.

+ + +

Post Office Figures

The Postmaster General's report for the past year gives the total amount of business done by some of the post offices in this district as follows:—Walkerton, $10,150 87; Hanover $10,215.62; Paisley, $1,869.29; Port Elgin. $3,421.40; Southampton, $4,462.66; Kincardine, $8,252.74; Mildmay, $2,421.90; Teeswater, $3,102.24; Chesley, $6,538.01.

+ + +

Carrick Ladies' Good Work

The North Carrick Red Cross Workers held their last meeting at the home of Mrs. George Scott last Wednesday evening, Feb. 7th, where they packed their work of the past few weeks. Altogether this little band has shipped 69 pairs of sox, 12 hospital shirts, and 14 pyjama suits since New Years and are still busy sewing and knitting.

+ + +

C. P. R. Train Service

C. P. R. Train Service, Walkerton—Toronto. Leave Walkerton 6.30 a. m. arrive at Toronto 11.35 a. m. Leave Walkerton 3.10 p. m. arrive in Toronto 8.10 p. m. Leave Toronto 5.23 p. m. arrive in Walkerton 10.35 p. m. Afternoon train from Walkerton connects at Bolton with train for Winnipeg and all western points. Tickets and berth reservations at Hunter's Drug Store. 6—7

+ + +

High School Board

The High School Board met to reorganize for 1917 last Wednesday night. Mr. H. M. Lay was re-elected Chairman, and Mr. M. G. Dippel reappointed Secretary. Dr. Stalker and Mr. Thos. Dixon were named convenors of the two Standing Committees, Property and Educational. The members of the Board for the coming year, besides the above mentioned, are:—Dr. Halladay, W. M. Shaw, O. E. Klein, L. H. McNamara, Geo. D. McKay.

+ + +

32nd Officers To Meet

Along with the announcement that the Militia Department is considering the reorganization of the Militia to provide 25,000 to 50,000 troops for home defence, comes a notice from Major Hay of Paisley, senior officer of the 32nd Bruce Battalion calling a meeting of all the officers of the County Battalion at the Armoury here next Friday. The officers here do not know the purpose of the meeting but it no doubt has something to do with the proposed reorganization of the Militia.

+ + +

Revisits Boyhood Scenes

When Alex Austin, a well-to-do Saskatchewan farmer, stepped off the C. P. R. noon train last week, it was the first time in forty years that he had revisited the town which he left as a barefoot boy. He was twelve years of age when he left Walkerton, having worked that summer on the farm for Mr. Henry Williams, East Ward, who lived at that time on the 6th con. Brant. Mr. Williams was at the station to meet him last week and although he had not seen him since he was a lad of twelve, he picked him out in an instant from among the crowd. The old friends had a great time swapping reminiscences. Mr. Austin owns a fine half-section in Saskatchewan. He has done well and expects to retire from active farming some of these times.

+ + +

Former Riversdale Girl

Many old friends of the family in this district learned with deep regret of the death at Owen Sound on the 22nd ult. of Miss Margaret Jane McDonald, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angus McDonald, formerly of Riversdale, and niece of Mr. Joseph Quinlan of Chepstow. The deceased who was in her twentieth year had not been in her usual health and spirits, but made no complaint and did not give up her work as stenographer in a law office until the 18th ult. Three days later she retired to her bed from which she never rose. About noon the following day she became unconscious and remained so until she passed peacefully away shortly after four o'clock the next morning. Of a quiet, reserved disposition, she won her way into a large circle of friends who will not soon forget their one time companion. Beside her sorrowing parents she is survived by one sister, Miss Annie McDonald, teacher at New Hamburg, at present at home, and one brother, Thomas, at home. The funeral took place to St. Marys Church on the 24th ult., where Mass was said by Rev. Father Sharpe. Rev. Father McNulty preached a very touching sermon in the presence of a large number of friends who had gathered to pay their last respects.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. D. Wilton and family take this means of thanking their neighbors and friends for their kindness since the sad message of the death of their soldier son, Pte. A. E. Wilton.

160TH BOYS ARE TICKLED

To Get Going to France as a Unit—Interesting Letter Tells of Training that Bruce Battalion is Getting at Bramshott.

There is great rejoicing among the members of the 160th Batt'n at Bramshott Camp over the orders that the Battalion goes to the Front as a fighting unit. The idea of being in the real fighting together suits the boys right down to the ground, although they would have been glad even to go as a Pioneer Batt'n, as the first orders indicated, rather than be broken up. Here at home in Bruce the news is received with mixed feelings. Mingled with satisfaction that the Bruce boys will present a united front to the foe is the dread of the casualty list that may follow if the Battalion go into the heavy fighting together. No one doubts that the 160th Bruce are the equal in pluck and personnel to to the Empire's best and wherever they may be sent, they will give a good account of themselves.

Writing to his father Major John Henderson, Lieut. Herb Henderson of the 160th states that the Battalion is slated for the 13th Brigade, in the new Fifth Canadian Division, and will be brigaded with the 124th, 128th, and 202nd Batt'ns.

Letters received on yesterday's British mail state that the Battalion has had a hard time fighting the mumps epidemic and there are still a large number of cases.

A good idea of what the 160th Boys are doing now at Bramshott Camp may be gleaned from the following extracts of a letter received yesterday:—We are still in quarantine but we get out to-morrow. We are having some hard stiff training now. The whole battalion was out in a sham battle last night and had some fine experiences and a good time. I was in charge of a lot of scouts and had to walk about 20 miles. We were out from 2 to 10 p. m.. J——, was one of my scouts and he certainly makes a good one. He is a great fellow for taking prisoners. I thought he was captured last night for he stayed out scouting for over half an hour and came back with valuable information of the enemy's position. We were tired and stiff this morning so we had a sort of half holiday. Our weather is still very cold but we have no snow whatever. We have to wear great coats even in the daytime. They say this is the coldest winter they have had since 1881. It is far more agreeable than the sloppy wet weather we had the first month we were here. Dave Sieling was here for a few days. He belongs to the 44th now and is in some reserve. His nerves are rather bad but he looks fine.

Strong And Growing Company

The Farmers' Central Mutual Fire Insurance Co. held its annual meeting at the Company's office here on Saturday afternoon. The report of the directors showed a very gratifying increase in business, the company now carrying the largest amount of fire insurance of any mutual Company in the Province. Fire losses were heavy totalling $33,709.83. The directors' report points out that the past year has been the most disastrous on record for farm losses in Western Ontario. During the year 2801 policies were issued covering property insured to the extent of $4,782,253 an increase for the year of 406 in membership, and $1,234,010 in property insured. The total number of policies now in force is 7687 and the total amount of insurance in force is $15,702,939. In the past year no buildings protected with lightning rods were damaged or destroyed by lightning. Commenting on the dates assessed by the Company of Directors' report states:—In considering the increased farm property values, the increased taxation, the increased cost of all material required in the business, the large payments made for losses under our liberal policy conditions as shown in our yearly reports, it is astonishing that the rates of our company could be kept as low as they have averaged for many years. The capable manager Mr. J. J. Schumacher, whose good work is largely responsible for the success of the Company was reappointed and the two retiring directors, Messrs James Tolton and Valentine Fischer were re-elected. The Board of Directors is now composed of:—President James Tolton; Vice-pres., Wm. Rowand; Sec., J. J. Schumacher; Directors, Val. Fischer, M. Bilger, H. W. Monk, R. J. Cleary, Auditors M. G. Dippel and Jas. A. Lamb were reappointed.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, Feb. 14)

Hay, per ton.	8.00	to	10.00
Oats, per bu.	63	to	63
Wheat " "	1.55	to	1.55
Barley, " "	85	to	90
Buckwheat "	1.00	to	1.00
Potatoes, per bag.	2.25	to	2.25
Hogs, per cwt.	13.75	to	13.75
Butter, per lb.	33	to	33
Eggs, per doz.	40	to	40

CURRENT COMMENT

A navy surgeon of twenty-five years experience, we are told, asserts that men enjoy better health on board ship than they do on shore, largely because of the absence of dust from the ocean air. Get on board, boys, and escape the dangers of land.

◆

British organized labor has spoken once more on the war, and it is for war to a finish. It gives the government every needed support and encouragement, notwithstanding the whine of a few pacifists. Canadian labor can hardly make a protest against any effort made by our Government to help in the fight. The men who are protesting against registration are not representing British feeling.

◆

India will be represented at the War Cabinet which Sir Robert Borden is to attend. The India Office announces that the representatives of India to assist the Secretary of State for India at the special sitting of the War Cabinet will be Sir James Meston, K. C. S. I., Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, and Sir Satyendra Prassano Sinha. The Secretary for India will also be assisted by His Highness the Maharaja of Bikanir, G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E. The Maharajah of Bikanir is one of the most progressive of Indian ruling chiefs. He raised and maintains the famous Bikanir Camel Corps and saw service with it in China during the Boxer troubles. He has served in France and been mentioned in dispatches.

◆

The United States is building up quite a big merchant marine, which should help Britain when the war is over. On the first day of this year, according to builders' returns to the United States bureau of navigation, the steel tonnage building or under contract was the largest in the history of the country. The vessels were in number 403 and their gross tonnage 17,495,601. The new ships at present being produced do not include any of the greatest class, but most of them range from 3,000 to about 7,500 tons. Of those building or under contract the constructors expect to launch 237 this year, and forty six during 1918. In December, as far as reported, contracts were let for twenty-nine steel ships of total tonnage of 162,124.

◆

The British Columbia elections were held months ago, and the soldiers' vote taken and counted long ago, but the prohibition vote has yet to be counted. The Vancouver Sun says: "Despite the absence of official figures, there seems to be strong reason for believing that the soldiers' vote cast in England and France has wiped out the previous majority in favor of prohibition, and turned the tables completely in favor of the wets. Mr. Tulk is not sure that this is the case, but there are many indications that point that way." The late Bowser Government is blamed for this state of affairs.

THE EMPIRE'S WAR COUNCIL

Premier Lloyd George has made a statement to a press correspondent laying down, in a general way, the matters that will be brought before the War Council for consideration when the Dominions' representatives arrive in London. All matters pertaining to the prosecution of the war, the making of peace, and questions of immigration and commerce, etc., will be discussed, but purely local or national affairs, such as recruiting, will be left to the individual countries. This latter statement may mean that each of the Dominions will settle for itself what measure of man power it will be given to the winning of the war. But this question, perhaps the most important of all, cannot be avoided altogether. We imagine that the old country and the Dominions' representatives will discuss the question with a view to knowing what they can do. The Premier, we take it, only means that each will be allowed to do what it thinks best as to the number of troops it can send to the front.

In view of Premier George's statement, we again express the opinion that Premier Borden should consult Parliament as to its wishes in all those matters that will come before the War Council. It should be given an opportunity to express its views. We think also that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and any other prominent men in the country who are in a position to speak with knowledge of Canadian opinion and affairs should be consulted by the Premier before he leaves for England. This is too important and serious a mission to start out upon for one man to bear the whole responsibility of representing the people of Canada.

Better Off.

The second officer of the brig was in the act of upbraiding the able seaman, Aaron Tappin, for his weakness for rum. Said the second officer:

"Tappin, you might have been a second officer like me, instead of a sailor before the mast."

"Stow that stuff," answered the able seaman. "When I'm drunk I'm an admiral."—London Opinion.

A Recipe for Success.

"If I were obliged to pack a lot of advice into a few words," says Congressman Edward J. King, of Illinois, in the American Magazine, "for the benefit of poor boys I would tell them to decide as early in life as possible what they intend to do. There is nothing so helpful to a tired traveler as a destination. The thing of not knowing where you're going but being merely on your way is a delusion and a folly."

HER HUMBLE LOVER

At this rather commonplace finale, Signa, who looks the calmest of the three, can scarcely suppress a smile, but she manages to conceal it.

"Sir Frederic Blyte!" exclaims Mrs. Podswell, appealing to a hideous old portrait of the rector, and throwing out her hand as if she would call to the world to hear her and join in her amazement and righteous indignation—"a baronet—and such an old baronetcy, too!—and the Park! Why, there isn't such an estate in the country, excepting the Delamere. It is an offer that any one—any one might be proud to accept. There isn't a woman for hundreds of miles around who wouldn't give her eyes to be Lady Blyte of the Park! And here is a—a—"

"My dear Amelia," again expostulates the rector, coloring and coughing uneasily.

"Joseph, I will speak, and openly and without fear. There are times when the truth, the plain, unvarnished truth, should be spoken, and if there ever was a time it is now, when this foolish, wicked—yes, wicked—girl allows her vanity to stand between her good! I, at least, will not shrink from reminding her of the difference between her and the gentleman who has offered to marry her. No doubt, under the blandishments of Lady Rockwell's fulsome compliments, she has come to think herself a sort of princess," and Aunt Podswell sneers at the tall, gracious figure and calm, pale, lovely face that do indeed look rather princely. "Oh, yes, quite a princess, or at least some one of the greatest importance. She forgets that she is a mere nobody; that she is almost penniless, and that her mother—"

She stops, for Signa raises her eyes suddenly, and they flash like fire across the table, and seem to burn up the pale, furious ones of the other.

"My dear Amelia," says the rector, hurriedly, and quite pale with nervousness, "I—ahem—really think there is no occasion to drag up old by-gones; the—ahem—the past——"

"Pray," says Signa, her low, clear voice cold and distinct as a bell, and tremulous with emotion, "do not stop her. I am waiting to hear what you have to say against—my mother," and her color comes and goes as she presses her hand to her heart.

Even Aunt Podswell is awed and frightened for a moment.

"I—don't want to say anything against your mother," she says, sullenly. "I only mean to speak the truth; I thought you had forgotten, but it seems that you have not. At any rate, I suppose I may say that the daughter of—an actress"—she would have dearly liked to say, "tight-rope dancer"—"is not too good for Sir Frederic Blyte——"

"Stop," says Signa, and her voice is very low, but so distinct that every note and inflection strike upon the ears of the rector and his wife like the flick of a whip. "You have spoken of—my mother. She died"—the voice falters for a moment, but is steady the next—"she died when I was too young to know her. She was an actress. Yes, it is quite true, and I am proud of it!" Mrs. Podswell throws up her hands and eyes, but does not, dares not speak. "Proud of it. I have heard my father speak of her—ah, I have heard others besides him speak of her with words such as any woman, be she actress or duchess, might be proud to hear over her grave. Unless the world has lied, and you alone are true, my mother was one of the best and noblest of women, and my love and pride in her never filled my heart more fully than they do now, when you speak lightly of her!"

Mrs. Podswell stammers for a moment, then she takes refuge in the resources of the weak; she begins to whimper.

"What have I done to be spoken to like this?" she sobs, "when I have only exerted myself beyond my strength in the endeavor to do my duty, I do not know! This is a cruel world!"

"Ah, yes, it is cruel," murmurs Signa, eyeing her with pale scorn.

"There is nothing but ingratitude," mumbles Mrs. Podswell. "If you had any heart at all, you would never stand there and say such dreadful things to me—never!"

A faint smile covers Signa's pale face. The only dreadful thing she has said has been a few words in defence of the mother whose memory she loves and reveres, and whom Aunt Podswell has attacked. She sighs a little wearily.

"Is there any more to be said?" she says, stooping and picking up her shawl. "Why do you want me to marry Sir Frederic?" And she looks from one to the other with vague interrogation. "What does it matter? As you say, I am a mere nobody, and not fit to be mistress of the Park—"

"That's just it, my dear," says Mr. Podswell, breaking in with a nervous, conciliatory smile; "we, neither your aunt nor I think that, and Sir Frederic himself evidently does not, and you must admit"—with a sickly smile—"that he is the best judge of your fitness. If he thinks that you are the one young lady in the world who ought to be the future mistress of the Park, it is not for you to contradict him."

"But," says Signa, and her face glows with the first blush that has risen to it since the discussion, "I—I do not care for Sir Frederic, in the way that he wishes me to care for him."

Aunt Podswell sniffs, and the rector waves his hand, with a bland, superior smile.

"My dear, I am afraid you are—er—romantic," he says, as if he had said that he feared she was given to picking and stealing, or some other sin. "Romance, my dear child, is all very well in—ahem!—novels, but in real life the less you have to do with romance the better. Look at your aunt and me." Signa raises her eyes and looks from one to the other. "We were not romantic when we married, and yet you see how happy we are."

And, perhaps unwillingly, he heaves a sigh.

For a moment Signa regards them in silence, then—she could not help it if her life depended on it—she breaks into a laugh. She laughs till the color comes into her face and the light into her eyes, while the two stare at her with solemn, amazed indignation.

"I—I beg your pardon; I am very sorry!" she says. "I think I am rather tired and hysterical."

"I think you are out of your mind," says Aunt Podswell, solemnly.

"Perhaps I am," says Signa, wearily. "Don't say any more to me tonight," she pleads. "I really am tired, and—I don't wish to offend you or make you unhappy, but what you wish is quite impossible."

"If you mean your marriage with Sir Frederic, that is not at all impossible, my dear," says the rector, in his fretful style. "Nothing is impossible, though weak and erring man——"

"That's nonsense!" says Mrs. Podswell, cutting the sermon short. "Signa is not weak; I never saw a girl with so much—obstinacy in her nature. Self-willed she may be and is, but not weak; oh, certainly not!"

And Aunt Podswell sniffs scornfully.

The rector rubs his chin.

"I think," he says, insinuatingly, "that perhaps we have been a little too hasty with our dear Signa, my fear. We are so anxious for her good, so extremely anxious, that her future, which stretches out so far and—ahem—blooming before her, should not be marred by a—shall I say maidenly modesty?—that we have put the case a little too plainly. After all, Sir Frederic is a sensible young man, and sensible young men don't take the first 'no;' he may ask her again."

"I hope not," says Signa.

"I don't think it's likely; I should say she has had her chance and lost it," puts in Mrs. Podswell, viciously.

The rector shakes his head.

"Sir Frederic is—ahem—thoroughly in earnest. I am sure of that, and I think he will ask her again. If he should, will you promise us, my dear Signa, that you will consider his proposal? That is not much to ask, my dear."

"I should think not," snorts Mrs. Podswell. "But it isn't likely that he will do anything of the sort. Sir Frederic isn't a mere adventurer, an opera singer, to go begging for a wife."

Signa flushes hotly, though she would give worlds to keep the color from her face, for she knows that her aunt alluded to Hector Warren.

"But if he should, I am saying, my dear Amelia," says the rector, timidly, "I want our dear Signa to promise that she will reconsider this hasty decision."

"It wasn't hasty," says Signa, but seeing the rector open his mouth for a fresh argument, she says, with desperation born of infinite weariness, "Oh, yes, if he should ask me again, I will consider it."

And it is an unwise admission, and she feels it, but not then—ah, she is so tired and does so long for the solitude and quiet of her own little room, where she can be alone to think, not of Sir Frederic and his offer to make her the mistress of the Park, but of Hector Warren and the sweet mysterious words he whispered in her ear as they parted.

"Thank you, my dear," says the rector, suavely. "That is all we want. Rest assured that your aunt and I only desire your good, and that all our exertions are for your future welfare. Good-night, my dear Signa, and—ahem!—happy dreams!" and he gives her his hand with the air of one bestowing an unspoken benediction.

Signa bends over her aunt's pale, thin face, wrinkled with the irritation of thwarted desires, and touches it with her lips.

"I believe, indeed I do, that you mean it all in kindness, but, oh! if you would only accept what I say and be content. What does it matter? There are hundreds, thousands of girls who are more fitted to be Lady Blyte than I am."

"But Sir Frederic doesn't think so, you see," says the rector, uttering the wisest and truest words he has spoken.

"I am very sorry that he does not," says Signa, ruefully, and she makes her escape.

Tired as she is, she pays her usual visit to Archie's little room at the end of the corridor.

He is not asleep, and has been waiting for her.

"What a time you have been!" he said, blinking at the candle. "And what have you been talking about downstairs? I could hear you, almost every word."

"You've been on the stairs!" says Signa, shaking her head, rebukingly. "Some night you will catch a severe cold, and then I shall have to nurse you, wicked boy!"

"I shan't catch cold!" he retorts, calmly. "I say, Signa, is it true that Sir Frederic wants to marry you?"

Signa laughs, while the color comes into her face.

"I am afraid it is, Archie, but I don't think you ought to listen to what goes on downstairs."

"If you were sent to bed at seven o'clock, and couldn't sleep, you'd be glad to get out and sit on the stairs," he says, severely. "But about Sir Frederic—it's like his cheek!"

"My dear Archie! That is a word that should not be said by little boys; it isn't in the dictionary, you know!"

"I don't care!" he says, emphatically. "It's true. It is like his cheek! Why, you would have to go and live with him at the Park, and that's miles away, right across the river. Besides, I don't like Sir Frederic. You won't marry him, Signa, will you!"

"I think not," says Signa, absently, and almost to herself.

"Don't," he says energetically, and with an air of profound wisdom. "You'll be sorry if you do. Of course you'll have the park, but you won't like Sir Frederic. He flies into tempers, I've seen him. I say, Signa!"

"Well, be quick and say it. Do you know that it is—oh, an unearthly hour! and that you ought to be fast asleep?"

"I wish," he says, slowly, raising himself on his elbow, and blinking at her gravely—"I wish it had been Mr. Warren."

Signa moves a hand round the candle that he may not see the hot flush which stains her face.

"Why, Archie?" she murmurs.

"Because I like him, and I don't think he ever flies into tempers."

"But," says Signa, trying to speak lightly, "he might take me a long way from here—miles away, Archie!"

"I don't know," he says, reflectingly; "he might, but then perhaps he'd let me come, too, don't you see?"

"I see," says Signa, smiling—smiling with a soft light in her violet eyes.

"At any rate, I like him and I think—I'm sure—that he likes you, Signa!"

Once more she has to shade the light from the candle.

"I believe you are asleep and dreaming, Archie, or you wouldn't talk such nonsense. There!" and she kisses him, and tucks the bed-clothes round him in the manner esteemed so much by children—"good-night, and"—with a laugh—"as papa says, happy dreams!"

CHAPTER XV.

Sir Frederic got his crush hat, and, without even bidding Lady Rockwell good-night or waiting for his carriage, leapt the terrace and strode across the velvety lawn toward the Park. He had tried, and tried hard, to keep cool and self possessed while Signa was with him, but now he threw calmness and self-possession to the wind, and allowed his passion full scope. He was, in fact, almost mad; mad with unsatisfied love, mad with his own weakness, and mad with jealousy; for, with that instinct which every lover possesses, he felt that, but for Hector Warren, Signa might have listened to his suit and yielded.

He reached the Park bathed in perspiration, yet pale to the lips, scarcely aware that he was at home, and almost inclined to stroll on anywhere out of human ken.

He had been so full of hope, he had been so persuaded by his mother that it was impossible Signa should refuse him, that the reaction was terrible.

Lady Blyte had sent all the servants to bed except the butler, and as Sir Frederic entered she came into the hall.

"Is it you, dear?" she said. "Where is the carriage?"

"I—I walked home," he answered, passing her into the drawing room to hide his face from the butler's keen eyes.

Lady Blyte came up to him, and placed her hand upon his arm.

"Well, Frederic," she said, gently, her proud eyes softening with loving anxiety.

He looked down at her with a look of wild misery.

"It is all over, mother," he said, hoarsely.

Lady Blyte started, and her eyes flashed with haughty pride.

"Do you mean that you—you have spoken, and that she has actually——"

Her pride would not permit her to finish the question.

"Yes, she has actually ventured to refuse me!" he said, with a bitter smile.

"It is impossible!" exclaimed her ladyship, drawing herself to her full height. "A girl who is a mere nobody——"

"It is of no use going over all that!" he exclaimed, with an impatient gesture. "Be she what she may, I—I love her, and I have asked her to be my wife, and she has rejected me!"

"She must be mad!" murmured the old lady, using the same words that Aunt Podswell had done; "simply mad! Why, there is not a girl in the county who would refuse the owner of the Park!"

"Yes, there is one and it is the one I have the misfortune to love," he said, sinking into a chair, and hiding his face with his trembling hands.

Lady Blyte stood erect in her satin and old lace, her eyes fixed with indignant hauteur on vacancy.

"I can scarcely believe it," she murmured. "What does she expect? What can she hope for more than this?"

And she made a grand comprehensive motion with her hand.

He laughed bitterly. He [illegible] taught him more of Signa's nature than ever his mother would learn, although she lived with her for years.

"She does not care a pin's point for the whole of it," he said, despairingly; "it is all as nothing to her. If—if she does not love me, she will not marry me though I am Sir Frederic Blyte. If I were the King of England, it would make no difference."

"Then," said Lady Blyte, with a flash of her eyes, "let her go her own way, and forget her."

And she held out her hands imploringly.

[illegible] loved me, she would marry me though I were a beggar on the road; as she [illegible]

He laughed, and the laugh was not pleasant for a mother to hear.

"Forget her!" he said, raising his pale, passion-distorted face. "You might as well tell a man dying of thirst to forget water; I shall never forget her while I have the power of memory left."

And he rose [illegible], and stood staring moodily at his thin dress boots, all wet with the dewy grass.

Lady Blyte sank into a chair, and tapped the arm with her thin, white fingers.

"If that be so," she said, sadly, yet resolutely, "you must not give up——"

He laughed again.

"No, you must not give up! Many a girl has been fool enough to say 'No' and lived to repent herself of her folly and jump at the chance of saying 'Yes.' You must give her that chance."

He smiled and shook his head.

"You do not understand her, mother. 'No,' with Signa Grenville, means always 'No.' She does not want another chance, and would not take it if it were offered to her. No, I have lost her; and if I cannot forget her, I must learn to live without her. But to-night I feel that I would rather die." And his head drooped, then he looked up with a flush. "I am ashamed that you should see what a weak fool I have become, mother," he said, with self-scorn in his voice and in his eyes; "but I think no man ever loved as I love Signa Grenville. I love her with my whole being—she has absorbed all my life! There! let us say no more about it. I am worn out, and will go to bed. Good-night."

(To be continued.)

HAIR GOODS

—FOR—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM

62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.
(Formerly Mdme. T. Mintz).

There's Money In Your Stump Land

FIRST pull out the stumps, then pull out the profits. Change your barren stump lands into cultivated fields. Stop paying taxes on worthless land. Clear it; do it the quickest, easiest and cheapest way. Get the money from under your stumps with a

Kirstin One Man Stump Puller

It gives you a giant's power. No stump is big enough, no root deep enough, to resist it. Horses are unnecessary. Your money back unless the Kirstin pulls stumps from your land. Ten days' trial.

Send for Big, Free Catalog

See the pictures of stumps it has pulled; read the letters from the farmers who have bought Kirstins. Learn how the Kirstin Free Service gives all the information you need about land clearing. Don't buy a puller until you see this book.

A. J. KIRSTIN CANADIAN CO.
5126 Dennis St., Sault St. Marie, Ont.

A. J. KIRSTIN Canadian Co.
5126 Dennis St., Sault St. Marie, Ontario.

Please send me your Free Book on Land Clearing.

Name............
Town............
R.F.D. or P.O. Box............

Trade Briefs.

Locusts have destroyed the wheat crop of the province of Santa Fe, Entre Rios and Corrientes in Argentina. It is estimated that the amount available for export will not exceed [illegible] tons.

Exports from Hong Kong to the U. S. in the first nine months of 1916 were valued at $6,864,290 an increase of $2,[illegible] over the previous year.

Rubber overshoes are needed in Spain.

An Italian merchant is in the market for 1,000 hypodermic syringes.

Nearly 20,000 tons of cassia are handled in the Hong Kong market annually. This trade should attract the attention of American dealers.

Heavy iron wheels, suitable for jinrikishas, are needed in China. These wheels are similar to those used on pushcarts.

Freight rates in China have increased from 200 to 300 per cent. since the beginning of the European war. The Chinese are adapting themselves to these conditions and are [illegible] quantities of foodstuffs for domestic consumption.

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

Home Care of Milk.

No matter how well milk may have been handled up to the time it is delivered to the consumer, it cannot be expected to keep well if it is carelessly treated thereafter. It should be promptly kept in a cool, clean place free from dust, etc. New milk should never be mixed with old unless it is to be used at once, as the bacteria in the old milk will of course be added also and the mixed milk will not keep as well as the fresh milk alone. Bacteria are [illegible], where there is dirt and decay, and milk should therefore be stored only in clean, sweet places. It is safer to keep it covered, to exclude not only dirt and bacteria, but also the flavors and odors which it so easily absorbs. If kept at a temperature of 50 degrees Fahrenheit or less, good milk should remain sweet for twelve hours at least, after it reaches the consumer, and ordinarily for twenty-four hours or more. Sometimes in very hot weather housekeepers complain that in spite of all precautions it sours quickly, even in the ice box. This is often due to the fact that the air of the ice box, although it seems cold in contrast with the heat outside, is really not cold enough to check the growth of the bacteria. If a thermometer placed in it registers more than 50 degrees Fahrenheit, the fault is almost surely in the temperature of the ice box and not in the milk.

STORMY WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The stormy blustery weather which we have during February and March is extremely hard on children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them in the house. They are often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which rack the whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will not fail to break up colds and keep the health of the baby in good condition till the brighter days come along. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Housekeeping Helps.

There is a fork with curved blades for cutting the shortening into the flour when making pie-crust, much quicker and more satisfactory than a knife.

A little metal contrivance that slips on the clothesline takes up the slack of the line, so that it is tight and does not sag.

A small and convenient gas lighter consists of a wire frame holding an iron file and a cylinder of composition which emits sparks which pass across the face of the file. It does away with the danger of throwing matches where they may cause a fire.

A row of neat glass containers for salt, coffee, tea, soda and spices makes the bride's kitchen shelf a temptation to cook. The jars have fluted sides and dust proof covers.

A Bull in the Pulpit.

"I am requested to say," said the young dominie, who was acting as a substitute, "that there will be no meeting of the Ladies' Sewing guild this week as usual, owing to the fact that all the ladies of the guild will be out of town. Should any others wish to take up the work they may do so."

Then he paused, but it was too late.

How to Cut Roses.

There is a right and a wrong way to cut roses. The choice of the latter may seriously injure the blossom producing properties of the plants. This applies particularly, of course, to rose plants grown especially for cut flower production. Such roses will be largely of the perpetual blooming sorts.

When a rose is cut from such plants—hybrid teas or other perpetual bloomers—only two or three eyes of the current season's growth of that branch should be left on the plant. This should give the roses very long stems. Succeeding blossoms should be cut close to the ground. It will seem like destroying the bush to take so much off it, but if the object is the production of roses, the cutting away of the surplus wood will attain the desired end.

If the spring pruning has not been sufficiently severe the plant is likely to have long, naked stalks and short stems to the flowers. With this character of growth only one or two strong flower buds should be left on the branch when the flower is cut, so as to stimulate as much growth as possible from the base of the plant.

The greatest temptation to leave wood is where there are two or more buds on one branch, some being small when the terminal one is open. This temptation to follow a bad practice can be avoided by pinching off all side buds after a bud has formed on the end of a branch. This prevents the formation of two or more buds on one stalk. The summer pruning will encourage additional blooms on varieties which bloom more than once a year.

No More Corns

Cure Guaranteed

Never known to fail, acts without pain in 24 hours. Is soothing, healing, takes the sting right out. No remedy so quick, safe and sure as Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sold everywhere—25c per bottle.

JABLONICA.

One of the Important Gateways of Carpathian Mountains

Jablonica and the pass of the same name which the Russians are said to have occupied, constitute one of the most important gateways through the high Carpathian mountains from Galicia and Bukowina into Hungary, says a war geography note of the National Geographic Society issued from its Washington headquarters.

"The Carpathians in this vicinity tower to a height of 7,500 feet, but slope gradually down to the southwest through the country of Marmaros. At a distance of forty-five miles from the crest the capital of the province, Marmaros-Sziget, is situated at a level of only 900 feet above the sea.

"Jablonica clings to the northeastern slope of the Carpathians, between the headwaters of the Pruth and the Golden Bistritza Rivers, and is a small station on the seventy-mile railway line connecting Stanislau, now in the hands of the Russians, with Korosmezo, just beyond the pass, to the southwest. Near Korosmezo are valuable petroleum springs.

"The important river Theiss, chief affluent of the Danube, and next to the latter the largest waterway in Hungary, has its source in Marmaros county. Situated on the Theiss and connected by rail with Korosmezo is the flourishing town of Marmaros-Sziget, with a population of 21,000. This will be the first important objective of the Russians after they cross the Carpathians by way of the Jablonica pass and begin their descent upon the plains of Hungary.

"Marmaros-Sziget is most pleasantly situated at the juncture of the Iza River with the Theiss. To the east tower the well-wooded, snow-capped Carpathians. In this town before the war citizens of many nationalities were busily engaged in an extensive lumber trade and in handling the enormous output of salt (a state monopoly), taken from the mines of three villages contiguous to the county capital. The annual fairs which were held here were an important feature of the industrial life of this part of Hungary, and presented a most picturesque scene to the traveler. A babel of tongues and a kaleidoscope of color resulted from the mingling of Ruthenians, Roumanians, Magyars, Gipsies, Slovaks and Armenians, each group dressed in the multihued costumes peculiar to their own nationality.

"The salt mines of the Marmaros-Sziget district have been worked for centuries and many Americans who have toured this part of Hungary have visited the deep galleries whose rock-crystal walls glitter as if studded with countless iridescent jewels as they reflect the rays of the electric lights. One of the most interesting mines is that of Ronaszek, which contains a great subterranean salt lake having a depth of nearly 200 feet.

"Hunting for bear and lynx on the wooded slopes of the Carpathians in the vicinity of Marmaros-Sziget is a favorite pastime of the Hungarians. The accommodations for sportsmen are not as satisfactory here as in the high Tatra mountains, however."

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Thrift On a Raft.

Scottish thrift received a severe blow not long ago after a shipwreck. Two Scotchmen had got on to a raft, but had nothing to support life or spirits except a little tobacco and some matches, but no pipe or cigarette paper. Succor seemed never coming. At last they gave it up as hopeless; but, desirous of having a little comfort before the seemingly inevitable end, they made some cigarettes with banknotes one of them had in his pocket. The banknotes were no sooner sacrificed than relief came, and they were saved. Their feelings cannot be described.—London Telegraph.

I consider MINARD'S LINIMENT the BEST Liniment in use.

I got my foot badly jammed lately. I bathed it well with MINARD'S LINIMENT, and it was as well as ever next day.

Yours very truly,
T. G. McMULLEN.

WORK OF THE BEAVERS.

Wonderful Skill and Activity of These Clever Dam Builders.

There are probably few examples of animal industry and constructive ability more widely known than those of the beaver—every one carries from his school days a general notion that beavers build dams and other things—and, though there may be a considerable margin between popular belief and the limits of fact, enough remains to attach a high degree of interest to the beaver.

With their very powerful teeth they can cut through a branch three inches thick in as many minutes. The pieces cut off are held by the teeth and fore paws and carried or dragged to the spot where they are to be used and fitted into place. The fitting is by no means carelessly carried out, and the beaver seems to have some fairly definite idea of the size and length of the piece he needs.

The beaver makes his home primarily by burrowing in the bank of a stream, and the purpose of the dam is to maintain the water at a fixed height, so that the entrance to the burrow is always covered as a protection from enemies.

Though, however, the beaver has intelligence enough for the building of a dam, he has not sufficient to know when to stop building, and so he increases the structure and raises the level of his pool until burrowing upward no longer serves to keep his house above water, and so he raises the height of his walls and roof by building with branches and mud the well known dome shaped "lodges."

Advice to Dyspeptics Well Worth Following

In the case of dyspepsia the appetite is variable. Sometimes it is ravenous, again it is often very poor. For this condition there is but one sure remedy—Dr. Hamilton's Pills—which cure quickly and thoroughly.

Sufferers find marked benefit in a day, and as time goes on improvement continues. No other medicine will strengthen the stomach and digestive organs like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They supply the materials and assistance necessary to convert everything eaten into nourishment, into muscle, fibre and energy with which to build up the run-down system.

Why not cure your dyspepsia now? Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day, 25c per box at all dealers.

Insect Luminosity.

Luminosity is normal in the well-known luminous beetles, including the various fireflies and glowworms, and results naturally from the oxidation of some organic secretion. Other insects are luminous in rare instances. Rev. J. Holroyd, vicar of Patchum, England, lately noted luminous moth larvae, similar to those observed once or twice previously, and the chironomus—a kind of gnat—and the "lantern beetles" of South America are among the creatures sometimes lighted up. The occasion luminosity has been attributed to disease of decomposition from bacterial infection.

Ireland's Golden Age.

There need be no "theory" as to the early culture of Ireland. It is a fact, for example, that the Abbey of Clonmacnoise, near Athlone, was once a centre of learning so renowned that scholars repaired thither from the ends of Europe, and the great Charlemagne sent it presents. And in the realms of art "The Book of Kells," a Latin copy of the Gospels, executed at that time, had no rival for delicacy of illumination.—London Standard.

◆

A preparation of solidified glue, which can be used instead of rubber for many purposes, has been invented by a German scientist.

ISSUE NO. 6 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—GIRLS TO WORK ON knit underwear—seamers and finished stitchers preferred. We also teach learners, any girl with good knowledge of plain sewing; good wages; ideal factory conditions. Zimmerman Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Aberdeen and Garth streets, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—A GOOD GENERAL SERvant for small family; highest wages; comfortable home. Address, Mrs. John Eley, 2 Homewood Avenue, Hamilton, Ont.

WANTED—WOOLLEN SPINNERS ON Davis and Furber and English Mules. Medium and heavy yarns—night work. For full particulars, apply to the Slingsby Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

Peculiarity of French Flag.

It is not generally known that the three strips of color that make up the French national flag are not equal in width. When the tricolor was first authorized, 1792, the positions and proportions of the three colors were not stated, and such a variety of flags was seen that two years later the national assembly declared that the national standard should be formed of "the three national colors in equal bands placed vertically, the hoist being blue, the middle white and the fly red."

For years the flag was made in this way; but, though the bands were equal, they never looked equal owing to an optical illusion, the blue appearing wider than the white and the white wider than the red.

At last, after many experiments, it was officially decided that in every hundred parts the blue should be thirty, white thirty-three and red thirty-seven.—Pittsburgh Press.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

Merits of "Angelick Snuff."

"Angelick snuff," the most noble composition in the world, removing all manners of disorders of the head and brain, easing the most excruciating pain in a moment, taking away all swimming and giddiness proceeding from vapours, etc.; also drowsiness, sleepiness and other lethargick effects perfectly curing deafness to admiration and all humors and soreness in the eyes, etc. Corroborates the brain, comforts the nerves and revives the spirits. Its admirable efficacy in all the above mentioned diseases has been experienced above a thousand times and very justly causes it to be esteemed the most beneficial snuff in the world. Price 1s a paper, with directions. Sold only at Mr. Payn's toy shop at the Angel and Crown, in St. Paul's churchyard, near Cheapside.—Advertisement in London Paper, Aug. 6, 1711.

RELIEF AT LAST

I want to help you if you are suffering from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles. I can tell you how, in your own home and without anyone's assistance you can apply the best of all treatments.

PILES TREATED AT HOME

I promise to send you a FREE trial of the new absorption treatment, and references from your own locality if you will but write and ask. I assure you of immediate relief. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Address

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 8,
Windsor, Ont.

Curious Spider Eggs.

The Attus family of spiders, abounding in Java, have, in addition to numerous smaller eyes, a pair of large ones, which have been called "big lamp" eyes.

A specimen of the spider lately captured near Buitenzorg, exhibits a remarkable power of changing the color of its eyes. When taken the eyes were dark brown, like the body, but suddenly they changed to bright grass green. Soon afterwards they turned back from green to brown, and this change of color was repeated several times in succession, apparently at the will of the creature.

Whether this action on the part of this curious species of spider is an effort to inspire terror in its enemy or whether it is an effect of its own terror is uncertain.

Another singular fact is that the color of either one or both eyes could thus be changed at will.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

The Lavish Jenkins.

In October, 1859, a religiously minded Buckinghamshire farmer named Jenkins brought his firstborn to the parish church to be christened, and this was to be the name: Abel Benjamin Caleb Daniel Ezra Felix Gabriel Haggai Isaac Jacob Kish Levi Manasseh Nehemiah Obadiah Peter Quartus Rechab Samuel Tobias Uzziel Vashti Ward Xystus Zechariah. It will be observed that the names are all arranged in alphabetical order and are as far as possible selected from Scripture. It was only with the very greatest difficulty that the clergyman dissuaded Mr. Jenkins, but eventually it was decided to christen the boy simply Abel.—Chambers' Journal.

Remember This.

To extinguish gasoline flames, use sand, dust or flour—not sugar, for that is readily combustible. Water only spreads the flames. A shovelful of earth from the garden or sifted ashes from the cellar will check the flame.

Watch Your Sneeze

It may be the forerunner of bronchitis or a bad cold. It is nature's warning that your body is in a receptive condition for germs. The way to fortify yourself against cold is to increase warmth and vitality by eating Shredded Wheat, a food that builds healthy muscle and red blood. For breakfast with milk or cream, or any meal with fresh fruits.

Made in Canada.

WHAT THE MARKET DEMANDS IN MUTTON CARCASSES

The Light-weight, Early Maturing, Well-finished Lamb is the Kind the Select Trade Hunts Out and Pays for.

Some years ago a Scottish member of Parliament, on his daily walk to the House of Commons, had occasion to pass a butcher's shop which catered to an aristocratic class of customers. One day he observed a large placard in the window announcing that "Best Scottish mutton from the Isle of Bass" was for sale within. Now as this gentleman was the owner of the Island of Bass, this information caused him a satisfactory thrill over and above that felt by a good Scot, in the recognition of a fact of which he is intensely aware that Scots mutton was the best procurable. In the good Scot's opinion most things Scottish are believed to be the best. Still he is gratified at seeing that other people think so, too. As week after week passed and Bass mutton was still on sale, the gentleman thought he would like to interview the seller. "Yes, sir," said the manager of the store most politely, "we have secured a supply of the famous Bass mutton for the season."

"But," said the M. P., "I am the proprietor of the Bass Park and I know that there are only some twenty-five sheep grazing on it, so how can it supply a trade like yours?" But in spite of this interview the sale of mutton from the Isle of Bass continued. We may say for the benefit of our readers who have not been in Scotland, that this island is a lonely rock in the Frith of Forth, about a mile in circumference, and its inhabitants are mostly sea birds, and the above-mentioned score of sheep.

Sheep of this Type and Conformation are Profitable on Any Man's Farm—They produce Offspring Which Bring Home the "Kale."

The moral of this little story is that the best way for a farmer to find out the kind of sheep he should keep is to see what is sold, or is advertised for sale, by the men doing the best trade in his neighborhood.

What kind of sheep should a farmer breed and feed to secure the highest price on the Canadian market at present? Just to hand comes the following paragraph, not an advertisement, from a Canadian newspaper of very wide circulation, dated November 3rd: "Big purchase of spring lambs—have just received 1,500 Southdown lambs from the Ottawa Valley. These lambs are considered the best quality raised in Canada."

CUSTOMERS INSIST UPON SMALL LAMBS.

No doubt they are, and the people of the surrounding district must be congratulated on having so large a supply of the highest class of lamb within reach. The Government of Canada, which we hear has been taking the sheep industry under its fostering care, must be gratified at this speedy result of its labors. We like to see well-directed effort getting so speedy a reward. But a certain part of our population's less fortunate buyers of sheep who, we understand, have—to borrow a forcible if not very refined expression from our American neighbors—been raking Canada with a fine comb for sheep, and have not been able to find them—what must their feelings be? Something akin, we should judge, to those onlookers who saw the miraculous draught of fishes and themselves drew empty nets. For the altruistic spirit, though we hope it is growing, is not yet strong enough developed in most of us to make us rejoice in so great a success with the fullest sympathy.

This, however, is a digression. What we wish to point out and to emphasize is that the Southdown is the type of mutton in demand by the best Canadian trade. Therefore we should do our best to produce as large a supply as possible of mutton of this type—not necessarily pure-bred Southdowns—which is practically out of the question—as a source of supply of mutton and lamb for the meat market. If every pure-bred Southdown in Canada were slaughtered there would hardly be enough mutton to supply the city of Toronto alone for any length of time. What is said of the Southdown applies also to the Shropshire. Each breed has its admirers. Yet the Southdown has, and we consider justly, a pre-eminence over all the other down breeds. It is the oldest and here is always a strong presumption that if any race of men or beasts have attained a high standard and kept it up for generations, there is something especially good in that race.

The Southdown sheep is certainly the little aristocrat of its kind. In the first place it is of pure blood. Its native habitat was the chalky downs of the South of England. The grass which grows there is fine, never grows coarse and tussocky, and the climate is, comparatively speaking, mild, with little frost and fine fresh salt-bearing breezes from the English Channel. There the Southdown lived for years pretty much in its natural state. It could never inspire same feeling as the more intelligent-looking mountain breeds which have to work hard for their living, and gain an alertness which the Southdown has not got. His is a feeling of calm superiority. It pays to feed him; therefore he is fed and he seemed to know it well. He looks and is mutton all over—a good thing for a sheep to be.

The high merits of the breed were not widely known until the time of George IV. The "first gentleman in Europe" spent much of his time and money at Brighton, whither perhaps the most epicurean and self-indulgent society in the world flocked in consequence. A man of genius who farmed land in that neighborhood saw an outlet for mutton of a high-class quality in catering to the requirements of these fashionable people. Having a good foundation in the native breed of sheep, he improved and developed it. He had an unerring insight into the proper type to be aimed at, and through his wise selection sent Southdown were evolved. Since then science has come to the aid of genius, and the Southdown of to-day has become an almost perfect type of what a sheep should be. This opinion is proved by the block tests at the International and other fat stock shows.

DOWN BREEDS FILL THE BILL.

It may be mentioned that most of the Down breeds have been produced by the introduction of Southdown blood into the native breeds of various districts. The Shropshires, as already noted, are very nearly related to the Southdowns. A mere glance at a pen of each in the show-yard or a glance at a good picture will prove this. The Southdown and Cotswold cross has produced the Oxford, another fine sheep; and the Suffolk, which have many admirers, are the product of the Southdown ram and the ancient horned Norfolk ewe. All these fine sheep have the qualities their admirers claim for them.

What is wanted as the best type of mutton sheep is one that has the largest proportion of flesh of the best quality and the least waste, and flesh of a poorer quality. We all know that certain portions of a carcass of either beef or mutton are more valuable as food than others, therefore we should select an animal with a good broad back, where the most valuable part of the mutton is located. It should have a well developed chest, which shows a sound constitution.

We have purposely left out of the question the larger long-wooled breeds as at present there does not seem to be a very great demand for the mutton they produce. But these breeds have their uses as producers of lamb and mutton, and where a large market for lamb is convenient something may be done by crossing the large breeds with, for instance, the Southdown. In this way lambs weighing from 30 to 50 pounds may be ready for the butcher in a very few months. The larger breeds grow fast, but do not fatten so readily. The market for Christmas lamb is easily supplied in Canada but where that out of season luxury is demanded it is well paid for, and its existence is the cause of the measure of popularity the Dorsets enjoy. Again the cross between a Southdown or Shropshire ram and a Dorset ewe is superior to a full-bred Dorset for early marketing. The produce of a Dorset grows rapidly, but does not lay on flesh as does the cross-bred lamb.

The subject of crossing pure breeds is not of practical interest to the ordinary Canadian farmer, nor is it, in our opinion, a subject to be taken up by a periodical. A text book written by an expert, who has had time and opportunity to experiment, may be of use, but there is something surer, though more expensive, namely, experience. So far experiments in this country on farms kept by colleges for this purpose tend to prove that as a sire for grade ewes and for the Western range ewes, which have more or less Merino blood, the Southdown ram is without an equal.

This is easily accounted for. The Southdown is a pure breed, while the other down breeds are the product of a mixed parentage, and everyone who has had the slightest experience in breeding stock knows that it is common enough for the progeny of mixed breeds to throw back and show characteristics not in evidence in either parent. Who among us, for instance, would desire to produce a flock, or even individuals in our flock, resembling the Norfolk horned sheep. At the present state of the sheep industry in Canada, the problem before us is to produce as much lamb and mutton of good quality as we possibly can. This, in our opinion, can be done best by taking the ewes already on hand and, by judicious mating, producing food for the people, or, by keeping a herd of pure-bred sheep of the kind we think most suitable for our locality and surroundings, our soil and climate and the market demands of the community in which we live.

—CANADIAN COUNTRYMAN.

BETHMANN TALKS

(Robert Herrick, in Chicago Tribune.)

Paris.—"Bethmann parle!" There [illegible]e no English words that give better [illegible] the irony which the headline in a [illegible]aris paper the day after the German [illegible]hancellor's "peace" speech in the Reichstag contains. For it sums up in a couple of words what the French think of the latest German grand stand play, and more ponderously expresses what the English think. Indeed, the only place where the "peace offer" is taken seriously is in the United States, where apparently when one is not too busy making money one talks peace. The American stock market paid Bethmann the compliment of [illegible]aving a fit when it got the news, [illegible]opping from five to ten points, re[illegible]vering slowly when its nerves were [illegible]othed by further reports that neither [illegible]ondon nor Paris, neither Rome nor [illegible]trograd took the Kaiser's last pom[illegible]sity seriously. The Allies were not [illegible]ing down their arms at once when [illegible]lin piped for peace. Significant [illegible]mentary on the state of mind in [illegible]rica that at the first talk of peace [illegible]r securities market should begin to [illegible]obble! Are we so afraid of peace?

* * *

And yet it is in America—and Germany—where immediate peace is persistently talked, which fact very naturally makes the people of the allied nations think that the Central powers must want peace very badly, even more than they themselves want it. Even staunch pro-ally newspapers seem latterly to have succumbed to [illegible]e German peace propaganda headed by Schiff (and our Federal Reserve Board) and have opened their editorial pages to elaborate discussions of possible peace terms, thereby inferentially assuming that the war is a drawn game and that the Allies, who set out to free the world from the menace of German militarism and Teuton lust for conquest, must put the best face possible on the situation and yield gracefully the better part of that for which they have so prodigally spent themselves in the bloodiest and costliest struggle in all history!

It is even suggested that the Allies should put more effort into propaganda in Germany to stir the German people to revolt against their rulers, for with the Hohenzollern gone the Allies might find it easier to "save face." But why should the German people desire a change of Government if the Kaiser with his Bethmann and his Hindenburg has brought the rest of Europe to its knees so that it is ready to listen to the terms of a German peace, with Germany in possession of Belgium, Poland, Serbia, Roumania? Is it provinciality of mind or mere childishness which makes Americans utter such drivel when they talk about European matters. A large majority of Americans have not yet, apparently, discovered what Europe is fighting about; hence Germany has found the United States such a fertile field for a propaganda that has fallen flat elsewhere.

Of course peace could be made any day, this last two years—a German peace, with a holy German empire established securely through the middle of Europe from the Baltic to the Persian gulf—a swaggering German peace, which in reality would be but a brief armistice before the thorough triumph of the same holy German empire throughout the world, including the native population of North America! But the Allied nations will not contemplate such a peace, even after a full realization of their innumerable blunders, their comparative failure to date to get their social organizations effectively converted to the business of war. They do not want such a peace; they prefer to run the awful risk of extermination and annihilation still longer.

And it is because these nations have the mentality and the morality to prefer a war to the finish to the alternative of any such holy German empire that I find them superior to America. Civilization would fare very badly, indeed, deprived of their will and their courage to dare all rather than submit to the yoke of a Teuton world empire.

Naturally Americans, having the advantage of Hindenburg's confidence, are beginning to think that the game is up for the Allies, at least a drawn game. Toasting their feet on the steam radiator with the voluminous sheets of their favorite Sunday paper scattered about, containing the last interview with Hindenburg or Zimmermann or Bernstorff, our amateur critics judge that the Allies are being beaten. If so, they do not seem to realize it over here. "A la francaise," Nivelle's troops went out and ripped off another few miles of German "conquest" in reply to the Chancellor's boast.

Gen. Nivelle, who is not a man of many words, said to his troops: "The German army is not as good as ours, and any one who says so is a liar." The figures of German prisoners who gave themselves up on the west front during the last month while no fighting was in progress are sufficient refutation for the Hindenburg brag. Victorious troops do not surrender without a blow. If disturbed by the look of the map at the present moment, Americans should get down their histories and look at the map of Europe when Napoleon was at the height of his rampage over Europe.

The Germans are no amateurs, and they know as well as their enemies that the great German conquest is nothing more than a shaky facade, which, unless they can secure the necessary armistice to "consolidate" their thefts, will crumble even more rapidly than it was built. Hence the clamor for peace from Berlin. The Allied peoples have not shown any disposition to take the German publicit campaign at its face value, nor the new threats of further frightfulness. The practical American mind has the defect of its quality: it cannot see beyond the limited range of actuality. It does not see with the eyes of faith and vision; the Allies must see with the eyes of faith and vision—or accept for all time the triumph of wrong. There is no evidence to date that any one of the Allied people is ready to deny their faith and their vision in the triumph of justice and right.

But let us assume that the allied nations are at the end of their resources, are ready to admit complete defeat, believe that the central powers can hold all the territory they have annexed—more! that they can push on after food as far as Odessa or Egypt, or taking Salouiki on the way can lay northern Italy waste before next autumn or convinced of another righteous necessity decide to violate Switzerland—what then? Would it be wise for England and France to make peace? Even were the vaguely suggested terms much more favorable than any one who knows the German character has reason to believe they are? Suppose for argument that Germany were ready to accept the status quo ante (which, of course, she has no intention of doing), would withdraw her armies within her old boundaries and ask for nothing more than the return of her colonies and a reasonable trade agreement with the allies: if under some obscure compulsion she were moved to offer such a peace, should the allied powers accept her terms?

What guarantees could Germany offer that she would observe the terms of any peace she might sign? Who would go on her bond? Would the United States be willing to guarantee Germany's good faith for two, three, five, twenty years? To undertake that the Teutonic powers would not plot against the world's peace, would not in their own good time consider the latest treaty of peace as another "scrap of paper"? (Ah, Bethmann, that was a most unfortunate phrase that you let slip that July day of 1914! It's likely to cost you and your master dear before you are done with this business). Would Messrs. Schiff, Ford, and our other eminent pacifists care to engage their private fortunes by going on Germany's bond to bind her to any contract she agreed to? Never! Mr. Schiff and Mr. Ford are too good business men to involve themselves in such a dubious venture. They would be the last to risk a dollar on the good faith of a people that have treated every human obligation as the Germans have for two and a half years. That is the greatest obstacle in the way of peace.

Germany has raised an impregnable barrier against any peace by destroying men's faith in her honor as a nation. Thus she has created a catastrophic situation not only for herself but for all the world. She has destroyed faith. Nobody can be found who will trust the German word under oath. All human dealings stop there. For our world is built on the spiritual law of good faith. When that is destroyed, there is no basis left for any human relation except that between master and slave. It is the very A B C of conduct, taught at the mother's knee, in the freshman class of ethics. Nothing is more rudimentary and never has its inexorable law been more tragically illustrated than at the present moment in the world war.

Germany is the self-confessed bankrupt of human honor: if her foes would treat with her they cannot, because she can give no guarantees of good faith which any man in his senses would accept. If Germany had fought an honorable war—if she had not violated Belgium, murdered noncombatants, enslaved conquered peoples—a peace might be arranged any day! Even a peace wholly unfavorable to the allies; for they realize as well as we the awful gulf into which all Europe is rushing. A peace on almost any fixed conditions would be more profitable to all concerned than war to a military and economic finish. An honorable foe would find no difficulty in arranging peace—but who will go on Germany's bond?

The English talk a good deal about the punishment of Germany for the outrages she has committed. Their temper to-day is to hold Germans strictly accountable for the vast wrongs they have done humanity, and to exact full reparation. Modern men have, however, no great belief in penal codes. The English conception of punishment meted out to the sinner by human hands, of physical retribution, is an antiquated, unreal conception of life. There is no human agency that could adequately—or justly —punish Germany for the wrongs she has done or the crimes she has committed. She is already punished far worse than the allies could punish her by the most complete triumph of arms. She has earned the hatred, the disgust, the loathing of almost all the people in the world. She has made of herself an awful incarnation of evil from which men instinctively shrink. She has built a wall of prejudice between herself and humanity that must take generations to overthrow.

The world may trade with Germans soon after peace is made; that is of little moment. But Germany will be suspect—and all those who have German blood in their veins. Mankind will be on guard against the treacherous beast, no matter how it purrs and fawns. German children of this generation and their children's children will pay for German crimes. It is the tragic law of life that Germany, as the felon nation of the world, will expiate to the last iota all the terrible injury she has done to the liberties of the world, to the faith of the world.

No, Germany's retribution has already been meted out to her in her own soul—it is childish to talk of taking away her ships or her trade. Already she is feeling the terrible consequences of her guilt when to her call for peace, in her need for peace, nothing but derisive laughter echoes back across the deep gulf she has dug between herself and all mankind. Goaded by the pangs of hunger, she would have peace, and must fight on, winning empty victories. Assuredly Germany's punishment has been arranged for!

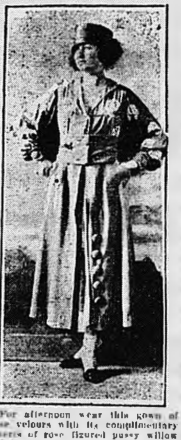
As the war goes on, bloodier and more terrible as it must be, the desire for vengeance will die more and more from men's hearts, as even to-day there is marvelously little evidence of hate in the hearts of the fighting soldiers. All those who have suffered wrongs too deep for payment will come to perceive that Germany is doomed to pay the price of her evil deeds in the only way we can ever be paid—in her lost soul. The primary concern of all the allied peoples now fighting for their liberties and their lives will be how best to guarantee the making of lasting peace on this earth. It is the hardest problem humanity has to solve—how to deal with a felon nation so that peace may be assured.

Obviously Germany cannot leave the first word on that peace. So "Bethmann parle'—in vain."

The Word "Chap."

"Chap" is simply an abbreviation of chapman, the merchant of former days, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "cheap," a bargain. The word almost brings before us the loud-voiced "cheap Jack" as he cries his wares in the cheaping or market. Chap seems to have come into common use at the end of the sixteenth century, and is rarely mentioned in books before 1700. Johnson does not recognize it, though Steele uses it in 1712 in the Spectator ("If you want to sell here is your chap"), and it is found in Bailey's Dictionary, 1721. Its original meaning of a buyer or seller still lingers in the dialects of many counties. Coupled with the adjectives old, young, little, poor, it was and is used in familiar language, as is its relative, a queer "customer." Todd, 1818, affirms that a good chap meant one to whom credit might be given, whereas not qualified by good it was a term of contempt.—London Standard.

"I don't always get stenographers who can spell." "Refer 'em to the dictionary, old chap." "But I'm in the motor business. And that has produced a flock of words that haven't gotten into the dictionary yet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.



For afternoon wear this gown of rose velours with its complimentary inserts of rose figured pussy willow silk is distinctly attractive. The pussy willow is evident in a pleated insert in the skirt, and the bodice, with its full sleeves and low "V" neck. The smart little feather hat and high button boots complete the outfit.

ISLAND OF SARDINIA.

One of the Few European Spots That Will Not Reflect Struggle.

When Europe, at peace once more, invites the American traveler to its shores, one of the few spots whose ruins will not suggest the sanguinary struggle which has brought sorrow and desolation to practically all that war-riven continent is little-known Sardinia, the subject of a communication from Helen Dunstan Wright to the United States National Geographic society. A part of the writer's descriptive article has been issued by the society as a geography bulletin, which says:

"Those who have taken the Mediterranean route have at least had a glimpse of Sardinia from their steamer a day out of Naples. The island is in sight for some hours, and, if the steamer passes sufficiently close, a bold, rocky coast can be seen, on which Roman outlook towers remain similar to those scattered along the south shores of Spain. The tourist seldom includes a trip of Sardinia in his travels, as neither of his advisers, Thomas Cook nor Baedeker, recommends it to him. It, however, is one of the few foreign fields that has not been overrun and overfed by the tourist, and in many of the villages a traveler is still regarded as a guest and not as a prey to be pounced upon.

"Some day, when tourists are tired of taking the tours laid out for them by the guide books, perhaps they will break away from the continent and set sail for Sardinia, especially if they are not traveling just to enjoy hotel comforts. The Bay of Cagliari is most impressive. On the right and left as you enter the hills, with mountains in the distance, while rising up from the lowlands directly opposite the entrance is the city, on a rocky hill 400 feet high. The top of this hill is encircled by a massive wall, built by the Pisans in the thirteenth century. At two of the angles rise the towers of the Lion and the Elephant, but the tower of the Eagle, which completed the triangle, only the base remains. In the centre of these fortifications is the old town. On the slopes of the hill outside the walls is built the modern city of 53,000 inhabitants, the largest in Sardinia.

"Among the objects historically interesting in Cagliari are the rock cut tombs on the hillside below the Castello. These are probably of the same period as the nuraghi, the famous prehistoric truncated cones thirty feet in diameter at the base and built by the men of the Bronze Age.

"The 'nuraghi' were undoubtedly fortified habitations. They are usually situated in commanding positions at the entrance to tablelands, near the fords of rivers, or on almost inaccessible mountain peaks and within signaling distance of one another. Traces of at least 5,000 of these remains have been found.

"The ancient tombs of the inhabitants of the 'nuraghi' are usually found near them. These are called the 'tombs of the giants' and are three and one-half feet wide and from thirty to forty feet long, with a roof of flat slabs or rocks and with the sides made of the slabs or of rough walling. The bodies were probably arranged in a sitting position. In front of the tombs are circles about forty feet in diameter, surrounded by stones; these were, no doubt, used, for sacrifices and burial rites.

"Generally speaking, the peasants seem to be somewhat downtrodden and do not realize their just rights. The music of Sards is characteristic: not all quick and vivacious like that of the Sicilians or other Southern Italians, but monotonous and slow, resembling very much the music of Northern Africa. The Sards' costumes are one of their greatest attractions. They are of rich, harmonious, though brilliant colors, each village having its own distinctive type."

Languages in Switzerland.

Both French and German are the "official" languages of Switzerland. Public signs, such as those of railroads, are printed in both languages. Italian is also spoken in those parts of Switzerland which are closest to Italy. As a matter of fact, the country is, however, quite definitely divided as to language. The cantons of Vaud, Neuchatel, Geneva, Fribourg and most of Valais speak Italian. The canton of Ticino speaks Italian. The rest of the country speaks preponderantly German. The canton of Valais has different districts, where each of the three languages is spoken.

"What's the matter, Hawkins?" "Matter enough! You know, some time ago I assigned all my property to my wife, to—er—keep it out of the hands I am indebted to, you know." "Yes." "Well, she's taken the money and gone off—says she won't live with me because I've swindled my creditors."—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Prisoners of War

THEIR RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS

In ordinary conversation and in the writings in the Press one hears and reads much concerning prisoners of war, yet the present writer cannot recall an instance when a prisoner of war in this connection has been defined, but in the French translation by M. P. Carpentier, p. 26, of the publication of the Historic Section of the German Headquarters Staff, entitled Les Lois de la Guerre Continentale, we find the term defined thus: "Detached individuals, or units of an army who fall into the hands of the other side, either after being disarmed and placed beyond a condition of defending themselves, either because they have been compelled to renounce resistance in virtue of a contract of capitulation become prisoners of war, and in a certain measure pass from a state of war active to a state of war passive."

The foregoing may be supplemented by the following lines from Professor Oppenheim's International Law: "Every individual, who is deprived of his liberty not for a crime but for military reasons, has a claim to be treated as a prisoner of war." Both in theory and in practice, writes Mr. Justice Nys in his treatise Le Droit International, profound modifications have been introduced in all that relates to captivity in time of war since the beginnings of international law.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS.

The treatment of prisoners of war in wartime is, or should be, regulated by the Fourth Hague Convention. They are not in the power of the individual or corps that captures them, but in the power of the Government of the captor. They must be humanely treated. All their personal belongings remain their property, with the exception of arms, horses, and military papers, which are booty; and in practice personal belongings are understood to include military uniforms, clothing, and kit required for personal use, although technically they are Government property. They may only be imprisoned as an unavoidable matter of safety, and only while the circumstances which necessitate the measure continue to exist. They may, therefore, be detained in a town, camp, or fortress, or any other locality, and they may be bound not to go beyond a fixed boundary. But they must not be kept in convict prisons. Except in the case of officers, their labor may be utilized by the Government, according to their rank and aptitude, but their tasks must not be excessive, and must have nothing to do with military operations. Work done by them for the State must be paid for in accordance with tariffs in force for soldiers of the national army employed on similar tasks, or, in case there are no such tariffs in force, at rates proportional to the work executed. But prisoners of war may be authorized to work for other branches of the public service or for private persons, under conditions of employment to be settled by the military authorities, and they may be likewise authorized to work on their own account. All wages they receive go towards improving their position, and a balance must be paid to them at the time of their release, after deducting the cost of their maintenance. But whether they earn wages or not, the Government is bound to maintain them, and provide quarters, food and clothing for them, on the same footing as for its own troops. Officer prisoners must receive the same pay as officers of corresponding rank of the captor country.

SOME PRIVILEGES.

All prisoners of war must enjoy every latitude in the exercise of their religion, including attendance at their own church service, provided only they comply with regulations for order issued by the military authorities. Facilities must be afforded prisoners of war for making wills, and in burials due regard must be paid to their grade and rank. Letters, etc., from or to prisoners of war are free of postal dues, and gifts to them are received free of Customs dues and carriage. They are subject to the laws, regulations, and orders in force in the army of the belligerent is obliged to accede to a prisoner's request for release on parole, nor is such a prisoner compelled to accept such release. A prisoner released on parole and recaptured bearing arms against the belligerent who has released him may be visited with the death penalty.

Arts. 14, 15 and 16 of the Fourth Hague Convention should receive passing notice. They provide for the establishment of a Bureau of Information. The requirements of the Convention, as to the particulars recorded at the Bureau of Information. The requirement of the Convention, as to the particulars recorded at the Bureau, are enumerated with precision, but the captors are only required to supply the other belligerents with a return of prisoners and other information after the conclusion of peace. By Art. 15 every belligerent is required to grant facilities to Relief Societies to serve as intermediaries for charity for prisoners of war.

IN THE DAYS OF OLD.

In bygone centuries a prisoner of war might be put to death, ransomed from him by whom he had been captured, or even sold or reduced into slavery. Henry V. of England, in 1415, ordered 4,000 prisoners who embarrassed him to be put to death; two hundred archers clubbed 1,200 prisoners, and only noblemen were allowed to escape on payment of ransom.

In 1441, after the taking of Pontoise by Charles VII. of France, the the English prisoners were exposed in chains, and those who were not able to pay ransom were thrown into the Seine.

The Dutch in the seventeenth century sold as slaves the Barbary pirates whom they had captured. Count de Solms, who commanded the English forces in Ireland (William III.), was deterred from this threat of sending his prisoners to America as slaves by the Duke of Berwick, declaring his captives would be sent to English galleys.

By the Roman law a prisoner of war lost in his own country his quality as a citizen and a man. According to the mediaeval laws of war the prisoner was the property of his captor. Gradually it was admitted that prisoners of note belonged to the King, but that the actual captor was entitled to indemnity.

In the fourth century writers began to raise the question as to whether it was lawful to take as prisoners the aged and children; Henry V. (Monmouth), however, forbade the taking as prisoners of war priests, women, religeux (those under vows), who had not taken part in hostilities. Montesquieu and Rousseau, born before their time, took a humane view of the treatment of prisoners of war, but Vattel, in considering whether prisoners of war may be put to death, considers that the killing would be lawful provided they had not been promised their lives, and that the safety of the captors actually demanded such a course. Frederic II. compelled French, Saxon and Austrian prisoners, unless they wished to be slaughtered, to fight against their own countrymen. By the treaty of peace of 1785 between Great Britain and France, prisoners and hostages were liberated without ransom, and two years later the United States and Prussia concluded a treaty, the maxims of which are in some respects not unlike the provisions of the Fourth Hague Convention.

EVEN IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

The leaders of the French Revolution in 1792-3, by decrees of the Assemblee Legislative, took humane views as to the position of prisoners of war, but these decrees were followed by others which are much less to their credit. Nevertheless, the severity of the terms were not carried out, in some instances the soldiery refusing to fire.

Even in the nineteenth century the lot of the prisoners was hard. During the Napoleonic wars Great Britain kept French prisoners of war on hulks at Chatham, Portsmouth and Plymouth, Spain had her ship prisons at Cadiz and off the Isle of Cabrera, in which thousands of French prisoners perished of hunger. In 1809, when Napoleon desired to make Antwerp the pistol pointed at the heart of England, he caused his prisoners of war to execute immense works during which they died in hundreds.

In 1806, in a letter from Berlin, dated November 12, he declares that he has 140,000 prisoners, and doubts what he can do with them, but he does not contemplate allowing them to ruin him. He was prepared to send 10,000 to Spain on condition that they were not transported to America. In 1807 he organized two regiments of pioneers and deserters, setting them to work on the marshes of Rochefort, canal making and on building fortifications.

WHEN PRISONERS MAY BE RELEASED.

Having compared the usage, ancient and modern, in regard to prisoners of war, it only remains to notice briefly the different modes by which the captivity of such may come to an end. Apart from release on parole, writes Professor Oppenheim in the work cited p. 172, sect. 132, captivity comes to an end (1) through simple release without parole; (2) through successful flight; (3) through liberation by the invading enemy to whose army the respective prisoners belong; (4) through exchange of prisoners taken by the enemy; (5) through prisoners being brought into neutral territory by captors who take refuge there (the Appam is a case in point); and lastly (6) through the war coming to an end.

The moment of release in this last instance may be accelerated or retarded by the mode in which the war is ended. Release of prisoners for ransom is no longer practised, except in the case of a crew of a captured merchantman released on a ransom bill, that is, the captain of the captured vessel enters into a contract with the captor to pay the amount of ransom, and the captain receives a copy of the bill, which acts as a safe conduct against the vessel being again captured.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

THE BREAD TO EAT.

Homemade is Best—Some Pointers On Making It.

Digestible bread is what we should aim to eat. Properly made home-made bread is the best of all breads for our digestion and health. Most housekeepers claim to have "no time" to make bread. This may or may not be true. The true woman who goes out to a business to earn money to buy her bread properly has no time to make bread. But where there is a will there is always a way, and a good manager contrives to find time to do what she wants to do. It's lack of inclination that prevents people from making home-made bread, and for the sake of their health they should overcome this and cultivate the breadmaking habit.

Home-made bread is the most appetizing and wholesome when well made and is less expensive than bought bread. It is always easy to have most excellent bread if the right kind of flour and good fresh yeast is used and care is taken to bake the bread properly.

The best bread flour is made from spring wheat, and pastry flour from winter wheat. The spring wheat contains more gluten and less starch, so that less of the bread flour is needed to produce a dough of a given consistency. The presence of gluten makes wheat the favorite flour for yeast dough. The more gluten a flour holds the more water it can be made to take up in dough, and the greater will be the yield in bread from a given amount of flour. The proportion of gluten in a flour determines the amount of bread it will yield. Flours are classified as weak or strong, according to the proportion of gluten they contain. Gluten is a protein which is easily digested and it has a high nutritive value.

To select a good bread flour notice its color, which should be creamy white. The texture should be rather [illegible] graininess, so that it will fall apart even after being squeezed in the hand.

The yeast must be fresh and sweet to make good bread. Compressed yeast is easier to procure and it can be bought every day or any day in perfectly fresh condition. Never use a yeast cake that has brown spots on it. Throw it away.

To bake bread properly requires a little practice to learn how to manage the oven. The oven must not be too hot, not too slow. The heat of the oven should be a steadily decreasing heat, quite hot at first to throw up the bread, then slower to cook the bread to the centre without baking a hard crust outside.

All cook books give excellent recipes for making home-made bread and with good flour, fresh yeast and a good oven, failure need never occur.

Bread can be set at night and baked early in the forenoon without consuming much time, and any one who tries it will be fully repaid for her trouble in having a delicious bread to eat and an improved condition of health resulting from it. Once the habit of eating home-made bread is acquired, no other kind of bread will be so acceptable to the palate, and a feeling of well-being from the change in bread will be constant, for well-made home-made bread does not give any one attacks of indigestion.

To keep your head above water it isn't absolutely necessary to let the grass grow under your feet.

"When do you consider the best time to work?" asked the friend of the struggling young artist. "When you are so rich you don't have to," replied the S. Y. A.

Had Pneum
DR. WOOD
NORWAY PINE S
CURED HIM.

A cough is an early symptom of pneumonia. It is at first frequent a hacking, and is accompanied with a little tough, colorless expectoration, which soon, however, becomes more copious and of a rusty red color, the lungs become congested and the bronchial tubes filled with phlegm making it hard for the sufferer to breathe. Males are more commonly attacked than females, and a previous attack seems to give a special liability to another.

On the first sign of a cold or cough you should get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent the cold from developing into more serious lung trouble.

Mrs. E. Charles, North Toronto, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my husband had a very bad attack of pneumonia, and the doctors said he was getting consumption. A friend came in to see us and told me to get Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles, and they cleared up quite clear his chest of the phlegm, and now he is fine and well.

I shall never be without it in the house as it is a very valuable medicine."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

The genuine is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

Toronto.—Wholesale trade is beginning to take on the activity which an unusually large volume of spring orders was bound to bring about. While wholesalers, especially in dry goods lines, expect increases over last year during January and February, they are not as sure that these conditions will last throughout the first half of the year, in view of the conservatism evidenced by large retail buyers. Wholesale hardware lines are fairly active, and large prospective orders on munitions account hold out indications of a bright future. Retail trade is described as good for staples, with an advance of one and a half cents to four cents a pound for cordage, as the most notable of recent price changes all along the line. Groceries are fairly active, with a half-cent advance in India tea, and a ten-cent decline on refined sugars reported within the last week. Labor is actively employed. Collections are fair to good.

Montreal.—Wholesalers are busier, and country orders are figuring largely in a trade which promises to bring good returns for the first two months of the year at least. City buying is of a limited nature. Unusual hesitancy in financial circles due to the effect of the New York market has been infectious in business circles, and there is a tendency towards conservatism on the part of buyers. City collections are rather slow, but country payments are good.

Halifax.—Activity in the steel trades is forming the basis for a more active movement in trade circles. Wholesale trade is fair, while retail movement of goods is hardly as good. Commodity prices are still on the upward trend, and collections are fair.

Ottawa.—Retail trade is showing some improvement after the recent inactivity. Country buying particularly is good. There are continual price advances.

Hamilton.—The retail trade has a bright future for the spring months, and large orders which wholesalers have already started to ship out indicate a liberal distribution of merchandise for the first half of the year. Country districts report a healthy trade in winter clothing, boots, shoes and rubbers, groceries, and household furniture. Retailers are clearing out broken lines. Collections are fairly good.

London.—Good spring orders guarantee a brisk trade by wholesale houses for the next couple of months. The after-holiday period is practically over. There will be plenty of moisture in the soil this spring, and a good crop is anticipated throughout Western Ontario.

Winnipeg.—Mercantile business is rather quiet as far as this city is concerned. Country trade is quite up to normal. Wholesale trade is quite good. Winter clothing and dry goods are moving out freely. Collections are reported as fair.

Calgary.—Staple commodities are passing out from the shelves in sufficient quantities to place estimates of trade as normal. Business at Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina is classed as better than last year, and liberal orders for future delivery indicate a good trade for some time to come.

Vancouver.—There is a larger output of lumber and minerals than ever in British Columbia, and this together with the shipbuilding industry which is being developed promise a continuance of favorable trade conditions. Collections are fair and mercantile business is in a [illegible] state of activity.

Darkness travels toward light, but blindness toward death.—Tagore.

FOR "LIVERISHNESS"
USE
MILBURN'S
LAXA-LIVER PILLS
THEY NEVER FAIL TO DO GOOD

Mrs. J. Shellsworth, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great value I have received by using your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills I have not been bothered with the headaches any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean away all waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all complaints arising from a liver which has become inactive.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, or 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER
Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance .. $2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance .. $1.50
France, paid in advance. $2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, FEBRUARY 15th, '17

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"BOTH parties brought in the Act. Let them co-operate still." This summarizes what appears to be the most widespread feeling in the temperance situation.

+ + +

IN respect to an earnest appeal made by Mr. F. F. Pardee (West Lambton) in the House of Commons, Premier Borden has promised that a special committee will be appointed to collect information and prepare the basis for legislative action to provide for returning and wounded Canadian soldiers. The problem of the returning soldiers is already a large one and will increase as time goes on.

+ + +

THE publishers of Bruce County met in Walkerton the other day, and the mayor of the place tendered them a banquet. They had quite a time restraining some of the boys from soaking up their soup with bits of bread, and from eating the custard pie with a knife. Altogether it was a good feed and there was mighty little damage done to the dishes and decorations.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

THE securing of work for returned soldiers is going to be a live question in Bruce very soon. This is one strong argument in favor of getting the Good Roads scheme in operation at once so that the County will be in a position to go ahead with the work immediately that the war is over. If the passing of the by-law is left until after the war, as some Councillors suggest, it will be too late by the time the scheme is in operation.

+ + +

TO a father who admitted in court that he did not know how his son, then under arrest, had been spending his evenings, or what he had been doing, the judge put some questions that other fathers might well ask themselves. "Do you keep a horse?" "Yes, your Honor." "Where is it now?" "In the barn." "You know where it is every night, don't you? You lock the barn door to keep the horse safe, and you feed it and care for it, don't you?" "Yes sir." "Which do you think the most of, the horse or the boy?" "The boy, of course." "Then see that you treat him as well as you treat the horse."

+ + +

ACCORDING to advices from the north, says the Guelph Mercury, Dennis Izzard has been crowned Warden of Bruce for the year. The new King is big enough to command respect, admiration and homage. If we recollect aright, Dennis was a familiar figure on the streets and boulevards of Port Elgin, where he follows the profession of (?) and builder. As he walked through the town he generally carried a door frame in one hand, a couple of window sash on his shoulder, and just to keep the balance, enough scaffolding to build a three story affair on the other side of his make-up. He ought to be able to spank any of the Bruce legislators who get a little troublesome.

+ + +

"IF we were to ask the men at the Front," said Newton Rowell speaking in Drumbo recently to his own constituency of North Oxford, "how would they suggest that we should commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of our Canadian confederation, would they not remind us that confederation was made possible by the union of parties in Canada to avert a national peril and attain a great national ideal? And would they not ask us how could we more fittingly or more nobly commemorate this fiftieth anniversary than by the union of all parties to avert a still graver national peril and to achieve a greater national ideal—a union which would secure a more concentrated effort in the prosecution of the war, a more adequate consideration of the problems growing out of the war, and help speed the day when Canada's sons will return home again."

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months ... . $ .40
Half year .... .75
Year... .... 1.50
In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)

Great Britain . ... $ 1.50
United States 2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts 2.50

BREAKFAST IN FRANCE

Walkerton Boy Pictures Some of the Difficulties which Our Soldiers are Up Against in Their Daily Routine

The story of how one Walkerton boy prepared breakfast "Somewhere in France":—

After a night made uncomfortable by the rain which flooded him and his comrade out of their beds. "We waited patiently for morning and then set about preparing our breakfast. In this task, other troubles confronted us. In the first place, we had to get wood, and after about two hours of hard labour we managed to pick up a few wet branches. After encouraging the kindling for some time, we finally managed to make it smoulder a little.

The next thing on the programme was to find our mess-tins which we eventually discovered under about a foot of mud. Some fellow had evidently used them during the night to scoop the mud out of his bed.

When these were put into shape, I proceeded to fry the bacon. Having put it on the fire, I forgot all about it for some time, and when I remembered it, the bacon was half burned. But making a desperate attempt, I took the mess-tin by the handle, and gently lifted it out; but then more trouble arose. The handle fell off and the bacon upset into the mud. Well, I'm not going to tell you what I said about the fellow who invented those mess-tins. After all my trouble it seemed beyond endurance to waste the bacon, and so, having scraped the mud off, we set it aside to cool.

By this time the other half of the combine had put the water on to boil, but the coals shifted, and over went the "dixie" and put out the fire. I suggested breakfast without tea, but "No," said my amiable partner, and he proceeded to build a new fire. At last the water started to boil and before it had time to stop the tea was made.

Having set the table (which, by the way, happens to be on the ground) we began to eat our well-earned breakfast. But the bacon was so badly burned and so salty that our patience forsook us and we threw it out. After that there was nothing to do but go back to biscuits and jam."

The writer never complains of the discomforts of trench life, but those of us who breakfast comfortably at home in Walkerton might spare some thought and time for the comfort of these splendid boys of ours who are fighting our battles.

BRANT TP. COUNCIL

Brant Council met at the twp. hall on Monday for the appointment of an assessor, etc. That means fewer opportunities for anyone kicking a Brantite's dog around for a time at least.

Owing to the condition of the roads and the severe storms we have been having our merchants were not rushed to death the past week.

The Municipal Council of the Township of Brant met at the Tp. Hall on Monday, the 5th. day of Feb., 1917. Members all present; minutes of last meeting of council read and declared correct.

Rowand—Gregg.—That the application of Sidney Parker for the position of assessor for the township of Brant for the year 1917 be accepted and that the clerk prepare a By-law validating this resolution.—Carried.

Findlay—Johnston—That this council accept the tender of the Bruce Herald and Times for the township printing for the current year at the sum of $150.00, being the lowest tender.—Carried.

Rowand—Johnston—That the customary grant of $10.00 be made to each of the Cargill and Elmwood Public Libraries.

Johnston—Rowand—That By-law No. 91 A. D., 1917, confirming the appointment of Sidney Parker as assessor of the township for the year 1917 be now read a first, second and third time and passed, signed and sealed.—Carried.

Gregg—Johnston—That the collector's roll be accepted and that Joseph Monk be paid $100.00, his salary in full.—Carried.

Findlay—Rowand—That the auditor's report be received and adopted and the Reeve have 200 copies printed for distribution.—Carried.

Johnston—Rowand—That the reeve and clerk issue orders on the treasurer for all accounts passed at this meeting of council.—Carried.

Hydro Electric Power Commission for construction and blue print	$ 12 25
Joseph Monk, salary as collector of taxes	100 00
Chas. Kyle, auditor	8 50
Alex. Robertson, auditor	8 50
Municipal World—subscription to Municipal World	1 00
J. G. Dicker, salary as Medical Officer of Health and Local B. O. H. meeting	33 00
Wm. Rowand, B. O. H. meeting	2 00
D. Willoughby B. O. H. meeting	2 50
M. A. McCallum, registering births marriages and deaths and B. O. H. meeting	24 40

Rowand—Johnston—That this council do now adjourn to meet on Monday, the 5th day of March, 1917, for the appointment of pathmasters, pound keepers, fence viewers and engineers to operate road grader and for general business.—Carried

M. A. McCallum,
Clerk.

500 Bags Potatoes From 5 Acres

W. A. CRAIG, Sarnia, Ontario, says: "This year I planted 5 acres of potatoes on clay land, applied 600 pounds Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer to the broadcast. The piece was cultivated six times and Spring plowed. It was harvested August 20th and yielded 500 bags fine marchantable potatoes. I have used Homestead Fertilizer for five years and always got good results. I would not plant potatoes without it."

Overland

Undoubtedly the Industry's Crowning Achievement

From your point of view this announcement is most important.

For herein we set forth the achievement toward which the Willys-Overland organization has aimed for the last eight years.

This achievement in a word is the completion of the gigantic Willys-Overland organization to a point where a comprehensive line of automobiles can be made and marketed under one head.

This means tremendous economies—much greater than ever before.

This means the elimination of all waste, all lost motion and much greater factory efficiency.

This means an even higher grade of cars at much more attractive prices.

All of which means a substantial saving for you on the next car you buy.

For now and for the first time in the history of the automobile business we as one single organization offer the public a full and comprehensive line of automobiles.

This concentration—this greater efficiency—this more effective means of pulling together is going to set a new standard of low priced high-grade automobile values.

For we operate on the basis of——one executive organization
—one factory management
—one purchasing unit
—one sales expense
—one group of dealers
—to plan, produce and sell all Overland, Willys and Willys-Knight models.

Buying power is concentrated. Costs are distributed over all these cars. The savings are enormous.

As a result we are producing cars of exceptional quality—and marketing them at unusually low prices.

Every car is built to a rigid standard of performance, comfort and appearance.

The new models are listed in this announcement. They include Overland models from the snappy comfortable $930 Light Four to the beautiful Light Six Sedan at $2220.

They include also the big, handsome Willys-Knights from the Four at $1800, to the super efficient Eight at $2730.

These new models establish price records, value records and performance records which we believe will prove to the public conclusively that the vast economies of vast production are the key note and manufacturing secret of the greatest value for the least amount of money.

J. E. McGregor - Phone 142
Jackson St. - Walkerton

Overland Light Four Models

Roadster, 104-in. wheelbase	$ 910
Touring, 106-in. wheelbase	$ 930
Sport Model—Country Club—(Illustrated)	$1050

Overland Big Four Models

Roadster, 112-in. wheelbase	$1170
Touring, 112-in. wheelbase—(Illustrated)	$1190

(See also Closed Cars)

Overland Light Six Models

Roadster, 116-in. wheelbase—(Illustrated)	$1360
Touring, 116-in. wheelbase	$1380

(See also Closed Cars)

Willys-Knight 7 Passenger Models

Four Cylinder Touring, 121 in. wheelbase	$1800
Eight Cylinder, 125-in. wheelbase (Illustrated)	$2730

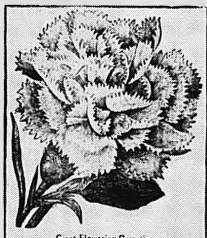
(See also Closed Cars)

Overland and Willys-Knight Closed Cars

Overland Big Four Coupe, 112-in. wheelbase	$1750
Overland Big Four Sedan, 112-in. wheelbase	$2030
Overland Light Six Coupe, 116-in. wheelbase	$1940
Overland Light Six Sedan, 116-in. wheelbase (Illustrated)	$2220
Willys-Knight Four Coupe, 114-in. wheelbase	$2310
Willys-Knight Four Sedan, 121-in. wheelbase	$2730
Willys-Knight Four Limousine, 121-in. "	$2730

All prices f. o. b. Toronto and subject to change without notice.

Willys-Overland, Ltd.
Head Office and Works
West Toronto, Canada



Giant Flowering Carnation

FREE!

Address a postcard to us now and receive by return mail a copy of our new illustrated 1(?) page catalogue of Garden, Flower and Field Seeds, Root Seeds, Grains, Bulbs, Small Fruits, Garden Tools, etc.

SPECIAL.—We will also send you free a packet (value 15c) of our choice

Giant Flowering Carnation

This carnation is a great favorite; the flowers are large and fragrant, and the plants do well outdoors. Transplanted into pots in the early fall they bloom profusely from October till the end of May. Extra plants are easily propagated from them by cuttings, "pipings" or layering.

Send for our catalogue and learn of our other valuable premiums. 18

Darch & Hunter Seed Co., Limited, LONDON CANADA

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan. Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "T and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
☞ Next to Vogan's Hardware

THE CANADIAN BAN OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Mana

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers ev facility for the transaction of their banking business, includ the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales n are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

Read the Ads.

After Every Meal

WRIGLEY'S

The Flavor Lasts

Do You Bake Your Own Bread?

If You Do

Let us tell you that NEVER BEFORE could you SAVE so much by starting to get your bread from us. Flour has DOUBLED (increasing from $2.50 to $5.00) and all ingredients have gone up while the price of bread has only increased one-third in the last three years.

A. Hehn
City Bakery

INSURAN

FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for See my list before making a purcha

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian North Railway and all ocean steamshi companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

DENTAL

ALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Successor to Dr. Coram. methods employed in all den- rations. Special attention to , bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

Fall Clearing Sale of

WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—

ning Room,
Parlor,
Hall,
Sitting Room,
Bath Room,
and
Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

CENTRAL
Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

TICE

Commencing Monday Feb. 12th, Transcontinental train for Sudbury, Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, North Battleford, Edmonton, Vancouver, and the Pacific Coast, will leave Toronto Union Station at 9 P. M., instead of 10.45 P. M., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, B. Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, or Chepstow
D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley

47 t. f.

Winter Goods

Axes We have a good supply of Axes, ranging in price from 85c to $1.25. Try a Samson, fully guaranteed at $1.25.

Saws There is none better than the Celebrated Improved Razor Cross Cut Saw.

Mitts We have a full line of Winter Mitts and Gloves.

Granitware When in need of Granitware, don't forget our "Old English."

We also carry Sausage Grinders and Fillers, Meat Saws, Butcher Knives.

S. W. VOGAN

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE
REQUESTS
THE PEOPLE OF CANADA TO BEGIN NOW
TO SAVE MONEY FOR THE
NEXT WAR LOAN

JAN. 8, 1917
DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE
OTTAWA

LOW FARES and THROUGH TICKETS
TO ALL POINTS IN
WESTERN CANADA AND THE PACIFIC COAST
ELECTRIC LIGHTED AND COMFORTABLY EQUIPPED TRAINS
To obtain the lowest fare and most convenient routing, apply to—
T. E. ATTWOOD, AGENT
Or write to R. L. Fairbairn, Gen'l Passenger Dept., 68 King St. E., Toronto
VIA CANADIAN NORTHERN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

ALBERT VARNER.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

POETS' CORNER

BRUCE COUNTY

B for the best "Battalion," for Britain, for Bruce,
R for "Robust" men that had no excuse,
U for the "Unit" to which we belong,
C for "Canadians" stalwart and strong,
E for the "Empire" which we are fighting to save,
We come from the land of the true and the brave.
C is for our "Colonel" we love so dear,
O for the "Officers," I think they are all here.
U is for "Us" the men of rank and file,
N for the "No goods" who didn't think it worth while,
T for the "Tears" they are shedding at home,
Y for "Your Victory" which we are striving to win,
Give the 160th a chance and we'll get to Berlin.

News About Town

Kincardine has decided not to allow its Town Hall to be used any more for dancing until after the war.

The salary of Rev. Robt. Martin, pastor of Knox Church, Stratford, was recently advanced from $2,500 to $3,000.

County Auditors, H. McLaren of Port Elgin and W. J. Taylor of Tara, were here on their regular visit last week.

Wingham is rejoicing in the location of a new factory, the Canada Furniture Manufactures having decided to open up the old Union factory to take the place of the Wiarton factory recently destroyed by fire.

We are indebted to Mr. Art Schour of the Cleveland Plaindealer for copies of the leading Cleveland dailies announcing the break with Germany. The Country is behind you, Mr. President, is the keynote of the leading editorials.

North Bruce Conservatives will meet in March to select a candidate for the next Provincial election. Two prospective candidates, J. F. Grant ex-Reeve of Tara and Dr. Foster are after the nomination. Other names mentioned are—H. A. Vandusen and C. E. Start of Tara, Reeve Brown and Dr. Biehn of Chesley.

Anthony Strauss, who traded his farm on the 8th concession of Carrick for a Saskatchewan homestead last Fall, reports that the deal has fallen through, due to the party at the other end of the negotiations. Mr. Strauss will buy up a stock of cattle and implements and remain on his farm here.—Mildmay Gazette.

An officer of the Ontario License Board visited Palmerston, and found in the Imperial Hotel, of which Geo. Daum is the proprietor, as well as in the cellar of a new house Daum is building nine cases of porter, several gallons of whiskey, also a quantity of port wine. Daum pleaded guilty last week to two charges for violation of the Temperance Act, and paid a fine of $100 and costs.

Mr. H. H. Fletsch of Carrick, who has a fine herd of Shorthorns, and from whose stables has gone forth choice stock to different parts of Canada and the United States, sold a fine young bull last week to Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Alberta. Mr. Fletsch has been engaged to accompany a carload of Shorthorns from Guelph to Alberta.—Mildmay Gazette.

After having been rejected three times when he applied for enlistment in an infantry battalion, William Habick of Lucknow is now in khaki. He has succeeded in passing a doctor for the 257th Railway Construction, where the eyesight tests, the bar of his previous attempts to join the colors, were lowered. Pte Habick has a brother serving in France, and another who has made the supreme sacrifice.

✢ ✢ ✢

Corn And Wheat Doubled

TIMOTHY DUNHAM, Salford, Ontario, says:

"I used fifteen hundred pounds Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer on my corn last season and was very much pleased with the results. I also used ten hundred pounds on my wheat last Fall, and am already satisfied that it paid me well to do it, as there are a few spots that the drill missed sowing, and the wheat there isn't more than half as good. I think this ought to be enough to convince any person whether it pays to sow fertilizer or not."

✢ ✢ ✢

Praise Walkerton

Bruce editors have been saying kind things about the way they were used in Walkerton while here attending the Press Association. The Kincardine Reporter says:—On Thursday the 25th ult. Mayor Johnston and the members of the Walkerton Council entertained the Bruce Press Association at a dainty luncheon. The Mayor, "Andy" Johnston, and his fellow councillors made capital hosts and the addresses from his worship and Rev. Mr. Sanderson were of a kindly and courteous character. The press were duly thankful for the courtesy extended. When Walkerton's citizens set about doing a thing they generally do it so well that they receive nothing but plaudits. Here's wishing Mayor Johnston and his council a good year.

A Mean Thief

The home of a poor Durham widow, who has three sons at the Front, was entered last week during her absence and her coal and wood stolen. This thief must be some relation to the one who was mean enough to steal the coppers from a dead man's eyes.

✢ ✢ ✢

Late Mrs. McNaughton

Mrs. Daniel McNaughton, whose death occurred at Hanover, on the 5th inst, just two weeks after her late husband had been laid in his grave, was formerly Miss Hucklebank of Brant. One daughter and five sons survive, all at home except Herb who is farming in Brant. W. H. Brocklebank of Toronto, Joseph of Hanover and Thomas of Brandon are brothers, and Mrs. Wm. Tieft of Brant, and Mrs. Geo. Tyndall of Hanover, are sisters. The funeral took place at Hanover last Thursday.

✢ ✢ ✢

Won The V. C.

Corp. J. Douglas, son of one of the best-known residents of Chesley, has been awarded the Victoria Cross for his gallantry under fire in saving the life of one of his officers. The story of the action that won for the Chesley boy the most coveted honour in the British army is that one of the officers of Corp. Douglas' company was wounded while repairing wires in front of the British line. Corp. Douglas rushed from the trench to his assistance and picking him up carried him back to safety. While carrying the wounded officer across "No Man's Land," he was struck six times on his battle helmet, but the steel turned the bullets.

✢ ✢ ✢

Wilhelm—Waechter

The wedding of a popular young couple, Miss Rosina, eldest daughter of Mr. John Waechter of Formosa and Henry Wilhelm, son of Mr. Henry Wilhelm, of Chepstow, took place at Formosa Church, on Tuesday morning, Feb. 6th, Rev. Father Brohman, a cousin of the groom, officiating. The bride, who was prettily gowned in white silk draped with georgette crepe and veiled with silver lace, carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lily of the valley. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Antonetta. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. John Waechter of Chepstow. After the ceremony the guests adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. The happy young couple will reside on the old Wilhelm homestead at Chepstow.

✢ ✢ ✢

Sun Life Leads Canadian Companies

The Sun Life of Canada's published statement of 1916 results, which appears in this issue, is in every sense a satisfactory document. It shows assurances issued and paid for in cash during 1916 of a total of over $42,750,000, the largest amount of new business ever written by any Canadian life company in any year. Assurances in force now total over $280,000,000. Assets increased by over $8,500,000, to practically $84,000,000, the largest assets ever attained by a Canadian company. Cash income totalled nearly $19,500,000, an increase of $1,500,000 over that of 1915. Payments to policyholders exceeded $7,500,000 bringing total payments to policyholders since organization to over $60,250,000. The record of the Sun Life of Canada for 1916 reflects the highest credit upon the Directors and Officers of the Company and should be equally satisfactory to the Company's policyholders.

✢ ✢ ✢

Women's Institute

The Women's Institute met on Feb. 1st, at the home of Mrs. T. J. Cunningham and spent a very pleasant and profitable afternoon. The programme for the day was in the hands of Mrs. W. S. McGregor and was handled in a very able style. The two subjects on the programme were (1.) "The best books to read to be well informed." (2.) "Different ways of preparing potatoes." Mrs. McGregor gave an able paper on the first subject which concluded with a list of books ranging on different subjects, which would be well worth reading. This led to a general discussion in which the ladies gave the choice of reading, and which was very instructive. Mrs. N. C. McKay gave a short paper on the second subject which was then thoroughly discussed by all, thus bringing out much useful. The Misses Ermel and Latchford furnished some very excellent music, both vocal and instrumental which added much to the enjoyment of the afternoon. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

TO OUR AMERICAN SUBSCRIBERS

Owing to the tremendous increase in the cost of producing a weekly newspaper, it becomes more than ever necessary that subscriptions to the Telescope be paid strictly in advance. This applies especially to subscriptions in the United States which necessitate a weekly cash outlay for postage and but a few delinquents take all the profit. For that reason we will have to DISCONTINUE all subscriptions going to the United States not paid in advance for 1917 before MARCH 1st. The great majority of our American readers have already renewed and we thank them heartily for their promptness. If you have not renewed, remit to-day by postal or express order. The label on your Telescope tells the date to which it is paid.

House Furnishings

WHEN in need of any small articles for the house, call on us, we have everything such as mouse-traps, curtain-rods, lamps, wash boards, towel-racks, bake-boards and kitchen utensils of every kind. Also granite-ware and galvanized ware.

We always carry a full line of Sherwin-Williams paints and varnishes: the best paints on the market.

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE PLUMBING HEATING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

MAKE YOUR DOLLARS
FIGHT
AT THE FRONT.
BUY
DOMINION OF CANADA
THREE-YEAR
WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

$ 25.00 FOR $21.50
50.00 " 43.00
100.00 " 86.00

INDIVIDUAL PURCHASES LIMITED TO $1500.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS APPLY AT ANY BANK OR ANY MONEY ORDER POST OFFICE

JAN. 9, 1917
FINANCE DEPARTMENT
OTTAWA

There are all kinds of weather but only one kind of

PURITY FLOUR

Always the same
More Bread and Better Bread

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE, THOMPSON, BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
49—9 Solicitors for Applicant.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Your Photo

There is no gift that more truly carries the sincerity of the donor.

FRASER STUDIO

AN EVIL HERITAGE

CHAPTER X.

When, on the day after her arrival at St. Clara, Miss McCrie suggested to Marian an afternoon ride, the idea was met with a certain degree of coolness. How was it that people never could remain where they were, ever, for one single day, Marian wanted to know? And, besides, she was not half rested from the journey; she would much prefer having the rocking-chair placed in the garden and spending the afternoon there in the shade of the purple-wreath tree.

"And leaving me to take my ride in my own society! As if it was not bad enough to have to ride a base mule in place of my beloved Mosquito, but you must needs condemn me to solitude as well!"

"But why can't you stay at home?"

"Because I have some very urgent business up beside the Old Provision-ground."

"Very well," said Marian, resignedly, "so be it."

She had quickly reflected that if Miss McCrie would not stay at home, there was no alternative but to go with her. During the whole of the forenoon she had been trying to summon courage to ask more questions about those Bolivian skirmishes, which Miss McCrie had touched upon in her talk yesterday. It was strange that she should have seen nothing at all relating to Bolivia in the war telegrams before leaving home; but of course all sorts of things might have happened in a fortnight, and there was no denying that all sorts of things were always happening in Bolivia. By accompanying Miss McCrie on this afternoon ride she would be sure to find out some more details, quite casually, as it were.

Nevertheless, it was not until the hills had been reached, and the mules abandoned to the charge of an opportune negro, that she ventured to approach the subject. They had just picked their way across a stream where water, clear as glass, tinkled deliciously among the stepping-stones, when Marian began to realize that she was wasting her opportunities. They had entered the forest now, as was proclaimed by the tops of the tree-ferns, on which they could look down as on an eternally-moving green carpet from the steep bank along which ran the path.

"You have never told me, by-the-by, with whom the Bolivians are fighting," began Marian, abruptly, just as they emerged upon this path. She had meant to lead up to the subject more skilfully than this, but in critical junctures her diplomacy was apt to fail her. "Is it with one of their neighbors, or have they been deposing another President?"

The path was narrow, and Miss McCrie had been rather inexplicably anxious for Marian to take the lead so that the latter was not able to note the expression of her companion's face, else the flash of merriment called forth by this apparently simple question might not improbably have aroused some suspicions.

"The Bolivians? Why, to tell the truth, I have not been studying the papers, but neither is it necessary to do that in order to know that the Bolivians have got each other by the throat all round in their usual manner."

"But I always hoped that sort of fighting was not so very dangerous."

"Did you? Well, I dare say it is a few degrees more harmless than European warfare—that is to say for the sensible, cool-headed people who are properly furnished with the better part of valor; but as for any of your hot-blooded young scatter-brains or a man, for instance, who has got no particular object to live for, I doubt whether he could play at any more dangerous sort of a game than a Bolivian revolution."

Marian made no further remark, but relapsed into anxious silence as she slowly toiled upwards, with the skirt of her linen riding-habit flung over one arm, and her light straw hat slung like a basket from the other, leaving uncovered her soft brown hair, which every stray sunbeam turned into gold.

Soon the path had died away to a track, while with every step the vegetation was growing thicker, leafy curtains growing in on every side, gradually but surely. Leaves in various stages of decay and the torn sheaves of palm-trees littered the ground. At one spot Marian all but stumbled over a big sheaf that lay across the track like a smooth brown trough more than half filled with water. Denser and ever more densely was the green network drawing together, the fine spun threads growing more and more closely knit, when, just as it seemed as though further progress must of necessity become impossible, the path suddenly opened out at the same time as it reached the level.

It was a deeply secluded spot which they had now entered on, a sort of cauldron in the hills, which neither sunshine nor wind were able to invade, because of the tall cask trees standing so jealously on guard all around. An almost palpable sense of oppression hung in the air. In the far-off shadow monstrous palms towered dimly, monstrous ferns loomed indistinctly through the wonderfully-tinted gloom where here and there in the midst of the luxuriant green, fed by floating vapors, the orange and crimson of the wild plantains burned like dull tongues of flame. Close beside the path a pine-apple blossom run wild was rearing its pink crests on the spot where a few yellow pumpkin gourds and the white flowers of a stray arrowroot plant still marked the remains of what had once been a "provision ground," but these, too, drooped their sickly and overfed leaves under the universal oppression, and their very stalks were clammy with moisture. An old watch-hut—that is, four sticks and a piece of palm-matting—occupied the centre of the open space, and beside it a broken copper kettle half full of rain water helped to proclaim a human presence of long ago. Of very long ago, surely—such was Marian's first impression as she stepped out on to the open space and felt herself taken possession of by the seclusion and silence of the spot, as by some living and tangible power. She was about to turn to to her companion with a question, when something moved in the green shadow—something that was neither green nor a shadow—and she became aware of a man leaning with folded arms against the stem of a thick old mango tree.

His back was partly turned to her, and both the dress and the wide-brimmed straw hat were unfamiliar, and yet there was something either in the attitude or the curve of the shoulders which made her press forward with an undefinable sense of expectation. At sound of her steps breaking the dead silence of the place he turned.

"Bernard!" was all she could say, standing still with hands outstretched and eyes that filled suddenly with tears. Despite the new-grown beard and the broad shadow of the hat-brim, she had not hesitated for a moment.

Bernard's sunburnt face flushed angrily. His first impulse was to look beyond Marian and to say, "You have done this!" for in one instant he had caught sight of the trap into which he had been so simple-minded as to stumble. But how was this? To look beyond Marian was easy enough, but in the same moment his eyes returned to her of necessity, seeing that there was nothing to be gazed upon but plantains and arrowroot, not a trace of any such personage as Miss Mercury. The two cousins were alone in the Old Provision ground and Marian was laughing and crying and repeating incoherently:

"Oh, Bernard, is it really you? Oh, Bernard, thank Heavens that you are safe!"

"It is I," repeated Bernard, still keeping his head in the air, though at the sight of the blue eyes full of happy tears everything, including the future and the object of existence, had become marvellously and irresistibly clear. "It is I, but this is not my doing. I never intended to meet you here."

"Nor I either. I will go away again if you like; but only tell me first that it is all right; are you quite sure you are not wounded? Oh, Bernard, I was so frightened——"

In discussing the day's events later on, neither of the two cousins could quite distinctly remember what exactly had happened at this juncture. Marian had a hazy recollection of having made an unsteady step forward, and Bernard fancied that he must have put out his arm. However provoked he might be feeling with Miss Mercury for her underhand conduct in the matter, he could not well do less than save his cousin from falling.

It was not until a full minute had passed that Marian came to her senses sufficiently to realize that she was sobbing in Bernard's arms. With a sense of shame she quickly raised her head.

"No," she stammered, "that is not it; I had forgotten. Let me go, Bernard—I am only your cousin; let me go." But even as she said it her eye was caught by the threadbare spot on the elbow of his sleeve and the battered brim of his old straw hatband, with the recollection of Miss McCrie's words of last night, "He will learn to live without money and without friends," such an overwhelming sense of pity came over her that pride and reserve and shame itself fell before it.

"No, no," she said in the same breath, "do not let me go: hold me fast—I am yours, Bernard, if you will have me."

* * * * *

"Oh, yes," Miss McCrie frankly confessed that evening after supper, when a council was being held in the sitting-room of Prospect, "oh, yes, I plead guilty to everything, and, what is more, I am quite untouched by any such feeling as remorse. Just consider the situation dispassionately, if you can. On one side, this young man sitting on his high horse and saying: 'What, I make an offer of marriage to my cousin, now that she has got enough to live upon? Death would be infinitely preferable to such degradation.' And, on the other hand, this young lady throwing up her hands and declaring, in a voice choked with sobs, that no bribe on earth could induce her to press herself upon the notice of a man whose affections have once upon a time been otherwise engaged, and all the time both of them breaking their hearts in the most approved fashion. It was clearly a case in which it required an unscrupulous old maid like me to push them straight into each other's arms. I do not generally approve of telling lies, but in this case I saw no harm even in inventing the Bolivian revolution, which, as I calculated, would supply that subtle element of anxiety so well adapted—when followed by the reaction of relief—to overthrow the restrictions of conventional prudence. And now my confession is made, and I bow my head in preparation for the bolts of your righteous wrath."

Before she had done speaking, Marian's arms were about her neck.

"You shall come with us to Thornton," was whispered in her ear, "and you shall stay with me until I am married. That is to be your punishment."

Marian and Bernard have been married now for so many years that it sometimes seems to him as a dream that he should ever have loved any other woman.

It was on the eve of their wedding day that Bernard said to his bride,

"I used to be angry with the people who write verses and plays, for I thought it was not fair to raise a man's expectations regarding the state that is called 'being in love.' But I have changed my mind about that. Do you know, Marian, I am actually beginning to think that the poet fellows are right after all."

The young couple spent most of their time at Thornton, but there seldom passes an entire year without a trip being made to St. Clara, where, despite her tender attachment to "home," the ex-registrar-general feels more in place in the warm shadow of cocoa-nut palms than beneath the chilly shades of English oaks.

Messrs. Tanner & Co. still reign supreme at Cane Hill, and still keep their eye upon Lot 13, but have not yet succeeded in adding this last-named sugar plantation to their present property. Nor is it likely that they will have their wish, for neither Bernard nor Marian are inclined to part with the estate.

"It may not be a mine of wealth," Marian once said, laughingly, "but have you realized, Bernard, that it was at Lot 13 that we found each other? If it had not been for that so-called unlucky number, you would now be the husband of Sybil Durrant, and I your little cousin as before."

"I have realized it," said Bernard, taking her into his arms, "which comes to the same as realizing that the spell of Number Thirteen is broken for ever and aye."

(The End.)

The Law of Six.

Snow crystals obey an immutable law of six. They are six-sided jewels or six-pointed stars. They never answer to the law of four or five. Snow is crystallized water, and water always crystallizes in six-sided forms. Why? No one ever will know. There is no more apparent reason for the sixness of crystallized water than there is for the monoclinic prisms of sugar crystals. Water and sugar and the complex minerals which make the granite rock all follow laws which are utterly unchangeable, but which are, as far as we can see, without any special reason. It is as profitable to speculate why the chlorophyll of vegetation is green and why the blood of animals is red.

The whiteness of the snow is understandable. It is due to the fusion of prismatic colors scintillating from the countless surfaces of minute crystals. Human science comprehends this. It also comprehends the fact that snow is a poor conductor of heat and thus prevents terrestrial radiation and keeps the earth and the things in the earth snug and warm under the white blanket which is softer and finer than lamb's wool or eiderdown. Science knows why snow is white and why it is beneficent. But it cannot explain the law of six.

It is well that snow cannot be altogether explained. It is one of the earth's most beautiful mysteries. It would lose something in beauty were it to lose all its mystery. No one should accept the snow too much as a matter of course. A pocket magnifier will disclose gems of wonderful brilliance to whomsoever will look. When the next lazy snowfall comes, when the flakes are not hardened and beaten by the tempest, study the designs of infinite variety that are built by the master craftsmanship of nature on the rigid plan of six. It will give the snow a new and finer meaning.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TRENCH MASCOTS

I met him in the buffet at Victoria Station, half an hour or so before the "trench train" was timed to leave—a tanned, khaki warrior of the Cockney school, who had seen fourteen months' hard fighting "somewhere in France," and was cheerily going back for more.

He told me all about "Tommy's wonderful menagerie of trench pets.

Perhaps it would be better if I told the story in his own picturesque way.

"You blokes what don't know anything about this 'ere picnic," he commenced, "ain't got no manner of idea how fond the British soldier-man is of 'avin' a bit of 'ome, sweet 'ome in his 'dugout'—something to remind him of his 'civvy' days when the first word he says to the missus when he went 'ome was, 'And 'ow's the dawg?' Of course, different people 'as different tastes—mine is a nice little Irish terrier bitch—and I have known some queer animals getting a home with some companions of our boys over the water.

"Coming 'ere on the boat last week, I ran up against a Scottie who 'ad a soft time dahn at one of our bases. We got talkin' abaht dawgs, and he told me about the dawgs they 'ad had at their camp.

"One little chap was brought dahn from the firing line on a transport lurry, 'cos he 'ad a nasty 'abit of running after bursting 'whizz-bangs'; another—a mongrel cur he was, he said—used to regularly trot twenty miles a day behind an ammunition cart—ten miles up and ten back—and knew every inch of the road. One chap he knew, a Canadian, had brought a terrier pup all the way from Montreal wiv 'im, and managed to smuggle the beast into the base hospital wiv 'im when 'e got plugged in the arm.

"When the doctors took the dawg away from him he swore that if his dawg couldn't stop there it was no place for 'im. He was only there a couple of days, but when he went on the boat, bound for 'Blighty,' is dawg was in his pack.

"One bloke I knew 'ad a couple of white rats he used to keep snug and warm in his trench; another—he's in our company—'as a fancy for a brown rabbit which 'e pinched one afternoon up near Booloo (Bailleul.) Poor little beggar, this rabbit was! A knowing little cuss, mind yer; but he went into the dixie (cooking pot) one night when the bully-biscuit got wet and we wanted something to help it down!

"Then there was Charlie ——, coming from Balham. He picked up a stray goat and kept it 'anging around the billet for a week. The sergeant major didn't like goats, and so Charlie's capture suddenly got lost.

"Lots of our blokes seem to 'ave a fancy for cats. I've never seen so many cats as I've seen since I've been scrapping with the 'Un. Cats of all shapes and sizes.

"One chap used to keep a black kitten in his jack. Then I've 'eard of guinea-pigs finding a home in our trenches, and one of our officers had a linnet and canary, not his maiden aunt—so our blokes always said, 'ad sent him out.

"The rummiest of all, though, was when Rebecca, the cow, joined up. She was the most useful of the lot of these 'ere trench mascots, as the noospapers call 'em. We 'ad taken over a bit of trench from the French and was going through part of their lines single file in the dark when we 'eard a bellowing 'Moo-oo!' The sergeant shouts, 'Dahn on yer tummies, me lads!' And dahn we all plopped, thinking, I suppose, that Mr. Fritz was sending over a No. 1 whizz-bang. We looked proper mugs when somebody discovered an ancient looking dun cow tied up outside a big dugout. She didn't seem to 'ave no owner, and we thought we might as well see that no 'arm came to the old cow. We had fresh milk for a couple of days reg'lar, and then Rebecca was shifted by a fatigue party to the village behind the third line of trenches, and we saw the old girl no more. I believe the French blokes had milked her reg'lar like for a month or more!—London Answers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VI

February 11, 1917.—Jesus and the Woman of Samaria—John 4: 1-29.

Commentary.—I. On the way to Galilee (vs. 1-6). 1-4. The reason given for the Lord's departure from Judea is that the Pharisees heard that more disciples were being baptized through the ministry of Jesus than through that of John the Baptist. They had been displeased with John's ministry, and they would be more displeased with that of Jesus, because of its greater effectiveness; consequently their opposition would be correspondingly greater. Jesus proceeded to take himself beyond their jurisdiction. He was finishing his first Judean ministry and the first year of his public labors. His route lay northward and he must go through Samaria, unless he chose to go eastward across the Jordan, as many Jews were accustomed to do to avoid the Samaritans, with whom they had no dealings.

5. Samaria—The name given to the region lying between Judea and Galilee. Sychar—A town between Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim, forty miles north of Jerusalem on the direct route from Jerusalem to Nazareth. The more ancient name of the place was Shechem and the modern name is Nablus. Jacob gave to his son Joseph—This parcel of ground had an interesting history. Jacob bought it of Hamor and gave it to Joseph, and the bones of Joseph were buried there, after having been brought up from Egypt by the children of Israel on their journey from the land of their enslavement to their own Canaan.

6. Jacob's well was there—It was probably called Jacob's well from its being in the region of the "parcel of ground" just mentioned. There is still a well there and there is no reason to doubt its being the one by which the Saviour sat. It is now seventy-five feet deep, but was formerly much deeper, as it had been partially filled with rubbish. The well is nine feet in diameter and hewn out of the solid rock, the wall being regular and smooth. The place is now owned by the Greek church and is covered by a chapel. Priests are in attendance who let down a small bucket by means of a windlass and rope and draw water for visitors. Being wearied with his journey—It was noon, and Jesus with his disciples had probably been walking since early morning. Jesus rested there while his disciples were gone to the town to buy food (v. 8). His weariness declares to us the truth that He was human as well as divine. He got not only weary, but he also became hungry and thirsty. Sat thus on the well—Under the circumstances of his weariness and of the absence of his disciples, he sat resting on or by the low stone curb of the well.

II. The water of life (vs. 7-15.) 7. There cometh a woman of Samaria—The task of carrying water in the East rests largely upon the women. The usual time for drawing water was in the early morning or in the evening. At noon there would be few coming and going, hence the woman was alone there to receive the instruction of Jesus. This woman lived in one of the villages close by, undoubtedly Sychar, in the district called Samaria. She was a Samaritan and not a Jew. Give me to drink—Jesus was thirsty and he made this request because she had the utensils necessary for drawing water from the deep (v. 11) well. The request would very naturally open the way for the marvelous discourse on the living water, which he delivered to this one woman. 8. Unto the city. The present city Nablus, is a mile and a half from the well. The ancient Sychar may have extended much further to the east. Meat—Articles of food.

9. How is it that thou, being a Jew, etc.—The Jews claimed for themselves to be God's peculiar people and considered all others as of small value. They had Jerusalem and the temple and they accepted the law and the prophets including the Old Testament writings as their sacred scriptures. The Samaritans held that Mount Gerizim was their religious centre and they held the writings of Moses to be the only inspired scriptures. The Samaritans retain their identity still, but number less than two hundred persons. They intermarry with none outside their own people. They are poor and ignorant, but are now being aided educationally by Christians in America. They sacredly guard a copy of the Pentateuch, which they claim was made by a grandson or a great-grandson of Aaron, but this claim can scarcely be credited. The Samaritans are still objects of contempt to the Jews. 10. If thou knewest the gift of God—Jesus does not at once declare to the woman of Samaria his Messiahship, but gradually prepares her mind for the reception of this great truth. He would have given thee living water—She had as yet no idea of the nature and office of the traveler who was resting by the well, and she did not grasp the thought that Jesus was speaking of the salvation of the soul under the figure of water. 11. Whence ....that living water—The woman's mind was on the well and the water it contained. The speaker had nothing with which to draw water and she did not apprehend the force of his statement, yet she began to suspect that there was a hidden meaning in his words. 12. Art thou greater than our father Jacob—The Samaritans claim to be descendants of Jacob through Joseph, but they were a mixed race, a few Israelites being joined with idolators after the captivity of Israel (2 Kings 17: 22 [illegible]). The woman considered that the offer of Jesus was folly, for he could not possibly furnish a better well or better water than could Jacob. Gave us the well—The Samaritans had a tradition, which was probably without foundation, that Jacob dug the well. Drank thereof himself—To her there could be no better proof of the excellence of the water than that Jacob and his household and his cattle drank of it.

13. Shall thirst again—One needs to drink water often or he will suffer from thirst. This is especially true in a warm climate. The woman understood that statement very well. 14. Shall never thirst—A strong and striking contrast is drawn between the water of Jacob's well and the water Jesus offered his hearer. A well of water springing up—This is a reason why thirst shall not recur. The living water is from a fountain implanted in the soul, fed by the fountain of all life, grace and goodness, and the soul's desires are fully and constantly met. 15. Even then the woman of Samaria did not comprehend the deep meaning of the words of Jesus.

III. True worship (vs. 16-24). 16-19. The request of Jesus that the woman call her husband, brought forth from her a partial statement of her guilt, which led to an acknowledgment on her part of the prophetic power of Jesus. 20-23. She was inclined to uphold her religion as against that of the Jews, and brought up the question of the proper place for worship, but Jesus showed her that, with the coming of the new kingdom, places for worship would not count. Wherever there was a heart to love and adore God, there would be a place to offer acceptable worship. 24. God is a Spirit—In his very nature God is absolutely spirit. There is nothing material about him, and that which comes to him from us as acceptable worship must come from the spiritual nature. "A pure, a holy, a spiritual worship, therefore, is such as he seeks, the offering of the soul rather than the formal offering of the body, the homage of the heart rather than that of the lips."—Barnes.

IV. Jesus the Messiah (vs. 25-29). 25. I know that Messiah cometh—The Samaritans found the promise of the Messiah in the writings of Moses. They now expect him to come within the present century. He will tell us all things—Jesus had told her some things, and she was inclined to believe them, but she was not quite ready to declare her faith in him as the Christ. 26. I.... am he—Jesus revealed to the woman of Samaria some of the deepest truths of the kingdom. This was his first public declaration of his Messiahship. 27-29. At this point the disciples returned and the woman, wondering and trustful, went to tell her friends what she had heard.

QUESTIONS.—What ministry had Jesus just finished? What reason had he for going to Galilee? Where did Jesus stop to rest on his journey? What was the subject of Christ's discourse to the woman? Who were the Samaritans? What did Jesus say about worship? What great announcement did Jesus make to the woman?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic—A spiritual awakening.

I. Conviction for sin.

II. A Redeemer accepted.

I. Conviction for sin. The prudence of the Master at the first sign of hostility was evidenced in his retirement from Judea. To the eye of man Jesus appeared to be fleeing from persecution. To the eye of God the visit to Samaria was a part of a plan by which the glory of the divine government was to be revealed. To the eye of faith it offers an illustration in which the purpose of God was fulfilled. Jesus sought to remove the prejudices of his disciples by personal contact with the despised Samaritans. He offered to the Samaritan the privileges of his kingdom. He must needs pass through the abode of fallen humanity on his way to the throne of his kingdom. His own sovereign love laid the necessity upon himself. The providence of God brought the woman to Jacob's well. Events apparently trivial and unimportant changed her whole future. Jesus suited his method to individual character and circumstances. He began conversation by asking a favor of the women, thus putting himself under obligation, that he might speak to her one of the most sublime discourses of his ministry. The desire to bless was strong, constant and spontaneous with Jesus. He had no national animosity, no sectarian bigotry, no self-righteous loathing as the Jews had. There is a contrast here between the narrowness of religious prejudice and the generosity of Christian grace. The utterance of the woman's natural surprise gave Jesus the opportunity to teach her great spiritual truths. He made no mention of enmity between the races. He would not enter upon the old controversy which she began. He would not stir anger in the soul he was seeking to save. She had seemingly set herself in antagonism against him, but Jesus answered her by putting his power of supply over against her need. In a way he accepted her challenge, though very differently from what she expected. He did not disguise himself, but boldly announced the majesty of his nature and the glory of his work. Tenderly, gently and with compassion Jesus charged her with ignorance and brought home to her the sad fact that she had never truly worshipped. She had no belief that she had to do with the eternal, loving God or that he desired to communicate to her deep and lasting blessedness. She was ignorant of the Messiah. She was the Jew, but not the Son of God; the weary man, but not the rest for weary souls; the thirsty traveller, but not one who could quench her thirst. She saw one who had sent for food, not one whose meat and drink was to do his Father's will. He touched her conscience and pointed out her sin. He told her the exact state of her case and drew her to admit it. A tender solicitude unlocked her heart and encouraged confession.

II. A Redeemer accepted. In her attempts at evasion the woman had not been able to shake off her conviction that she stood before the Supreme Being. The crisis of her life had come. The command of Jesus to her to go and call her husband was the first stroke to break up her calm exterior and reveal the life beneath. Jesus required a complete surrender of the old life in order that he might confer life eternal. His object was to bring the woman to seek salvation through him, as the fulfilment of hopes as old as the race. Upon his knowledge of her secret life she based her belief in Jesus as the Messiah, she put it into her proclamation to her neighbors. Jesus here reached the community through an individual first educated to the truth and the knowledge of the truth. The woman came to Jacob's well a prejudiced Samaritan, and departed a happy believing Christian. She came a sinner, and departed with full faith in Jesus. She came absorbed in the temporalities of life, and departed engrossed with eternal solemnities. The Saviour's mercy was remarkable. His wisdom was displayed in his dealing with a sinful soul. His patience was perfect in bearing with her ignorance until she was taught. His power was manifest in her conversion. Short as the interview was, Jesus effectually gained her heart, and through her published the glad tidings of salvation to others.

T. R. A.

A Recipe for Success.

"If I were obliged to pack a lot of advice into a few words," says Congressman Edward J. King, of Illinois, in the American Magazine, "for the benefit of poor boys I would tell them to decide as early in life as possible what they intend to do. There is nothing so helpful to a tired traveler as a destination. This thing of not knowing where you're going but being merely on your way, is a delusion and a folly."

Chats With the Doctor

BY A PHYSICIAN

It is a common saying that there is a fortune waiting for the man who discovers a cure for a common cold. It is probably true; for there are few common ailments so distressing as this one, and fewer still that are so difficult of treatment. There is no remedy known as yet that will arrest the course of a cold, and the best and most efficacious method of treatment consists merely in assisting nature in her throwing off of the infection. For the common cold is an infectious disease, and does not arise spontaneously from sitting in a draught, or getting wet feet, as is usually supposed. But this does not mean that getting wet feet and sitting in draughts, so as to chill the body and lower the vitality, does not predispose to catching cold. On the contrary, such a lowered state of body lays one open to the attacks of the germ which causes the cold, a germ so common that we are all of us in contact with it every hour of the day.

The extreme difficulty of curing a cold once it is fairly caught makes it all the more imperative that we should so far as possible avoid catching one in the first place. And the best method is not by coddling oneself, sitting in close rooms, and wearing far too much clothing, but in taking plenty of brisk exercise and living in well-aired and well ventilated rooms. Fear of getting wet feet should never keep us from going out for a sharp walk in even the rainiest weather, as good stout boots will keep the wet out, and even if they do not, a change of boots and stockings on coming in will do away with the slightest fear of cold. It is not the wetting of the feet or the body itself, for that matter, that does the harm. It is when they remain wet, and the cold wet covering, together with the evaporation, lower the temperature of the body directly it ceases active movement. To get a thorough wetting of either body or feet, and then to sit in a railway carriage or a stuffy room for an hour or two is one of the best ways yet known of catching cold. But to go for a long walk, getting thoroughly wet in the process, to walk right home, and then change all wet clothing, does no more harm than to go for a walk in the dry.

Everyone has his own treatment for the cold, once caught, but they all amount to much the same thing. Bed, with a good hot drink to promote perspiration, and then an avoidance of changes of temperature, with a light nourishing diet and no worry, covers most forms of treatment. Drugs are of practically no use, though a mild aperient at the beginning of the treatment is usually not amiss.

CHILBLAINS.

Those uncomfortable people who suffer from chilblains are now beginning their winter's discomfort, and any preventative measures should be taken at once. They seem to be mainly due to defective circulation, and to pressure, the former most of all. They are increased in severity by the hands or feet being exposed to continuous cold, though this does not seem to be absolutely necessary for their occurrence. I have known of cases where chilblains have been unknown until a certain occupation, such as clay-modelling, has been taken up, with the result that the hands have become a mass of chilblains. On the clay-modelling being dropped the chilblains disappeared as well.

The improvement of the circulation is the chief thing to work for, with the avoidance of extremes of heat and cold. Warm woollen gloves should be worn, never kid or leather ones, and ample ventilation should be provided. The feet should be warmly clothed in thick open wove or hand knitted stockings, fully large, and the boots or shoes should be large and widely cut, but not so as to slip at the heel, or the pressure and friction may bring about the result feared. No tight-fitting garters or knee-bands should be worn, as they tend to obstruct the circulation, and the same holds good of the wrists and neck. If the ears are affected it may be necessary to wear a covering for them when going out, in cold or very windy weather, and they should in all cases be kept as warm as possible. The hands and feet, if cold, should not be warmed by putting them by the fire, or in hot water, but should be warmed gradually by swinging the arms, changing the boots for easy-fitting warm slippers, and so on, the warmth being obtained by the increase in the briskness of the circulation, not by application of heat.

THRUSH.

Thrush is a fungoid disease, which should never appear in a well kept nursery. It is almost entirely confined to bottle-fed babies, and is due in the great majority of cases to carelessly cleaned bottles or other food-vessels. The baby's mouth and gums become red and patchy, and are so painful that the child often refuses food. The treatment consists in perfect cleanliness, together with local treatment of the gums and mouth by means of antiseptic applications. A clean soft rag should be dipped in glycerine of borax, and the entire surface of the inside of the mouth and the gums should be carefully wiped out with it. The treatment should be repeated several times a day, after each feed, and the greatest care must be taken that the milk or other food is carefully and freshly prepared for each meal. All bottles and food vessels should be placed in a pan of warm water and brought to the boil, while the teat of the feeding bottle should always be kept, when not in use, in a solution of a teaspoonful of boracic acid in a pint of water. This should be made with hot water, but used cold.

Better Off.

The second officer of the brig was in the act of upbraiding the able seaman, Aaron Tapplin, for his weakness for rum. Said the second officer:

"Tapplin, you might have been a second officer like me, instead of a sailor before the mast."

"Stow that stuff," answered the able seaman. "When I'm drunk I'm an admiral."—London Opinion.

Wooden folks ha' need o' wooden things to handle.—George Eliot.

SUNDAY AT HOME

AWAKE, MY SPIRIT.

If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face;
If beams from happy human eyes
Have moved me not; if morning skies,
Books and my food, and summer rain,
Knocked on my sullen heart in vain—
Lord, Thy most pointed pleasure take,
And stab my spirit broad awake.

R. L. Stevenson.

PRAY ALWAYS.

I love the Lord, because he hath heard my voice and my supplication. Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him as long as I live.

When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.—The Spirit .... helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting.—Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints.

If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

GLORY.

The prophet asks, "And where will ye leave your glory?" This is asked of those who decree unrighteous decrees, who turn the needy from judgments and take away the right of the poor.

There are degrees of glory, and much men must leave behind: all corporeal things, the firmament, the stars, the earth and its kingdoms. There is a glory in those for the carnal mind, the gold, the glitter, the tinsel, the rank, the uniform, the title, the wealth, the ease, the luxury. There is the glory of discovery, of mental power, invention of the steam engine, the sewing machine, the talking machine. But there is a higher glory, the glory of a mind in contact with God, on speaking terms with God. Interchange of thought with God. Oh! the transcendent magnificence, the pomp, the inner glory of the softened radiance of the revealing Jehovah!

From all bodies taken together we could not evolve one little thought; of all bodies and spirits we could not extract a simple motion of true charity. This is impossible because it belongs to another order—the supernatural. Men make a fortune; they leave it. Men make a great name; it is vanity. Men walk abroad in the earth, clothed in the spoils of death, and then they die. "Where will ye leave your glory?" child of God. This high, essential glory we shall never leave, nor will it leave us. It is our endowment, our atmosphere in which we live, vital, perfect, inviting. We move on this earth as princes of God, never unattended, not by lackeys in uniform made by the tailor, but by the highest order of beings; we engage their services, their love, their study; they are our bodyguard; we are their wonder, their attraction, their joy. They do not look at what we have, nor what we do, but upon our relation. We are of the blood royal, children of the true Abraham. We wear the garments of light, in spiritual grace, and beauty, and honor. We walk in light, for we are worthy, and our worth is drawn from the centre, as flowers get their beauty from the sun. This glory ever increases; it does not blind with excessive light, but softens and soothes the eyes of the beholder, whose verdict is "Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee."

H. T. Miller.

THE NEXT WAR

What One German Writer Holds Should Be Done in Preparation.

(Letter in the New York Tribune.)

Sir,—The most highly significant evidence of the German mind, and, by the same token, never intended for publicity outside of Germany, is to be found in a recent article in the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger over the signature of Walter Rathenau, the individual who, for a number of years before the war, had complete charge of official organization among war used industrial establishments in the German empire, and who has been deputized to continue this particular work in the supreme effort the Teutonic nation is about to put forth.

This article, which is before my eyes as I write, says in full, copied verbatim:

"We began the war a year too soon. When we have secured a German peace we must begin at once a reorganization upon a broader and firmer basis than ever before. Establishments that produce raw materials essential to the army must not only continue their work, but enter into it upon lines of increased energy, forming thus the kernel of economic Germany in preparing in the economic sense for the next war. We must carefully calculate in advance, in view of the lessons learned in this war, what our country lacks in raw material or essentials of raw material, and secure immense reserves to remain unused until a day in the future. We must organize a genuine an industrial mobilization as we had a military mobilization. Every technician, or semi-technician enrolled or not in the list of mobilized, must be empowered through official credentials to take charge and direction of a given establishment upon the second day following a new declaration of war. Every establishment manufacturing for commercial purposes must be mobilized also and understand officially that upon the third day after declaration of war their entire abilities are to be devoted to serving the army upon demand.

"It must also be determined in advance just what quantities and sort of essentials such establishments can furnish the army in a given time. Each establishment also should be required to furnish a detailed list of workmen who can be dispensed with, these alone to be mobilized in the military sense.

"We must finally establish som finite commercial understanding nations outside Europe that will of them advantages to be duly spec fied in detail whereby these nations as neutrals will find it to their direct disadvantage commercially to trade sell munitions during war to ourselves or afford to offer such conditi selves. And, finally, when war comes, it must not be a soon."

Here in a nutshell, or "kernel, quote frank Mr. Rathenau, is w Allied Europe has long underst and what has not been truly unc stood in the United States save b relative few.

It is the reason why the war woul be continued for ten years if necessary by France, England and her Allies, is why nothing short of the "knockout" will serve. It is the reason why any talk or effort for peace would be ill received, even if backed by the best of motives and official sanction from the greatest of neutrals, or the smallest, or all the neutrals collectively.

The war cloud that hung over Europe for thirty years prior to August, 1914, must be dispersed finally and forever. The intolerable conditions prevailing must be finally made impossible of repetition. The horrors and miseries, the suffering and privation, the whole gamut of evil that no single individual can understand through reading the writings of another, that must be seen, felt, experienced through the senses to be grasped even in outer circles, must never again be a worldly portion.

This will only be possible through making the war against war until a humane peace is the reward. It would be as impossible under a German peace as would a railway journey to Mars.

Germany realizes all I have here written in a sincerity beyond mere words for the telling. She feels her setting sun. She is reaching out at the two extreme extremes of the compass in vain effort to remedy that beginning the war a year too soon. One is her present huge peace propaganda in the United States. The other is her last supreme effort in the levee en masse, the deportation of the Belgian populace, the "kingdom" of Poland, and all the rest of it.

Neither scheme, neither plan, will avail. She feels it, and senses but a desperate postponement of the inevitable. The mills of the gods are grinding.

The article from the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger is but reiterative proof of an open stupendous fact, patent to individual or nation who will judicially examine the evidence at this 860th day of hostilities.

The fact is, the issue is no longer between the Allied and Central powers. They but represent two ideas. One champions justice, humanity, civilization, the right of peoples, respect for moral law, and understanding as to definition of the word honor. The other has deliberately as aim the ultimate domination of the globe by a Prussianized Germany.

HENRY BAZIN.

Paris, France, Nov. 27, 1916.

Tiger Superstitions.

The people of India have some very curious superstitions concerning the tiger. One of these is that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims. It is declared that Providence provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of one rupee (two shillings) a day; that is to say, if a tiger kills a calf worth six rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days. Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whiskers must first be singed off the beast, or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him, and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.—Exchange.

Tommy—Pop, what is the differen between table d'hote and a la carte? Tommy's Pop—At a table d'hote, son, you take what the waiter ch to bring you without ordering. If you dine a la carte you ord then take what the waiter c bring you.

HAD WEAK HE COULD NOT WORK
COULD NOT SL

Many women are kept in a state fear of death, become weak, worn ar miserable and are unable to attend t their household, social or business duties on account of the unnatural action o the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Hea and Nerve Pills give prompt and per manent relief.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John Street Sout Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so ru down with a weak heart I could not eve sweep the floor, nor could I sleep a night. I was so awfully sick sometime I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be. I am doing my own housework, even my own wash I doctored for over two years but g no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HAD INDIGES

BURDOCK
BLOOD BITTERS
CURED.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for over forty years and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Mrs. S. Taupe, Colborne, Ont., writes: "I am writing to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters. For a long period I suffered with indigestion, and nothing I took ever gave me any relief, only for a short time. I bought several bottles of B. B. B. from our druggist, Mr. Griffis, and can honestly say I can eat or drink anything I want without experiencing any bad after-effects. I may say that it is the only medicine I ever got any relief from."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

W. B.
Dentist
Modern tal on

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for more than forty years.
Enough for 5c. to produce 50 large loaves of fine, wholesome nourishing home made bread. Do not experiment, there is nothing just as good.
MADE IN CANADA
E.W.GILLETT CO. LTD
TORONTO, ONT.
WINNIPEG MONTREAL

FARM AND GARDEN

[illegible]EEP FOR TWO PROFITS.

[illegible] increased demand for both wool [illegible] mutton, and at prices which in[illegible] profit for labor and money in[illegible], has brought into considera[illegible] raising of more sheep. This [illegible] made a very profitable side [illegible] farming. In England the [illegible] is not whether you can af[illegible] keep [illegible] high-priced land, [illegible] rather you can afford to keep [illegible] priced land without sheep. Why [illegible] in America?

Professor Severson, of the Pennsylvania State College, in Extension Circular No. 49, just issued, gives 12 [illegible]ntials in profitable sheep raising.

POINTERS THAT MEAN SUCCESS.

1. Willingness of the farmer to pay proper attention to his flock at the critical times of the year.

2. Production of lambs of early maturity that should preferably be marketed before the first of July.

3. Control of parasites in the flock by the sale of early lambs, rotation of pastures and flock management.

4. Protection of sheep from dogs, by community interest in sheep, by enforcing dog laws and keeping sheep in protected quarters at night.

5. Utilization of pasture to the greatest degree.

6. Feeding of corn silage with clover or alfalfa hay, supplemented with grain, to the breeding ewes at definite periods.

7. Selection of breeding sheep that possess merit in wool, as well as in mutton character. Constitutional vigor and health as a result of breeding and care are essentials in a foundation flock.

8. A pure-bred ram of a desirable type and quality should sire the lambs.

9. Cheap equipment which offers protection plenty of ventilation and a dry bed.

10. Marketing of products of wool and mutton with an understanding of market values and demand. Community organizations would be beneficial in this regard.

11. A permanent flock of 30 to 100 breeding ewes is a desirable number for an average farm flock, if the owner has had sufficient experience in sheep management.

12. Realization of the fitness of a flock on the farm, their value as weed destroyers, utilizers of soil fertility.

POSSIBILITIES OF SHEEP RAISING

The demand for both wool and mutton exceeds the supply. Mutton is commanding a higher price than ever before, and wool, even before the European war, was advancing and is still advancing in price.

Another point of profit is in the relation of sheep to soil fertility. The high nitrogen and potassium content of sheep manure, which is readily available as plant food and the tendency of sheep to spread their excrement uniformly, are the factors which increase soil fertility. When sheep graze too closely they may injure grass land, but this should not be mistaken for depleting the soil of its fertility.

With the exception of goats, sheep consume more weeds than any other class of live stock. They will destroy weeds in pastures, in grain fields and corn fields after harvesting, and clear the fence rows. But they must not be taken for scavengers, for they cannot thrive on refuse and weeds alone. Sheep are valuable as an eco[illegible] means of controlling weeds.

[illegible] requirements require little la[illegible] greatest amount being needed [illegible] time, which usually is [illegible] month when the average [illegible] employment for his la[illegible]

[illegible] be erected cheaper [illegible] other class of livestock. [illegible] that are wasted, and [illegible] a nuisance are utilized [illegible] marketable products [illegible] mutton, and sheep may be [illegible] as to provide fresh [illegible] season of the year.

[illegible]LISHING THE FLOCK.

[illegible] twenty-five ewes is a suf[illegible] for any one without [illegible] to undertake as a business [illegible] flock. A farm flock should [illegible] of twenty-five or more sheep. [illegible] flock of fifty ewes makes it [illegible] to invest in a good pure-bred [illegible] and to use him to his capacity, [illegible] provides a unit number for [illegible] equipment.

[illegible] type and breed have been [illegible], the individual breeding [illegible] must be selected. This is im[illegible] since within a breed there is [illegible] variation of type, vigor, quality, form, resistance to disease, wool, breeding ability, milking tendencies, disposition and grazing ability.

The ram is the most important breeding animal in the flock, since he contributes 50 per cent, at least, to each crop of lambs, and often more. If he is a pure-bred and a good ram, he will be more prepotent than the females of the flock. Even in a small flock of sheep, where the object is to sell the surplus as mutton, a pure-bred ram is essential for the greatest profit. The Wisconsin and Missouri Experiment Stations have, on investigation, shown that pure-bred mutton rams sire lambs that make greater gains, reach a higher condition of flesh at less cost in amount of feed consumed, and command a higher market price than lambs sired by a "scrub" ram. To begin with, one or two pure-bred ewes should be added with the females of a grade flock. By a gradual building up of a pure-bred flock, the breeder will be able to handle such flock, after having gained the necessary experience on the cheaper grade ewes. Another inducement in gradually working into a pure-bred flock is the extra profit derived from raising stock of beauty and merit.

AGE OF BREEDING SHEEP.

A sheep should not be used for service until one year of age. As a yearling, a ram may be mated with as many as thirty ewes without injury. As a two-year-old, a ram is at his best. He can be used until eight or ten years of age if properly managed. He should never be allowed to become too fat or be used excessively.

A ewe should be at least a yearling before raising her first lambs, otherwise her size and vigor will be so stunted as to result in smaller and weaker lambs. In the Merino breeds the ewes are often two years old before raising their first lambs. The mutton breeds are not, on the whole, as long-lived as the Merino sheep. The average age when ewes of Shropshire breed are disposed of is about six to seven years, while for the Delaine Merinos, it is about nine years.

Some ewes at six years of age lose their teeth ("broken mouths"), and should then be sold. Ewes average a larger percentage of increase in lambs after they reach full maturity at three years of age, and until after they are six years old, when the rate of increase diminishes.

Age in a sheep may be readily estimated, since the permanent set of teeth gradually replaces the temporary (milk) teeth. A sheep is a lamb until the first pair of incisors replace the central pair of temporary incisors (sheep have no incisors on the upper jaw), at about twelve months of age. The second pair of permanent incisors replace their corresponding temporary third pair are replaced at the end of three years, and the fourth pair at the end of four years, when a sheep is said to be fully matured.

ANTIQUES

When in Hamilton don't fail to see our display of China, Art Pottery, Cut Glass and Antique Furniture, Pictures, etc. Come and look around, you will be made welcome.

ROBERT JUNOR
82 KING ST. E. SOUTH SIDE
Hamilton, Ont.

PALE, FEEBLE GIRLS

Weakness Generally Comes On as Womanhood Approaches.

Girls upon the threshold of womanhood often drift into a decline in spite of all care and attention. How often one sees girls who have been strong and lively become suddenly weak, depressed, irritable and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—a crisis in the life of every girl—and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood pure and rich with the red tint of health. If the blood is not healthy at this critical stage the body is weakened and grave disorders follow. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls from what might have been lifelong invalidism or an early death. They are a blood-builder of unequalled richness, strengthening weak nerves and producing a liberal supply of red, healthy blood which every girl needs to sustain her strength. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved their great value over and over again to young women whose health was failing. Miss A. Sternburg, Haileybury Road, New Liskeard, Ont., says: "I have much reason to be grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they restored me to health, if, indeed, they did not save my life. In 1911 I began to feel run down, and the doctor who was called in said that mine was a bad case of anaemia. I lost flesh, always felt tired, and I got so nervous that I could scarcely hold a cup to take a drink. My heart would flutter alarmingly. The doctor did not seem to be able to help me at all and my family and friends all thought that I was in a decline and could not recover. I was in bed for some weeks when an aunt came to see me and urged that I try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My father got a supply, and by the time I had taken three boxes there was a noticeable improvement, and from that on I steadily progressed toward recovery. I continued using the pills for some time longer, and they restored me to my old time health and strength. I shall never cease to praise this medicine, and to urge all weak run down girls to give it a fair trial as I have proved in my own case their great merit."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIRD'S 3-ROOM HOUSE.

A Hammerhead's Nest Has Three Rooms, All Big and Strong.

No single room apartment satisfies the hammerhead. When he builds his nest he divides it into three rooms—a reception hall, a drawing-room, and a bedroom.

The entire structure is built of sticks, dome shape, and sometimes six feet in diameter. The bird is so good a carpenter and engineer that the nest will bear the weight of a man.

In appearance the bird looks always as if he needed a haircut. His long locks, hanging down his neck, have given him his name, hammerhead.

The entrance to this domelike nest is small and on the concealed side. The first room is the hall, where the hammer head lives when he fears attack. Behind this is the drawing-room, the home of the young birds when they outgrow the bedroom.

The bedroom is higher than the rest and safe from floods. Here the female bird deposits eggs on a nest of leaves, and both parents take turns at keeping them warm.

The hammerhead lives in Africa, usually builds his nest near a stream and eats fish, frogs, lizards and small snakes.

* * *

Another consideration in the cultivation of happiness is the importance of acquiring the habit of realizing our blessings while they last.—Lecky.

BREADWINNER GOES --INCOME LESSENS

THE FAMILIES OF OUR SOLDIERS WOULD BE HEAVY LOSERS WERE IT NOT FOR THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

The Canadian mother of a family, whose husband is on duty in France, receives from the Government $20 a month as separation allowance. She gets, also, one-half of her husband's pay, say $16. This makes a total of $26. With her husband at home, the family income would be $65 per month, assuming that the bread-winner earned two dollars and a half per day. It will readily be seen that the economical position of the family is distinctly lowered, for the cost of the husband's food and clothing would not be nearly equal to the decrease in the family income.

It is the condition of affairs so created that the Canadian Patriotic Fund seeks to modify. It was called into existence at the opening of the war by the prompt revelation that without some such fund at least two of every three families left behind by our soldiers would be in need. It went without saying that Canada had no intention of allowing the brave wives of her brave men to make the wholly unnecessary sacrifice such suffering would mean, and consequently the Canadian Patriotic Fund became a national undertaking the moment the need for it became apparent. Generous Canada, from east to west, gave the necessary money, and patriotic men and women, in every city and county, undertook the task of assisting the soldiers' families and of supervising the distribution of the fund.

Clearly, with the increasing size of our armies, and the alarmingly rapid growth of the cost of living, the fund must be increased. In 1917, Ontario will be asked for six million dollars, against five millions in 1916. The province is prosperous, and there is no good reason why this sum should not be guaranteed by the end of January. In that month, campaigns will be held in a large number of the towns and cities, and energetic work, coupled with generous loosening of the purse-strings, should ensure that by the end of the month the fund will see its way clear to fulfil its duty towards Ontario families until Dec. 31, 1917.

The Other Side.

The disciples of Izaak Walton had found a perfect stream for the exercise of their art, and they settled themselves for a day's fishing, undeterred by a notice-board. The board, which had been painted by an amateur, read as follows:

"Notice—These grounds is privet, and yer can't fish ere. These fish ain't the kind to be tempted by worms, and there"

Here space ran out and the injunction was left uncompleted. For two hours the anglers sat by the stream, tempting the trout not with worms, but with the very latest and most expensive bait.

But nothing happened. Then suddenly appeared the owner of the grounds and the author of the notice-board.

"Hi, you two! 'Ave yer read that board?"

"Well, yes, we did—but—er—er—we thought you wouldn't mind, and we couldn't find your house, or we would have—"

"Oh, it don't matter! I only thought, seein' yer fishin' there, that you 'adn't read both sides of the board. If you 'ave, of course, go on amusin' yourselves."

A hasty glance at the other side of the board showed that it continued the exhortation begun on the front, as follows:

"Ain't no fish."—Chicago News.

Climbing Down.

Macarty applied for a job as a builder's laborer and was asked by the foreman what experience he had. "Some," said the applicant, "ye don't need any experience for hard work at all, at all." "Oh, but I want to know," said the foreman, "if you've been used to going up a ladder." "That's all right," replied Macarty; "you'll have nothing to complain about. Sure Oi [illegible] the first time Oi went up a ladder. It was down a well."—London Mail.

SURE OF HIMSELF.

Engineer Risked Life to Prove His Ability.

Eighty years ago the granite obelisk that stood sentinel before the palace of Rameses III., at Luxor, for more than 30 centuries, was taken to Paris. Its erection in the Place de la Concorde was marked by a fine example of civic courage. It had been brought from Egypt by the Engineer Lebas in a river boat, specially constructed at Toulon, to navigate the Nile and the Seine.

This boat was towed through the sea by a warship. When the cables used in raising the obelisk were strained almost to breaking Lebas placed himself under the enormous stone as it began to move. If a single cable had broken all would have been over with the engineer. Explaining his hardihood Lebas said it was to show the crowd of onlookers that he was sure of his calculations. A single error and he would have been crushed and he preferred a tragic end to dishonor. "This," said Le Cri de Paris, "was in 1836, before our day of interviews and Lebas occupied only a few lines in The Constitutional, no more, no less, than the periodical adventures of the sea serpent."—Exchange.

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline

IT CURES RHEUMATISM.

Thousands of people, chuck full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.

"My goodness, but Nerviline is a miracle worker," writes Mrs. [illegible] Chapman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was so crippled up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do a bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frightfully sore that I [illegible] at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful, good old liniment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a short time about my work as usual."

No matter where the pain is, no matter how distressing the pain, you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbago, sciatica, lame back, colds, chest trouble and all general winter ills. Keep a bottle handy and you'll be saved lots of trouble and have smaller doctor bills. 25c, at dealers everywhere.

Why the Rain Follows Lightning.

[illegible]

Napoleon On Horseback.

[illegible]

CANADIANS
WANTED FOR THE
ROYAL NAVY

Canadians wanted for the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve for immediate overseas service. Only men of good character and good physique accepted.

Pay $1.10 Minimum per day—Free Kit.
$20.00 per Month Separation Allowance.

Experienced men from 38 to 45, and boys from 15 to 18 accepted for service in the CANADIAN NAVAL PATROLS for defence of the Coasts.
Apply to COMMODORE ÆMILIUS JARVIS
Naval Recruiting Officer, Ontario Area
103 Bay Street, TORONTO, or
Dept. of the Naval Service
OTTAWA

THE ORIGIN OF OUR SURNAMES

How Men in Long Ago Times Distinguished Men.

Trades, Places, Events Personal Characteristics.

It cannot but be admitted that considerable food for thoughtful reflection is offered in the study of the origination of names. It was all very well when the world was young; but, as a writer says, "As the population increased and communication became possible and easier the supply of single names was not equal to the demand, and people began to get individuals bearing the same name mixed. It was at this time that the surname was thought of and adopted, so that families might be distinguished one from the other."

Trades and callings are in this day represented in the names of Baker, Carver, Shoemaker, Tyler, Chandler, Mason, Cutler, Carter, Saddler, Slater, Butcher, Draper, Thatcher, Fletcher, Hooper, Cheeseman, Turner, Joiner, Cooper, Gilder, Mercer, Skinner, Coleman, Sawyer, Tanner, Spicer, Cook, Tutor, Miner, Potter, Weaver, Gardner, Archer, Merchant, Porter, Wainwright, Taylor, Shepherd, Glover and ever so many others.

[illegible] Clifford Howard, who has devoted himself to this pleasant study: "Such names as Hall, Stair, Garrett, Kitchen and Chambers also record the occupations of our forefathers who in these cases were engaged in the households of the nobility and had charge of such apartments as the names indicate. Others held higher offices, and from them we have the surnames Page, Butler, Proctor, Forester, Steward, Bailey, Parker and Woodward and Hayward, the keepers respectively, of the forest and the cattle."

In other localities it was usual to point out an individual by the place of his birth or residence, a custom which resulted in the adoption of such surnames as French, Scott, Welsh, English, Hall, [illegible], Cornish and Cornwallis, Kent, York, Chichester, Lincoln, Wells, [illegible], [illegible], Hurst, Buchanan, Preston and Bancroft. A great many of this sort were originally the names of baronial estates, which names the tenants adopted as surnames.

Those who were not of such high estate were forced to content themselves with humbler titles. Thus John, who lived by the brook, became John Brook, and David who lived by a giant oak, was called David Tree.

Richard, who lived at the end of the town, became Richard Townsend, while his brother, who lived under the brow of a hill, became known as Peter Underwood. Those who lived near the water took the name of Atwater.

At the time family names began to be used the shops of the merchants were not numbered as they are now, but were known by their signs, which were suspended at the front doors and bore pictures of all sorts of animals, vegetables, birds, flowers, fishes and insects. It was customary to speak of an innkeeper, then, as John of the Bear, or Dick of the Swan, and, as [illegible] these names were soon converted into Bear, Horse, Hart, Bull, Fox, Wolf, Colt, Hare, Peacock, Lamb, Swan, Peacock, Heron, Dove, Partridge, Cock, Finch, Hawk, Crane and Drake, as well as Lure, Cauble, Haddock, Herring, Pike, Perch and others. From vegetables, trees, fruits and flowers we have Bean, Broome, Flower, Birch, Ash, Hawthorne, Hazel, Peach, Flower, Nettle, Vine, Olive, Pear, Branch and Bay, besides dozens more.

The store signs bore other devices, and from these we have such names as Bell, Hammer, [illegible], Mantell, Jewel, Patten, Pipes and others.

A great many nicknames remained fixed as family names, the most important being those which referred to the color of hair or complexion, and from these came such well-known names as Brown, Black, Gray, White, Reed (red), Blount (fair). Oth[illegible] were given for some personal attainment or characteristic, such as Armstrong, Mitchell (great), Sanger, Whistler, Elwell, Swindells, Strong, Weak, Small, Osgood (well built), Longfellow, Crookshanks, Longman, Whitehead, Broadhead, Swift, [illegible], Noble, Hardy, Doolittle, Goodman, Darling, Long, Short, Bachelor, Savage, Wise, Sweet, Meek and Mild.

To these might be added King, Queen, Pope, [illegible], Knight, [illegible], Abbott, Squire, Earl, Duke, [illegible], Lord, Prince and others, which were originally given to individuals because of their bearing the titles or because of services they may have rendered them.

There are many more which do not come under any particular heading, but owe their origin to some event which the name appropriately indicate. Joy, Bliss, Morrow, Winter, March, May, Weeks and so on.—Exchange.

Odds and Ends.

Of all the colors, red is the most conspicuous at a distance.

Homing pigeons can travel 70 miles an hour.

It is believed to be no rare occurrence for a condor to soar 4,000 feet above the earth.

In the construction of their nests birds generally avoid the use of materials of bright colors, which would attract the attention of enemies.

Feathered Surgeons.

Snipe and woodcock have often been taken with a mass of feathers on one of the legs. This mass when examined has always been found to cover a broken bone. The feathers have been carefully and neatly twisted round the part where the limb was fractured in such a way as to prove that they had been put on intentionally as a bandage or splint, and the repairs have been made quite as skillful as if performed by a qualified surgeon.

A well-known naturalist actually watched a woodcock through his glasses drag a broken leg to the margin of a stream. There the bird took some clay and, after working it into a paste with his beak, smeared it round the leg in layer after layer, adding a number of downy feathers, which it plucked from its own back and breast. When the operation was finished the bird stood still for more than an hour, no doubt to give the plaster time to set.

Wounds on other parts of the body have also been found plastered in the same way.—London Answers.

To Every Women Who is in Pain

MRS. WILLIAMS SAYS USE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She Suffered for Two Years, but Three Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills Made Her a New Woman.

Adamsville, Kent Co., N. B., Feb. 8.—(Special)—"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to every woman who suffers." So says Mrs. Williams, a well-known and highly respected lady residing here. Mrs. Williams was a sufferer for two years till she used Dodd's Kidney Pills. She found in them quick relief and complete cure. That is why she is enthusiastic in her praise of them.

"My troubles started with a cold, Mrs. Williams states. "I never seemed to get over the effects of it. I had cramps in my muscles and my joints were stiff. There were dark circles under my eyes, which were puffed and swollen. I had a bitter taste in my mouth, and I suffered from severe headaches.

"I felt heavy and sleepy after meals and had attacks of neuralgia. Heart flutterings and rheumatism were soon added to my troubles. I took just three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I cannot be too glad that I did so."

Every one of Mrs. Williams' symptoms was a symptom of kidney disease. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

JADE TALISMAN BRINGS POWER.

Centuries Old Idol Means Much to the Chinese.

Sun Yat-Sen's Failure Blamed to It's Loss.

The death of Yuan Shi-Kai, president of China, is inseparably linked with the recovery of the long lost image of the Chinese Goddess of Mercy, Kwanyin, in the minds of many Chinese, who see in these events the strange workings of the mysterious power to be controlled by the idol. Strangely enough, the image was reported found on the very day that the president died.

The Goddess of Mercy was stolen from Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the revolutionary leader, and the failure of the Sun Yat-Sen revolution was laid to the loss of this image.

The Kwanyin, for which a reward of $[illegible] was offered, was carved from a solid block of rare apple green jade. It is centuries old. In its base, cunningly fashioned so as to defy detection, there was a tiny secret chamber, and in this chamber reposed the one symbol held in the greatest of veneration throughout the land of the Chinese.

What form that symbol takes is today a profound mystery. This much is known: It is the talisman possession of which rules the greatest of all China's secret societies.

It is whispered that possession of the supreme symbol came to Dr. Sun during the period of his life when he was a fugitive from the wrath of the Manchus. There are those among the slant-eyed dreamers of China's [illegible] land who say that possession of the symbol concealed in the base of the jade Kwanyin has been responsible for much of the uncanny power which Dr. Sun exercised over the people of China, and that it obtained sanctuary for him on countless occasions from those who sought his life for a heavy blood price. The talisman is called "The Horns of the Hare."

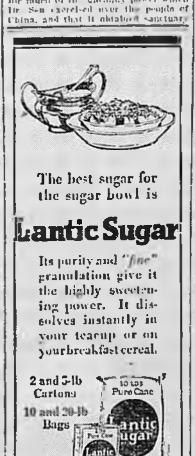
Time after time, through hired Japanese agents, for whom the talisman held little of awe, attempts were made to steal the jade Kwanyin and its priceless contents.

It was in 1914, two years after Dr. Sun had abdicated in favor of Yuan Shi-Kai, that the men who had clung to his trail day and night for many years attained their object. Dr. Sun at that time was secluded in a house surrounded by a vast garden, encircled by a high and almost unscalable wall, which was constantly under guard. His household was trustworthy to the last man.

Dr. Sen was alone in the garden. Somewhere along the wall a guard patrolled. At last the sentry passed near a spot where a lean yellow man crouched hidden and waiting.

Into the calm Japanese air shot a "smoke ring" of concentrated poison vapor. One after another the rings settled about the unsuspecting guard. He fell limp and unconscious to the grass. From behind Dr. Sun, too, the jets of [illegible] came volleying. Without a cry the man of China's destiny collapsed, temporarily suffocated.

Over the walls appeared the ends of long ladders. Up swarmed lithe, active yellow men, dropping into the garden and rifling the unconscious leader's garments. A moment, and they swarmed up the trunks of trees growing beside the wall and dropped again to the outside.



The best sugar for the sugar bowl is
Lantic Sugar
Its purity and "fine" granulation give it the highly sweetening power. It dissolves instantly in your teacup or on your breakfast cereal.
2 and 5-lb Cartons
10 and 20-lb Bags
"The All-Purpose Sugar".

HAVE YOU ECZEMA?

Would you like to end that terrible itching, that burning pain; to heal those horrid sores?

You have tried all sorts of fatty ointments, lotions and powders. Put them aside now and give Nature a chance as represented by Zam-Buk.

Zam-Buk is made from herbal essences; is a natural healer. Is not something you have to send to the end of the world for, and pay a heavy price! Every druggist will sell you Zam-Buk and for 50c. only. Just give it a fair trial and incidently give yourself ease by the quickest route. See name on box:—

ZAM-BUK

Musical Information.

It may be so and it may not, but a Los Angeles student affirms it is an examination paper, and here it is: "Beethoven discovered the sonata in four moves. Before this it was a sweet. He wrote many piano sonatas for the violin and they were called string quartettes. When a piano sonata was for an orchestra it was called a symphony. The ninth piano sonata he wrote for voices to sing."—Exchange.

Irritable Nerves Restored and Health Regained In a Simple Way

The man or woman who is rundown, not feeling up to the mark, perhaps irritable, nervous or sleepless can well afford to learn about the wonderful results the newly discovered blood-food is giving to folks that use it.

There is wonderful power in this new blood-food, and every weak, pallid person can be quickly nourished back to health that uses it as directed.

After each meal, with a sip or two of water, you simply take two little chocolate-coated tablets, sold in all drug stores under the name of "FERROZONE."

The effect is noticeable at once. You feel happier, brighter, more contented. That old-time feeling of weariness departs—you forget your "nerves" and no longer get irritable or cross over trifling annoyances.

There is a reason for this change and that reason consists of the fact that Ferrozone contains blood-making materials you can get in no other way.

Ferrozone makes the blood tingle and sing with vitality. This ensures lots of nourishment and strength and being supplied to every part of the body.

No wonder the eyes brighten and the cheeks radiate color and happiness: With abundance of strength, a keen appetite, good digestion and plenty of sound sleep—all the result of Ferrozone—you quickly feel as if life held new charms and pleasures.

Origin of Baliol.

Baliol college, Oxford, originated in medieval times. John de Baliol, the founder, for certain outrages on the church was condemned to be flogged in the porch of Durham cathedral and to endow poor scholars at Oxford. This occurred before 1268, so Baliol can make a plausible claim to be the oldest college with a continuous history in Oxford university. Although Wiclif was one of its earliest masters, the college rarely prospered until the close of the eighteenth century, and at one time the members became so notorious for drunkenness that they were styled "men of Bellial." The intellectual pre-eminence of Balliol dates from the days of Dr. Parsons, who invented the examination system, and the arrival from the Scottish universities of the "Snell Scholars," of whom Cobbett scoffed.—London Chronicle.

THE PENSION BOARD

The Dominion Government have appointed a Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada with offices in Ottawa. As this board wishes to cause as little delay as possible in dealing with communications with regard to pensions, they wish the public to correspond directly with the Board of Pension Commissioners, Ottawa.

A great deal of delay may be caused by communications being sent through other departments of the Government.

The Patriotic Fund Association and the Military Hospitals Commission have kindly consented to give information and assistance to those wishing to write direct to the Board of Pension Commissioners. These societies have offices in certain localities throughout Canada.

In addition, in order to facilitate the granting of pensions the board is opening branch pension offices in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, London, Hamilton, Toronto, Barrie, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, St John and Halifax. All information with regard to pensions may be obtained from these offices.

WIT AND HUMOR

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

(Baltimore American.)

"I am studying out the best way to abate the smoke nuisance." "That's easy. Buy good cigars."

A DISTINCTION.

(Life.)

"I hope you find your daughter much [illegible] since she went to college." "She's educated," replied the old-fashioned mother, "but I can't say she's improved."

HER VIEW.

(Boston Transcript.)

He—Then perhaps you are afraid that I cannot support a wife.

She—Not in the least; but I think that a wife might find you insupportable.

THE ULTIMATE CONSUMER.

(Puck)

Frieda—What is an ultimate consumer?

Father—The ultimate consumer, dear, is some one who ultimately consumes his last penny in keeping body and soul together.

BARBEROUS.

(Baltimore American)

"How were the reports at the club to-night?"

"One member read a hair-raising account and another made a bald statement."

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Why are American men taller than those of most races?"

"It's a case of evolution."

"Huh?"

"We had to grow to reach those street car straps."

MANUAL LABOR.

(Boston Transcript)

Visitor—Do you employ many women on your farm, Mr. Hawbuck?

Uncle Si—No sir; they be too contrary and onsartin. Gimme manual labor every time.

A NATURAL MISTAKE.

(Boston Transcript)

An American motoring through a small Scotch town was pulled up for excessive speed.

"Didn't you see that notice 'Dead Slow'?" inquired the constable.

"Course I did," returned the Yankee; "but I thought it referred to your durned town."

GOOD ADVICE.

(Boston Transcript)

Subbubs—My neighbor has a big dog that we are all afraid of. What would you advise?

Lawyer—Get a bigger one. Five dollars, please.

SLIGHTLY TWISTED.

(Boston Transcript)

Mrs. Kawler—I hear that your cousin Robert is not well.

Mrs. Blunderby—No; the poor man had an attack of nervous prostration and he's gone away to vituperate."

HAD ONE RESULT.

(Washington Star)

"Has the investigation of the high cost of living had any result?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "I think it has called the attention of everybody who had anything to sell to the fashion of shoving up the price."

VERSE AND POETRY.

(Life)

"What is the distinction between verse and poetry?"

"Well, if you can understand it it's verse, and if you can't understand it it's poetry."

A MEAN RETORT.

(Louisville Courier Journal)

"There's no demand for tragedians any more."

"Then why not go with the tide and be a comedian, old top?"

"Oh, I couldn't be funny if I tried."

"That's isn't necessary."

ELSIE KNEW.

(Boston Transcript)

Little Elsie—Mamma, I must have a new dress for my dolly.

Mother—Why, dear?

Elsie—'Cause I quarrelled with her, and now that we've made up I give her a new dress.

HIS QUANDRY.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"I don't always get stenographers who can spell."

"Refer 'em to the dictionary, old chap."

"But I'm in the motor business. And it has produced a flock of words that haven't gotten into the dictionary as yet."

MANY WHO SHOULD

(Washington Star)

"Do you believe in telepathy?"

"You mean," responded Miss Cayenne, "the art of communicating thought without audible speech?"

"Something like that."

"I am not sure whether it could be made to work or not. But I know a number of people who ought to try it."

A DIFFERENT MEANING.

(Buffalo Express)

"It's a long time from nuts to soup."

"You mean 'soup to nuts.'"

"I don't. I am referring to the long time from one good dinner to another."

FATIGUING.

(Baltimore American.)

She—Do you officers have regular times to be tired?

He—Of course not. Why do you ask?

She—Then why do you have to wear fatigue uniforms?

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

(Life).

"In our town we are celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of our settlement."

"That must be a great place to live in—where you have to settle only once in a hundred years."

WISE ORATOR.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Now, where do you want your speech to come?"

"Put me on before the celery is served. Two hundred people eating celery in unison makes it very difficult to be heard."

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"I suppose if your candidate had been elected some radical changes would have been made in the government?"

"Yes," replied the party worker, in a melancholy tone. "We had good men picked out for all the important places."

USELESS.

(Boston Transcript).

"I wonder why you can't argue with a woman."

"You can; but it doesn't do any good."

QUITE AGREED.

(Life)

Patient's Wife—I hope you gentlemen are not going to disagree!

First Doctor—Oh, not about anything important. Dr. Fell insists on trepanning; Dr. Fluke holds out for removing the appendix, and I am in favor of amputation at the knee. But we're all agreed that an operation is necessary.

THE GENTLER METHOD.

(Boston Transcript)

"Pa, why do you insist on my singing when Mr. Dunley calls?"

"Well, I don't like the fellow, and yet I hate to come right out and tell him to go."

Here Are Two Remarkable Values in Men's Undr war

5 dozen men's heavy ribbed, all wool Shirts and Drawers, sizes 36 to 44. Made of good quality yarn and entirely free of burrs. Good heavy weight and unshrinkable. Special price per piece 75c

8 dozen Shirts and Drawers in extra fine, soft quality wool underwear. Guaranteed by manufacturers to be all wool and unshrinkable. This line also comes in heavy ribbed quality and is especially good for outside wear. It's warm, heavy and comfortable. Sizes 36 to 44. Special price $1 each.

Wool Blankets at $4.75 a Pair

It's positively a remarkable value in blankets with the market in its present condition and the far-seeing housewife is strongly advised to supply her wants while these last. There is a small percentage of cotton in these, but very small, and while they are graded as high class unions, these blankets are practically all wool. Clear white, evenly napped and soft. They have neatly finished edges and there's of pink and blue striped borders. Sizes 68 x 86. Special per pair .... $4.75.

These Values in Ladies' Underwear

Cannot be Repeated Next Season

The lower grades of Underwear, lines at 25c to 50c cannot be had next season, we are told, and the better grades have increased in price from 40% to 60%. This makes our present stock unquestionably good buying.

In the union qualities and fleece lined our prices are—25c, 35c, 40c, 50c and 75c.

And in fine wool grades—85c, $1, $1.25, $1.50, to $2.50.

Boys' Sweater Coats

Are Good Buying at Our Prices

$1.00, $1.25 and $1.50

Extra good wool Sweater Coats for boys in fancy knit and with military and shawl collar. They are made of splendid quality yarn and good fast dye, and they're stylish, warm and comfortable.

You'll save by buying these.

STEPHAN BROS.

"GROCERIES"

That embraces a great many things, and a list would fill a newspaper. So we simply want to impress the fact that our Stock embraces all the lines needed in a home and usually carried in a Grocery.

We always make our prices well within the closest, reasonable margin.

GOODE & McKAY
"The People's Grocery"
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

CANNED GOODS!

I am often asked "What do you charge for Canned Tomatoes, Corn and Peas?" My answer is "I WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD"

Tomatoes, always the best brands	15c
Corn " "	12c
Peas " "	10c
Figs, now,	10c or 3 lb for 25c

If you buy 25c worth or a sack of Sugar, you always get the best Redpath or St. Lawrence.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Suggestions for the Cold Spell

Good heavy Comforters on sale just when you them. $2.50 for $1.60; $2.50 for $2.00; $3.00 for $2.50; $4.00 for $3.50; $4.50 for $3.95. See window display.

Sweater Coats for men, women and children at a very attractive saving in price as they must all be cleared out.

Boy's and youth's overcoats selling this month at reduction in price that will astonish you.

Coats—Misses and children's—now reduced to clear at $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.25, $2.50, $3.00, $4.50 to $7.50. Reg. values $4.50 to $12.00. Don't miss these.

Note these special prices on ladies' stylish winter coats and secure while we have your size. Prices $1.50, $1.50, $3.00, $4.50, $7.75, $8.95, $9.50, $11.50, $14.50.

We have a splendid assortment of wool Toques, Mitts, G[illegible] Knitted Skirts, wool overalls and wool hosiery.

Short ends of all kinds on our remnant table, something every day at prices that mean lively selling.

Traveller's samples of Mitts, Toques, Underwear, Tams, Hoods, etc., at a saving of 25 to 30 per cent on ordinary prices.

McBurney & Co.

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

MILDMAY

Carrick Council held its regular meeting in the Town Hall on Monday Feb. 12th.

Mrs. Reba Schwalm and Miss Dora Wendt went to Ford last week to visit Mr. R. H. Wendt, their brother.

The Mildmay Hockey team drove over to Teeswater on Feb. 6 despite the poor roads and played a game with the Teeswater puck pushers. Our team got the short end of 7—0 score. Teeswater is to play the return game here on Thursday the night of the carnival.

Mr. George Brahler of Kincardine visited in town a few days last week before leaving for Grand Rapids where he has secured a position.

Mr. Ed. Wittick's visited friends in town a couple of days last week.

The death of Mrs. Ellen Coll, a widow who lived on the town line near Ambleside occurred on Saturday morning. Mrs. Coll had been ailing for several years but recently had been suffering from an attack of la Grippe which ended in her death. The funeral took place on Monday morning.

Mr. Fred Bridges left last Friday for Port Hope to attend the funeral of his father who died suddenly on Thursday evening.

On account of the heavy snowfall no ice is being harvested the past two weeks at Witter's mill pond.

On Friday evening a game of hockey was played between two local teams, the Has-beens against the Will-bes. The Will-be's won by several goals after a hotly contested game.

A carnival is being held in the local rink next Thursday night Feb. 15 under the auspices of the Union Jack Knitting Club.

Hergott Bros. have received a new 1917 Chevrolet demonstrator and will handle this car the coming season.

George Buhlman after taking a course of telegraphy in Toronto for the past four months has taken a position as operator at Pelisle on the C. N. R.

The local blacksmiths met some time ago to arrange for an increase in prices and have the new schedule of prices, printed and set up in their shops.

Mr. P. D. Liesemer was in Clifford last week attending the funeral of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Gottleib Klemmer.

GLAMIS

On Monday morning the thermometer registered the coldest here this winter—25 below zero.

Mrs. W. J. McKeeman returned home on Saturday from an extended visit with relatives in Beamsville and Weston.

Messrs. Cecil and Harvey Gatland of Pinkerton were Sunday visitors at Mr. James Thompson's.

Mrs. Kenneth McGregor (nee Miss Catharine McLean) and sons of Sedgewick, Alta., arrived here this week on a short visit to relatives and friends.

Mr. Charles Graham made a matrimonial business trip to Sarnia this week. Congratulations.

Miss Alice McClelland of Detroit, Mich., is a guest of Miss Charlotte McKinnon.

Mr. John Groves, mail carrier here, had a Bruce telephone installed in his residence last week.

Rev. D. McLennan of Walkerton attended his brother's funeral here on Sunday.

DIED—On Friday, at his late residence, lot 32, con. 12, Kincardine Tp., Mr. Kenneth McLennan, aged 70 years 8 months. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from the Baptist Church to Purdy's Cemetery. A full obituary notice will be given in next week's issue.

The many friends of Mr. Martin McKinnon regret to learn of his critical condition in Kincardine Hospital. No hopes of his recovery are given.

Miss Margaret Campbell of Harriston was home for her uncle's funeral.

Mrs. A. J. Smith arrived home from Toronto last week where she left her son Harold in Sick Children's Hospital for treatment.

The Red Cross Society here received a grant of $30 from the Greenock Tp. Council last week.

Mr. Malcolm McLean of Pass, Alta., is home on a visit to his mother, Mrs. Norman McLean, 2nd con. Bruce.

Rev. and Mrs. De Mille are attending the Graham—McNally marriage in Sarnia this week.

A few from here attended the funeral of the late Andrew Kirkconnell at Tiverton on Tuesday.

Miss Alberta Kirktown of Paisley High School sundayed under the parental roof.

PINKERTON

Senator Donnelly returned from Ottawa on Saturday.

Mr. Albert Pinkerton was in Toronto last week attending the meeting of the Ontario Agricultural Society. He was accompanied to the city by his son Harvey.

We were sorry to learn last week that our teacher, Mr. Godfrey McKee, had resigned and wished to leave at once. Mr. McKee has enlisted and left on Tuesday night. He had been teaching here a year and a half and gave general satisfaction. Though sorry to lose him, we honour him for his patriotism and wish him all success. The trustees were fortunate in securing Miss Diehl of Paisley who began her work on Monday.

Do not forget the Red Cross box social on Friday night, Feb. 16th. A good program is being prepared. Come and help the Red Cross Feb. 16.

CARGILL

Mrs. W. M. Cameron entertained the Entrance class on Friday evening.

Miss Ellen Moreland spent the week end with relatives near Paisley.

We are sorry to report the death of Mrs. Colin Campbell of Brant, which occurred at her home on Wednesday last. The deceased was well known and highly esteemed and will be much missed in the community. The funeral which took place at Douglas Hill cemetery on Friday was largely attended. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her loss two sons, James and Edward both of Brant. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Mr. Joseph Clancy made a business trip to Toronto on Saturday.

Mr. Harvey Grice entertained a number of his friends to a snowshoeing party on Monday evening. After a long tramp in the country they repaired to the restaurant where a fine oyster supper was served.

Messrs F H Smith and Walter Hunziger spent Sunday in Walkerton.

The remains of Mrs. Jas. Douglas of Hepworth were interred in the Douglas Hill cemetery on Friday last. Mr. Douglas, husband of the deceased, Mr. Jas. Bowes, Dobbington, Mr. and Mrs. John Bowes and Miss E. Clough of Walkerton were among those who attended the funeral.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church are having a social at the home of Mr. Geo Welsford this Thursday evening.

Four of Mr. Milton Hetsler's children are sick with pneumonia. We all hope for their speedy recovery.

Mr. W. D. Cargill M P P went to Toronto on Tuesday morning to attend the opening of Parliament.

The people of the village are very busy putting in a good supply of ice for the summer. This product seems to be of very good quality.

The following letter was received by Mr. James Gatland from the pure maple sugar and syrup co-operative Agricultural Association awarding him a prize for his syrup and sugar. It is an easy matter to understand why Jim has no trouble in selling his products.

Waterloo Que. Feb 8th 1917, Mr. Jas. Gatland, Cargill, Ont. Dear Sir;—At a meeting of the members of the Association of Victoriaville your products obtained the following number of points out of a possible 100. On Syrup Taste 40 points, Color 25, Density 20. Total 91, 6th place. $1.25. On Sugar Flavor 50 Color 25 and Density 14. Total 89 points 2nd place $2.00. The possible points are Flavor 50, Color 30 points and Density 25 points, on Syrup and on Sugar, Taste 60, Color 25 and Density 15. We are allowing you $3.00 for your products which with your prize money makes a total of $6.25 for which payment is enclosed. Yours truly, Jos H. Lefebvre, Sec-Treas. The Pure Maple Sugar and Syrup Co-operative Agricultural Association.

WESTFORD

There passed away on Saturday night Feb. 3rd at the family residence at Westford, Miss Sarah Fallon in the 69th year of her age, death being due to a paralytic stroke. Miss Fallon was born in the township of Whitechurch, York Co. and came to Bruce Co. with her parents when a child of about eight years. They settled at Westford thru all King's Bush and hewed out a home for themselves from the virgin forest. As there was no school at that time at Westford Miss Fallon attended school at Riversdale and spent her whole life in this neighborhood. She was of a very amiable disposition, a good friend and neighbour and was noted for her piety and hospitality never turning any one away from her door. She is survived by her brother Thomas Fallon and one sister, Mrs. Ewing of Ottawa, formerly of Teeswater. The funeral on Tuesday to the R. C. cemetery at Riversdale was largely attended. Rev. Father Capps conducted the services. Since the death of his sister, Mr. Thos. Fallon has gone to make his home with his niece Mrs. J Cassidy of Greenock.

Mr. Robert Hetherington of Wingham spent last week here visiting friends and old neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. John McGlynn spent Sunday afternoon at Mr Steve Schurbach's, Riversdale.

Mr. James Murray visited at Mr. John Dunkins one day last week.

Mrs. C. Brown and Miss Kate Ruth spent an evening with Miss Lizzie Brown last week.

HANOVER

Pte. Alf. Schillemore writes a friend from a War Hospital in England that he will not lose his arm as expected, but there are a number of bones missing in the elbow which will cripple him for life. He expects to return to Canada soon.

BRANT

S. S. NO. 7.

Sr. IV.—Dan McKeeman, Lillie Scott, Winnie O'Reilly.
Jr. IV.—Jack McKeeman.
Sr. III.—Arthur Young, Maurice Young, Tom Young, Verna Blue, Florence Smith.
Jr. III.—Lela Kerry, Harry Scott, (equal), Marjorie Brown, Frank Desmond, (equal), Nelson Kerry, Sophie Kauffman, Edith Blue, Tracey Desmond.
Sr. II.—Gertie Greenaway, Melvin Pearson, Jennie Alexander, Manuel Napper, Hazel Edmonds
Jr. II.—Percy Gregg, Joe O'Reilly, Charles Greenaway.
Sr. I.—Annie Kauffman.
Jr. I.—Dorothy O'Reilly, Grace Kerry.
Sr. Pr.—Verna Young, George Gregg, Polly Kauffman.
Pr.—Wallace Napper, Henry Young
No. on Roll, 31, Av. Att. 29.

Blanche I. Powell.
Teacher

GREENOCK TP. COUNCIL

McNab's Hotel, Chepstow, Feb 5, 1916.

Council met as per adjournment, all the members present, the Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

The following Accounts were presented for payment.

W Alexander, drawing timber from Church St con to 2...	5 00
A Kunkel gravelling G. L. 15 con 10	12 60
A McKinnon, postage and telephone	[illegible] 40
Jas McKinnon bal on concrete on Church St Bridge	[illegible] 00
I Shoemaker, telephone re Church St Bridge	[illegible]
Thos H Purdy, 51 births, 17 marriages & 29 deaths	[illegible]
Alex Thompson, Church St Bridge	132 00
M L Fairbairn, bal printing contract	13 [illegible]
M McNab, Hall for British Red Cross meet'g, Oct. 21, 1916	2 00
M McNab, Room for Preparedness League meet'g Jan 31	1 00
M McNab Room for Council Meeting	2 00

Sawyer—Campbell—That the foregoing Accounts being found correct be paid and that the Reeve sign checks for same.—Carried.

Communication was read from the Sec. of Glamis Red Cross society stating that had been received from Bruce $82.00 and from Kincardine $30.00.

Check was issued in favour of Laura Cunningham sec. for $20.00 in accordance with motion No 31 of Dec 15, 1916.

Sawyer—Symon—That Auditors Report be adopted, and that Auditors be paid.—Carried.

Checks were issued to J. B. McKinnon for $6.60 and T Houston for $6.65.

Symon—Gilchrist—That this Council go into com. of whole to appoint Assessor, Collector and Printer.—Carried.

The following Applications were received, Thos Fullarton, Wm Ritchie and J J Cassidy for Assessor, and Archie McKinnon for collector of rates.

Sawyer—Gilchrist—That Wm. Ritchie be appointed Assessor and Archie McKinnon Collector and that the Clerk draft By-laws confirming the same.

Symon.—Campbell.—Amendment that John J. Cassidy be appointed Assessor and Archie McKinnon Collector and that the clerk draft By-laws confirming the appointment.—Carried.

By-law No 555 was drafted and read a first time appointing John J. Cassidy Assessor for year 1917.

By-law No 556 was drafted and read a first time appointing Archie McKinnon Collector of rates for the current year.

The following tenders were received for Township printing, the Bruce Times $100, Telescope $150, Teeswater News $135.

Sawyer.—Gilchrist.—That the tender of the Telescope be accepted for ordinary printing at $150 for year 1917.—Carried.

M. M. Schurter made a strong appeal to the Council for an increase in salary.

Campbell.—Gilchrist.—That the Treasurer's salary be increased $10 and that the clerk draft a by-law confirming change.—Carried.

By-law No 557 was drafted and read a first time amending part of By-law No 551 re Treasurers salary, increasing same to $100 per annum.

Gilchrist.—Symon.—That By-laws Nos 555, 556 and 557 be now read a second and third time and finally passed.—Carried.

The Council was addressed by Mrs. Cameron of Cargill in the interests of the Women's Patriotic League, also a letter was read from Miss M. McCoy, Sec. of League asking for grant.

Gilchrist.—Sawyer.—That this Council grant $30 to the W. P. L. of Cargill providing Brant Council supplements it with equal amount.—Carried.

Communication from Wm. Nicholls was read, he offering to fill sink hole opposite Lot 17 Con 10 for the sum of $200 and guarantee same for 3 years.—Ordered filed.

Campbell.—Gilchrist.—That this Council do now adjourn to meet at Pinkerton on Monday March 12th to appoint Pathmasters, Poundkeepers, Fenceviewers and Valuators of Sheep worried by dogs, and for general business.—Carried.

Thos. H. Purdy,
Clerk.

FORMOSA

The wedding took place at the R. C. Church here yesterday morning of Miss Bella Vetsin to Mr. Emil Dundroch of Kitchener. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Brohman. The happy couple will make their home at Kitchener.

+ + +

WOMEN in munition factories! Sure it's nothing new to them they like having arms around them.

News About Town

And it's just like a pig to increase the price to $11 a cwt.

There is one bumper crop this year anyway—the ice crop.

Times that try (some) men's souls—When they read; 'Have you renewed your subscription yet.' Are you one of the 'some.'

The Telescope welcomes all items of interest for its columns and is glad to get it by phone, mail or dropped into the office.

Why is a local newspaper like a woman? Because every man should have one of his own and not run after his neighbour's.

"Read the directions on the bottle, Mandy." "It says: 'For adults, one teaspoon—' "Thunder! that ain't what ails me—what else does it say?"

Many farmers are complaining of the damage done to young fruit trees this winter by the cotton tail rabbits. One preventive is to paint the trunk of the trees.

The Canada Furniture Manufacturers Co. have decided to enlarge the Chair Factory at Wiarton and will give employment to twenty-five or thirty additional men.

Saugeen Council has granted $10 to each Patriotic Association in the township and Bruce Council has voted $25 to every Red Cross organization in that township.

The names of the Wardens of this County since it began a separate organization are: George Cromar, Greenock 1857; John Purvis, Kinloss 1858 & 1861; Jno. Valentine, Greenock 1859; John Bruce, Brant 1860; J. T. Conaway, Southampton 1861; John Gillies, Elderslie 1863 & 1869 to 1872; James Brocklebank, Brant 1864 to 1868; Robt. Baird, Kincardine town 1871 to 1879; Robert Purvis, Kinloss 1880 to 1882. Then followed in order for one year only: Jas. Tolton, Jno. Pierson, H. T. Potts, W. T. Johnston, Wm. Dickson, Wm. Scott, John Douglas, Jas. Gaunt, J. S. McDonald, Dr. Bradley, James Bryan, J. H. Scott, Wm. McIntosh, J. H. Elliot, J. Shouldice, L. T. Bland, D. M. Jermyn, P. Cummings, Ben Cannon, J. J. Donnelly, R. Watt, Jno. McCharles, Wm. McDonald, A. W. Robb, Frank McDougall, H. E. Hilker, S. J. Park, Dr. Crow, I. Shoemaker, D. A. McDonald, S. R. Brill, A. Mowbinney, Alex McCannel, Alex McNabb, Dennis Izzard.

+ + +

Enlists in Transport

Mr. Joe Reichenbach wrote to his brother, Con. Reichenbach from New Westminster B. C. recently that he had enlisted with the Inland Transport Service and was leaving with his son, Wallis, for the Persian Gulf. If Joe is as good as he was in the old lacrosse days, he will be a valuable acquisition to the King's forces.

+ + +

Have Lost Only Two

Lt.-Col. Weir of the 160th Batt'n wrote a friend at Toronto recently:—"Our parade state when we arrived in England on October 29th, 1916, showed 1009 of all ranks on the strength of the unit.' From that day to this only two men have been discharged, both being brought on by defective feet brought on by military training. Our parade state to-day shows 1007 men on our strength, the difference being accounted for by transfers to other units since arrival in England."

Have You Started the New Year Right?

BY RESOLVING TO SHOP AT
OUR STORE

You will find here much to interest you, much that you need, all at exceptionally low prices.

NEVER OVERLOOK A BARGAIN

Everything we sell comes under that heading.

THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRICE AND SERVICE.

Put us to the Test.

Butterick Quarterly

Complete forecast of the latest Paris and New York fashions as interpreted by exclusive Butterick Designers.

25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR 15c IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerton

Winter Footwear

The Latest Styles and the Best Qualities. No misrepresentation here. Repair department in connection.

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.75
Year	1.50

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts	2.50

Wonderful Invention -The New [illegible]

It is not a talking [illegible] wonderful invent[illegible] detection from the [illegible] Superiority of th[illegible] NO NEEDLES [illegible] NO PARTIALLY R[illegible] MUSIC [illegible] INDESTRUCTIBLE [illegible] No unevenness in playi[illegible] discordant qualities, [illegible] records.

Won't you please call [illegible] further information abo[illegible] invention. I shall esteem [illegible] -ilege of giving you a f[illegible] stration at your home.

R. L. GIBSO[illegible]
JEWELER • WAL[illegible]

Read the Ads.

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective. Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates.

The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Central Gro[illegible]

For One Week Commencing

Feb. 15th

Peas 9c a tin
Corn 9c "
Tomatoes 15c a tin

Not more than three tins to a customer.

W. G. Searle
Phone 101 Walkerton

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 8 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, FEBRUARY 22nd 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

HEALTHY KIDNEYS NECESSARY

Medical science has never found anything much better than good old Buchu and Juniper for the kidneys. Nine times in ten the doctor will prescribe one or the other for kidney troubles.

Nyal's Kidney Pills contain buchu and juniper combined in scientific proportions with other valuable kidney and bladder tonics.

These pill banish backache and give permanent relief in kidney and bladder ills that have not reached the advanced chronic stage.

25c and 50c Boxes

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

ONTARIO FARMERS

Existing war conditions demand that you give the question of seed special attention this year. Seed of desirable varieties and high germination power will be factors influencing yields.

If you have not secured your seed

LET THE ONTARIO DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE HELP YOU.

Farmers having Seed Grain or Potatoes for sale may forward samples to this office stating varieties, price and quantity.

Farmers wishing to purchase seed are also invited to communicate with this office stating variety and quantity, and an effort will be made to put them in touch with farmers having seed for sale.

Write to N. C. McKAY,

W. H. Hearst, Minister of Agriculture.

District Representative WALKERTON

People aren't fooled by words these days. They want facts. There are plenty of facts behind

Regal Shoes
National Style

Backed by real leather and honest workmanship. Sold by

Ramsey
The Shoeman

Wonderful Invention
-The New Edison

It is not a talking machine. It is a wonderful invention which baffles detection from the original.

Superiority of the New Edison
NO NEEDLES TO CHANGE
NO PARTIALLY REPRODUCED MUSIC
INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORDS

No unevenness in playing, no harsh, discordant qualities, no shortened records.

Won't you please call or write for further information about this new invention. I shall esteem the privilege of giving you a free demonstration at your home.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER • WALKERTON

Our Semi-Annual Slack Season Sale

Ends Saturday, Feb. 24 Get Your Order In!

18 Suits and 18 Overcoats will be Sold at a $5.00 Cut

$28.00	Suits at	$23.00
27.00	"	22.00
26.00	"	21.00
25.00	"	20.00
24.00	"	19.00
23.00	"	18.00
22.00	"	17.00
21.00	"	16.00
20.00	"	15.00

Overcoats Cut the Same

Best of Trimmings and Workmanship Guaranteed.

Remember

This is a chance to save at least $7.00 on your Spring Suit and Overcoat, as Spring Goods will be high.

20 per cent Off All Winter Wear

Sweater Coats, Caps, Heavy Odd Pants, Mitts, Gloves, Work Shirts, Sox, Etc. Etc.

Watch for window display.

Only 7 Days' Sale! Don't Miss It!

G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

TRY

Sieveright's Drug Store

FOR

Cough Mixtures
Tasteless Cod Liver Oil
Cod Liver Emulsions
Cold Tablets
Anything for Coughs and Colds

A. P. Sieveright
Druggist

For a short time we will give Special Bargains in

WALL PAPER

To make room for our New Stock for 1917 which is arriving.

R. McCrum & Co.

Winter Footwear

The Latest Styles and the Best Qualities. No misrepresentation here. Repair department in connection.

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

Sunday Morning Run

While driving in to Church on Sunday morning, Mr. Pete Webengel had a narrow escape from serious injury. His horse ran away beside of Yack's brick yards after letting both heels drive grazing Mr. Webengel's face. The shafts broke and the animal had quite a run before being captured.

+ + +

Mayor Johnston Appointed

Mayor Johnston has been appointed Issuer of Auto Licenses for Bruce County under the new Provincial scheme. There are nearly a thousand autowners in Bruce, it is estimated, and everybody who wants to drive a car will have to apply to Andy. The new official is paid by a commission of twenty five cents on each license issued.

+ + +

On Sick List

Chester Cunningham writes home that he is laid up with sore feet but expects to be back in the trenches in a few days. He refers feelingly to the death of Alvin Wilton with whom he chummed ever since enlisting. The weather is very cold at present, with nearly enough snow for sleighing. He also mentions the good work that is being done by the Y. M. C. A. at the Front. His parcel from the Daughters of the Empire only reached him twelve days before writing.

+ + +

Walkerton 7 Hanover 6

The local hockey fans got together a team on Friday night to meet the Hanover Soldiers and succeeded in raising a septet which put the visitors to the bad to the time of 7—6. The game was fairly fast—and somewhat rough. Hanover scored the first goal and led at half time but the local boys showed the best staying ability and landed a victory. The Walkerton line-up was:—Goal, Don Wallace; point, Herm Runstedler; C. P., Wess Russell; Centre, Walt Patterson; L. Wing, Will Irwin; R. Wing, Alf. Schefter. Referee, Jim Heffernan.

+ + +

Carrick Man Fined

A prominent resident of Carrick was fined $50 and costs on Thursday by Magistrates Tolton and Richardson for receiving a keg of beer not properly labelled. The charge was laid by License Inspector Jos. M. White. According to the statutes a vessel containing liquor must bear a label stating what it contains. It sometimes makes quite a difference whether the liquid refreshment is "local option" beer or something stronger and if the practice of shipping kegs without proper labels were allowed to continue, it would lead to serious abuse of the law.

+ + +

Death Of John McLean

Mr. John McLean, one of Walkerton's best-known citizens, passed away at his home, Gibson St., on Saturday evening in his sixty-fourth year. Mr. McLean had been an invalid from spinal trouble the last sixteen years, acidosis being the immediate cause of his death. The late John McLean was born in Staffordshire, coming to this country in infancy with his parents, the late Andrew and Mrs. McLean. His father established the livery business at present conducted by George Bros., ran the old Walkerton—Elora stage line before the railroad came and also conducted flour, grist and saw mills at Moscow. Mr. John McLean proved to be a shrewd businessman and financier, being reported well-to-do on retiring from business. Besides his widow, and aged mother, he leaves one brother, Andrew, of Walkerton, and four sisters: Mrs. Lindsay of Moscow, Mrs. O'Gorman of Montreal, Mrs. A. M. Stewart of Winnipeg and Mrs. T. E. Attwood of Walkerton.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Samuel White and family desire to thank their many neighbours and friends for their kindness and sympathy in their recent bereavement.

BORN

BRUDER—At Greenock, on Feb. 14th, to Mr. and Mrs. Linus Bruder, a son.

KOCHER—In Deemerton on Feb. 12th, to Mr. and Mrs. John Kocher, a son.

+ + +

DIED

McLEAN—In Walkerton, on Saturday, Feb. 17th, John McLean, aged 63 years, 4 months, 27 days.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, Feb 21)

Hay, per ton,	8.00 to	10.00
Oats, per bsh.	60 to......	63
Wheat " "	1.55 to......	1.58
Barley, " "	88 to......	90
Buckwheat "	1.00 to......	1.00
Hogs, per cwt.	13.80 to......	13.80
Butter, per lb.	33 to	33
Eggs, per doz.	40 to......	40

Non-Support Case

An East Ward man who has a decent respectable family which he apparently fails to appreciate, was brought up before Magistrate Tolton on Saturday afternoon and ordered to contribute towards their support. He will pay $6 a week.

+ + +

Daughters of Empire

The Walkerton Chapter, I. O. D. E. elected officers for the coming year on Tuesday night as follows:—Regent, Mrs. Wisser; First vice-Regent, Mrs. W. M. Shaw; Second vice-Regent, Mrs. Perdue; Sec., Miss Rowland; Treas., Mrs. Skelton; Ass't Sec., Miss Sheffield; Standard Bearer, Mrs. Teggart; Auditors, Miss McCormick and Miss Thompson. The treasurer's report showed that the Chapter has raised no less than $3,581 since the War started.

+ + +

Would Eat His Words

A Dominion Police Officer was here from Ottawa on Thursday in regard to the complaint laid by Mr. John Rowland against the Harriston farmer charged with using seditious language. A charge may be laid by the investigating officer and things look pretty bad for the offender, who we understand is very much exercised and would be glad to have the opportunity to eat his words. While in town the officer also investigated reports regarding a East Ward resident who is alleged to have done some loud talking along pro-German lines.

+ + +

Curlers Winning

The Curlers phoned from Owen Sound yesterday afternoon that they have won two games in the big bonspiel and are ahead in the third match. They beat Shelburne by two shots, Owen Sound by one, and were playing Orangeville. As there are 40 rinks playing, with only six sheets of ice, the progress is necessarily slow. Their train due in Owen Sound at 2 p. m. Tuesday was very late, so they did not get started playing until 9 p. m. and were at it until 3.30 a. m. The Walkerton rink consists of S. Fisk, L. H. McNamara, A. E. McNab, A. Collins.

+ + +

Old Little Farm Sold

Mr. Con. Voelzing sold the old Little farm on the 3rd con. Brant on Tuesday to Mr. Simon Walters of Ambleside. The price paid was $18,500. The farm is a fine two hundred acre property and was bought by Mr. Voelzing nineteen years ago from Mr. William Little, now of Calgary, a brother of Mr. John D. Little of Brant. Mr. Voelzing is well-to-do, owns other property, and will probably take a well-earned rest, although he has not made plans for the future yet. The increase in farm values around here is shown by the fact that Mr. Voelzing bought the farm originally for about eight thousand dollars.

+ + +

Rock Cement Prospects

The presence in the Walkerton neighborhood of limestone which is suitable for the manufacturing of cement presents industrial possibilities which would stand looking into. Rock cement has proved to be the best cement on the market and the cheapest to manufacture. All that is needed is an abundance of limestone of a suitable variety and this is believed to exist in the district west of the town. Last year parties representing the Hanover Cement Co. took six months' options on a couple of farms on the South Line, west of this town, but these options have been allowed to expire owing to the positive assurance, we understand, of the C.P.R. that the Company will not consider connecting up Walkerton and Teeswater by rail until after the war. If the rock proves to be all that is expected, there is no reason why this should not be made an important centre for the manufacture of rock products.

+ + +

Red Cross Euchre

A Red Cross progressive euchre was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGarity, Fairbanks Farm, Brant, on Friday evening, Feb. 16th, in aid of the Bruce Preparedness League. Despite the bad roads, a large crowd turned out and by nine o'clock fifteen tables were filled with energetic players, and after the singing of the National Anthem the games were begun and continued till about twelve when lunch was served. After lunch Mr. Findlay took charge of a short programme and announced that the ladies' prize for highest number of points was won by Miss Viola Hanmore, and Mr. Andrew O'Neil won the gentleman's prize. Mr. Rowland was called on and favoured those present with a splendid Red Cross address. Miss Eleanor McGarity who is teaching near Durham and is President of their rural Red Cross society, was called on and gave a short address outlining briefly how their work was carried on. Mrs. Julius Helm rendered a number of instrumental selections on the piano which were much appreciated. The proceeds amounted to nearly fifty dollars. After an enjoyable evening the party closed with again singing the National Anthem.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Renewed your Telescope yet?

A new doctor is to locate at Mildmay.

Mr. N. C. McKay went to Guelph Saturday.

Renewed your subscription to the Telescope yet?

Read Rourke's Sale Ad front page. Sale ends Saturday.

Carrick Council is considering raising statute labor to $1.25 a day.

Mr. George Faust removed on Tuesday to a house near the G. T. R. station.

Coun. Alex McCarter and daughter Gladys spent a few days at Toronto this week.

Mrs. James Flett of Wiarton is spending a week with his mother, Mr. Flett sr.

Mr. William Sieling had a large growth removed from his right eyelid on Saturday.

License Inspector White went to Lion's Head Tuesday in connection with a liquor case.

Mrs. (Rev.) C. W. Cosens arrived home last Wednesday from a visit to her home at Platteville.

Mrs. Wm. Hamilton of Chicago, Ill., was among those who attended the funeral of the late Jno. McLean.

Mrs. McLure of Edmonton who is spending the winter at Paisley, was a visitor at Mr. Frank Rennie's, this week.

The choir of Knox Church was entertained at the Soldiers' Aid tea rooms last Wednesday evening by Mr. D. McKerracher.

The Womens' Institute will meet at Miss Huether's on Thursday afternoon, March 1st. An Irish program is being arranged.

Miss Florence Cunningham left on Monday to visit relatives at St. Helens. Before returning home she will visit at Toronto and Barrie.

Mr. Geo Carswell of G. T. officer, Hamilton and Miss Carswell of London spent the week-end with their sister, Mrs. (Rev) Thos Wilson.

Mr. John Ernst, an enterprising Brant boy, who went West nine years ago, was recently elected Mayor of Tribune Sask. for a fourth term.

Mr. Arthur Diebel, who was operated upon for appendicitis at the County Hospital recently, left the Hospital for his home at Hanover this week.

Mr. Ed. L. Ernst, of the Durham Road, who went West last Fall on the harvesters' excursion has taken a situation at Tribune, Sask. for the winter.

Messrs Andrew and John O'Neill, Robt. Irwin and John Rowland attended the patriotic party at Mr. Patrick McGarity's, Brant, on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kabeary of High River, Alta., who have been visiting their cousin, Mrs. Sam White of Greenock, left yesterday for their home in the West.

Mr. James Farr of Maple Hill left to-day on a visit to his old home at Cobourg. On his way he will take in a sale of 100 thoroughbred fillies at Graham Bros. Stables, Claremont.

The Ebony Lady Minstrels will make their first appearance in the Opera House, Walkerton, Friday evening, March 16th in aid of the Hospital. All local talent. Prices 35 and 25cts.

Sunday was Missionary Anniversary at the Methodist church. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Cosens gave a comprehensive outline of the work and brought home forcibly the needs of the situation.

Mrs. Gilbert Christie of Saugeen was in town last Thursday to see her son who was operated upon at the Bruce County Hospital the previous week. He is reported to be making good progress to recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Wolfe and daughters, who have been spending the winter in the East, left to-day for their home at Malta, Mont. They were accompanied on the trip by Mrs. P. Burke, who will visit her son at Big Sandy, Montana.

Miss Coletta Jarvis and Mr. Herb Weller won the prizes at the Catholic ladies Euchre last Wednesday night. Miss Heeney and Mr. Herb Weber took the booby prizes. A large crowd was present, it being the last party of the series. Forty dollars was realized.

Miss Glenn of Glenn-Charles, Toronto, Canada's Hair Fashion Store, will be in Walkerton, Tues. Feb. 27th, at the Hartley House, with a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's Hair Goods. If you are not satisfied with the appearance of your hair consult Miss Glenn, free demonstration.

Rev. C. W. Cosens announced at the Methodist Church, Sunday night that in order to economize in coal during the fuel famine, the regular weekly meetings would be held on one week-night, thereby help to give private users a better chance to keep their home fires burning.

Wanted

All kinds of scrap iron, 60 cents a cwt. cash. Walkerton Foundry.

+ + +

House Wanted

House wanted for rent. Modern conveniences preferred. Apply at Telescope.

+ + +

New Coalsheds

S. W. Vogan has secured a piece of property from the C. P. R. on which he will erect large coal sheds in the Spring.

+ + +

Red Cross Meeting

A meeting of the local branch of the Red Cross Society will be held in the Town Hall at 8 p. m. Friday. All interested are urged to come.

+ + +

More Horses for West

Irwin Bros. shipped a carload of heavy horses to the West on Tuesday. This makes ten carloads that this firm has sent West since New Years.

+ + +

Died At Hospital

George Gregson, an elderly man living near Teeswater, died at the County Hospital of pneumonia after three weeks' illness on Saturday. The remains were taken to Teeswater for interment.

+ + +

Died From Whooping-Cough

Two deaths occurred from whooping-cough in Culross on Tuesday, the families of Albert Thacker and Wm. Howes being sadly bereaved by the death of a child. There is a whooping-cough epidemic in that neighbourhood.

+ + +

A Near-Fire

Lattimer's store at Greenock narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Tuesday night. The family had just been in bed a short time when they were aroused by smoke. Quite a large hole was burned in the ceiling around the stove-pipe hole.

+ + +

Lost By Fire

Mrs. Helpel, who lives opposite the Roller Rink, received a telephone message from her son at Clifford last Thursday stating that a house belonging to her in that village had been completely destroyed by fire. Fortunately the loss was pretty well covered by insurance.

+ + +

Died At Mitchell

Mrs. Wm Sieling received word on Friday of the death of her mother, Mrs. Adam Schneider of Mitchell. Mrs. Schneider who had long suffered from cancer, was in her seventy-fifth year. Mrs Seiling and her daughter, Miss Mabel, went to Mitchell on Saturday to attend the funeral.

+ + +

Freight Moving Quicker

Freight has been moving a bit freer the past week. Two G. T. R. freights on Sunday brought in a big lot of overdue shipments. The coal situation has been largely relieved, although the dealers are still supplying their customers in small quantities. Walkerton has suffered less from the scarcity than most towns. Stock shipments were again handled by the G. T. R. yesterday.

+ + +

Charged With Conspiracy

Mrs. Emma Helwig, housekeeper for Tony Zuber, was summoned to appear at Police Court on a conspiracy charge on Friday. She did not appear owing to illness. Magistrate Tolton adjourned the hearing to give the defendant a chance to get better. The charge arose out of the Tony Zuber trial, when Mrs. Helwig admitted in the witness box writing letters of the "Come-up-and-Settle" variety to a couple of local men.

+ + +

32nd Officers Meet

The Annual meeting of the 32nd Bruce Battalion officers was held at the Armoury here on Friday. The senior officer, Major Hay of Paisley presided. Finance report for the year was read and standing committees named. There is again some talk of a draft of 250 men being called for from Bruce to go Overseas in which case the 32nd may have a part in the recruiting. There has been no official word received from the Militia Dept. in regard to the mobilizing of the Militia for home guard purposes, which has been mooted lately.

+ + +

On The Fence

Mr. H. J. Bean, Can. Express Agent, had a visit this week from his brother, Mr. Edward Bean of Saskatchewan. Mr. Bean's farm is so close to the international boundary that he is almost in President Wilson's position—on the fence. In fact if it was not an imaginary line, he could see it from his back door. He lives on the Canadian side but as there is no nearby postoffice, he gets his mail in Montana. Farmers in that district are not worrying about reciprocity as they buy goods on both sides of the border according to their own sweet will.

From Frozen Florida

While the mercury has been flirting with the zeromark up in Bruce, other places are no better off and Ontario people who went South for the winter, did not escape the icy blasts of winter. A copy of the New York Packer, the fruit growers' journal, to hand from Mr. John Connell, formerly a well-known Carrick farmer, describes the cold wave which struck Florida last week. It was the most disastrous frost in 22 years. The temperature dropped to 16 above, damaging the citron crops to the effect of 60 to 70 per cent and vegetables 80 per cent. Mr. Connell did not lose by the frost as he had disposed of his fruit farm last year and has not yet bought another. At Miami where Judge Klein and family are wintering, the temperature went down to four degrees below freezing point.

+ + +

Early Pioneer Gone

The death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Samuel White, Greenock, on Friday, Feb. 16th, of Mrs. Mary J. Lockhart. Dropsy and old age were the cause of her demise. Mrs. Lockhart, whose maiden name was Kabeary, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, on Jan. 5th, 1833. In 1851 she was married to Jas. Lockhart and came with him to this country sixty-four years ago, the voyage across the Atlantic taking seven weeks and three days. They first resided in Stanley Tp. near Bayfield, coming three years later to the 8th con. Kinloss, where they settled on a bush farm and experienced the hardships incident to pioneer life. Later they removed to the 10th con. Kincardine, where Mrs. Lockhart lived until the death of her husband 23 years ago. Since then she lived among her family until seven years ago she came to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Samuel White. Of a family of eight sons and one daughter, three predeceased her. Those that survive are:—William of Lenore, Man.; Robert of Kamsack Sask.; Thomas and George of Niles, Kansas; Richard of Tiverton; and one daughter, Mrs. S. White of Greenock. Mrs. J. Ewart of Toronto is a sister. She was buried beside her late husband at Tiverton on Monday. Service was conducted at the house on Sunday evening by Rev. Mr. McKenzie, pastor of Kinloss Presbyterian church.

+ + +

A Good Move

While the supply of milk in other towns has been under strict municipal control for many years, Walkerton has made no attempt whatever to regulate this important matter. Fortunately there has been no trouble regarding the milk here but this has been due more to good luck than good management. We understand Mayor Johnston is going to introduce a milk by-law shortly which will bring milk offered for sale under municipal control. The proposed by-law will safeguard the interests of the milk dealers and dairymen as well as insure the public the best of service. Pure milk is recognized everywhere as vitally important. The enforcement of the milk by-law of the city of Toronto not only secured good pure milk for the citizens, but saved $990,000 to the public by keeping tap water out of the milk. Impure milk carries many diseases such as tuberculosis, scarlet fever, typhoid, etc. The diseases which carry off so many infants throughout the country every year are directly traceable to impure milk. The Model By-law with which Mayor Johnston has been furnished by the Provincial Board of Health regulates the care of the milch cows, sanitary conditions of the stables, milk houses, milk cans, handlers of milk etc. It places the onus of proof that milk seized under this by-law was not intended for sale in Walkerton upon the party charged. While milk conditions here at the present time are believed to be excellent, the bylaw properly enforced, will ensure that they are right in the future. No town can afford to take chances on its milk.

SOLDIERS' AID TEA-ROOM.

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton

Dear Sir:—

As no doubt those who have so generously assisted the Soldiers' Aid Tea-Room will like to know what has been done with the money realized, I have been asked to write you. Since the first of the year parcels which cost us $93.30 have been mailed to soldiers in Walkerton or the neighbourhood who are in the trenches or Hospitals and to three Walkerton girls who are nursing in Military Hospitals in England or France. The following sums have also been granted: To the Daughters of the Empire $25.00, to the Belgian Relief $10.00, to the Belgian children $10.00, and to the Prisoners of War Bread Fund $8.00. This provides bread for a month for two Walkerton boys who are prisoners in Germany. I would like to repeat that no one connected with this work has received or is to receive anything for her services.

M. Robertson.

TOWN COUNCIL DOINGS

Council Has to Spend a Bit More to Put Market Building in Shape—Dan Wilton Gets A Slight Raise.

Mayor Andy Johnston's 1917 Council is working along harmoniously together and it looks as if there would be a complete absence this year of the jangling which mars the work of some municipal bodies. Some of the raw recruits are working into the harness in good shape and already have a pretty fair grasp of the Council's business. On Friday night the meeting for the regular monthly session and put through a good deal of routine business.

The members present were:—Mayor Johnston, Reeve Robt. Russell, Councs. Sam Vogan, A. McCarter, J. McKinnon, J. W. Sanderson.

Rev. R. Perdue, Sec. of the Bruce Preparedness League asked the council to grant the League $15 for three five dollar gold pieces which the League presented to Jos. Heffernan, Oswald Lumley, and Barney Etsell, three Walkerton Boys who left for the Front lately.—Granted.

Eng. Wilton Gets Raise

Mr. Dan Wilton, who has served as engineer at the pumping station without an increase in his wages or a recognized holiday for seven years asked for a raise. He was given an increase of $35 bringing his salary up to $400, and a week's holiday the coming year.

Auditors W. A. Barrows and W. H. McBurney, handed in their report which was ordered to be printed in pamphlet form.

S. A. Hife & Co. wrote that they did not have statement ready for the Council as required by the town by-law, owing to illness of book-keeper but would have a statement ready before the next Council meeting.

Scavenger Presents Bill

The Town Scavenger presented his bill for 15 per cent of the amount of the year's scavenging which is due Feb. 15th according to the by-law. He gets $1.37 per year for cleaning 102 closets. According to the by-law each closet has to be cleaned twice between Nov. 1st and May 1st and once every two weeks during the rest of the year. Several councillors said they had heard complaints of the work not being done. Chief Ferguson was instructed to investigate and report to Council. In the meantime the scavenger gets the 15 per cent.

Fire Chief Alex George said he wanted the Council to tell him definitely what it expected to pay for teams at fires to avoid trouble between him and teamsters. The old arrangement was renewed as follows:—$2 for the first team on hand, $1.50 for the second team, $1.00 for third team. 50 cents an hour for teaming after the fire.

Sec. M. G. Dippel of the High School Board wrote asking the Council to pay a bill for opening up a sewer at the High School. The H. S. Board claimed that when the sewer was opened up, it was found to be clogged on town property. The Council claimed that it was clogged on High School property and refused to pay.

The Council closed a lease with the C. P. R. Co. for the ground occupied by the Town's street-oil tank at $10 a year. This tank is on land formerly rented from the railway Co. by Alex George who allowed the town the land without charge. Mr. George has given up his lease and the town will now have to pay.

That Market House Again

Coun. McKinnon brought up the matter of fixing the ceiling over the Chief's quarters in the House. Every time anybody walks across the floor in the Town Hall above, it brings a shower of dust on the dining table below, making the place uninhabitable. Coun. McKinnon estimated that it would cost $18 to put on a Beaver board ceiling.

Coun. Russell said the rooms in the Market Hall should never have been put there. Some of these times they would have to be taken out and he hated to see much more expense put on them.

Mayor Johnston said that as $800 had already been spent on their apartment according to the Clerk's figures, he thought it would be wise to spend a little more to avoid the whole thing being a total loss.

Coun. McCarter—You had better move upstairs again, Chief.

Chief Ferguson—I'll never move up stairs again. Would rather throw my job first.

The matter was left with the Property Committee.

A bill was received from Tony Zuber for snowploughing. The bill was made out at what the Council considered an exorbitant rate, and as Street Com. Smith stated that Zuber had received no authority to do snowploughing, the Council decided that Zuber would not be paid any [illegible] in this work.

A number of small accounts were passed.

Council adjourned.

A PUZZLING CASE

PROLOGUE.

It was a question whether I or Major Granby should write this book, but as I was busy and the major was idle, we both came to the conclusion that it would be best for him to undertake the task. Therefore, he wrote the following seventeen chapters, setting forth The Black Carnation case, and, leaving them in my possession for publication, he has gone to Riviera for a rest, in company with his man, Pointer.

Though the major has done most of the work, I do not see why I should not make a few remarks on the subject, and I therefore write this prologue for my own satisfaction. Major Granby has done his work very well, very well indeed, and if his language be a trifle stilted or grandiose at times, still I think he has set forth the case with a sufficient clearness, which is much needed in a complicated affair of this kind.

I suppose everyone in England has heard of "The Black Carnation Case," and certainly, it is one of the most interesting criminal affairs which it has ever been my fate to meet with. The case, as told by Major Granby, is perfectly true, and I am sure the public will be pleased to read this extraordinary murder trial, especially as the facts set forth in the papers were sufficient merely to pique without satisfying public curiosity.

I own we were all very much astray in the affair, and none of us except Major Granby guessed the real criminal, but as that gentleman has set forth six distinct theories, he could not very well help being right once out of six. Perhaps our readers think that we displayed but little erness in solving the mystery, but uch a complicated criminal case it almost impossible to come to any isfactory conclusion. As written [illegible], it must appear quite inconceiv[illegible]e that we did not guess the name Mazzucata's assassin at once, but then, the facts which are here set forth in their proper order were all topsy-turvy, and what with one thing cropping up one day, and another the next, it was extremely difficult to disentangle the evidence.

Undoubtedly, at times, Major Granby is a trifle prolix, and is, perhaps, too fond of telling us his private views on the subject, still I think he has done his work excellently well. He must have used a good deal of club paper, for I am told he wrote it at the "Old Friends'," occasionally reading a chapter aloud to some special friend. In fact, old Granby and his story were quite a joke in St. James' Street, but now that the tale is offered to the world, I trust that the public will see it is no joke, but a statement of fact embodying one of the strangest romances of the day.

Most people will say that this story is impossible, and that there never existed such a strange flower as the Black Carnation, but to those skeptics who believe nothing unless they read it in the columns of a newspaper, I may say that the story is perfectly true, and that I, myself, have seen a Black Carnation. Those who still doubt the truth after this plain assertion had better call at Scotland Yard, where they will, no doubt, be told the facts of the case, though, perhaps, in a less admirable way than are here set forth by my friend, Major Granby.

Mark Tancred.

Temple.

It has been said, truly or otherwise, that every man has in his own life the materials for at least one romance, and for my part I am inclined to subscribe to the saying, seeing that the story I have to tell is as romantic as any I have read. Moreover, it happened to myself, though truly I was more of spectator than actor; still it came within the experience of my lattle else than arrange the events in due order, so as to make them understandable to all. Between chapter one which relates the committal of a crime and chapter seventeen which reveals the name of the person who committed it, there is a deal of unravelling to be done, and had it not been for the idleness of my life, I am afraid I would never have had time ter days, and out of such experience constructed, for, indeed, I did but lithave I constructed this tale. I say or patience to disentangle the mysterious circumstances which surrounded the death of Marietta Mazzucata.

Up to the age of fifty years my life was as smooth and happy as any mortal could desire. Of course, in common with all men, I suffered from petty annoyances, still, no very startling event ever happened to lift me out of the common ruck of humanity. I was born of wealthy parents, I went to Eton, I migrated to Oxford, I entered the army, I left the army, I travelled here, there and everywhere, enjoyed all things, exceeded in none, and between my fortieth and fiftieth years had become one of those well-dressed, well-preserved old fogies whom you may see any day in St. James' street, or at the windows of respectable clubs. My life, I am afraid, has been an extremely negative one—as I did neither harm nor good, but "dandered on," as the Scotch say, in a pleasant, aimless fashion, which had, at least, the merit of being happy.

Then occurred that extraordinary event which turned my placid existence into one of great trouble and distress, though, doubtless, I was not called upon to mix myself up in the affair, and had I so chosen could have held aloof, which I certainly would have done had I not been seized with "detective fever." What! You don't know what it is? Then I hope for your own piece of mind you never will know, for it is a disease which entails sleepless nights, much thought and ceaseless vigilance. In many cases the game is not worth the candle, and even in this instance, I doubt not, it would have been wiser for me to have left the affair to Scotland Yard, and not to have meddled with what did not concern me. But as I said before, I was seized with detective fever; and if it did not concern me, it greatly concerned Gilbert Tressinger and Lawrence Dallas, both good friends of mine. However, I have now prolonged enough, so I will begin to tell you the story of Mazzucata from the very commencement, which, so far as this book is concerned, starts from Covent Garden Theatre on the first night of the new season.

I am very fond of music, and for years have been an assiduous attendant at the opera whenever it chanced to be on at Covent Garden or at Her Majesty's. I have heard Jenny Lind, Malibran, Mario, Grisi—in fact all the great singers of the past, and remember well those palmy days of the Italian Opera, when Rossini, Donizetti, and Bellini were composing masterpieces. Then it was all melody and exquisite vocalization, but now, what with this Wagner craze and Dvorak Grieg-Brahms-mania, music seems to be nothing but noise. Probably I am wrong—in fact my nephew Charles, a graceless young dog, who has no respect for age, tells me I am wrong—but I had much rather hear an Italian aria sung sung by a highly trained singer, than this incessant fiddle playing and drum banging, with every now and then a feeble note from the stage when a fortunate pause gives the vocalist an opportunity of being heard. Oh, Grisi, or Alboni, or Lablache, what could even your strong lungs do against this roar of brass and shrieking of strings which is called orchestration.

Yet in spite of my distaste for such new-fangled music, I still go to the opera, and it was on that night of the sixteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, when hearing Mazzucata in "Le Reine d'Ecosse," that the catastrophe occurred which resulted in the death of that great singer.

She was a great singer, I admit, a worthy successor to Grisi and Persiani, full of fire and dramatic force, not a mere musical box, twittering like a mechanical bird, which seems to be the prevailing style of the new school of singers. When I was a young man—but there, this is not a book of reminiscences, and I grow wearisome. I speak of the present, not of the past, and will therefore defer criticising this degenerate age, with which I am decidedly "out of joint."

Renaud had composed "Le Reine d' Ecosse," and as he was the chief exponent of the most advanced French school, combining—so they say—a thorough knowledge of musical technique with a rare gift of melodic inspiration, the dilettanti of London, whose name is legion, looked forward to a treat of no common order, especially as Mazzucata had created the role of Mary Stuart in Paris to the complete satisfaction of Renaud, who was notoriously difficult to please.

It being the first night of a new season, the first night of a new opera, and the first night of a new singer, the house was naturally crowded on account of the triple novelty, and I recognized many of my friends. The stall next to mine was vacant, however, and it was not until the overture had commenced that it was occupied, when to surprise my neighbor proved to be young Lawrence Dallas, whom I had fancied was still aboard. A handsome young fellow he was, somewhat bronzed by tropical suns, but I thought for the moment that his face looked a trifle careworn, as though he were consumed by some secret sorrow. Of course he recognized me at once, and shook hands, after carefully depositing under his seat a large bouquet of flowers.

"I didn't know you were back, Dallas," I said, as he sat down beside me.

"Oh, I returned to-day."

"And came to the opera to-night. That is rather sharp work."

"I had reasons for coming to-night," he answered, hurriedly.

"Do those flowers form part of the reasons?"

"No! they are for Mazzucata."

"What, is she so good as that?"

"She is splendid. I saw her in Vienna."

"Vienna!" I repeated, somewhat amazed. "I did not know you had been there. I thought the East——"

"I've been everywhere," interrupted Dallas, with a frown. "East, west and all over the world. Don't I look all the better for my travels?"

"No! you look worried."

He started at this, and cast a searching look on my face.

"You are a close observer, major," he said, slowly. "I have been worried, but it's all over now. I am here to enjoy myself."

"And see Mazzucata."

"Precisely. But here, you know everyone, major. Who is the man with the flowers, over yonder?"

"Sir Gilbert Tressinger," I replied, following the direction of his eyes; "his uncle has just died and left him eight thousand a year and a title. Rather a change."

"Why 'rather a change'?"

"Oh, it's a long story, but the pith of it I can tell you in a few words. Gilbert's father married an opera singer, who was by no means his social equal. The Tressinger family cut him off, and when the parents died, Gilbert was studying for the stage in Milan. He has a fine tenor voice, and was going to be a new Mario, but when his uncle died all these fine schemes were knocked on the head, and he came in for the property."

"Lucky fellow," said Dallas, raising his opera glasses to a pair of brilliant black eyes, "but why does he carry flowers otherwise than in his buttonhole?"

"As far as that goes, why do you? Mazzucata must be very good if you young fellows all honor her with bouquets."

"Well, you see, I know Mazzucata very well."

"In that case you ought to know Tressinger," said I, coolly.

"Never set eyes on him before to-night."

"But you surely have heard his name?"

"No! why should I?"

"And yet you say a woman can't keep a secret."

"Meaning Mazzucata," observed Dallas, with a frown.

"Of course."

Dallas looked straight ahead, but I noticed he was observing me out of the tail of his eye, so, wondering at the persistent way in which Mazzucata was mixed up in his conversation, I adopted the masterly policy of silence, thereby drawing him on to further explanation of his enigmatic utterances.

"I don't know what you mean," he said, at length, in a hesitating manner.

"Oh, well, if you don't know, you don't know," I answered ambiguously, "but if you bring a bouquet to throw to Mazzucata, why should not Tressinger do the same?"

"He doesn't know her."

"There you are wrong. He knows her very well."

Dallas bit his lip and said something under his breath, the meaning of which I could not catch, but it sounded uncommonly like bad language. Then he laughed in a constrained manner, and tossed back his head, a trick he had with him when annoyed.

"Well, and why not?" he said, after a pause, "Mazzucata knows plenty of people."

"Of course, especially rich young men."

"What have you heard?"

"Nothing but town talk. Hush, the curtain is rising."

The fact was, I knew a good deal about the lady in question, for my club, like the ear of Dionysius, gathers all news, and the relations between Tressinger and this singer had been pretty well discussed, but of course, I was going to mention nothing of this to my fiery young friend, Dallas. It is a weakness of my character that I am over fond of gossip, but I never repeat what I hear, so, having thus an excellent character for secrecy, I am the recipient of many things of a private nature. Dallas knew that I would not hint my knowledge without good reason, and not at all daunted by my abrupt closing of the discussion, touched me on the shoulder as the curtain went up, to invite my attention. Now if there is one thing above another I dislike, it is being interrupted in my enjoyment, so I was not in a very amiable frame of mind when I turned in response to his touch.

"Well! what is it?"

"Is Tressinger a very dear friend?"

"Yes, too dear to be respectable."

"It's a ——."

"Look here, Dallas," said I, now thoroughly angry, for I knew his impulsive temper, "if you want to make a noise go outside, I came here to enjoy the music, not to gossip."

"Well, will you tell me all about this fellow to-night?" he persisted.

"Yes, yes. In fact I'll introduce you to him."

"Good, I'll bear that in mind."

Having thus satisfied his curiosity for the time being, I concentrated my attention on the stage, but to tell the honest truth my enjoyment for the evening was over, as the demeanor of Dallas had quite piqued my curiosity, and knowing what I did about Tressinger and Mazzucata, I was puzzled to think how the introduction of this new element would affect the position of affairs. Dallas was Irish and had a most ungovernable temper, so if it were the case, as I suspected, that the singer had been flirting with him, there was no doubt that when he found out she had thrown him over in favor of Tressinger, things would become unpleasantly warm for everyone concerned. I determined to find out all I could from Dallas with the idea of smoothing matters, though at the same time, I must confess, I was considerably curious to know the meaning of all this social mystery.

At this period of my reflections, Mazzucata appeared on the stage, and without doubt she was a beautiful woman, not unworthy to represent the dead loveliness of Mary Stuart. It was the Scottish queen herself, not worn and gray with the shadow of a violent death near at hand, but bright and youthful, holding her court in grim old Holyrood with the poet-lover Chastelard at her feet. Ivan, of course, took the part of the French chevalier, and sang the difficult music allotted to the role as only he can sing it. He put me much in mind of Mario, both as regards voice and appearance, but his face was somewhat after the style of Charles Stuart, with grave, melancholy eyes—too sombre for a lover, and yet fitted for the character, seeing what was the end of the original.

The stage was very brilliant, representing the throne room of the old palace, filled with silken-clad courtiers and lovely women all grouped round the dais whereon sat Mary Stuart in the spring-time of her fatal beauty. There was a chorus of stern Scottish barons, a counter chorus of Presbyterian fanatics, and when these latter insulted the queen, Chastelard, bold, gay and wrathful, dashed, sword in hand, before the throne to defend his mistress. As I said before, I do not care about modern music, but the stirring finale of this act was worked up in a manner worthy of Meyerbeer's Huguenots, and when the curtain fell, I, in spite of my prejudices, applauded as heartily as the rest of the audience. I am a just man, and, from long experience, esteem myself a good critic, so I am not ashamed to give it as my opinion that Mazzucata was but little inferior to Giulia Grisi either as regards acting, voice or vocal production.

"Well, what about Tressinger?"

It was Dallas who spoke, and I must say I was distinctly annoyed, as his incessant desire for information quite spoilt my appreciation of the new singer. Under these circumstances I answered him sharply, as I am sure I had every right to do, for his very mal a propos question.

"Good heavens, Dallas, are you still harping on that fellow—cannot you enjoy the music?"

"Oh, the music is well enough, but I want to know about Tressinger."

"You have Tressinger on the brain. What is he to you?"

"Nothing," retorted Dallas, promptly, "but, from what you say, he's a good deal to Mazzucata."

"Ah! you are jealous."

"Rubbish!"

"I quite agree with you," I answered, smiling, "it is rubbish to be jealous—especially on account of that lyric coquette."

"How do you know she's a coquette?"

"Common report——" I began, but he interrupted me rudely.

"Common report is a common liar."

"I've heard that before."

"It's a truism," said Dallas, crossly, "but look here, major, dont abuse Mazzucata any more, for I love her better than my life—in fact, I want to marry her."

"Are you mad?"

I stared at him in dismay.

"No! I'm as sane as you are. Because you've never married, that doesn't say I shouldn't."

"Don't talk so loud," said I, soothingly, for he had raised his voice more than I liked, "marry if you like—but Mazzucata——"

"Well, what have you to say against her?" he demanded, defiantly.

"I'll tell you all I know to-night."

(To Be Continued).

Satisfied.

"I was brought up on a farm, and I'm glad of it."

"You bet your life. Whenever I think I'm working too hard, I just stop and think of the time when I had to get up at 4 o'clock and work like a slave until dark." — Washington Star.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VII. February 18, 1917.

Jesus heals a nobleman's son.—John 4: 43-54.

COMMENTARY.—I. Christ's return to Galilee (vs. 43-45). 43. After the two days (R. V.)—After the two days that Jesus was constrained to remain at Sychar to preach to the people. It is evident that his work there was permanent from the fact that Philip, Peter and John met with marked success in their ministry in Samaria a few years later (Acts 8: 5-25). Went into Galilee—Jesus and his disciples were on their way from Judea to Galilee when they halted at Jacob's well. It was about twenty miles from there to the border of Galilee, and nearly twenty more on to Cana. 44. A prophet hath no honor in his own country.—In Matt. 13: 57, Mark 6:4 and Luke 4: 24. Jesus speaks of Nazareth as his own country. He was going into Galilee to continue his ministry, but not to Nazareth at this time, for that being his own country, he would not be well received. A second view is thus expressed by Whedon: "From Samaria, where Jesus was honored, he departs after a brief sojourn, to his own country, Galilee, where he was, in the comparison, without honor; and he must go to win their honor, and convert, if possible, their hearts form contempt to adoration." A third view is that, since Judea was the place of Christ's birth, the centre of the Jewish religion and his Father's country, where he had not been enthusiastically received; hence he was going into Galilee where the people would welcome his ministry. The first view appears, the most reasonable. 45. The Galileans received him—They were not so firmly wedded to Jewish traditions and were not so prejudiced against those who did not bear the marks of the Jewish hierarchy as were the Jews of Judea, hence they were open to conviction. Many Galileans had been at the Passover in Jerusalem, where Jesus drove out the traffickers from the temple and saw others of his works and were convinced that he was the Messiah. They also went unto the feast—The males among the Israelites were required to attend the three great feasts at Jerusalem each year. The feast of the Passover was one of these. The other two were Pentecost and the feast of Tabernacles. The people were to bring an offering to the Lord on each of these occasions.

II. The nobleman's request (vs. 46-49). 46. Cana of Galilee—This was a town four or five miles northeast of Nazareth. It was here that Jesus performed his first miracle, that of turning water into wine. Nathanael, one of His disciples, lived in Cana (John 21. 2). A certain nobleman—A man who held a responsible position in the Roman government and lived in Capernaum. We are not informed as to his name, and the suggestion that it was Chuza, whose wife Joanna ministered to Jesus (Luke 8. 3), is mere conjecture. At Capernaum—Capernaum was a city of considerable importance in the time of Christ. It was situated on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee. Excavations have revealed interesting ruins there, some of which appear to be those of a synagogue, perhaps that built by a centurion (Luke 7.5). 47. When he heard—The nobleman had heard of Jesus and of the wonderful works which He did, and he was convinced that He had power to heal his son, who was at the point of death. He had heard that He was in Galilee and hence was within reach. Went unto Him, and besought Him—His anxiety about his son and his confidence in Jesus lead him to make the journey of twenty or twenty-five miles from Capernaum to Cana to entreat Jesus to go to his home. Come down—Capernaum being on the shore of the Sea of Galilee and Cana being on the hills, there was a descent of about two thousand feet in passing from Cana to Capernaum. 48. Except ye see signs and wonders—The words of this verse are, as it were, an ejaculation, a thinking aloud of Jesus. He sees that to awaken this man He must more than heal his son; He must to that sign add an additional wonder.—Whedon. Christ's miracles are never mere wonders to excite astonishment; they are signs of heavenly truths as well, and this is their primary characteristic.—Plummer. Ye will not believe—The great desire of Jesus was to convince the people that the kingdom of God was within their reach. He would have them believe in his Messiahship for their own present and eternal salvation. Therefore He was ready to perform miracles to bring the people to accept the truth by which alone they could be saved. 49. The nobleman saith unto Him—This troubled father had not entrusted this urgent matter to another, but had come himself. If he had pride of position, he laid it aside to come personally to Jesus for relief. Sir, come down ere my child die—The longing desire for his child's recovery was mixed with faith. He had no hope that his son would live if Jesus did not heal him and he believed that Jesus could raise him up. He thought it necessary for Jesus to go where the sick one was in order to restore him to health, hence the urgency of his plea for Him to go down to Capernaum. He was about to receive a more comprehensive understanding of the power of Jesus.

III. The rewards of faith (vs. 50-53). 50. Go thy way; thy son liveth—The answer to the nobleman's earnest plea had come, but not in the way he had expected. The words that fell from the lips of Jesus were such words as he had never heard before. "Thy son liveth," must have turned the soul of that father with joy. The man believed the word—His idea that Jesus must be at his son's bedside to cure him was at once dispelled, and his faith accepted his word. He saw no evidence that his son would recover, but he took Jesus at his word. He went his way—He acted his faith and obeyed the Master. He had no occasion to plead longer with Jesus. The nobleman had faith when he started from Capernaum. He also had faith as he began his homeward journey, otherwise he would have continued his plea for Jesus to go home with him. 51. His servants met him—On his way to Capernaum he met his servants, who had been sent to tell him the good news of his son's recovery. Thy son liveth—The nobleman had heard these very words from Jesus some time before this and he believed them and was comforted, and hearing them now from his servants assured him that he had not trusted Jesus in vain. 52. Enquired ... the hour—It was natural that he should ask this question, for he wished to know whether the cure was wrought at the time Jesus spoke the words, "Thy son liveth," or later. Began to amend—Began to recover. Yesterday at the seventh hour—According to Jewish reckoning this would be one o'clock in the afternoon. The nobleman had probably started early in the morning to find Jesus, and had arrived in Cana at about noon. His interview with Jesus was at one o'clock, and he started homeward as soon as he conveniently could. It would be difficult to make the journey to Capernaum, as tired as he and his beasts would naturally be, the same day, hence it is naturally that he should stop for the night at some village on the way. The fever left him—It was not a case of slow recovery, but the disease let go its hold at once. 53. The father knew—The cure appealed to him as having been wrought by the power of Jesus. It was not a natural recovery nor was it a mere coincidence. It was a miracle. Himself believed, and his whole house—The man's faith was rewarded in the healing of his son. It was rewarded in his own salvation. It was rewarded in a most welcome manner in the salvation of his entire household. 54. This is again the second miracle—When Jesus came into Galilee after his baptism, he performed the miracle in Cana of changing the water into wine; and when he came again into Galilee, from Judea, he healed the nobleman's son. The former miracle confirmed the faith of the disciples in him and the latter convinced the nobleman and his family of Christ's Messiahship.

Questions.—What results followed the discourse of Jesus at Jacob's well? What did Jesus say about the harvest? How did the people of Galilee regard Jesus? What was the nobleman's errand to Cana? What answer did Jesus give? How did the nobleman show his faith in Jesus? How was his faith regarded? What word did the nobleman's servants bring to him from home? What question did he ask them?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Living Faith.

I. Developed under test.

II. Evidenced by obedience.

I. Developed under test. This lesson brings out clearly Christ's discernment of human character, his compassion for human suffering, and his appreciation of living faith. The urgent request which came to Jesus from the nobleman was the occasion, though not the cause, of his exclamation, "except ye see signs and wonders," in which he apostrophized the whole multitude of his countrymen. All the lavishing of his love, all the grace and truth which shone radiant in his life, fell upon blind eyes, incapable of beholding his beauty. The manifest revelation of a godlike character had no power with them equal to outward wonders. The graciousness of his nature did not appeal to them. They had no eyes for his tenderness, no ears for his wisdom. The consciousness of it all struck pain to the Master's head and called forth his lament. Jesus did not put forth the mere power of his miracles as the chief sign of his divine sonship. He declared his almighty power chiefly by showing compassion and mercy. So much did he cherish the smallest degree of faith, that he gave special attention to its growth in every individual where it could be found. It stood out in bold contrast to the attitude of the nation as he saw it in the nobleman. His method with the nobleman was to make plain to him what he had that was of value in securing the grant of his appeal. The great peculiarity of this second miracle in Cana is that it is detailed throughout so as to develop the perfect faith. It was Jesus' method to lead those who sought his help to such inward spiritual acquaintance with, and confidence in, himself that they trusted his word before they beheld his work. Jesus accepted the loving earnestness and tenacity of the nobleman. Fatherly affection and anxiety made the nobleman alert to any prospect of help. Affliction brought him to Jesus. There was substance in his faith. It was not mere sentiment. It had an active quality. It moved him to make every effort to obtain help from Jesus, and yet he labored under misconceptions. His faith began as a belief that Jesus could work a physical miracle when present with his son. He did not know of Jesus' spiritual power or his own need of spiritual health. The spirit of persistency and importunity showed that he did not regard the words of Jesus as any rejection of his appeal. His powerlessness led him to a more unreserved dependence on the power of Jesus. He stood before him resolved not to go away without Jesus' help. He held fast by as much of Jesus' character the beginning of progress.

as he could apprehend. That marked

II. Evidence of obedience. The nobleman was tested in his humility, which might have wounded the pride of one in his station. He was tested in his faith by being required to trust a word. His confident departure proved the power of his faith. The granting of the father's appeal in the restoration of his son depended upon the obedience of that moment when Jesus said, "Go thy way." He believed the assurance, "Thy son liveth," and therefore acted in accordance with Christ's instruction. A great onward step was taken when Jesus' word for the cure was accepted in place of his personal visit. The nobleman trusted in what Jesus said, and found his word potent. His was the faith of a full surrender and devotion, which reached its highest development in personal experience. Having made a spiritual roadway into the father's heart, Jesus granted his request. He helped the father's faith and healed the son's malady. Faith was crowned and perfected by the incontestable proof of the miracle. The narative relates the effect upon the entire household. They had the same evidence and partook of the same joy. When the nobleman learned that the hour of Christ's utterance was the hour of his son's healing, there remained no cloud to mar the brightness of his faith. The memory of his Lord's mercy could never fade from his mind. The change which was produced in his spiritual being surpassed all else. In tracing Christ's method in the development of the nobleman's faith we find he first discovered to him its radical defect. He then tested its inward sincerity. He denied his formal request, but granted his essential petition. Directness and persistency in prayer brought physical and spiritual life to the household.

T. R. A.

In order order to economize gas, goast a small joint of meat ovea gas ring, instead of lighting the oven to do it. Grease well a saucepan or casserole, put the meat into it (with plenty of extra dripping, so that there shall be no risk of burning); put it over a gas jet turned very low, and let it cook.

THE SOUL OF BATTLE

Tragedy and Glory of the Canadian War Pictures

The gayest and the saddest place in London at the moment is the Grafton Galleries. A gay cavalry band makes lilting music, exciting the heart to joyousness and luring even elderly feet to strange little movements, as though they were tempted to the dance. The place is crowded with life and eloquent with well-dressed wellbeing. It is warm; it is bright. Yet there is a bitter and shattering contrast to this superficial gaiety, the tragedy behind the smile.

From the illumined walls "death looks gigantically down." Great sombre frames imprison stark and blighting scenes of battle, murder and sudden death, as they are known in France. One stands in the heart of London and looks, as it were, out of so many forbidding windows which give straight on to the carnage and the horror of the Somme. While the band plays waltzes you can stand amid women in furs and see how war is made.

No stranger, sadder contrast, no more wonderful lesson, were it properly understood, was ever offered for the contemplation of London. In the midst of security, of light, of life, we are in the midst of death.

IN THE EYE OF DEATH.

The unimaginative precision of the official hand writes this down as an official exhibition of Canadian war photographs. It is a description which is a piece of pathos amounting almost to a bad joke, if it be not actually untrue. The requirements of bare and unmyrtled truth may call these amazing pictures "photographic enlargements," but the outward truth is not the real truth.

No one with any heart or understanding could look on these pictures as mere photographs. They are, indeed, visions of the war as seen through the eye of a super-camera, but just as there is "the man behind the gun," so there is a man behind the lens where was a man who walked, wary and watchful, but unflinchingly, through all this "frightfulness," through all this hell of war, bringing the bright unblinking eye of his responsive camera to bear on all the hideous harrowing of the wounded earth, on the battered living and on the contorted dead.

You can see this man any day you please at the Grafton Galleries, modestly making his way among the unrecognizing crowd—Lieut. Ivor Castle, of the Canadian Expeditionary Force—a slight, courteously stooping figure. He is a rather tired looking man, with an eagle face, and eyes that still smile in spite of his long and intimate association with death.

Completely to understand these pictures you must think for a little on this man. He hid in shell craters while the tanks lumbered and thundered overhead, popping out for a flash like a rabbit from a hole to bring his camera's eye to bear upon the rides of the iron monsters, belching destruction as they labored indomitably battlewards. He crouched in trenches behind dead men while the enemy's shrapnel fell in "beautiful" but ghastly precision along the trench line.

SMOKE-REEK AND FLAME.

His pulses quietly beating, his skill unerring, his equanimity undisturbed, he mirrored the laughing, gay Canadians as they leapt the parapet and went roaring down into the blazing inferno, from which with bloody bayonets they tore and wrenched the victory of Courcelette.

It is all these things which make the pictures as they are. Photographs! A sorry word indeed! They are visions of battle, heavy with smoke-reek and crystallized amid flame. They have the atmosphere of the terror which gave them birth. Over and above this, they have absorbed the sentiments and the sensations of the man behind the camera, who, while his hands remained unshaken, could not have remained unmoved at heart.

"Look, for instance, at the tragic poignancy of his picture of "The Last Post." The dead machine gun major lies beneath the scant and simple shroud of his overcoat; the chaplain, his face upraised, recites the office for the dead. The men, who worshipped their lost leader, are clustered thick and reverent, their faces tense, strained, and sad. A handsome sergeant stands alone, bareheaded—a figure of incarnate grief. This is no posed scene, no postured sorrow. It is the real sorrow of real men. It is tragedy as it is lived.

This, then, is the appeal of these strange pictures—they are pictures which have souls. This is why London is flocking to them to ponder and wonder. This is why, though the land may play "If you were the only boy" with unctuous sentimentality, the lesson of these pictures works like leaven in the hearts of those who have hearts at all. You cannot look on these pictures and remain unchanged. They touch, they move, and they stir to better and sterner things even those upon whom the war has as yet only laid a passing hand.

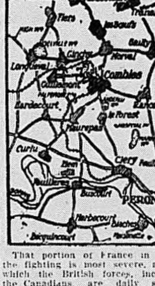
It is not only from the pictures, but from those who come to visit them, that a lesson may learn. I have been with the pictures from the first, and two incidents are always in my mind.

"I AM GOING BACK!"

A tall Canadian lad in his hospital blue came in hippity-hop, his shoulders hunched up by his crutches almost to his ears. He halted before a picture of a grinning trophy-laden group of his fellow-countrymen. "Hello!" he cried, "these are some of my lot—Hooray! Here we are again!" Then he swung painfully round and gazed greedily along the walls. Death stared him in the face again. His young eyes hardened. He stood staring and said in a low voice, "When I get rid of these"—he shook his crutches under him with his thin hands—"I am going back! By God, I am going back as quick as I can!"

There is a picture of the sugar refinery which the Canadians took at Courcelette. It is but a smoking rubbish heap. For three days an old and white-haired lady came to sit and gaze at it. Outwardly she was serene and proud, even a little cold. I know her story now, and know that pride was her stay. Her son went into that smoking shambles, but never come out again. Officially he was "missing." Unofficially the old lady knew in her mother's heart that he was dead, and that he was somewhere in there. So she came to look proudly, if a little wistfully, at her boy's smoking tomb—his pyre of honor.

These visions of war are no mere photographs. They are a shrine to Canada's glory at which all should pay tribute. They are the soul of battle—a clarion to the living, a requiem for the dead.



That portion of France in which the fighting is most severe, and in which the British forces, including the Canadians, are daily scoring gains, is shown on this map. Peronne is now virtually surrounded.

GOAT COMING INTO HIS OWN

Great Increase in the States is Profitable.

Better Than Mutton, Besides His Fleece.

It is said that, in the manufacture of plush, upholstering, dress goods, summer suitings, braids, rugs, imitation fur and curled false human hair, the United States annually uses 7,000,000 pounds of mohair. Heretofore, about 2,000,000 pounds of this amount came from Europe, while the balance was of domestic production.

It is estimated that there are over 1,000,000 Angora goats in the States engaged in the cleaning of brush land, the growing of goat meat and the making of mohair.

While the goat is by nature a browser, he dislikes tainted food; he is a busy animal, and rightly kept is profitable.

There was a time when there was no sale for goat meat. The only way it could be disposed of was to palm it off as bogus mutton. But of late years a demand has developed.

In the neighborhood of 100,000 goats are annually slaughtered at Kansas City, Missouri, for meat purposes. The average weight of these goats is 68 pounds. The flesh desplays a fine marbling of fat and lean meat, and is claimed to be of finer flavor and sweetness than is mutton. Those who have acquired the taste of goat meat declare that there is no other meat its equal. "Once a goat meat eater always one."

The meat has recently been sold under the name of "Angora venison" and "Angoro mutton." If the goat is well dressed, it not only has a more delicious flavor than mutton, but there is seldom as much fat, and in certain localities the meat commands a higher price than that obtained for sheep mutton. The meat of the Angora goat is preferable to that of the common goat. When the animals are able to browse upon various wild shrubs, there is a venison-like flavor given to the meat. But this gamey flavor is not noticeable when the animals feed on cultivated plants.

If four or five Angoras are quartered on an acre of brushland, they will do more efficient work in cleaning up, and at a lower expense than an equal number of men. The animal relishes the browse which is abundant in the woodland, and will leave the best fields of pasture for the opportunity of nibbling at the leaves and twigs of underbrush. He will continue clipping the stems and leaves until finally the wild growth is killed. This leaves the land in better shape for cultivation.

On the Government forest ranges the Angora is of particular advantage by grazing the underbrush very close and controlling the fires by preventing them from spreading, as would be the case if the weeds, grass and small shrubs were permitted to remain on the ground.

In addition to its value as a browser, the goat is an efficient dispenser of fertility over the land which he grazes. It has been proved that goat manure is one of the richest fertilizers.

As they are natives of a high, dry, mountainous country, goats will not thrive on wet or marshy land. They cannot stand wet feet.

As a rule, the Angoras are sheared once a year giving a fleece that will weigh from two and a half to three pounds, with an average length of approximately ten inches. Mohair, at the present time, is abnormally high, due to the European war, an annual cash income of $1.50 to $2 being derived per head in the flock.

The best quality of mohair comes from the young does, kids and wethers, as the older the goat the coarser the mohair.

Mohair is usually sold direct to the mills. Sometimes Angora skins, with the fur attached, are tanned and made into carriage robes and rugs. The hide alone is also used in making morocco and inferior grades of leather, such as are used in cheap gloves.

Where the Angoras are used solely as land cleansers and where they receive no food other than what they rustle for themselves, the fleece never exceeds eight inches in length, and is of poorer quality than where the animals receive supplementary grain.

At kidding time the does require considerable care. A good shed, protected from the weather, must always be available for the flock. Angoras beat the barometer as storm predicters. They will scent a storm several hours before it breaks and immediately they will seek shelter. These animals like good, clean hay, corn fodder, oats, cracked corn, bran and ground barley and rye, as well as succulent root crops. They do not require much food, but they are very particular about the quality of the grain and roughage. Unless it is first-class they reject it.

For clearing up land, grade Angoras are sufficient, but if one is going into the breeding business and the production of high-grade mohair, it will profit him to purchase a pure-bred buck and several full-blood does. The does commonly bear two kids a year, as the gestation period is only five months. Occasionally twins and triplets are produced. The average buck will serve 50 does a season. Good does may be purchased at from $25 upward, and bucks at from $30 and up. Grade goats for cut-over lands may often be bought as low as $4 per head. At present the Angora Goat Breeders' Association has registered 50,000 animals in the United States. Indications are that the goat industry will show a greater expansion than any other variety of the live-stock business during the next decade.

PALPITATION OF THE HEART SHORTNESS OF BREATH CURED BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. S. Watters, Matapedia, Que., writes: "I wish to let you know how much good I have received by taking your Heart and Nerve Pills. I was suffering from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath. The trouble with my heart was caused by stomach trouble.

I had tried all kinds of medicine, both patent and doctors', but I found none relieve me like Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I believe anyone suffering like I did should use them. I only used four boxes and I now feel like a different person."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years and have a most wonderful reputation as a remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TRENCH MASCOTS

I met him in the buffet at Victoria Station, half an hour or so before the "trench train" was timed to leave—a tanned, khaki warrior of the Cockney school, who had seen fourteen months' hard fighting "somewhere in France," and was cheerily going back for more.

He told me all about Tommy's wonderful menagerie of trench pets.

Perhaps it would be better if I told the story in his own picturesque way.

"You blokes what don't know anything about this 'ere picnic," he commenced, "ain't got no manner of idea how fond the British soldier-man is of 'aving a bit of 'ome, sweet 'ome in his 'dugout'—something to remind him of his 'civvy' days when the fust words he says to the missus when he went 'ome was, 'And 'ow's the dawg?' Of course, different people 'as different tastes—mine is a nice little Irish terrier bitch—and I have known some queer animals getting a home with some companions of our boys over the water.

"Coming 'ome on the boat last week, I ran up against a Scottie who 'ad a soft time dahn at one of our bases. We got talkin' abaht dawgs, and he told me about the dawgs they had had at their camp.

"One little chap was brought dahn from the firing line on a transport-lorry, 'cos he 'ad a nasty 'abit of running after bursting 'whizz-bangs'; another—a mongrel cur he was, he said—used to regularly trot twenty miles a day behind an ammunition cart—ten miles up and ten back—and knew every inch of the road. One chap he knew, a Canadian, had brought a terrier pup all the way from Montreal wiv 'im, and managed to smuggle the beast into the base hospital wiv 'im when 'e got plugged in the arm.

"When the doctors took the dawg away from him he swore that if his dawg couldn't stop there it was no place for 'im. He was only there a couple of days, but when he went on the boat, bound for 'Blighty,' 'is dawg was in his pack.

"One bloke I knew 'ad a couple of white rats he used to keep snug and warm in his trench; another—he's in our company—'as a fancy for a brown rabbit which he pinched one afternoon up near Booloo (Bailleul.) Poor little beggar, this rabbit was! A knowing little cuss, mind yer; but he went into the dixie (cooking pot) one night when the bully-biscuit got wet and we wanted something to help it down!

"Then there was Charlie ——, comes from Balham. He picked up a stray goat and kept it 'anging around the billet for a week. The sergeant-major didn't like goats, and so Charlie's capture suddenly got lost.

Don't reserve your highest praise till your wife is dead.

COULD NOT SWEEP BACK WAS SO SORE.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

Mrs. L. [illegible], [illegible] Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are put up in an oblong grey box, the trade-mark, is a Maple Leaf, so accept no other.

Price 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering, direct specify "Doan's."

MURAD CIGARETTES
Everywhere Why?
The blending is exceptional
S. Anargyros

FARM AND GARDEN

TREATMENT OF SOILS.

As a general thing no injury comes to a sandy soil if handled while it is wet. A clay soil, however, would suffer from such treatment. The effect would be what is known as puddling. Even if a clay soil is harrowed when wet, there will be more or less puddling. When in this condition it becomes cloddy and impervious to air and water.

When the land is just moist enough to break up mellow is the proper time to plow it. It must be neither wet enough to leave a slick surface where rubbed by the moldboard, nor dry enough to break up in large clods.

Should continued rain follow wet plowing, not much, if any, harm would follow. It is the hot, dry winds that leave a mass of unmanageable clods. Especially in the spring and midsummer, it is important that the harrow immediately follow the plow, thus preventing formation of clods. In late fall plowing the clods do not cause any trouble, as the freezing and thawing they receive during the winter will break them up.

INCREASING STOCK OF HUMUS.

It has been proved that poverty in soil may be due to poor texture, to unfavorable structure, to lack of humus, to deficiencies in the amount, form or proportion of plant food, and to the presence of harmful mineral and organic compounds. Most soils, even very poor ones, contain an abundant supply of plant food, excepting nitrogen, and sometimes other elements are either lacking or are present only in those forms that plants can utilize. It is necessary to improve the texture, in order to increase fertility, and add plant food and humus. Texture can be greatly improved by tillage, but tillage alone is not enough. Humus must be added. In doing so plant food must be added and the soil made more permeable to water and air.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.
Please Mention This Paper.

In supplying humus to the soil three general methods are used. Probably the best plan is the addition of stable manure. When rightly used this adds large amounts of both humus and plant food.

When stable manure is not available, crops to be turned under should be planted, and this will give large quantities of humus at comparatively little cost. Plowing under green crops is what is known as green manuring.

A third method is to grow clover and timothy, which crops are generally left down for two or more years. This gives a chance for the roots to thoroughly penetrate the soil. The old roots decay, and new ones grow. By plowing up the sod more or less vegetable matter is turned under, which, with the mass of roots in the soil, will add considerably to the supply of humus. Clovers and alfalfa are deep-rooted plants, and when their roots decay they leave channels deep into the earth that aids in the absorption of rains and admits the air to sweeten the soil.

VALUE OF STABLE MANURE.

If stable manure is rightly handled it is the best material that can be put in a poor soil. But it is a fact that most farmers do not know how to handle it, losing at least half of its value. It has been scientifically proved that five-eighths of the plant food that is in the liquid part of stable manure is usually lost. Not only is this a fact, but the solids are piled beside the barn, often under the eaves of the roof, where the rains wash away much of the remaining good. At times fermentation in these manure piles sets free much of the nitrogen, to escape in the air.

The practice of plowing under green crops is not very enthusiastically indorsed by Professor Spillman, of the United States Department of Agriculture. He says some crops do not thrive when sown on land into which a green crop has recently been plowed. This, he says, is particularly true of those crops that like a solid seed bed, or which are sensitive to acids. When a heavy green crop is plowed under it goes through a fermentation not unlike that which occurs in a barrel of krout, resulting in the formation of a considerable amount of acid. Alfalfa is particularly sensitive to acids, and it also needs a compact seed bed. It is not good policy to green manure the land just prior to seeding to alfalfa. Cereals, especially wheat and rye, do not do well after a green manuring. But potatoes and corn are not seriously injured by green manures. Potatoes, in fact, are benefited by them, as the resulting acid condition of the soil prevents the development of potato scab.

Speaking in general, when it is intended to plow under a green crop before fall-sown crops, it should be done a month or six weeks prior to planting time, and the soil harrowed often, or otherwise compacted. A few good rains will wash out most of the acids and aid in compacting the soil. Adding lime may also counteract the acid.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

The American plum borer, an insect which attack impartially plum, cherry, peach and apple trees, has been found by investigators of the United States Department of Agriculture to confine itself entirely to those trees which have received some previous injury. It is, it is said, entirely unable to establish itself upon vigorous, healthy, uninjured trees, and for this reason, except in occasional cases, is unlikely to become a pest of more than ordinary importance. It is frequently found, however, on apple trees which have suffered from collar blight. In order to prevent infestation by the American plum borer, a professional paper of the United States Department of Agriculture, Bulletin No. 261, recommends the precaution of cutting away the dead bark and painting the wounded area on all injured trees with any non-injurious tree paint. After the borer has once established itself the cutting-out method is the only one that can be followed. When the proper conditions are present the plum borer can do considerable damage, and it is therefore advisable to take precautions against it.

Pear trees affected with blight should have close attention. Whether fire-blight or ordinary pear blight, cutting out the diseased tissues is the best preventive. When this is done the diseased branches should be burned and the pruning knife disinfected in alcohol or formaldehyde. If this is not done the disease is likely to spread when pruning of well trees is done with the knife.

Land should not be too rich in nitrogen where pears are grown. Ordinary land of good fertility, but where no manure nor fertilizer is used, will be better for pears than very rich land.

Heavy pruning that is likely to stimulate rapid growth is likely to accelerate blight. For this reason care should be used in pruning pears.

The success of any year's work on the farm depends, in no small measure, upon the preparation made the previous year.

Experiment stations are claiming that the best way of increasing profits in fattening cattle is to reduce the amount of grain usually fed and increase the amount of roughage.

Do not expect any winter legume to succeed to perfection with the first sowing. It often takes several crops to fill the soil with the necessary number of bacteria, especially on poor soil containing little or no humus.

Spring Tailor-Mades.

Many are rather elaborate.

Gray tweed in simple tailored styles are long-waisted and belted.

A soft velour-like cloth which makes a rose colored suit is called suede cloth.

There are blue serges with rows of tiny black bone buttons for trimming.

And for extremes you may choose suits both short and long waisted.

Many new suits have deep collars of cloth and over them large collars of the new figured crepes.

Hopsacking is another old weave revived for use in spring suits.

TELLTALE TONGUES.

Glossomancy Tells Character by the Unruly Member.

Of yore we had our fortunes told. We paid real money for horoscopes. We lingered over the words of any seer. As for palmists, we flocked to them. Just why we are willing to be parted from good money to learn things we ourselves know best is not easily explained.

But we do.

We love ourselves so much we are willing to pay people to converse on that ever-interesting subject.

But, 'tis done differently.

No longer are we asked to extend our palms. As for the stars, they are paid no attention to whatever. Let them twinkle.

Now it's "Put out your tongue, please," with glossomancists.

A glossomancist, it may be explained, is a professor of glossomancy, a new science which consists in reading people's characters by the shape and size of their tongues.

Thus according to its votaries, the possessor of a short and broad tongue is apt to be untruthful as to words and unreliable as to deeds. A long tongue moderately pointed denotes frankness and a loving, trustful, affectionate disposition. When the tongue is long and broad, however, it is a sign that the owner is shallow and superficial, and also a great talker. The typical woman gossip, say glossomancists, shows this shape of tongue.

The small round tongue, plump and in shape like an oyster, denotes mediocre abilities and a nature that is commonplace and colorless. A short narrow tongue denotes quick temper.

The worst type of tongue is said to be the long, narrow, sinuous kind, what glossomancists call the "snake tongue." Its possessors are very likely to be cruel, sly, vindictive and deceitful.

Corns Cured Quick
Applied in 5 Seconds
Sore, blistering feet from corn-pinched toes can be cured by Putnam's Extractor in 24 hours. "Putnam's" soothes away that drawing pain, eases instantly, makes the feet feel good at once. Get a 25c bottle of "Putnam's" to-day

CUNNING BUILDERS.

Humming Birds' Nests, Never Hidden, Seldom Found.

Even in those parts of tropical America where, as in Colombia, humming birds are vastly numerous, it is almost impossible for the most experienced naturalist to find their nests. In this, although as a rule they are not hidden at all, the feathered builders relying for concealment upon the likeness of their tiny houses to the surroundings amid which they are placed. A humming-bird's nest always corresponds exactly in color with the branch to which it is attached. It may imitate a knot or other excrescence. Thus the Calliope humming birds of the western United States often builds on a dead pine twig, either upon or near a cone of similar size and hue.

Usually the nests of humming birds are cup shaped or turban shaped, and their material is always plant down. Such down, resembling cotton wool, but of more delicate fibre, is gathered from the stems of ferns and other plants. This is woven together with spiders' webs into a compact mass. Usually they ornament the outside of the nest with small feathers and lichens, which they obtain by detaching them from the rocks where these humble plants grow. These they fasten with cobwebs all over the exterior of their tiny house.

When these wee architects suspend their nests from leaves or tendrils they are always weighted for stability in order that they may not be upset by every passing breeze. For this purpose the bottom is made very thick. But the most remarkable expedient is that adopted by the hill stars, which dwell far up near the snow line of the Andes. They weight the tiny suspended house on the lighter side with a pebble to give the proper balance. There is no question whatever that this is done, and many of the nests of such species preserved in collections are found to contain pebbles.—Rose L. Honeyman in St. Nicholas.

Redpath SUGAR
"Redpath" stands for sugar quality that is the result of modern equipment and methods, backed by 60 years experience and a determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name "REDPATH".
"Let Redpath Sweeten it."
2 and 5 lb Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.
Made in one grade only—the highest!

The Barrel Effect.

It's new.

It's ugly.

It's Paquin's.

It began with muffs.

It has ended with cloaks.

Dresses and skirts feel this influence.

In moderation it is really a harmless fad.

In excess it makes the wearer altogether absurd.

Boiling.

There's much waste.

And fuel costs money.

First bring water to boiling point.

Then the heat may be very much reduced.

It takes little fire to keep a pot boiling.

And water boiling violently is no hotter than boiling slowly.

In a double boiler a little salt will give more heat with no more fire.

In cooking meat thus, put the meat into wildly-boiling water; then let it down to a simmer.

WOMEN WHO SUFFFR

Can Obtain New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Every woman at some time needs a tonic. At special times unusual demands are made upon her strength. Where these are added to the worry and work which falls to her lot, weakness and ill health will follow unless the blood is fortified to meet the strain.

Weak women find in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the tonic exactly suited to their needs. Most of the ills from which they suffer are due to bloodlessness—a condition which the Pills readily cure. These pills save the girl who enters into womanhood in a bloodless condition from years of misery, and afford prompt and permanent relief to the woman who is bloodless, and therefore weak. Mrs. Wm. H. Wagner, Rosenthal, Ont., writes:—"After the birth of my second child I suffered from troubles which many mothers will understand, without going into details. The doctor who was attending me said an operation would be necessary, but as I dreaded this and as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had been of great help to my sister I decided to try this medicine, and I can truly say that after using the pills for some time they made a complete cure and made life more enjoyable than it had been for a long time. I think every woman suffering from the ailments of our sex should give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial as I know from my own case the great benefit that follows their use."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bullet-Proof Glass.

A new glass, transparent, tough and strong, which has all the advantages and none of the defects of [illegible] window glass, has been invented.

A [illegible] bullet cannot penetrate it; a brick cannot shatter it [illegible]

The secret of its strength is a sheet of white, [illegible] celluloid [illegible] of an inch thick, which is placed between two pieces of glass. The glass and celluloid are firmly welded together under both temperature and tremendous pressure, the resultant being a solid sheet possessing all the transparency of the best plate glass, combined with the strength of a sheet of metal.—Popular Science Monthly.

EATS DIRT
GILLETT'S LYE
E.W. GILLETT COMPANY LIMITED TORONTO, ONT.

Poultry World

TO GET WINTER EGGS.

The question uppermost each year in the mind of the purchaser of fresh eggs in the cities is why the price of eggs should always be so much higher in winter than during the spring and summer. Perhaps, if all the hens that are raised in natural ways would be in full lay, the A No. 1 egg would be cheaper, provided the cost of poultry feeds would remain normal. But to have all hens lay in winter is something that has never come true and there is no indication that anything like that will ever happen. For the fact remains and will always hold good, that all who try to raise poultry do not succeed, as do those entering any other line. There will always be a percentage who fail. There has never yet been a glut in the fresh egg market, and with the population increasing the day is far distant when the poultry business will be overdone, if ever.

Winter is the unnatural season for egg production, and those who succeed in obtaining a good egg yield from their flock must handle them with great care. There is no secret in obtaining a good egg yield, but certain essentials must be faithfully followed. Haphazard methods will never get a good egg production during the shortest days in the year. No one can expect success with hens if, first, they are not provided with a proper house. This is one of the first essentials. It need not be expensive, but it must be wind and rain proof, with good ventilation, that the poultry may be in the best of health and remain so. A sick chicken is never a layer, and while ailing [illegible]

The [illegible] rule of allowing four square feet of floor space for each hen in the heavy breeds, and three feet for the light [illegible] Leghorns, Anconas, etc., is a good one to follow. Good feeding [illegible] the overcrowding of the flock. The second essential to feeding the poultry [illegible] clean feed of known merit. During the present high price of all feeds many poultry keepers have [illegible] cheap brands, [illegible] with the result that they paid just as much as if the [illegible] brands, which had merit, were purchased. More of the cheaper feed had to be fed to produce a good egg yield, and then it is doubtful if the production would be satisfactory. In feeding poultry the best is none too good, and quality should be sought for and not price. Good grades of oats, wheat and corn are all that are needed for the flock in the way of grain feeds, and in the dry mash, good bran, middlings, ground oats and mealed alfalfa, with from 10 to 15 per cent. of high-grade beef scraps. There is no great secret about these staple feeds, within the reach of any poultry keeper. But the quality should be the best. Added to this in self feeding hoppers should be oyster shells, grit and charcoal. Fresh water, cool in summer, and with the chill taken from it on very cold days in winter, comprises the bill of fair for the "little American hen." Then comes the care whether the floor of the poultry house be of dirt, boards or cement, a deep litter of good straw should be provided that the fowls can exercise by scratching for the grain thrown in it morning and late in the afternoon. It is wise to make the morning feed lighter than that of the afternoon, as the fowls should be kept fairly busy during the greater part of the day. They will never go hungry, for the dry mash (which is the real egg maker) is before them at all times.

The afternoon feed, an hour before sundown, should be so fed that the fowls may have full crops to enable them to stand the long winter night. A little judgment with the feed pail will go far in producing results. They need never be overfed, but for egg production one must feed enough. It is not waste when fowls eat up clean and go to the roosts with well filled crops, for they will produce a good quantity of hen fruit, provided they are fully matured. One cannot expect an egg yield from late-hatched pullets, or those which have not been properly grown, nor can the old hens in moult or just recovering and growing the new coat [illegible] to be expected to fill the egg basket. No amount of feed or care can induce these birds to produce. The favorite [illegible] pullets [illegible] starting to lay before [illegible] are wanted, and will produce the kind of a chick that will live and [illegible]

It is the fully developed, properly grown pullets hatched in February, March and April that are now shelling out the bulk of the fresh eggs—with experienced breeders one may find success with May hatched chicks, especially if a good growing season is experienced. But the beginner should aim to hatch in March and April and give his flock constant care, for it is only by attention to the small details that the poultry raiser can hope to succeed. Yet in following them there is nothing hard, nor no wonderful secret to solve, but common sense and acquiring each year more poultry knowledge.

NOTES.

Indications point to a good year for the poultry breeders. With eggs for hatching, or stock for sale, the trouble will be that most breeders have cut down the flock to such an extent that not enough of the right kind will be left to offer for sale.

Beginners should realize that there is more in the right start, good stock. Eggs from such, of course, will give results. The other kind will not. No one ever made poultry pay with culls.

The successful poultry keeper is getting eggs and placing the balance on the proper side of the ledger. There is and always has been a fair living in poultry for those who know how.

Men Wanted for the Navy
The Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve, wants men for immediate service Overseas, in the Imperial Navy
Candidates must be from 18 to 38 years of age and sons of natural born British subjects.
PAY $1.10 per day and upwards. Free Kit. Separation allowance, $20.00 monthly.
Experienced men from 38 to 45, and boys from 15 to 18 are wanted for the CANADIAN NAVAL PATROLS.
Apply to
COMMODORE ÆMILIUS JARVIS, Naval Recruiting Officer, Ontario Area, 103 BAY STREET, TORONTO, or to the Department of Naval Service, OTTAWA.

PATENTS IN ALL COUNTRIES
Book "Patent Protection" Free
BABCOCK & SONS
Formerly Patent Office Examiner. Estab. 1877
99 ST. JAMES ST., MONTREAL
Branches: Ottawa and Washington

Locating Icebergs.

The captain of an ocean steamer in most cases finds out when his vessel is approaching an iceberg from the men down in the engine room. That sounds queer, but it is a fact, nevertheless. It appears that when a steamship enters water considerably colder than that through which it has been going its propeller runs faster. Such water usually surrounds the vicinage of icebergs for many miles. When the propeller's action therefore is accelerated without the steam power being increased word is passed up to the officer on the bridge that icebergs may be expected, and a close lookout for them is established. There are natural reasons for the propeller acting in this way, and sea captains will assert the same thing.

It is foolish to dispute when there is no probability of convincing.

THE LOST DISCORD.

(Clarence Lucas in the Musical Courier.)

Seated one day at the organ,
I was waiting for Dr. Carl
To straighten a pedal passage
That tied my feet in a snarl.

I know not what I was playing,
But that did not worry me,
Though I struck one snag of music
Which was not in any key.

It flooded the crimson twilight
With fears of a lingering death,
And floated away into silence
Before I recovered my breath.

It jarred the harmonious echo
Of filing a dozen saws;
It ruptured the golden silence
Without an apparent cause.

I seek, but I seek it vainly,
That one lost chord of pain
Which came from inside the organ
And drove me quite insane.

It may be that Death's fright angel
Will speak in those tones again—
Those tones so supremely fitted
To frighten the souls of men.

Those tones burst the pipes and the bellows,
And left not a rivet or nail!
It may be that elsewhere than heaven
I shall hear that grand mixed wail.

Phenominal Strides Made By Canadian Northern Railway System In First Year As Transcontinental

New System in the Past Year Carried Approximately 131,000,000 Bushels of Wheat, an Increase of 125 Per Cent. Over Previous Year. Company's New Mileage on Pacific Coast and Northern Ontario Makes Astonishing Showing Right from Commencement of Operation. Company's Lines Most Favorably Located.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Toronto, Feb. 11.—The phenomenal gains that the Canadian Northern Railway reports for its year as a transcontinental line makes the statement one of the most important that has ever been issued by any railway in Canada. It is even doubtful whether the tremendous increases in business handled have even been duplicated by any system in the world. There are many features to the report that makes it of special import to every Canadian, owing to the interest the country has in the building up of this important transcontinental line and the attractive territory that has been developed through the completion of the system. The feature of the report that is likely to be especially gratifying is that which shows the prominent part the Canadian Northern, with its transcontinental system, has been able to play in handling such a large proportion of the grain requirements of the Mother Country.

Right along it has been the contention of Sir William Mackenzie and his associates that it was only a matter of a very short period before Canada and the Empire would enjoy the benefits of the big system that had been built up across the Dominion, and the showing made in the report indicates that these hopes have been realized much earlier than it would have been thought possible when the transcontinental system was set in operation a little over a year ago.

IMPORTANT GAINS OF YEAR.

A few of the outstanding features of the report are as follows: An increase in freight traffic during the year of $5,362,412, equivalent to as much as 43.87 per cent.; increase in passenger traffic $717,840, or a gain of 11.25 per cent.; an increase in total operating revenue of $9,244,153, or 36.91 per cent. over the previous year. That the company's lines handled over 131,000,000 bushels of grain is proof positive that the railway has been located in the best grain growing areas of the West.

The exact grain traffic handled amounted to [illegible] bushels as compared with [illegible] bushels in 1915, or an increase of 73,665,229, equivalent to an increase of as much as 125.21 per cent.

COMPANY'S EARNING POWER.

The development that is sure to be most favorably received by everybody who is following the growth of the larger Canadian railways will come from the fact that the Canadian Northern Railway has come within [illegible] earning its total fixed charges, the deficit for the year being brought down to less than a quarter of a million dollars, a reduction from the previous year of almost $1,800,000. As was to be expected, a great proportion of the increased revenues came from the large crop gathered in the Canadian West in the fall of 1915, but since that time there has been a marked increase in the general freight traffic handled over the lines, and during the first four months of the current fiscal year gross earnings have continued to show large increases over the corresponding periods of the year now under review. Perhaps the most striking development in this connection is that it is in the month of October that the heaviest grain movement occurs, and yet in October, 1916, the gross earnings showed a gain over those of the same month in the previous year.

Some of the interesting features of the Board of Directors' report [illegible] the position of the line and the [illegible] it has made include the following:

An agreement of great importance in the development of the System's freight and passenger traffic was made with the Cunard Steamship Co. In future the Cunard Line and the Canadian Northern Railway will be in fact, a single transportation unit between Europe and Canada.

The possession of such favorable grades as those on the System's lines has given the Canadian Northern an already important advantage in the economy of operation, particularly in carrying the two commodities offering in largest volume, viz.: lumber and grain.

The main line of the Canadian Northern Railway from Quebec to Vancouver is superior to any line crossing the continent of America in points of grade and curvature favoring traffic.

The lines of the Company's system are now serving 75 per cent. of the aggregate population of the cities and towns of all Canada, having 5,000 inhabitants and over.

The present situation emphasizes the fact that the Railway is not as dependent upon grain crop movement as in the past, and in becoming transcontinental has acquired a highly diversified traffic. The developments of the year confirm the Directors in the belief that they strongly hold, that the ultimate prosperity of the Canadian Northern Railway System is measurable only by the prosperity of the Dominion of Canada.

Yank Out Those Stumps
The Kirstin method clears your land for the plow.
Send To-day For This Book
THE GOLD IN YOUR STUMP LAND
TURN your sullen, gloomy, profit-eating stump lands into happy, smiling fields that bear rich crops, and put money into the bank for you.
Our Free Book, "The Gold in Your Stump Land," shows you how you can transform your barren stump fields into rich virgin farm land. It shows you photographs of immense stumps it has pulled; it contains letters from the men who pulled them; and it will convince you that the easiest, quickest and cheapest way is with a
Kirstin Stump Puller
One Man — Horse Power
The horse power machine for the big jobs, for the fields of many stumps; it will pull anything it tackles, and, because of its triple power, prevents strain to man, horse and machine. Will clear two acres from a single setting.
The One Man Puller gets the biggest stumps. Double leverage gives you a giant's power; a push on the handle means a pull of tons to the stump. Clears an acre from one anchor.
Every Kirstin guaranteed for 15 years, flaw or no flaw, your money back if the Kirstin bond does not live up to its promise. We guarantee the Kirstin method to clear land ready for the plow from 10% to 50% cheaper than any other method.
Money Back Bond
15 Year Guarantee
Warranted saving of 10% to 50% over all other methods.
Profit Sharing Plan
Big Money to those who Order Now. To early buyers in each locality we offer a special opportunity to join in our profit sharing plan. No canvassing; just a willingness to show your Kirstin to your neighbors. Don't wait — send the coupon today.
A. J. KIRSTIN CANADIAN CO.
8425 Dennis Street.
Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.
1505
A. J. Kirstin Canadian Company, 8425 Dennis St. Sault St. Marie, Ontario
Send me free copy of "The Gold in Your Stump Land"
Name
Address
Largest Stump Puller Manufacturers in the World

WIT AND HUMOR

WOMEN'S INTUITION.

(Buffalo Express)

"Speaking of woman's intuition—"

"Yes?"

"A man can work six evenings in the week, go home very late and his wife will never ask him where he has been, but on the seventh night, when he wasn't working, she's sure to seek an explanation."

HER AGE.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"How old is Miss Flibberts?"

"She has reached the point where she isn't sighing for a soul mate and is looking around for a good provider."

"But you haven't told me yet how old she is."

"I judge she's over twenty-five."

STARTS IT EARLY.

(Washington Star)

"Does your wife start her Christmas shopping early?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Growcher. "She begins in November going around the stores, looking at everything, and asking the prices. Then a day or two before Christmas she gets into the crowd and buys something."

GOOD REASON.

(Buffalo Express)

"I can't see the point of all these jokes about the Christmas cigars a man's wife buys him."

"Do you smoke?"

"No."

"Have you a wife?"

"No."

AT LENGTH.

(Boston Transcript)

"When I got home at two this morning my wife met me in the hall and for a full minute she regarded me in silence."

"At length she spoke."

"Yes, also she spoke at length."

DRIVEN FROM THE DOOR.

(Baltimore American)

"I have a friend who goes often to see a man he knows, and yet that man has repeatedly driven him from his door."

"What? In anger?"

"No; in an automobile."

HER RECOMMEND.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"Have you a recommendation from your last place?"

"Yes, mum. Here it is."

"Why, that's a wrist watch."

"Yes, mum. The master of the house, a [illegible] gentleman who's dead now—gave me that for cooking his eggs the way he wanted 'em."

MORE PROFITABLE STILL.

(Buffalo Express)

"There's nothing more profitable than making munitions of war."

"Ha! How about a drug store in prohibition territory?"

COULDN'T HELP IT.

(Yonkers Statesman)

Mr. Flatbush—Did you hear my daughter sing last night?

Mr. Bensonhurst—Yes; I couldn't get my window shut.

SHORT DAYS.

(Boston Transcript)

"We are having the shortest days of the year now," remarked Binley.

"You bet we are!" said Briggs, as his hands came out of his empty pockets.

ALL CAN HELP.

(Washington Star)

"Even ef you ain' rich enough to help support a hospital," said Uncle Eben, "mebbe you kin save some fellow citizen f'um de ambulance by gettin' out early wif de snow shovel."

A HERO.

(Boston Transcript)

Her Dad—Of course you have heard my daughter sing.

Suitor—Yes, sir; but I should like to have her in spite of that.

A SURE CURE.

(Buffalo Express)

Pa—At last I've found a way to make that young scamp of ours stop winking his eye.

Ma—Really?

Pa—Yes. I'll show him the article in this science magazine where it says that every time we wink we give the eye a bath.

A VAIN EFFORT.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"What is daughter up to?"

"Writing a letter to Santa Claus."

"Oh, I fear she is in for a disappointment."

"Why so?"

"She asked me how to spell limousine."

PRO-ALLY.

(Baltimore American)

"I fear Miss Gladys is decidedly pro-ally."

"I should say she is. She went so far as to take French leave at the ball when they started to dance the german."

AN INFLUENTIAL MAN.

(Puck)

Mrs. Youngwife—My husband is a very influential man in politics.

Friend—You don't say!

Mrs. Youngwife—Yes. George voted in two presidential elections, and both times it has gone the way George voted.

WHERE THEY FAILED.

(Washington Star)

"Those forefathers of ours were wonderfully far-sighted men."

"Yes," replied the government clerk; "they were all right in composing documents of a general character, but they couldn't see this far into the future in framing up a pay-roll."

USELESS.

(Washington Star)

"So Crimson Gulch has gone for prohibition."

"That's what it has," replied Broncho Bob.

"Isn't it going to drive some of the old topers to desperation."

"Not a chance. What's the good of desperation if there ain't no drink for it to drive you to?"

M. D.'S ERROR.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"My old doctor wouldn't take my malady seriously. He says it's only headache."

"He said that to a woman with your money?"

"He did."

"I am astounded. You suffer from migraine."

QUITE TRUE.

(Judge)

"Dearest," he murmured, "I'll try and be worthy of you, although I know I am not fit to tie your shoe."

This was perfectly true. His waist measure was sixty-nine inches.

A HOT COME-BACK.

(Boston Transcript)

Wealthy Uncle—You are extravagant, sir. These cigars are a lot better than I smoked at your age.

Nephew (coolly)—They're a lot better than you smoke now.

At the theatre a woman may be in breathless suspense between the acts, but a man can always go out and acquire one.

VERY EASY.

(Boston Transcript)

"It is easy to give advice."

"Yes; also to refrain from taking it."

INCONSISTENT.

(Life)

Johnson—Who's that vestryman who delivered the Christmas address to the Sunday school children on peace on earth, good-will to men?

Thompson—"He's a millionaire who got rich making munitions for the belligerents."

You never can tell. Many a man gets on the top who doesn't sleep like one.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER
Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance (50c for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance ($1.00 for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, FEBRUARY 22nd '17

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error made one of our exchanges say last week that a prominent young man, had gone to fight Britain's battles in Detroit. Too many of our young men have headed for that particular Front.

+ + +

HERE is the latest war joke in London vaudeville: A comedian comes on the stage bearing a typewriter under his arm. "What's that you are carrying?" he is asked. "Be careful," is the reply, "this is one of President Wilson's machine guns." Then the house roars.

+ + +

AS the editor of the Galt Reporter whacked a couple of pickets off the back fence, after a useless scrape at the empty coal bin, he paused to pen this proverb: "We now realize that a loaded coal car contains more more solid comfort to the square foot then does a Pullman car."

+ + +

A TORONTO woman who evidently wishes to be fair to the city's water supply, gives it three chances and asks whether it is embalming fluid, washing fluid, or bleaching fluid that is coming through the pipes. It is all right, she says, for washing shirts and collars, but occasionally she would prefer something different to drink.

+ + +

WHEN a man lands out of bed on a cold floor, and goes down into a cold kitchen to start a fire in a cold stove, and walks down into a cold cellar to shake the furnace, and then looks at the family thermometer to find that its only 15 degrees below zero, can you blame him for wantin' to blow in a quarter for a new thermometer that will tell the truth?—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

THIS morning we got an invoice of our first shipment of newsprint after our old contract had expired and the raise figures out at 66 per cent. Thus writes a fellow-publisher. His misery, however, has company. The public might, however, figure out where the poor newspaper men is to land with but a fifty per cent. advance subscription rates and advertising at peace time prices.

+ + +

STEWART Lyon, editor of the Toronto Globe, sailed for Overseas last week to represent the daily newspapers of Canada at the Front. Mr. Lyon is recognized throughout the newspaper fraternity as a trained newspaperman of the highest efficiency. Up till now he has written the daily war summary on the Front page of the Globe, which is acknowledged to be the best thing of the kind in Canada.

+ + +

WITH coal $9 a ton and upwards in Ontario this winter, the public is certain to turn its attention more in the direction of electric heating. Hydro towns are already using electric ranges for cooking purposes which are proving as much an improvement over coal ranges as electric light is over coil oil. The town of North Bay has already 290 electric cooking ranges. This is another of the multitude of advantages which Walkerton will enjoy under Hydro.

+ + +

WITH the prices of everything jumping sky-high, householders in a good many Ontario towns will have at least one commodity that is going down instead of up in price. The Hydro Electric Commission has not completed its analysis of the reports of the local systems of the past year's operations, but Sir Adam Beck has intimated that there would undoubtedly be reduction. It is cheering to get from at least one quarter, assurances of a reduction in the high cost of living.

+ + +

AFTER five years of agitation by the Liberals and by Mr. Alan Studholme, Labor member, Woman Suffrage has developed into a question of immediate and front rank importance in the Ontario Legislature, which opened its present session on February the 13th. Newton Rowell and Mr. Studholme on this occasion joined hands in a resolution calling for the enfranchisement of women. Sir William Hearst was noncommittal in his reply. If the government does grant the reform this year it will be after years of pressure from the Opposition. For the last five years they have voted down all Liberal moves to give votes for women, and the Prime Minister himself as well as Hon. I. B. Lucas and other members of the government have been cold towards the proposition. The Liberals however have kept hammering and hammering and now Woman Suffrage is one of the leading planks in the Opposition platform.

Telescope Letter Box

Walkerton Soldiers Write of Doings at Bramshott Camp—A Splendid Letter from Wife of Walkertonian in Paris

LIEUT. VIC. McKECHNIE

Our readers will find the following letter from Lieut. Victor McKechnie to his parents, one of the most interesting and well-written letters we have published lately:—

Have been busy since spending my leave at Folkstone. The country around there is very hilly and walking on the dunes and watching the changing colour of the rolling sea is never tiresome. I was at Aldershott taking a bombing course which, though strenuous, was very interesting. When you thoroughly understand bombs you strive to play with them carefully and treat them with great respect. At Claycrest Hill where the school is, there are the most elaborate set of trenches in England, one trench is about two miles long. It is not hilarious work bombing, and bombing imaginary foes out of crevices and mudholes, searching shell craters and musty dugouts and speaking in trench whispers, "bring more bombs." We gave exhibition practice to crowds of onlookers which was often very spectacular. One night we had a night sally, attacking in the dark, over No Man's Land. One chap eager to annihilate the foe, tripped on a wire and went headfirst into a shell hole and was covered with mud. The prettiest mud you ever saw is here and it is so active. It builds mountains, valleys hills and groves all over, up and on your boots even seeks the crevices in your socks. Several colours combined make beautiful landscapes, and every morning new maps of the surrounding country are moulded upon the floors of our huts. There is a particular brand of a thick blue mud that is ever so plastic. Sir Wm. Robertson, Lord Kitchener's successor, inspected us and shook hands with us. He is a much older man than I imagined he was. After returning to Bramshott, Major McNally, Lieut. McLeod and I were out to look over some grounds for tactical purposes and by the time we returned we had travelled eight miles over moors, knee-deep in heather, moss and ferns. It was like an immense thick carpet. I remembered references in Stevenson's "Kidnapped." There has been found in Hindhead about a mile from here, on the edge of the Devil's Punch Bowl, evidences of German work before the war. On one farm two heavy gun emplacements have been found, one takes the form of a tennis court but there are tons and tons of cement underneath. There is also part of the house suitable for observation purposes and is so constructed and situated that they could see the south coast with Binocolars about thirty miles away. The gun emplacements hold Aldershott and surrounding country within reach. We were out on a sham, Lieut. Krug and McLeod and I were with an attacking party and enroute passed Conan Doyle's house where most of his books were written and at Liphook we saw the spreading Chesnut tree, described in Longfellow's "Blacksmith." Our camp is on the top of a steep hill running in the valley below is "Tennyson's Brook."

Chattering as it flows,
To join the brimming river,
For men may come and men may go,
But I go on forever,"

That is all too true. The same little brook rippled there centuries ago when battles were fought at Linchmere Common and Hindhead and it will ripple on when our own war is over and present things forgotten. The Brigadier was here recently taking stock of our battalion and expressed himself as being very well pleased and it is definitely settled that we go to the front as a unit in the first brigade of the new division and the third battalion. We will move over to Whitely and complete our field training and then to France. The men are being issued a new equipment. The old kind was of leather, the new is of a khaki canvas and matches the uniforms and is much better fitting. All of us are proud of Col. Weir and his staff and are determined to do our best for them and the good old county of Bruce.

+ + +

PTE. ALBERT FENNER

The following letter was received by Conn. J. E. McGregor from Pte. Albert Fenner, a Carrick boy in the 160th Bruce Battalion —

Bramshott Camp, Eng.,
Jan. 31st, 1917.

J. E. McGregor Esq.,
Walkerton, Ont.

Dear Folk:—

I got your letter to-day and as I have not written for quite a while I will sit right down after having supper and let you have some news if I can manage to scrape up some. I would have written sooner but I was at Aldershot Isolation Hospital with mumps for four weeks and we were not allowed to write, and since coming back to camp I have written four letters. I got seven letters and a box today, seven letters when I came from Aldershot and five while in the hospital so you see it keeps me busy writing letters. Our Battalion has not been broken up yet but expect it to be any time. There are rumors of us moving to Witley Camp again before long but you can address your letters the same as usual as I will get them anyway. John Canuck, a Russian Polander was taken to North Camp today as prisoner till the end of the war. He was in our hut and my best friend in the Army. He came to Canada four years ago and enlisted at Lucknow. Aldershot is a town of Barracks where the Imperial soldiers live and while I was there I saw half a dozen aeroplanes fly nearly every day. We got out of quarantine to-day and had to scrub floor and bed boards and take our blankets to the fumigator and there was quite a scrap over the blankets when they came back. I got the papers Milton sent before I went to the hospital. By-the-way, you could let the Methodist church know that I got the box. Thanks for it. You might also let Miss McGregor know that I got her box as I have lost her address. I have so many letters to answer that I think I will have to cut them down to one every two or three weeks. However, do not think that you write too often as getting the letters is the best part of it. I never get homesick no matter where I am. I am not in need of anything and as I do not spend any money on drink or tobacco, I always have enough on hand if I should need any little thing.

I will draw this to a close as I am going to post it to-night and am going to Town with my friend Jack who has come back for the night.

Bye-bye, from Bert.

+ + +

LETTER FROM PARIS

Telescope readers will be greatly interested in the following letter received by Mrs. James Raeburn from her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Adrain Raeburn. Her husband is Paris Agent of the American Express Co. and Mr. and Mrs. Raeburn have been in a position to see things from the inside ever since the war started.—

Orne Haussmann,
Courbevoie, Seine
France, 26, 1, 17.

In one of your recent letters you asked me if I would not write you something interesting about the war and conditions over here. I am at a loss to know how to comply with your request. We seem to have settled down into a sort of routine; every day brings more duties than we are able to perform. You know we date everything in this way—I. Before the war, (though that time seems so far away in the dim past, we have difficulty in remembering how we did pass our time), II. since the war, and III. after the war. Since the war, we have seen many changes. Paris seems just as busy as it was before the war, stores and shops crowded; but it is not the gay Paris of before the war. Every person seems to have something to do and be in a hurry to do it, and wherever you go you meet soldiers. One has become so accustomed to the French blue and the British khaki, to say nothing of all the other uniforms, Italian, Russian, Serbian, Montenegroin and Portugese. It seems quite natural and the only men who look out of place are the civilians. When we meet a strong and healthy looking young man not in uniform we immediately begin to wonder what is his nationality. One thing you cannot help notice, and that is how brave the French women have been. They have taken hold of all sorts fo work no matter how difficult and disagreeable (I presume they are quite as brave in England but I have not been there since Oct. 1914.) The weather for the past two or three weeks has been very cold, generally bright and clear, reminding us of winter in Canada without the snow. Coal has been exceedingly scarce and very high in price, $41.00 per ton. Of course all the coal mines in Belgium and Northern France are still in the hands of the enemy, and England has to supply so many countries with coal and munition factories must come first, but it has been exceedingly hard on poor people. Many of the well-to-do people have simply closed up their homes and moved into hotels. The Authorities are doing all they can to relieve the situation and I believe next month things will be nearly normal, excepting in prices. However we have no reason to complain, rather to be thankful, as we are able to get all we require and much more than is absolutely necessary. Thanks to the British Navy. Of course prices are high, butter 80 cents per lb., sugar is rather scarce and 15 cents per lb. Bread is only one cent higher per kilo (2 lbs.) than before the war. I know this is a stupid letter but to tell the truth, I'm so tired I just seem to do the things I have to do automatically. As I cannot go to the Front, I try to make a few others who are doing "their bit" a bit more comfy. We know several of the Canadians over here and there are parcels to send, a letter to write, then a tea or dinner for those who are near enough to come in when off duty, and to-day I have eight parcels to get off to prisoners in Germany. So please consider yourself lucky to get any kind of a letter. Adrian is busy as usual, He does "his bit" by taking over the work of those who have gone to the Front in addition to his own depts, and I can assure you he works quite as hard as many who wear the King's uniform which he is pronounced "not strong enough to wear." There are some people over here whom I wish the people at home could know more about, the nurses. They certainly are deserving of a V. C. every one of them. The way they work—long hours, hard work and without the comforts to which they have been accustomed, never complaining no matter how hard they work and many times, if not all the time, suffer from cold. I would like to say something to "the powers that be" over home, about those uniforms. They are alright in fairly warm winter weather but the weather here is always chill as the climate is so damp, but just imagine girls who are accustomed to fur coats, furs and muffs, going around in a coat, no matter how heavy it may be, with only a little straight military collar—no fur, no muff. Even thick gloves will not keep the hands warm in cold weather and it has been about zero lately. I had three come in for tea on Wednesday so cold I thought they would never thaw out and two of them had to go on night duty and sit in a little office not as warmly built as a summer cottage by the lake in Canada, no fire, only fires being in the wards. All the clothing they can put on won't keep them warm under such circumstances. If our Canadian nurses and other nurses do not go home many of them broken-down women, it will be because a special Providence watches over them, not owing to the care they get over here. And I do say I think Canada should know how brave and self-sacrificing they are.

It is just lunch time so I must say Au Revoir. Trusting you are well.

Love to all,
Annie.

CARRICK COUNCIL

Town Hall Feb. 12, 1917.

Carrick Council met on the above date pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. The Reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted

FINANCE REPORT

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee and disposed of as follow:—

J N Shoffer, ser as auditor	$ 8 50
Geo Helwig, ser as auditor	8 00
Chas Weudt, watch for soldier	7 00
Jno Smith 10 loads gravel	00
Mildmay Gaz, 1100 assessment schedules	8 00
Xavier Poechman, filling culvert	2 25
M Filsinger 1 meeting	2 75
L Doering, 1 mtg	2 75
A Lewis, 1 mtg	2 75
Jos Montag, 1 mtg	2 75
C Wagner, 1 mtg	2 75

The following applications were received.

For Assessor—S. F. Herringer

Coll Div No 1—George Kunkel, Louis Pletsch.

Collector Div No 2—Conrad Hill

Lewis—Montag—That S F Herringer, be appointed Assessor, Geo Kunkel Coll Div 1, and Conrad Hill, Coll Div No 2—Carried.

By-laws Nos 5 and 6 were read a first time.

Wagner—Doering—That By-laws 5 and 6 be now read a second and third time and finally passed.—Carried.

Messrs Buhlman, Schmaltz and Oppermen appeared before Council, requesting a reduction in the poolroom licenses.

Doering—Wagner—That the pool room license be reduced to $30 per annum for first table and $15 for second table

Moved in Amendment by Lewis and Montag—That the poolroom license be reduced to $40 for the first table and $15 for the second table.

The motion was carried, and the Clerk was instructed to amend By-law authorizing said reduction.

The matter of raising the Statute Labor Commutation was discussed and it was suggested that the same be raised from $1 to $1.25 per day. The matter will be disposed of at the next meeting.

Lewis—Wagner—That the report of the Township Auditors be adopted. —Carried.

Lewis—Wagner—That the sum of $25 be granted to the U. J. Knitting Club, to assist in buying socks for the soldiers.

Lewis—Montag—That this Council do now adjourn to meet again on Monday, the 20th day of March next, to appoint Pathmasters, Poundkeepers and Fenceviewers and to transact general business.—Carried.

Wouldn't Sow Wheat Without Homestead

JOHN R. ALLISON, Parkhill, Ontario, says:

"I have used Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer for the last three years and I find it pays. I use it in connection with manure and clover and I would not sow wheat without it."

+ + +

Prohibition Affecting Wiarton

How prohibition is affecting Wiarton is shown in the following item from their Town Council minutes. The Chief of Police, who had asked for increase of salary making the total amount $1000 per year, will probably tender his resignation as his request was not entertained. It is the intention of the Council to get a good street man and make a constable out of him. The Council are of the opinion that law and order are so well observed here that a chief is not necessary now.

Sun Life of Canada Sets New Records

RESULTS secured during the year 1916 re-affirm the position of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as the leading life assurance organization in the Dominion. Once more it leads the field among Canadian Companies in each of the following respects:

Largest New Business. Largest Business in Force. Largest Assets.
Largest Surplus Earnings. Largest Net Surplus. Largest Income.
Largest Distribution of Life Assurance Benefits.

THE YEAR'S RESULTS

The following large and uniform increases registered during the year 1916 clearly demonstrate the strength of the Company's position and the confidence and prestige it enjoys in the public mind:

	1916	1915	INCREASE
Assets as at December 31st	$82,948,996	$71,326,423	$8,622,573 (11.6%)
Cash Income	18,499,131	15,972,672	2,526,459 (15.8%)
Surplus paid or allotted to Policyholders	1,110,900	985,487	125,413 (12.7%)
Net Surplus as at December 31st	8,509,865	7,545,591	964,274 (12.8%)
Total Payments to Policyholders	7,578,016	7,129,479	448,537 (6.3%)
Assurances Issued and Paid for in Cash	42,772,296	34,873,851	7,898,445 (22.6%)
Assurances in Force	281,434,700	257,404,160	24,030,540 (9.3%)

Coincident with the above increases, the Company succeeded during the year in effecting a substantial and important reduction in the ratio of expense, a feature which favourably affects earnings on policyholders' account.

THE COMPANY'S GROWTH

YEAR	INCOME	ASSETS	LIFE ASSURANCES IN FORCE
1872	$ 48,210.73	96,461.95	1,064,350.00
1886	373,500.31	1,573,027.10	9,413,358.07
1896	1,886,258.00	6,388,144.66	38,196,890.92
1906	6,212,615.02	24,292,692.65	102,566,398.10
1916	18,499,131.62	82,948,996.06	281,434,699.94

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA
HEAD OFFICE MONTREAL
1871 T. B. MACAULAY, President. 1917

JOHN A. TORY,
Supervisor for Western Ontario & Michigan
Sun Life Building, Toronto, Ont.

J. H. RANESBOTTOM,
District Agent - Walkerton

Never varying quality in—
PURITY FLOUR
More Bread and Better Bread
13

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war. Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in those cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war; our armies are still growing; the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund still must be maintained. And what do we find: in every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.

Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONTROL, BECAUSE—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum those families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden. Why take from them this task, and give it to all, rich and poor?

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

MEN AND WOMEN OF ONTARIO!

Bend your backs once again to this burden. If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally; taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty; your wartime part in this day of national sacrifice.

The Fund requires $12,500,000 for 1917. Of this Ontario is asked to raise $6,000,000, being the estimated requirements of Ontario's families. If there is no local Fund to which you can subscribe, send your gift direct to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Victoria Street, Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

Do You Bake Your Own Bread?
If You Do

Let us tell you that NEVER BEFORE could you SAVE so much by starting to get your bread from us. Flour has DOUBLED (increasing from $2.50 to $5.00) and all ingredients have gone up while the price of bread has only increased one-third in the last three years.

A. Hehn
City Bakery

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "T and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

INSURANCE
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE
Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL
TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.
I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES
T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

Read the Ads.

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chance to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia. More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

Clearing Sale of
WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—
Dining Room,
Parlor,
Hall,
Sitting Room,
Bath Room,
and
Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

CENTRAL
Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time. Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Office
Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

NOTICE

Commencing Monday Feb. 12th, Transcontinental train for Sudbury, Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, North Battleford, Edmonton, Vancouver, and the Pacific Coast, will leave Toronto Union Station at 9 P. M., instead of 10.45 P. M., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, B. Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, or Chepstowe
D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley
47 t. f.

Seeds! Seeds!!

We always carry a full stock of all kinds of

Timothy and Clover Seeds

All No. 1 for quality and prices right.

Paints

We have a complete stock of Lowe Bros. High Standard Paints, the paint of performance.

S. W. VOGAN

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE
REQUESTS
THE PEOPLE OF CANADA TO BEGIN NOW
TO SAVE MONEY FOR THE
NEXT WAR LOAN

JAN. 9, 1917
DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE
OTTAWA

LOW FARES and THROUGH TICKETS
TO ALL POINTS IN
WESTERN CANADA AND THE PACIFIC COAST
ELECTRIC LIGHTED AND COMFORTABLY EQUIPPED TRAINS
To obtain the lowest fare and most convenient routing, apply to—
T. E. ATTWOOD, AGENT
Or write to R. L. Fairbairn, Gen'l Passenger Dept., 68 King St. E., Toronto
VIA CANADIAN NORTHERN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognised bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

TWO LONG YEARS HE SUFFERED

"Fruit-a-tives" Made Him Feel As If Walking On Air

ORILLIA, ONT., Nov. 28th. 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit-a-tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

DAN McLEAN.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BOOST

Boost, and the world boosts with you;
Knock, and you're on the shelf.
For the world gets sick of the one who kicks
And wishes he'd kick himself.
Boost when the sun is shining,
Boost when it starts to rain:
If you happen to fall, don't lie there and bawl,
But get up and boost again.
Boost for the town's advancement,
Boost for the things sublime;
For the chap that's found on the topmost round
Is the booster every time.

POETS' CORNER

HIGHER EDUCATION

Oh, daughter's home from college, she has brought a science book
With a little pad and pencil. She puts on a thoughtful look.
Then she writes awhile, and studies with a frown upon her brow.
But mother's in the stable, stripping out the old red cow!
Daughter's really very clever. She can play the violin—
She has a stand for music, and a chin rest for her chin.
So she practices for hours while our admiration grows.
But mother's at the clothes-line, hanging out the colored clothes.
Daughter's very patriotic—we must each one do our share—
So she's knitting socks for soldiers—she has made one hundred pair!
Still she doesn't care to try it, if the light is dim and bad,
But mother's in the kitchen, mending overalls for dad!
Daughter studies social problems; she believes in Women's Rights:
She demands the vote, and freedom and her own latch-key at nights
She has brave and high ideas—she is "following the gleam,"
But mother's in the cellar churning up the yellow cream!
Oh, mother's always busy. From the rising of the sun,
Though she toils with all her feeble strength, her tasks are never done.
When they lay her in the parlor with white lilies on her breast
It may be that up in Heaven, she will find a little rest!

—Nina Moore Jamieson
R. R. No. 1, Millgrove

News About Town

R. W. McMorran, an old Bruce Boy, living at Somerset, Man. is renewing his subscription, congratulates the Telescope on its good appearance.

The merchants of Clinton met in the Council chamber last Friday night to discuss the holding of Dollar Day in Clinton. A committee was was formed to interview all the merchants and another meeting will be held to decide on date, etc.

Aggressive competition is blamed for two grocery stores going out of business in Midland. The columns of the local papers would indicate that lack of aggressive publicity on the part of the proprietors was in the main responsible for the retirements.—Collingwood Bulletin.

+ + +

700 Bushels Wheat From 20 Acres

HENRY FRAZER, Forest, Ontario, says:—"I have used your Homestead Fertilizer for four years with good results. Last Fall I sowed 20 acres of wheat with no other dressing 200 pounds to the acre. My neighbor did not use fertilizer and his wheat only will yield about 20 bushels per acre. My wheat wintered better, filled better, consequently produced more bushels."

+ + +

Suspended Publication

There were 800 country weekly newspapers suspended publication in the United States in 1916, owing to the advance in price of newsprint. Canadian weeklies are now experiencing hardships, as the advances have struck hard here. If country weeklies cannot make things go in the U. S. where times are good and money plentiful, what will happen to the average Canadian weekly publisher? The dollar and a half subscription rate does not begin to cover the present cost of production.

+ + +

Surprise Party

Mr. and Mrs. John Bilger and family who are coming to Walkerton to reside, were given a pleasant surprise party by the young people of the Evangelical church one evening recently. Lunch was served and an enjoyable time was spent playing progressive crokinole. Miss Sylvia Greenzenbach and Noah Eckel winning the prizes, and Mr. Bilger and Mrs. Walter Widmeyer taking the booby prizes. Their many friends here are glad that their change of residence will not mean their removal from the community. Mr. Bilger has rented the house on Mr. Fennel's farm within the town limits to be used until his fine new brick residence at the head of Gibson St. is completed.

+ + +

Sun Life Leads Canadian Companies

The Sun Life of Canada's published statement of 1916 results, which appears in this issue, is in every sense a satisfactory document. It shows assurances issued and paid for in cash during 1916 of a total of over $12,750,000, the largest amount of new business ever written by any Canadian life company in any year. Assurances in force now total over $280,000,000. Assets increased by over $8,600,000, to practically $83,000,000, the largest assets ever attained by a Canadian company. Cash income totalled nearly $18,000,000, an increase of $2,500,000 over that of 1915. Payments to policyholders exceeded $7,300,000 bringing total payments to policyholders since organization to over $60,250,000. The record of the Sun Life of Canada for 1916 reflects the highest credit upon the Directors and Officers of the Company and should be equally satisfactory to the Company's policyholders.

Renewed your subscription yet?

The T. Eaton Co. spends 25 per cent of its profits in advertising.

Mrs. A. Stevens and Miss S. Watts spent last Wednesday with Mrs. Robt. Smith at Hanover.

Mr. Alex George sold three of his horses to George Craig, the Paisley horse-buyer on Thursday.

Work will be commenced shortly on the erection of Mr. Harvey Damm's new red brick bungalow on Yonge St.

The infant son of Dr. J. F. Grant, of Durham, brother of Dr. C. L. Grant of Walkerton, died on the 10th inst.

Write Michigan Carbon Works, Detroit, for free book and particulars about their Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer.

Mrs. Robert Bell of Paisley who underwent an operation at the Bruce County Hospital was able to return home this week.

Mr. Don Fullerton, who has been visiting his friend, Mr. J. A. Ormond Hard of Kinloss, left on Monday for his home at McGee, Sask.

Mrs. John Clancy of Cargill attended the funeral of her cousin, Mr. Thos. O'Donnell, a well-known merchant of Stratford and Gad's Hill at Stratford last Thursday.

+ + +

Slightly Improved

Walkerton friends will be glad to learn that Rev. D. A. Walker's condition shows some slight improvement the last two weeks. He sits up most of the time but his recovery from the nervous break down will be slow at best.

+ + +

Good Profit

J. W. GREGG, Foldens, Ontario, says: "I used one hundred and fifty pounds of Homestead Fertilizer on fourteen rows of turnips, testing it with fourteen rows of unfertilizer, and realized fifty five bushels of turnips profit from the fertilized ground. All the ground was otherwise treated alike."

+ + +

Lottie Deported

Lottie L. Tillotson, the so-called Hawaiian lecturer, who visited this district last Fall, was deported at Sault St. Marie, recently as an undesirable character. Lottie, who has also gone under the names of Mary McLean and Mabel Castello has a bad record in Canada having been convicted several times of shop-lifting.

+ + +

Gets $2,000 Damages

The C. P. R. has agreed to pay the widow of the late Rev. C. E. Stafford $2,000 damages for the death of her husband, who died last Fall after being in a wreck near Belwood. Rev. Mr. Stafford was at one time pastor of the Walkerton Methodist Church. At the time of his death he had been superannuated and had been living at Elora.

+ + +

Former Chepstow Man

The death occurred recently at Vancouver B. C. of an old Bruce Boy, T. A. Hopper, a well-known citizen and former president of the Hopper Phillips Trust Co. He was 61 years of age and was born near Paisley. As a young man he taught in Chesley School which at that time stood a mile out of town. Soon after he gave up teaching and kept store at Ellingowan. Afterwards he lived at Chesley and later to Chepstow from which village he removed in 1882 to Rapid City Man. There he made a splendid success of business and before leaving for the coast eight years ago controlled three private banks. Besides his widow he leaves three sons and two daughters.

+ + +

Prominent Brant Pioneer

In the death of Mr. Andrew Rae which occurred on Feb. 10th, one of Brant's best-known pioneers was removed from his earthly activities. Mr. Rae represented a good type of the stalwart Scotch settler, who have had such a large part in laying the foundation of Canada to-day. At the age of 17, he settled in the Brant woods, hewing out a productive farm from the virgin bush. He had not been here long when he sent word to his parents and family, living at Perth, Scotland, to come to the new country, and as a result the family came to Brant. Mr. Rae had the commercial instinct of the Scot, was a successful farmer and financier. Although well furnished with this world's goods, he was not a hoarder but gave generously to every good cause. The deceased who was in his 82nd year, had been poorly for some time, and it was one of his bad spells, coupled with an attack of grippe which caused his death. Besides his widow who was a daughter of the late Daniel McNaughton sr. of Brant he leaves a family of three sons and three daughters:—Maggie, Bella, Sarah, James and William at home; John at the Front with the 28th Batt'n from New Ontario. He leaves also two brothers, Alex and James of Brant, and five sisters:—Mrs. Stephen Little, and Miss Bessie Rae of Brant, Mrs. Chris. Birrell of Euphrasia Tp., Mrs. Gray of Chatham, and Mrs. Wm. Young of Sullivan. The funeral took place from his late residence, lot 23, con 8, Brant, on Friday afternoon. A large concourse of old friends and neighbours assembled, in spite of the storm and bad roads and followed the remains to Chesley cemetery. Rev. Alexander Leslie, pastor of North Brant Presbyterian church, conducted the service. The following old neighbours and friends acted as pall-bearers:—Wm. Tulloch, Geo. Fiddis, Alex McIntyre, Alex Tulloch, M. A. McCallum, W. F. Lamont.

House Furnishings

WHEN in need of any small articles for the house, call on us, we have everything such as mouse-traps, curtain-rods, lamps, wash-boards, towel-racks, bake-boards and kitchen utensils of every kind. Also granite-ware and galvanized ware.

We always carry a full line of Sherwin-Williams paints and varnishes; the best paints on the market.

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE PLUMBING HEATING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

MAKE YOUR DOLLARS
FIGHT
AT THE FRONT.
BUY
DOMINION OF CANADA
THREE-YEAR
WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

$ 25.00 FOR $21.50
50.00 " 43.00
100.00 " 86.00

INDIVIDUAL PURCHASES LIMITED TO $1500.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS APPLY AT ANY BANK OR ANY MONEY ORDER POST OFFICE

JAN. 9, 1917
FINANCE DEPARTMENT
OTTAWA

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE, THOMPSON, BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
48-9 Solicitors for Applicant.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Advice sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C. U.S.A.

Your Photo

There is no gift that more truly carries the sincerity of the donor.

FRASER STUDIO

CURRENT COMMENT

NEED PURE MILK.

Prof. John Wadden, of Queen's University, Kingston, wrote to the press in reference to the need for a supply of pure milk. The professor says that the most important bacteria from the point of view of the consumer are the disease producing ones, such as those which cause diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid fever. There has been much discussion as to whether tuberculosis is transmitted from cow to man, but the balance of expert opinion favors the view that it is. Children are much more susceptible to bovine tuberculosis than adults are, and probably 20 per cent. of the tuberculosis among children comes from cows. Probably at least 25 per cent. of dairy cows have tuberculosis; it is not uncommon to find 75 per cent. of a herd affected.

For providing good milk it is important that the stables should be kept clean, well ventilated and well lighted, and that the cows and the milker should be healthy and clean. It is recommended that the milker should wear a white suit similar to that worn by a surgeon in the operating room, and that he should wash his hands before passing from one cow to the next. The milk should be immediately removed to the milk house, where it should be cooled at once. The milk house must be kept clean, all the vessels should be sterilized by being kept for two minutes in boiling water or still better in live steam. As soon as the milk is cold it should be brought into perfectly clean bottles and covered. Tin foil covers are the best.

The consumer must observe care in the treatment of milk after it has been delivered. The dishes used should be kept perfectly clean, should be washed not along with other dishes, but with fresh water, and instead of being wiped with a towel should be rinsed with boiling water and be turned upside-down to drain and to dry. The milk should be kept cold. At 50 Fahr. the bacteria increase about four fold in 24 hours; at 70 Fahr. they may multiply more than 6,000 times in the same period. Milk should be kept covered, though the opposite opinion is common. It is specially important that flies should not have access to it. Most flies have upon their bodies more than a million bacteria, and some of these are liable to be such as will produce disorders in the digestive tract, especially in children.

Mr. Waddell says.

"I think I am safe in saying that 25,000 to 70,000 would be the lowest number of bacteria per cubic centimeter in the milk supply of Kingston. At the lower of these estimates, a person drinking a half pint of milk would take into his system seven and a half million bacteria. In this connection one may note that some eight or ten years ago the rate of infant mortality was the same in Kingston as in New York. I have no late figures."

Dr. Roberts can tell us perhaps the exact number of these animals an ordinary Hamilton man would imbibe while drinking a half pint of Hamilton milk. Peter Wray might also be interested in this. At the price the stock is quoted in the market, it seems foolish for the milk man not to charge sufficiently for this animal food.

* * *

TRENCH FEET.

Many of the soldiers suffer from what is called "trench feet," caused by standing in water and mud for days and weeks at a time. The feet swell, and sometimes blood poisoning sets in, making amputation necessary. Plenty of good dry warm socks is what is required to save the soldier from this danger. We know of at least one Hamilton lad who is now in a base hospital suffering in this way. The Red Cross Society is calling for more socks, and no doubt the Hamilton women will respond to the call. The Rochester Post Express, in noting that the War Relief Association of that city had decided to raise $2,000 with which to send 1,000 pairs of socks to France, says:

How little do we realize the misery of the millions who are fighting in thousands of miles of trenches that freedom may not perish and that a day may some time dawn when war shall be no more. The crushing pain of the mangled we cannot feel, but we know what the numbing cold of a winter night is like, how long it is, how slow is the east growing gray, and we have most of us a satisfying appreciation of how comfortable a warm, woolly socks must feel to the poilu who is so fortunate as to have them, waiting for him when his next days come at last behind the lines somewhere in France.

Satisfied.

"I was brought up on a farm, and I'm glad of it."

"You bet your life. Whenever I think I'm working too hard, I just stop and think of the time when I had to get up at 4 o'clock and work like a slave until dark."—Washington Star.

* * *

The One-Piece Frock.

It has arrived.
It will hold good.
It is more or less belted.
It may boast a coat-like [illegible]
It may be worn open [illegible] at the neck.
Some Paris houses supplement it with a cape-manteau.
Parts of many dresses are of checked or plaided materials.

* * *

"Do you believe a woman can keep a secret." "Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "a great many were very successful in not letting on how they were going to vote."—Washington Star.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"Stop," she said, imperiously. "You say I don't understand her. If she is to be my daughter—and mark me, Frederic, if it is as you say, that you cannot forget her, or be happy without her—she will be my daughter——"

"Mother!"

"Listen to me! If it is to be, then it is necessary that I should understand her, Frederic. She shall come here. I will ask her to come and stay."

His face flushed, then paled again, and he shook his head.

"She will not come while I am here."

"You must go away," she said, resolutely.

His face darkened with a look of disappointment.

"Why should I go away?" he said. "What good will that do? I shall go and have to—to——" he did not finish, but she understood him.

"If there is any one else," she said, "and I know whom you fear, that adventurer who is haunting the place—he will not have any opportunity of seeing her while she is here. She will come if you go away; and she shall stay and get accustomed to me and the Park. She will learn to value all that she has so foolishly refused, and grow to repent and wish that she had not done so."

His face brightened. Like all men of his type, he was sanguine, and ready to be hopeful.

"I see," he said. "If she would but come!"

Lady Blyte smiled scornfully.

"Do you think that her aunt will allow her to decline an invitation to the Park? She will come, be sure of that! I will go and ask her to-morrow. You must start by the first train, so that I can say that you have gone. She shall stay a week and then—ah, then we shall see whether she will refuse to be the mistress of the Park!"

Sir Frederic laid his hand on her shoulder gratefully.

"Mother, I know how much this costs you," he said, in a low voice. "I am very grateful for your goodness to me. Yes, I will take your advice. I will go to-morrow by the first train to London, anywhere, and she will come here," with a sigh as he thought of the delight it would afford him to be near her.

"Leave it to me," she said, steadfastly, but sadly; for indeed the sacrifice of her pride demanded of her was great. "Leave it to me, my dear. I have always gained for you the desire of your heart, and I will succeed in this though—though I hate her!" and her eyes flashed as she looked up at him.

"Don't say that, mother," he said, wincing. "You won't say that when you know her. No one could hate—no one could help loving her. Let me go now, I am worn out!" and he stooped and kissed her, and left the room.

Lady Blyte rang the bell.

"Tell Lovell to pack his master's portmanteau," she said to the butler. "Sir Frederic is going to town by the first train."

Hector Warren, having no carriage, walked home from necessity rather than desire. The cottage in which he lived was situated in a lane leading to the beach. It was a modest looking lodging, quite in harmony with his appearance and position, and Mrs. Thompson, the landlady, declared that since she had taken in lodgers she had never known any gentleman give her less trouble than Hector Warren did.

He lived as frugally as the fishermen, and, declared Mrs. Thompson, only had one bad habit—that of sitting up late into the night, or the morning, smoking his pipe, and sometimes pacing his small room; but as Mrs. Thompson was never kept up or awake, it didn't much signify.

He was a mystery to her, as he was to every one else who interested themselves in him. No one ever came to see him, and there were very few letters delivered for him by the rustic postman. But amongst these Mrs. Thompson had noticed, with feelings of awe, several inclosed in very thin envelopes, and bearing strange, foreign stamps. These the good woman always eyed almost fearfully, and stuck up on the mantel-shelf as if they were curiosities.

Hector Warren walked home from the dinner-party at Lady Rookwell's, wetting his thin boots, as Sir Frederic had done, and entering the humble cottage almost as disturbed in mind as Sir Frederic himself.

Usually so self-possessed and impassive, to-night he is thrilling with excitement and emotion.

His hand, as he laid it upon the modest latch of his parlor door, trembled almost as much as Sir Frederic's and his brow was knit as if with the result of a mental struggle.

For a moment he stood in the dark room, with the match box in his hand, recalling the beautiful eyes that [illegible] had uplifted to him when [illegible] [illegible] night, he could feel the [illegible] of her fingers upon his hand [illegible] ringing in his ears. A [illegible] love swept across [illegible] and transformed it, and his [illegible] the words, "My darling!"

[illegible] lit the candle and looked round the room, and as he did so his [illegible] one of the foreign [illegible] upon the mantel-shelf, and his expression underwent a complete change. Setting down the candle, he sank into a chair, and sighed heavily, his eyes fixed upon the envelope stuck up above him as if it were a familiar demon.

He sat there for full five minutes, then he rose and reluctantly, slowly reached for the letter, and opened it.

As a man who reads unwelcome news, he read the letter through; then with a sigh he tore it into fragments and [illegible] it into the grate, and began pacing the room.

"Too late!" he muttered. "Too late. I cannot throw aside the past! I cannot [illegible] a life as mine! At [illegible] my darling [illegible] could have made [illegible] but for this—but for fate! Shall I venture [illegible]? No, it would kill her. No, a thousand times, no! I must go. There is only one thing left me, and that is [illegible]. And yet tonight I felt so safe, so secure! I felt that here was the one woman in the world who would [illegible] all that it would [illegible], for my sake! But I dare not! If this be true love, and I know that it is, I dare not risk it. One word of this would kill her! I must go!"

With a groan he flung the other letters aside, and took a Continental Bradshaw from the table, and turned over the leaves indifferently, purposelessly.

"I am to be a wanderer on the face of the earth," he murmured, bitterly. "That is my fate! Well, let it be so; anything, rather than sorrow should dim her eyes or misery break her heart. Where shall I go?"

He could not decide, but he went upstairs and packed his one portmanteau, then he sat down and wrote a line or two to Mr. Podswell, saying that business had suddenly called him away, and went—not to bed, but to pace the room till dawn.

CHAPTER XVI.

"Dear me!" says the rector, opening his letters with a table-knife, and looking across at Signa and her aunt with a surprised frown. "Dear me, this is very strange!"

"What is strange? what is it, Joseph?" demands Mrs. Podswell, irritably. "I do wish you wouldn't startle me so. What has happened? If there is anything more calculated to upset a person with my nerves, it is such uncalled-for exclamations. Is any one dead?"

"No, no, my dear," answers the rector. "Certainly not, it is only a letter from Mr. Warren."

"Oh!" says Aunt Podswell, with a contemptuous sniff. "And what is it?"

Signa feels the blood rush to her face, and she bends over the coffee service with downcast eyes. The rector smooths his chin and coughs.

"Ahem! Just a few lines, really quite—er—curt, my dear, saying that business has suddenly called him away, and thanking us for our kindness and hospitality."

The flush dies from Signa's face, leaving her deadly pale, and a heavy weight seems to have fallen suddenly on her heart, but she lifts her eyes bravely.

"Has he gone for good?" asks Mrs. Podswell, in a tone that implies a hope that she may receive a reply in the affirmative.

"I suppose so," says the rector. "He incloses the keys, and he says nothing of coming back."

Aunt Podswell sniffs suspiciously.

"Well, Joseph, I hope no harm may come of the young man's visit."

"Harm, my dear?" says the rector, timidly. "I don't see——"

"Perhaps not, you are not over acute, Joseph, at the best of times. I don't accuse him of any harm, by no means; I only hope that nothing unpleasant may result from his visits to the Grange. You will remember that I was opposed to his having the key from the first."

"Certainly, certainly," says the rector, "but seeing that he had brought the earl's written authority, I don't see how we could have refused him the key, my dear. At any rate, he has gone, and there's an end of it. I think we did right to be civil to him, Amelia, and if he should meet Lord Delamere he will admit that we have done our best for him."

"Yes," says Aunt Podswell, complainingly, "and, as usual, meet with the common gratitude. He does not think it worth while to walk in and say good-bye."

"Sudden business, my dear," remarks the rector, timidly.

Aunt Podswell turns to Signa suddenly.

"You saw him last, last night; did he say anything of the sudden business, Signa?" she asks.

Signa, to whose face something like color had returned, shakes her head.

"No, nothing."

"You see, he never said a word, and there was no post in last night. He could not have got a letter——"

"The foreign mails, my dear."

But Mrs. Podswell's suspicion will not be allayed. She had been ready to quarrel with Hector Warren for coming, and she is ready to quarrel with him now for going.

"There is something wrong about it, I am sure, and you will see, mark my words!" and with a shake of the head and a deep sigh, she retreats to her sofa.

Signa sits silent and patient, while the rector crumbles his toast and turns over his letters and papers; then, when he has declined a fourth cup of coffee, she rises, and makes her escape.

"Gone!" And without a word! Why had he not said "Good-bye" last night—why had he left her without a sign? Was it possible that he had thought she had accepted Sir Frederic? No, that could not have been the reason, for he—Hector Warren—had said no word of love to her. After all, she had no cause for complaint, he had been kind to her, very kind, while he had been here; and now he was gone, and there was an end to the dream that had been so pleasant, and alas! so brief.

But there was an aching void in her heart as she stood over Archie and watched him at his writing, and once she sighed so deeply that he looked up suddenly with his shrewd face full of sympathy and wanted to know what was the matter.

Presently there came a knock at the door and Mary, opening it, said that Lady Blyte was in the drawing-room, and would Miss Signa come down?

"Lady Blyte!" exclaimed Archie, with a prolonged whistle. "Why, she never visits anywhere! I wonder what she wants, Signa? Aren't you afraid?"

"Not in the least," said Signa, with rather a weary smile. "Go on with your geography lesson, dear, and try and learn it before I come back."

Then she went down with a little feeling of curiosity and embarrassment. But she need not have felt at all uncomfortable. Lady Blyte was a high-bred lady, and knew how to be gracious. She was very gracious, and as Signa came forward, the old lady held out her hands, and drawing the slim figure toward her, kissed Signa's forehead.

"My dear," she said, "I have come to ask a favor."

"Of me?" inquired Signa, with a little smile of wonder, and yet with that calm self-possession which never failed to arouse fresh surprise in Aunt Podswell's bosom.

"Yes, of you," said her ladyship, thinking as she scanned the girl from head to foot, how beautiful she looked, how full of youth and grace, and that nameless charm which, for want of a better word, we call prepossessing. "Yes, of you, my dear. I want you to take compassion upon a lonely old woman, and come and keep her company for a few days."

Signa, remembering all too vividly the scene in Lady Rookwell's conservatory, recalling Sir Frederic's hot vows and bitter disappointment, was appalled at the idea of going to stay at the house of the man she had refused, and a hot flush crossed her face, but Lady Blyte smiled calmly and even sweetly, for there were times when she could bury her pride out of sight, and this was one of them.

"I am quite alone, my dear," she said. "As I have been telling your aunt, my son left me this morning to pay a long visit to a friend in London, so that we shall be quite tete-a-tete. If you think the prospect too awfully dull, say so, and I will try and forgive you; but on the other hand I shall be really glad if you will come and keep me company for a few days."

"Signa will be only too delighted, dear Lady Blyte," commenced Mrs. Podswell, but her ladyship stopped her with rather a dry and haughty smile.

"There cannot be much that is delightful in the prospect," she said, "but I will try and make the few days as pleasant as possible," and she bent her proud eyes on the beautiful face inquiringly.

Signa raised her eyes. She had been thinking. She had promised Sir Frederic that she would forget what had passed between them, and had agreed that they should remain friends; why should she not go? If he had been at home, it would have been impossible, of course, but he was away, and his proud mother, feeling lonely, had come almost humbly to beg for her company—yes, she would go.

"I shall be very glad to come," she said, simply, and Lady Blyte remarked the exquisite taste which prompted the simple reply. "When?"

"Now," said Lady Blyte, with a smile. "I shall be only too pleased to wait until your maid packs for you, your aunt and I will have a chat."

Signa laughed softly.

"I am my own maid," she said. "I shall be ready in a few minutes."

There was a scene with Archie, but at last he was brought to something like acquiescence by Signa promising to ride over in a day or two, and, perhaps, to ask Lady Blyte's permission for him to spend the day at the Park.

"Good-bye, then," he said, clinging round her. "And, oh, I say! what shall I tell Mr. Warren when I see him. He will be sure to ask after you."

"Mr. Warren has—gone, Archie, dear," said Signa, and as she spoke she ran from him that he might not see the sudden quivering of her lips.

Lady Blyte cut her visit very short when Signa appeared. She didn't like Mrs. Podswell, indeed, one of her objections to Signa as a daughter-in-law was the fact of her being connected with the "people at the rectory," as she called them.

They got into the handsome landau, with its crested panels, and its belaced and powdered servants, and on the ride to the Park her ladyship was more gracious even than she had been at the Rectory.

"I don't want you to be more bored than you can help, my dear," she said, putting her hand on Signa's arm, and looking at her with a smile that was meant to be very kind. "You must not make this quite a duty visit. We shall be quite alone, and you will be able to amuse yourself in your own way. I shall not be any restraint on you, I hope."

"You speak as if Blyte Park were a prison, and I a first-class misdemeanant," said Signa, laughing softly. "I am sure I shall be very happy, and it was very good of you to ask me."

Lady Blyte nodded. Already her heart was warming toward the girl, and she began to understand the charm of the sweet, frank nature which had so captivated her son.

"It is best to understand each other, my dear," she said, "and I want you to feel that you may do just as you like while you are with me. Be happy, and I shall be satisfied."

Then she changed the subject, and talked about the trees in the avenue through which they were just then passing, and the view, and so on, but never a word of Sir Frederic. She was too discreet to alarm Signa by mentioning even his name.

When they reached the Park Signa found that, short as had been the time, some preparations had been made for her visit. A maid had been allotted her, and a suit of apartments, which, compared with the modest little bedroom at the Rectory, were simply palatial. On the table in the boudoir was a box of novels from Mudie, and some choice exotics, and the maid respectfully called her attention to a pianette which had been carried up from the drawing-room.

"Her ladyship wished me to say that she would be glad if you would play any time you liked, miss, it will not disturb her at all."

It was all very pleasant, and Signa, as the maid brushed her hair and arranged the simple evening dress, felt almost guilty of doing Sir Frederic a wrong, when she recalled her refusal of him.

"Let her see what she has refused," Lady Blyte had said to Sir Frederic; and Signa could not help seeing it. The servants, taking their tone from their mistress, were respectful almost to obsequiousness, and a footman threw open the drawing-room door for her as if she were a duchess.

(To be continued.)

* * *

Words are the physicians of a mind diseased.—Aeschylus.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send us your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at [illegible] and [illegible], that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING STREET WEST
Hamilton, Ont.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

You'll always have nice clean pantry shelves if you go over them occasionally with Old Dutch

Islands in a Sea of Lava.

The valley of the ancient Snake River in Idaho was flooded with great outpourings of black lava, which spread out sheet on sheet buried the old land surface, and partly filled the valley with molten rock, which solidified and has remained to this day undisturbed except for the gorges that the streams have cut in it. In some places old mountains project through the petrified lava flood as islands project above the surface of the sea, and old ridges stick out into it as capes and promontories.

The area covered by the Snake River lava is about 20,000 square miles. So far as is known there is but one lava field in North America of greater extent, the Columbia River lava field, which covers about 200,000 square miles. In Snake River canyon below Shoshone Falls nearly 700 feet of horizontal sheets of lava are exposed, but whether this is the maximum thickness or not cannot be told.

* * *

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

* * *

Adam's Apple.

Ol' Marse Adam! Ol' Marse Adam!
Et de lady's apple up an' give her all
de blame.
Greedy gut, greedy gut, what is yo'
shame?

Ol' Marse Adam! Ol' Marse Adam!
Caught de apple in 'is neck an' made it mighty sore.
An' so we po' grandchillen have to swaller roun' de core.
Ol' Marse Adam, man, what is yo'
shame?

Ol' Marse Adam! Ol' Marse Adam!
Praised de lady's attitude an' complimented 'er figger.
Didn't make no [illegible] [illegible]
decent nigger.
Ol' Marse Adam, man, what is yo'
shame?

Ol' Marse Adam! Ol' Marse Adam!
Et de lady's apple up an' give her all
de blame.
Greedy gut, greedy gut, what is yo'
shame?
Ol' Marse Adam, man, what is yo'
shame?
—Ruth McEnery Stuart, in Plantation Songs.

* * *

Strength Will Return To Weak People Using This Treatment

You are discouraged.
You feel old and worn.
You are sick, but not aware of the fact.

You can drag yourself around—but work is impossible.

With your stomach crying out for assistance and the nerves all on edge why not try Ferrozone? It will surely do you good.

Ferrozone is a wonderful combination of vegetable extracts, fortified by excellent tonics for the nerves and stomach.

When you feel despondent, Ferrozone cheers you up.

When languor and oppression weigh you down, Ferrozone braces you up.

When sleep is impossible Ferrozone calms the nerves and gives you rest.

For bounding health, good looks, good spirits, nothing equals Ferrozone; makes the weak strong and the sick well. Good for men, women and children, try Ferrozone, it can work wonders, as it did for Mrs. Mary McIsaac, of Harbor Bouche, N. S., who writes:

"Ferrozone built me up.

Before using it, I scarcely knew what good health meant.

"I was just as miserable and weak as any woman could be.

"Tired from morning to night, bothered by trifles, uncommonly nervous.

"The first box of Ferrozone improved my blood, gave me appetite. In a short time I was like a new person. Now I rejoice in abundant good health."

Try Ferrozone. It will make an unexpected improvement in your looks, your feeling, your health.

Whether anaemia, nervous or suffering from secret disorders, if you want cure, use Ferrozone. Price 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

* * *

SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

There are five quarts of blood in the human body, half of which may be lost without loss of life.

When a woman of the Philippines marries, the name of her husband is added to her maiden name, and in the event of his death she discards his name.

A mouse can bite a passage through an inch board in three hours.

One of the most durable woods is sycamore. A statue made from it, now in the museum of Gizeh, at Cairo, is believed to be nearly 6,000 years old. It is entirely sound and natural in appearance.

So far as value of heat unit is concerned, pound for pound, ripe olives contain almost as much food value as bread, and in the case of very large olives the value may be increased to approximately the same as that of bread.

There are more than 2,500 Red Cross dogs in the war fields doing a marvelous work for the wounded.

Florida and New Mexico are thunder storm centres. The Pacific coast is freest from them.

The amount of standard tungsten ore used in the manufacture of incandescent lamps in the United States in 1915 was in the neighborhood of 4½ tons.

Never dust electric globes while unlighted. The static electricity generated will break the filaments.

Sound travels through dry air at the rate of 60 feet per second; through water at 240 feet per second, and in steel wire at 17,130 feet per second.

In the near future wireless apparatus will be installed in all important police stations.

New York city eats two and a half million dollars' worth of food daily.

The countries which head the list in number of savings bank accounts are Switzerland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Japan, Tasmania [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] and savings banks deposits per [illegible] of Switzerland, Denmark and Norway exceed that of the United States.

The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

The baby seal [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of the protective provisions of Nature.

* * *

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

* * *

Punctilious Punctuation.

Talking of the supreme importance of the comma, a correspondent states that Thomas Campbell once walked six miles to a printing office to have a comma in one of his poems changed into a semi-colon. There is a remarkable resemblance between this and the story of Sir William Hamilton, Astronomer Royal of Ireland, [illegible] a lengthy [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].—London Evening Standard.

* * *

Spanking Doesn't Cure!

[illegible]

FREE

[illegible]

* * *

LOWER MEAT BILLS.

Cheaper Cuts Give Excellent Satisfaction When Properly Prepared.

Do you know, Madame, that a 1,000 lb. steer "dresses" only to 500 pounds. And that out of those eight hundred pounds only 200 pounds of meats can be classed as choice cuts?

Do you know that so many people insist upon having the choice cuts always that the butcher has had to keep increasing the price of them to offset the loss which he must sustain from the great surplus of cheaper stuff that often has to be thrown away as refuse?

And yet all the cheaper cuts need is proper treatment to make them tender, nutritious and fine flavored.

Here are some high-class "steady dishes" as prepared by M. Lepernique, a $10,000 per year Parisian cook.

Chuck Pot Roast.—This dish will give good results if the recipe is followed with care.

Have your butcher cut a chunk of a shoulder and remove the bone. Do not have this too small, as a pot roast should always be of size. Fry it in beef or pork drippings in a deep earthen, iron or granite pan. When brown add to a four-pound pot roast two tablespoons of flour, let it cook three minutes, add three cups of water, one bay leaves, a large onion in which are stuck four cloves, a pinch of pepper corn and three tablespoons of catsup. Let cook gently for one hour and a half, add salt and then skim all fat which arises. Slice meat and serve with gravy strained.

Sliced Chuck Meat, Minute Saute.—Ask your butcher to give whatever quantity you deem necessary for your wants of lean chuck as near the shortrib part as possible.

Slice it across the grain of the tissue very thin; have some onion also sliced very thin, some sliced cooked potatoes, chopped parsley, salt and pepper and proceed as follows:

In a skillet have drippings very hot, drop in the sliced meat, fry very quickly, add the onions, potatoes, salt, pepper and parsley. Drain well and add a little cider vinegar to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Flank Steak.—The flank steak has never been accorded proper recognition. Of course, the secret of satisfaction depends on its preparation.

The steak must be freed from all sinews and fat and sliced cross ways a half an inch thick. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, baste with a little olive oil and set to boil over a very hot fire, turning only once and keeping it very rare. Serve hot with some fresh butter, a little chopped parsley and a tiny bit of lemon juice.

ZAM-BUK CURED IN 2 MONTHS

After 2 Years' Useless Treatment.

The healing power of Zam-Buk is so much greater than that of other ointments, that it has cured in many cases when all other ointments have failed. One such instance is that of Mr. Earle G. Gardiner, of Marquis, Sask., who writes: "For two years I suffered with a bad attack of salt-rheum on my feet. During those two years I tried every known remedy, but could find nothing that would cure the disease. Then I heard of Zam-Buk, and commenced using it. After the first few applications I noticed an improvement, and this encouraged me to continue. Although I had suffered for two years, after only two months' treatment with Zam-Buk I am completely cured."

Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poisoning, piles, cold sores, chapped hands, chilblains, eruptions, etc. At all drug stores, 50c. box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

* * *

A Mysterious Boy.

The inquest was on the body of an Italian. The only witness was a small boy of the same nationality, who spoke no English. The coroner asked him.

"Where do you live my boy?"
The boy shook his head.
"Do you speak English?"
Another shake of the head.
"Do you speak French?"
Another shake.
"Do you speak German?"
Still no answer.
"How old are you?"
No reply.
"Do you speak Italian?"
The boy gave no sign.

"Well, gentlemen," said the coroner to the jury, "I have questioned the witness in four languages, as you have seen for yourselves, but with no result. It is therefore useless to proceed. The court is adjourned."—Winnipeg Telegram.

* * *

Ever Feel "Dopy" After Meals?

At times we all feel dull and heavy. Just one thing to do, relax the bowels and cleanse the system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Unclean matter is flushed out, the liver is toned, blood is purified, and at once you feel better. Good health and jovial spirits are quickly found in this celebrated medicine. Enormous benefits follow the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in every case. They are very mild, very prompt and guaranteed by the makers. Insist on getting Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box everywhere.

* * *

Blood Drops of Heroes.

[illegible]

* * *

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

* * *

The Romans as Fighters.

[illegible]

* * *

AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine for little ones. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and simple fevers, cure constipation and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. F. Quinn, Portage, Que., writes:—"Baby was troubled with constipation and nothing helped him till I began using Baby's Own Tablets. They are an excellent medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SPIDER FACTORY HANDS.

Spinning Delicate Threads for Use in Telescopes.

Spiders are probably the most indispensible workmen in one of the largest English surveying instrument factories. It is their duty to spin the delicate thread which is used for the cross hairs to mark the exact centre of the object lens in the surveyor's telescope.

Spider web is the only suitable material yet discovered for the cross hairs of surveying instruments. Almost invisible as this fiber is to the naked eye, it is brought up to the powerful lenses of the telescope to the size of a man's thumb, so that all defects, if there happened to be any, would be magnified to such a degree that the web would be useless.

Human hair has been tried, but when magnified it has the apparent dimensions of a rough hewn lamp post. Moreover, human hair is transparent, and cross hairs must be opaque.

The spiders produce during a two months' spinning season thousands of yards of web, which is wound upon metal frames and stored away until needed.

A spider at work dangles in the air by its invisible thread, the upper end being attached to a metal wire frame whirled in the hands of a girl. The girl first places the spider on her hand until the protruding end of the thread has become attached. When the spider attempts to leap to the ground this end is quickly attached to the centre of the whirling frame, and as the spider pays out thread this line is wrapped around the frame. Several hundred feet of thread can be removed from a spider at one time.

The spiders are kept in a large room under the supervision of three girls and a forewoman. When not spinning the little workmen are placed in a large wooden cage. Flies are the chief article of diet.

During the winter months the spider colony usually dies, so that an entirely new corps of workmen must be recruited. Not every spider will do—only large, fat fellows that spin a tough, round thread are suitable.

Singularly enough, the girls who have charge of the spiders in this English factory are not in the least afraid of them or their bites. On the contrary, they regard them as pets, are able to tell them apart and to call them by nicknames which humorously describe their appearance or their peculiar habits of work.

HELP WANTED

[illegible]

ANTIQUES

Have you any old articles of merit which you are desirous of disposing of—such as Antique Furniture, Old Plate, Brassware, Prints, Engravings, Old Arms, Armour, Curios, etc.? If so, you will find it of interest to you to consult us.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E., HAMILTON, ONT.
THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS.

Importers and Dealers in China, Glass, Fancy Goods and Antiques.

* * *

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

* * *

The Vampire.

This is the vampire: Always inert, always still, spending five to seven hours a day looking out the window on the street. Nothing to give and always giving it. Seeking amusement, entertainment, but never attending any. Taking, but never giving. Sitting quietly and listening to others converse, even when her presence is unwelcome, but saying nothing but an occasional yes or no. Primitive in mind and reason, with nothing to give, she drains others of ideas without feeling themselves a sieve. Thought passes through and beyond her without effecting. She assimilates nothing, gives nothing, takes everything. One person alone with her becomes exhausted while she is satisfied.—New York Globe.

I was cured of Acute Bronchitis by MINARD'S LINIMENT.
Bay of Islands. J. M. CAMPBELL.

I was cured of Facial Neuralgia by MINARD'S LINIMENT.
Springhill, N.S. WM. DANIELS.

I was cured of Chronic Rheumatism by MINARD'S LINIMENT.
Albert Co., N.B. GEO. TINGLEY.

Oysters.

(Recipe for Little Pigs in Blankets.)

First drain them.
Then dry each one.
Wrap each in a slice of bacon.
This slice must be very thin.
After wrapping fasten with a wooden skewer.
A toothpick will answer the very same purpose.
Just before serving time heat a large frying pan.
Put in a few oysters at a time, cooking till they are browned.
The pigs should soon be curled. Take out and drain in a colander.
They are picturesque in the eating. One picks each up by the skewer.

* * *

Things Worth Knowing.

The heavy flavor of bananas is improved by slicing and mixing them with currants.

* * *

When washing pudding cloths throw some orange peelings into the water; this removes the grease and helps to make the cloths white and clean.

* * *

If you wish to iron your clothes immediately after you sprinkle them, try dampening them with hot water. Roll them tightly for a moment or two, shake them out well and iron with a hot iron.

* * *

A teaspoonful of cold water added to the white of an egg causes it to whip more quickly, and increases the quantity as well.

"Come Out of the Kitchen" into the world of brightness and beauty. No need of spending all your time in the kitchen, however attractive it may be, when you know Shredded Wheat. It is made of the whole wheat and is ready cooked and ready-to-eat. With Shredded Wheat you can prepare a delicious, nourishing meal in a few moments for husband who must hurry off to business, for children who must hustle off to school—a meal that supplies all the nutriment for work or play at a cost of a few cents. For breakfast with milk or cream, or for any meal with fruits. Made in Canada.

reatest Battle World Will See

(James Douglas, distinguished English journalist, in Sunday Pictorial, England.)

Germany's prayer for peace is inspired by fear, and by fear alone. Of what? Defeat. For her almost any kind of peace is preferable to military defeat, for she could ascribe it to our blockade. Military defeat spells disas[illegible] for her dynasty, for her war lords [illegible]d for her world prestige. The Ger[illegible]any which would emerge from it [illegible]ould be a different Germany.

The Germans were soundly thrashed on the Somme. Their finest troops were broken by blows which enabled the French to shatter them finally at Verdun. The German Army will never recover from the pounding it got between July and November on the Somme. It is a dying army. It is not fit to fight the great British Army which is preparing to join with the great French Army to deal it its death-blow.

The Verdun and Somme battles were greater than any battles in this war of great battles, but they will be far surpassed in magnitude by the battles of 1917 all along the Western front. The war will be decided in these battles. Germany is trying hard to open up peace negotiations before they begin. Desperately she is searching for any and every means of escape from them. Her frantic conquest of Roumania is an attempt to knock out Russia and force peace upon the Allies before the German military power is destroyed in France.

GERMANS KNOW WHAT TO EXPECT.

The breathing space granted to her by the winter may be briefer than she imagines. I heard the British artillery on the Somme in September. It was more awe-inspiring than any words could suggest. Compared to it the most violent thunderstorm is like the mew of a kitten. It seemed impossible to imagine any increase in its volume.

But let me picture the battles of 1917 as I see them with my mind's eye.

The massed guns that the British Army will use will make the massed guns of 1916 sound like popguns. The increase in our gun power will be utterly unimaginable. The Germans know what to expect, and they are afraid. The German Army in France and Flanders will be subjected to a steady rain of steel, not for weeks, but for months. The steel rain will rain every day from dawn till dark. The German Army will be forced to bear what it bore on the Somme multiplied a hundredfold, and it will be slowly pounded to pieces by gunners who are no longer amateurs, but veterans. Its last reserves will be sucked into the melting rampart. The cohesion and discipline of the great German military machine will be destroyed, and the greatest military catastrophe in history will be witnessed by the world.

There are pessimists who predict a draw on the Western front. They base their arguments upon the impregnable strength of the modern defensive against the modern offensive. But they overlook the new factor of 1917—the superior power of the British Army in men and in munitions. The Battle of the Somme was not a true offensive. It was a defensive offensive, undertaken with the object of relieving the pressure on Verdun, on the Russians and on the Italians. The 1917 offensive will be carried out by a British Army numbering not less than two millions in conjunction with the French Army. It will be a multiple offensive aimed, not at a short thirty-mile sector of the German line, but at the whole German line, with the fixed determination to destroy the German masses where they stand.

THE VERDUN METHOD.

The new tactical method employed by General Nivelle at Verdun will be adopted. The losses sustained by the attacking troops will be reduced to the lowest possible figure, for it will be a battle of big guns in which the British and the French will possess a crushing superiority. The Germans will strain every nerve to mass gun against gun, but they cannot overtake the lead already established by the Allies. It is too great, and it is increasing too rapidly. They will be outgunned, out-munitioned and out-manned. And they will be pitting a half-beaten, old and war-weary German Army against a fresh, young and vigorous British Army.

Another factor which will tell heavily against the Germans in 1917 is our new railway organization. The transport problem will be solved. While the Germans will be pinned to their positions, our army will be free to strike where it pleases, when it pleases and how it pleases. Its guns and its munitions as well as its men will be mobile. Its reserves will be ample. The darned and patched German divisions will be used up, and there will be no mass of manoeuvre behind them. It is difficult to believe that the progressively weakened German army will be able to stand the strain.

The superiority of the British in air work will be intensified. There are gloomy rumors with regard to the new German type of aeroplane—the Halberstadter. I am told that some of our slow types are obsolescent. But we have had full warning, and I decline to believe that our pilots will be handicapped with inferior machines. They won the command of the air in the Somme battles. They will keep it unless there is criminal sloth and negligence at home, a thing which at this time of day is unthinkable. I shall never forget the talks I had with some of our haughty young pilots on the Somme. These marvellous boys gravely [illegible]pologized because they could not [illegible]ow me in the sky either a German [illegible]roplane or a German observation [illegible]alloon! And I saw great bodies of our [illegible]oops moving about within range of [illegible]e German guns in perfect security, [illegible]ecause the German gunners were all [illegible]lind.

[illegible]HOUSANDS OF TANKS IN ACTION

Air work is eyesight, so far as the [illegible]nner is concerned. Artillery which [illegible] lost the command of the air is [illegible]ind artillery. And blind artillery is [illegible]ke a boxer who fights with bandaged [illegible]yes. No artillery can stand against a superior artillery that has secured the mastery of the air.

The battles of 1917 will be battles of tanks as well as battles of guns and aeroplanes. I picture thousands of tanks in action. The German tanks [illegible]ll make their debut, for the Ger[illegible] are prompt copyists. I have no [illegible] that they will try to provide [illegible]-destroyers. But we have secured [illegible] advantage of the initiative. And [illegible] tank is the weapon of the attacker, rather than that of the defender. His function is to complete the havoc wrought by high explosives. A stationary tank is only an armored house. Moreover, a tank on the defensive cannot be quickly transferred to another point. Tanks cannot be used like machine guns. The enemy cannot stud his whole front with tanks.

It must also be remembered that the Anglo-French offensive will be co-ordinated with the Russian and Italian offensive. There will be a converging pressure upon the Central Powers. In order to break it up Hindenburg will probably try to destroy the Russian armies. He may also attack Sarrail at Saloniki. He may try to overwhelm the Italians. He may even threaten Egypt. But there is not much time left for any of these secondary diversions. It is also possible that he may endeavor to shake our nerves and derange our plans by using the German Fleet to cover a raid on these islands. Or he may violate Swiss neutrality. But these would be desperate enterprises, and Hindenburg is an Easterner, not a Westerner. The whole history of the war turns upon German vacillation between the Western and Eastern fronts. The Western school crippled Hindenburg right up to the crowning disaster of Verdun. Since then Hindenburg has crippled the Western school. He has for the moment secured the German mastery over Middle Europe and the Balkans, and if he could get peace now Germany would be supreme from the Baltic to Bagdad. But Russia is unconquered and unconquerable, and the life-blood of Germany is oozing out in France.

Her fate, therefore, will be decided this spring and summer on the Western front. And the main factor in the decision will be the British army. There is an Eastern school in this country which would dissipate our military power by an offensive at Saloniki. Happily, the Western school will be too strong for it. The German masses are in France. Victory there means victory everywhere. Victory elsewhere means nothing, just as reverses elsewhere mean less than nothing. The future of the Balkans will be moulded in France in 1917 by by the greatest battle of nations the world will ever see. Into that battle we must put every gun and every man.

I confess that the vista of bloodshed appals me. It may well appal the Kaiser. He may accept the terms of the Allies rather than face the carnage of 1917. For the sake of the innocent millions whose lives are the stake, I pray that the Imperial gambler may make his peace with man, if not with God. But if he hardens his heart, like Pharaoh, we must march through the Red Sea and the wilderness of war into the Promised Land.

James Douglas.

Painful Swellings Reduced Muscular Strains Ended

Such Troubles Now Quickly Rubbed Away by Powerful Remedy.

If you have any muscles that are strained and weak, that are frequently subject to to rheumatic pains; if you have any painful swellings that refuse to go away—get busy with Nerviline. This is the very sort of trouble that Nerviline is noted for curing quickly. "I have proved Nerviline simply a wonder in reducing a hard, painful swelling. It followed an injury I received to my left leg and caused me great pain and discomfort. The muscles were strained and sore and no other remedy gave the ease and comfort I got from rubbing on Nerviline. There is a soothing, pain-relieving power about Nerviline that touched the root of my trouble. Nerviline reduced the swelling, it destroyed the pain, it brought my limb back to perfect condition." The experience of Mr. Bowen, whose home is in Middlesex, is not unusual. Thousands are proving every day that muscular pains of every kind, chronic rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia and sciatica will yield to Nerviline when nothing else can possibly cure. Nerviline is an old-time family pain remedy, used nearly forty years with great success. 25c. at all dealers.

SUBJECTS LOVE INDIAN RULER

Maharajah of Bikaner Called People to Council.

Enlightened Monarch Busy for Their Welfare.

Bikaner, Rajputana, India, Dec. 21.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—No more marked evidence of the spirit of progress which is sweeping India can be found than in some of the states that are ruled by the Indian princes under the protection of the British Government. One of the most pronounced examples of advancement is Bikaner, which ranks among the highest of the more than 700 Indian states, and whose ruler, the Maharajah of Bikaner, a descendant of the famous fighting race of Rathore Rajputs, is held to be one of the most cultured, broad-minded and progressive princes of the Indian Empire. It has been the privilege of a correspondent of the Associated Press to spend some time in Bikaner and to talk on numerous occasions with the Maharajah concerning the policy which has revolutionized affairs throughout the state.

The Maharajah belongs to the new order of Indian rulers who have been schooled in the learning of the West, and who have accepted the tenet that the stability of government depends upon the enlightenment, prosperity and happiness of its people. When he took over the control of Bikaner eighteen years ago—he was then eighteen—he immediately set about to put into practice the advanced ideas which he had acquired, and to-day railways, modern schools, an up-to-date hospital, a modern prison, electric lighting, sanitary improvements, water supply systems and beautiful public buildings furnish visible demonstrations of progress, while he has established a representative assembly and put his administration on a business basis that has resulted in the state income being nearly trebled.

In personal appearance, in bearing and in accomplishments His Highness impresses one as having stepped out of an Arabian Nights tale, in which he has played the part of the gallant prince, so typical is he of what one has been led to expect in a story of that sort. Tall, broad-shouldered, handsome, ever affable, yet maintaining a dignity which brooks no over-familiarity, of magnetic personality, a born soldier, an excellent horseman, a sure shot and keen sportsman, as the trophies of big game in his palace show, an indefatigable worker in affairs of state—such is the Maharajah of Bikaner at the age of 36.

One of the most striking innovations which the Maharajah has made in his state has been the establishment of the representative assembly, through which his people have a voice in the government. It was a voluntary concession on his part.

"I came to the conclusion," he said, "that the greatness of a ruler lies in the greatness of his people. When I announced that I intended to establish the Assembly some of my friends begged me not to take such a step. 'It is giving away your power,' they declared."

The Maharajah was asked if both he and the people were satisfied that the change had been beneficial.

"Come and ride with me and my sons to the temple in the city this afternoon and I think you will get a better answer than I can give you verbally," he replied.

The invitation was accepted and the correspondent accompanied the Maharajah and his two young Princes to the great Hindu Temple where the ruler and his sons performed their devotions. During the morning the streets had been specially watered to lay the dust, and this had given the people warning that some member of the reigning family was to pass. As the carriage with its mounted guard proceeded through the winding ways dense crowds gathered beside the road and nearly every window was filled with eager faces. Even the roofs were covered with those who hoped to get a better view.

It is not an unusual thing for the Maharajah to make a trip through the capital, but there were the throngs just the same, as keen to get a glimpse as though he were a foreign prince. And as the carriage advanced the people broke into such cheering as the correspondent had seldom heard before. Even tiny children took up the cry of "Khama," a salutation of respect and devotion, peculiar to these parts and used only for the ruler, and the volume swelled until it became almost deafening. More than one of the aged people gave the Maharajah their blessings and invoked any troubles which he might have to come upon themselves. All the way this wonderful demonstration was kept up. His Highness smiling and saluting to right and left. When a point finally was reached where he could make himself heard he leaned forward and said:

"Does it pay to do the best one can for his people? For myself I ask no better answer than we have just been given."

The Maharajah is rapidly turning his capital into a model city. Bikaner now has one of the largest and best electric light installations in India, being among the first of the Indian cities to adopt this mode of lighting. The telephone, too, has been brought into use to connect all the important government officers and residences. Sanitation is a hobby of his Highness, and the entire city has been cleaned up, buildings being torn down and replaced where necessary. The streets have been widened in many places and just now a modern water supply system is being installed.

The Maharajah has a keen sense of appreciation of the beautiful, and has erected a large number of magnificent buildings of Oriental design, but with western interiors, much of which are for the use of the public or the Government. The plans for all these structures have been personally supervised by him.

The ruler no longer lives in the ancient fort-encircled palace of his ancestors, but has built a palace further away from the city—a fairy land with its beautiful gardens. At the same time, while placing himself in more modern surroundings, he laid out a great public park for the amusement of the little folk of Bikaner, and facilities for bathing are provided in a large artificial lake.

His Highness is particularly interested in the education of his subjects, and while he has not yet inaugurated compulsory education, he has by persuasion worked wonders in getting the people to send their children to school. In the capital two colleges have been built, one of the public and the other for the sons of nobles. The public college has something like 1,000 pupils, who are being taught both in English and their own language, literature, history and the sciences not being neglected. The nobles' college, while smaller, has a large number of students.

Outside the capital the Maharajah has also been at work, and his increased the mileage of railways in his state from 86 to 498 miles. Two new lines, one 142 miles long, and the other a more direct connection between Delhi and Sind via Bikaner, some 500 miles in length, are in project, and a great irrigation plan, which will turn the sandy country of Bikaner into good agricultural lands, is under consideration.

For his achievements the Maharajah has been decorated by the King several times.

Restoring Rancid Butter

It's a matter of washing.

First wash it in lime water.

Then wash it in spring water.

Work it with a wooden spoon or ladle.

But the lime water must be prepared.

First half a quarter pound of good fresh lime.

Let the lime stand in a pail of water for one hour.

Then pour off the lime water with care and in this work the butter.

After a thorough working, pursue the same course in fresh spring water.

Embroidery Robes.

They're new.

And very dainty.

Some are done on sheer white organdie.

And others are on fine and lustrous white batiste.

They're partly made, and suggestions come with each robe to show you how you may complete it.

Usually the embroidery (in rather dainty patterns) is all in snowy white, but some are done in delicate colors, maize, pink, green and baby blue.

THE LIBRARY EVERY FARMER SHOULD HAVE

What Books to Buy and What Books to Avoid—Study Your Business, Your Country and Life—Build Up Your Very Own Library.

With the next few months of long winter evenings would it not be a good thing for the farming community to make some arrangements for a supply of reading material. Cultivating the soil is good, without a doubt, but why not give the mind a little cultivation as well? "But we have no circulation library here in the country," objects someone, "and books are expensive to buy." In my opinion it is the book that one is willing to pay good money for that is going to be read, considered and digested. If the Baconian philosophy is true, the farmer need not regret very much Mr. Carnegie's oversight in not providing him with free copies of Laura Jean Libby or the average best seller. It's a little too easy to get the borrowing habit when convenient to public library. Nine times out of ten the books read under these circumstances are strictly "punk." Mind I am making no attempt to discredit what is a splendid institution and altogether worth while, but like most big things there is a weak side to it. Hence, the man who gets his mail at Jones' Corner should not envy the urbanite and his be-pillared book-temple. All he has to do is to start a better one—for his own needs—and at a very reasonable outlay.

One of the principal things to remember is, that a library is not necessarily a collection of books. To deserve the name it must mean more than that. It cannot be bought by the foot or the yard, according to the limit of one's pocketbook. The real thing is a natural outgrowth of the owner's tastes and requirements. It may have its beginning in one volume or a dozen, and may be added to from time to time as circumstances suggest.

REAL AGRICULTURAL BOOKS.

To get together a number of authoritative works along the line of one's own business, makes a good starting point. A man should be a better farmer if familiar with "why" as well as the "how." Abnormal seasons, such as we have experienced for the last two years, are sure to create new problems. One who has trained himself by practice and experience to plow a straight furrow, feed a prize-winning steer or breed a cow into the advanced Registry, will be all the better plowman, feeder or breeder if he knows what the best agricultural books have to say about these subjects. For instance, such a book is "The Fat of the Land," by John Williams Streeter, and published by Grosset and Dunlaps, New York. When it came out ten or twelve years ago it created quite a stir and was widely read. I remember hearing the late Dr. James refer to this book some years ago while addressing a meeting of dairymen. "If," said he, "you think of buying some reading matter, and have only the price of one book to invest, by all means buy 'The Fat of the Land.' It will pay you." I, for one, took the advice and found it gilt edged. Another book from which I have derived a good deal of pleasure and profit is entitled "Our Farming," by T. B. Terry, of Ohio, and published by The Farmer Co. of Philadelphia. Other books that should find a place in any farm library are Henry's "Feeds and Feeding," which stands unsurpassed in its line; Roberts' Fertility of the Soil; Davenport's Principles of Breeding, and the Bailey books that cover a wide range of horticultural topics.

Then I see no reason why the farmer may not profitably develop a sort of all-roundness in his reading. We know, or ought to know, that production is only half of his business. No matter how bountiful in yield or how splendid the quality of his crops, if there is no market for them, his labor has been in vain. Really there is no getting around the fact that a prosperous agriculture depends in a large measure on a proper system of distribution. To-day, market regulations and almost everything connected with the farmer's selling operations, has been the work of somebody else. What more important move could be made, then, than reading some of the books and periodicals dealing with this phase of the situation.

But after one has waded through the intricacies of science and economics, he is apt to welcome something of an entertaining nature. A steady diet of beefsteak gets monotonous; a variety menu keeps a proper balance and makes us ready for more. In the realm of literature, books of fiction serve as a kind of desert, but if one happens to like pie, that is no reason why he should make a meal of it. I am, by no means, one of those who cry down fiction, provided it has some elements of value in it. There are, however, so many books in this class published nowadays that in buying it is well to practice some system of discrimination. Usually, I believe the publishers plan to put new books on the market in the spring and fall, like the milliners and the tailors. As a rule, they go out of fashion just as quickly. Then, again, I never like to risk $1.50 on the new comer because the publisher proclaims it to be "the greatest American novel." Buying best sellers on this basis is a pretty sure way of dropping one's small change.

It's a good plan to let the early enthusiasm of promoters cool off. After a year or two, if the book still appears to be making headway, and seems to have captured public fancy, then, it may be safe to purchase. An old gentleman who has gotten together a really useful library, said to me once: "Never buy fiction until the copyright runs out. You gain in two ways. First, they will have dropped one-half in price; second, if they are still alive, they'll be masterpieces and well worth having." The advice looked good to I have browsed quite freely in the literary fields of Dickens, Scott, Thackeray and a score of others, ranging all the way from Fielding to Robert Louis Stevenson. They may not have added much to my store of agricultural knowledge, but I do claim they give one a broader outlook on the world of affairs and improve the quality of his citizenship. Once let a man's mental horizon become bounded by the limits of a hundred acre farm and he becomes dwarfed in mind, body and soul.

In these days of history-making one is likely to be attracted to the warring nations and become interested in the stories of their rise and development. Macaulay's "History of England" and "Green's Short History of the English People" are two standbys that should find a place in any library. The former especially, is a model of clearness and fluency of style, the mere reading of which cannot help but be beneficial, aside from the historical facts he clothes so attractively. Guizot's "History of France," and Grote's "History of Greece" are authoritative works on the countries with which they deal, and will be found fairly readable.

STUDY OUR OWN COUNTRY.

Coming down to our own country, still comparatively young, there are several monumental works, such as Kingsford's, that treat exhaustively with Canadian history. I prefer, however, to take our own history in biographical doses, of which we have a number of very palatable ones. In fact the whole story of Champlain down is told under quite a formidable list called "Makers of Canada." Perhaps most people would not care to read all the "Makers" or go to the expense of buying them. There are, however, some of them belonging to our own times that are almost indispensable to anyone wishing to get a reasonable and easy grasp of Dominion affairs since Confederation. The biographies that I can especially recommend are the lives of Sir John Macdonald, Alexander McKenzie, Geo. W. Ross and Sir Charles Tupper. You will not be satisfied to read any of these from a lending library on the two weeks' limit. They will stand much re-reading and become more interesting on an extensive acquaintance.

EACH HAS A FAVORITE POET.

Now, what about poetry? Most people will declare without any hesitation that they don't read it. But then, there are poets and poets, which makes a difference—sometimes. I have heard individuals who readily handed down the negative verdict on the muse who could quote whole pages from Bobby Burns, dialect and all. Many prosey people admit a fondness for Kipling's "brassband" measures, and all of us are unconsciously quoting Shakespeare every day, for scores of our common expressions are but thinly paraphrased Shakespeareisms.

When it comes to putting the poet on the library shelf he takes little space and the cost is a trifle, thanks to the compressions of modern publishers. Wordy as his flights sometimes are, a little culling here and there to get rid of the dross and the refined gold becomes quite amendable to one volume. Someone has said, "A library without the poets is like a garden without a flower or a home without a woman." It is quite evident that the man who likes an occasional dash of the sublime in his reading matter wants to get away at times from the hurly-burly of dollar chasing. He will, therefore, consult his tastes and have them represented on his library shelves.

—CANADIAN COUNTRYMAN.

ROYAL LOOTERS

Among the questions which the international congress to be held at the close of the present great war of nations in order to determine the conditions of peace will be called upon to consider is that connected with the recovery of all the works of art and treasures of one kind and another taken by Germany and her allies from the museums, the public institutions and palaces of Belgium, France, and Serbia, writes Mr. F. Cunliffe Owen in the New York Sunday Herald.

Individual looting is forbidden by the Articles of War of all civilized countries, and although Napoleon plundered continental Europe from one end to the other a hundred years ago, yet contemporary records and memoirs of one kind and another furnish plenty of evidence of the merciless severity with which the first Duke of Wellington punished looting by his troops during the Peninsula War in Spain and afterwards during his military operations in France, culminating with the occupation of Paris.

There was no looting in the Crimean War nor in any of the wars of 1859, 1864 and 1866. There was a good deal of it by the officers and men of the German army in their war with France in 1870, and it has often been alleged that those provinces of France subjected to Teuton invasion forty-six years ago were almost entirely denuded of their clocks, which seemed to appeal to the Kaiser's warriors to such an extent that during the decade following the Treaty of Frankfort there were few chateaus, houses, apartments or even cottages in Germany that could not boast of some more or less valuable French timepiece forming part of the spoils of the campaign.

WHOLESALE PLUNDER.

It is only fair to Germany to add that in that campaign there was no official looting, and that no attempt was made to plunder public institutions of their treasures.

In fact the Government and the higher officers set their face against the practice, the late Emperor William, indeed, like his son, Emperor Frederick, and most of his fellow sovereigns and leading generals and statesmen—Bismarck for instance—showing themselves most conscientious in the matter.

There was no looting to speak of in the Turco-Russian war of 1877, nor yet in the Turco-Greek war of twenty years ago. There was an altogether disgraceful looting on the occasion of the seizure of Tientsin and Pekin by the armies of the Allied Powers in 1900—looting, I am sorry to say, which received in many instances official toleration and even actual sanction on the part of some of the Allied commanders.

There was no official looting, but plenty of individual plundering by the subaltern officers and rank and file in the two Balkan wars that served as the preliminary to the international conflagration now in progress.

In this war Germany has thrown to the winds every accepted [illegible] on the subject of loot. She has not only permitted the practice of plundering private property by the officers and soldiers, instead of hanging them for it, as the Duke of Wellington was wont to do with his own men in Spain during the Peninsula war, but she also has despoiled public institutions, museums, and most of the sacred edifices in Belgium, France and Serbia of the treasures which they contained.

The Emperor William himself seems to have kept his own hands free from this form of robbery, but his sons and the other princes of his house showed no such compunction, and whereas the Crown Prince and some of his brothers are on official records as having carried off wagon-loads of loot from Belgian and French chateaus and mansions, the Kaiser's youngest son, Prince Joachim, demonstrated that he was in no sense behind them in the matter by the amount of spoils which he sent back to Berlin from Russian Poland, especially loot derived from the sacking of a magnificent country seat in the Suwalki district.

Perhaps the most disgraceful episode of this kind was the treatment to which the royal Belgian palaces of Brussels and Laeken, in the suburbs of that city, were subjected by the Kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel Fritz, and by his son-in-law, the Sovereign Duke of Brunswick.

Both the Duke and Prince Eitel had on several occasions prior to the war paid prolonged visits to their relatives, the King and Queen of the Belgians, and had been entertained with the most affectionate and graceful hospitality by them, both at Brussels and at Laeken.

Yet when the German invasion of Belgium took place these two princes seem to have taken a particular delight in directing the plundering of the two palaces in question, in looting all the more precious possessions and treasures of the royal Belgian couple.

It is idle for the Germans to claim that these stories are mere calumnies invented by the Allied Powers. I quote the following from a well-known and ultra-Berlin newspaper, the "Tageblatt [illegible]": "Count Tisza (the Prime Minister of Hungary) and the minister [illegible] of the Dual Empire have declared that a special commission has just been nominated by the Austro-Hungarian Government, in cooperation with Germany, to estimate the value of the objects taken from the National Museum at Belgrade and to supervise their distribution. A portion of the objects (adds Premier Tisza) has already reached Budapest, and others are on the way to Vienna and to Berlin.

"The silver and gold plate of the Servian Royal Family found in King Peter's Palace at Belgrade are to be taken to Sofia and awarded to King Ferdinand as property of the Bulgarian Crown, while the well-nigh priceless contents of the world-famed library at the great seminary at Nish (treasures respected by the Turks throughout centuries of sanguinary warfare and destruction) have been removed and sent to the Bulgarian National Library at Sofia."

FAMOUS LIBRARY.

Another library of international fame was that of the Trappist Monastery at Bouillon, in the Ardennes, standing almost under the shadow of the Castle of Bouillon, whence Duke Godfrey de Bouillon set out some nine centuries ago to head the first crusade to the Holy Land and to become the first Christian King of Jerusalem.

The library contained some of the most priceless literary treasures in existence. But in August, 1914, the monastery was looted by the Teuton invaders and the contents of the library carried off into Germany, where until now it has been found impossible to discover any clue to their fate.

What has taken place at Bouillon has also occurred at Rheims, at Arras, at Antwerp, at Malines, at Ypres, at Lille and indeed in all the cities and towns in which the German invaders have penetrated. The Germans do not deny having denuded the public institutions and museums, cathedrals and the churches of these unhappy Belgian and French provinces of their treasures, but declare that if they have carried them off to Germany it is because the latter alone is in a position to safeguard them and to accord them protection from all harm.

From Up Among The Yukon Snows

COMES ADVICE TO SUFFERERS TO USE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Glacier Creek Lady Says They Have Been Her Standby for Sixteen Years and She Has Never Known Them to Fail.

Glacier Creek, via Dawson, Yukon, Can., Feb. 15.—(Special)—North of fifty-three, where doctors are long distances apart and [illegible] remedies that are a [illegible] present help in time of need are the [illegible] of the settlers, Dodd's Kidney Pills have established an enviable reputation. Here what Mrs. A. Armstrong, a well known resident of this place, has to say of them:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have been my standby for sixteen years," Mrs. Armstrong states. "Both myself and my family know the good [illegible] of their medicinal qualities. When any of my friends complain [illegible], I give them Dodd's Kidney Pills and they never fail to do good.

"It always gives me pleasure to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills from backache to rheumatism, Bright's disease and heart disease. These troubles come from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cure them.

New Sports Skirts

They grow more gay.

Even the serge skirts are in plaid effects!

There are pleating [illegible] in [illegible] plaids.

And skirts of wool jersey in charming hues have contrasting colored [illegible] and [illegible].

There are checked [illegible] which have [illegible] to accompany [illegible].

Stripes there are in many [illegible] kinds, which run up and down and around.

There are many black-and-white effects, some [illegible] and [illegible] a plenty.

—Commerce and Finance.

Man, a man is so stingy that he won't even give his wife grounds for divorce.

Marvels of War Surgery

Jaw cases—ununited fractures of the jaw, displacements of the jaw, and organic damage—are treated at the Croydon Military Hospital, England. A man with the whole of his lower jaw shot away was getting a metal jaw—an "iron jaw," indeed. A metal Gunning splint is a contrivance for bringing a displaced jaw back in to position. As the surgeon says, it "educates" the teeth, to meet, and when one's lower teeth have got round to one's ear they [illegible] a vast amount of education. At the Queen Alexandra Hospital, Millbank, there are also interesting jaw cases. Here a Serbian officer who had lost a large piece of his lower jaw was, unlike some men in similar cases, able to articulate distinctly and to eat naturally. Even the disfigurement that necessarily results more or less in these cases is reduced to a minimum by [illegible]. [illegible] of the fact that surgeons have been astonished by their recent experiences of the power of [illegible] to reproduce [illegible] growth [illegible] which have been removed, [illegible] suggested that the bone in this man's jaw might grow in the same line of a little jaw, but the surgeon, admitting the possibility, was disposed to think that the counter pressure of the [illegible] forces could [illegible] on the part of the [illegible].

In this hospital there was a good example of German surgery. A [illegible] guardsman, now an exchanged prisoner, had the misfortune to be wounded and captured in the first half hour of the British appearance on the French front. The German surgeons had removed his foot, but in such a way as to leave him [illegible] heel, of which he is proud, exhibiting it and stamping it with glee, and [illegible] that he can walk on it with the aid of a stick. He will be given an artificial foot in due time, and it will never be noticed that he has been mutilated.

Not long ago a wounded Guardsman was brought into the Queen Alexandra Hospital at Millbank suffering from a shrapnel wound. Examination under the X-rays showed that a piece of metal as large as a halfpenny and much thicker had entered the breast and lodged in the region of the heart. It was, in fact, actually touching the heart and impeded its action. An operation was decided on, and the surgeon thrust his hand right into [illegible] and [illegible] out the piece of metal, which is preserved as a souvenir. There was a danger that during anaesthesia the lungs might collapse, and therefore ether was pumped into them to keep them distended. That gallant Guardsman is now out and about, and it is declared that he will not feel the slightest ill effects from his strange experience. The surgeon who performed the operation is an Australian, [illegible].

In the Royal Army Medical College there are enough serums to kill all the armies of Europe. From this one institution all the millions of soldiers of the French Empire have been inoculated against typhoid and its varieties—inoculated from remote descendants of a bacillus captured and bottled eighteen years ago. Here the cholera of the East and the meningitis of all climes are being fought and conquered.

In a very large number of cases a broken bone is carefully joined by means of a steel splint, which is screwed to the bone just as a carpenter screws two pieces of wood together. The steel plate, which is sometimes about an inch wide and four or five inches long, remains permanently in the wound, together with the steel screws, and the patient suffers no inconvenience in consequence. It is the opinion of Col. [illegible], who has performed many of these operations, that in time the steel would become, as it were, dissolved in the system and dispersed altogether. As iron is one of the constituents of the blood, the splint does not constitute a source of danger. Some notable cases of the kind have also occurred at the Herbert Hospital at Shooter's Hill.

Here also cases of injury to nerves causing paralysis have been successfully treated by bringing the ends of the nerves together and joining them. In one hospital, a little while ago, there was a patient who had lost part of his arm shot away, so that [illegible]. In these circumstances, to pick up the ends of the nerves and unite them was impossible. The surgeon who had the case in hand made inquiries at other hospitals in London, and he found that in one of them a man was to have a leg amputated at halfpast three the same afternoon. Orders were issued so that the moment the limb was severed it was put in a saline bath and taken to the [illegible] hospital. [illegible] of healthy nerve from the [illegible] for the injured portion [illegible] which had been paralyzed.

Around the House.

An oblong glass paper[illegible] or similar object, wrapped in a large Turkish towel, can be made to fit under the shoulder of a coat and is a [illegible] aid in pressing.

A worn-out broom with the [illegible] off half way up, covered with [illegible] carpet, makes an excellent polisher for the floor after waxing.

Save all scraps of soap, [illegible] let them get hard, and [illegible] in the meat grinder. In this way you can make your own soap [illegible] utilize every bit of soap.

Asbestos table mats will not [illegible] several rows of [illegible] crocheted on the under side.

Beaded Bags.

They are the rage.

Every woman [illegible].

Some bags are [illegible] elaborate, and [illegible] beads.

There are old Paisley [illegible] Egyptian design, and more [illegible] tional patterns all done in [illegible].

One handsome bag had a [illegible] with pine trees done in green, white and blue beads, another had baskets of flowers, while a third had a [illegible] of roses in bright hue.

BRONCHITIS WAS SO BAD

Coughed Every Few Minutes.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HER.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with a rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses, the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis should never be neglected. If it is some serious lung trouble will undoubtedly follow.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This well-known remedy has been on the market for the past 25 years.

It cures where others fail.

Mrs. Geo. Cotton, Uxbridge, Ont., writes: "I have had bronchitis so bad I could not lie down at night, and had to catch every few minutes to get my breath. I had a doctor out to see me, but his medicine seemed to do me no good. I went to the druggist for some good cough mixture, and got Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. One bottle helped me wonderfully. I stopped coughing, and could lie down, and rest well at night. I cannot praise it too much."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

Toronto—While wholesale business houses is well sustained for January, with increases in most cases over the same month of last year, wholesalers are dubious as to whether the volume of business will hold up after the large fall orders are shipped. High prices appear to be exerting no effect on buying by retailers. Retail trade is fairly good, in drygoods, boots and shoes, rubber and household furniture. The railway situation has shown no improvement, and the supply of coal for industrial purposes has made imminent the necessity of a number of factories shutting down. Hardware lines are active and projected munition plants promise further activity.

Montreal — Travellers are already booking spring orders, and buying for future requirements is on a liberal scale. Brisk demand for winter clothing and drygoods. Country trade is better. A fair trade is reported by grocery wholesalers. Boot and shoe manufacturers and jobbers are busy getting out spring orders which are of unusually large proportions, even at the high prices. Paints, oils and varnishes are moving out freely, and the hardware trade generally is reported as fair. Steel and textile concerns are very busy. City collections are fair, and country payments are quite good.

Ottawa —The volume of trade reported by local houses for January was considerably in excess of that given for the same period a year ago. County collections are good, and city remittances are generally reported to be fair.

Halifax—Sentiment among business men with regard to the future is of an optimistic character. Industries are busy, and with orders that will guarantee activity for several months. Commercial conditions are reported to be fairly well met.

Hamilton—The results for the initial month of 1917 have given encouragement to wholesalers to expect a continuance of present healthy trade conditions. All local industries are busy, and labor is busily employed. Country trade is good, especially for winter clothing, shoes, etc. The building trade is only moderately active, but materials are moving out fairly well, in spite of the high prices. The industrial building during the spring and summer promises to exceed that of 1916. Wholesale houses are busy sending out spring orders, and travellers are beginning to send in orders for fall delivery.

London—The wholesale trade is busily occupied in sending out spring orders. The demand for seasonable commodities in all lines is good, especially in rural sections throughout western Ontario. Grocery lines were rather quiet, especially for canned goods and sugars. Travellers report that their early orders for fall delivery are quite satisfactory. Country and city remittances are good.

Winnipeg—Retail trade is rather quiet, but the outlook for a favorable movement of trade appears to be good during the spring months. Orders are being shipped out by wholesalers that are largely in excess of that same period a year ago. Country trade is quite good in groceries, heavy clothing, etc., and conditions are reported to be fair.

Calgary—Orders for delivery within the next few weeks are larger than last year. Business throughout the western provinces is good, and the prospects for the immediate future are taken as satisfactory.

Quebec—Wholesale trade in the various lines is showing up well, especially dry goods; latter report a good demand for staples, groceries and provisions are active. Retail trade is reported satisfactory for the season. Collections as a rule are reported satisfactory.

CONSTIPATION

THE COMMONEST ILL.

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep the bowels regular and cure all liver ills.

Mr. Philip McNeil, Tarbot, N.S., writes: "I suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, and for years had pains in the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit down and rest. That I think was terrible for a man of 20 years of age. The condition of my system was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much pain and stiffness in my back I am sure my system was full of poison. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have entirely cured me.

I thoroughly recommend them to everybody."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, 5 vials $1.00, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Buy All You Need of These Cotton Goods NOW

All of them will be much higher soon.

Bordered Cotton Towelling per yard 10c
Bordered heavy Linen Crash Towelling per yard........15c
English Prints Dark and Light, worth 18c, 20c and up to 22c a yard, all at per yard........15c
Fine soft quality Flannellette, good heavy weight, per yard........15c
40 to 40 inch Circular Pillow Cottons, per yard........25c and 35c
70 inch Twill Bleached Sheeting (extra value) per yard........35c
80 inch Twill and Plain Bleached Sheeting, extra heavy per yard 35c
20 doz. Bath Towels, Canadian made extra value, per pair........25c

We Would Also Say

Buy Your Dress Goods Now

We urge the buying of Dress Goods and Suiting Fabrics now, because not only are prices reaching the prohibitive stage but there is every indication that imported fabrics will be unobtainable at any price in the near future and while our present stocks are large, every day's selling breaks into or cleans out the most wanted lines.

We Call Your Attention Particularly to

Our Spring Suitings

Every yard is pure wool and dependable dyes and prices are extremely moderate.

British Serges and Cheviots: navy, gray, brown and black; $1, 1.25, 1.50 to $2

British Broadcloths and Gaberdines; almost a complete color range of these popular fabrics. Best quality, per yd... $1.50 to $2.25.

British Tweed Suitings. For separate skirts and suits, per yard 75c, $1, $1.25.

Smart New Sport Coats for Spring

They come in a variety of pretty new cloths, Checked Tweeds, plain Covert and Serges. All beautifully made and trimmed. Prices are very low considering the cost of these cloths.

Special at $7.50, $10.00 and $12.50

STEPHAN BROS.

MARMALADE TIME

February is the big Marmalade month. Now is the time when the Oranges, Grapefruit and Lemons, so necessary for the making of fine Marmalade are at their best.

GOODE & McKAY
"The People's Grocery"
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

Stop! Look! Listen!

Have You a Supply of Tea and Sugar? Both are advancing in price.

Package Tea is up and going higher. I have Bulk Teas bought before the advance which I am selling at the old prices for a short time. Secure what you want now.

Sugar is also advancing again so if you require any, buy at once.

I want Potatoes, Onions, Butter and Eggs for Cash at the highest prices.

LENT—A supply of all kinds of Fish arriving.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Special Values this Wee

All Winter Goods Must Go Now

Sweater coats, all kinds, plain colours and combination colours at a saving of 15 to 25 per cent.

At the prices we are selling Boys' Overcoats, it will pay you to buy for next winter.

Broken assortment of Ladies' Waists, sizes 34 to 4 In the lot about 6 dozen. Reg. prices $1.00 to $3.00, o sale now 25c, 39c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

Ladies' Cashmere Hose 60c for 49c, 50c for 39c, 35c for 25c.

Overall working aprons, all sizes, worth 75c for 50c.

Men's 60c lined Mitts on sale at 49c per pair.

8c, 10c and 12½c Embroideries and Laces at 5c a yd.

Comforters for cold weather, $2.00 for $1.60, $2.50 for $2.00, $3.00 for $2.50, $4.00 for $3.50, $4.50 for $3.95.

Men's heavy ribbed Underwear at old prices, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Come in and get your share of these bargains while we are sacrificing winter goods to make room for the new Spring goods coming every day now.

McBurney & Co.

Shopping Satisfaction

That's what you get at our store.

Everything you need or want—and plenty of it.

Prompt service—courtesy—full stocks. Do your shopping here and see how convenient it is.

THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRICE AND SERVICE.

Put us to the Test.

Butterick Quarterly

Complete forecast of the latest Paris and New York fashions as interpreted by exclusive Butterick Designers.

25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR 15c IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerton

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

HANOVER

Mr. Henry Cross, a well-known resident, dropped dead shortly after returning home from church last Sunday night. He had been seemingly in the best of health. Mr. Cross, who was fifty-seven years of age was well-known in Bentinck where his father was one of the early pioneers.

Since January 1st, the 147th Greys has ceased to exist and now forms part of the 8th Reserve Batt'n (Central Ont.) being merged with the 110th Perth. Lt.-Col. McFarlane is Commanding Officer of the new Battalion and Major G. D. Flemming of Owen Sound second in Command.

Mr. Milton Huber, a popular young man of Hanover, met with a distressing accident in Knechtel's factory on Monday of last week. He got his right hand in a machine and had part of his four fingers severed.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Litt lost by death their baby daughter, Marjorie Dorothy, aged 6 months and 11 days, on Thursday last.

Hazel Marie, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ashbury of Hanover, died on Feb. 4th at the age of two months and 5 days.

It is reported that the Hanover branch of the W. G. & R. Co. may have to close down for two or three weeks, being temporarily embarrassed by lack of fuel, inability to get supplies to and from Kitchener, and the strike in the fabric mills at Mayceg. The staff is working off the present supply of material in the factory.

Pte. Jake Huenemoerder of Hanover has been in a hospital in England undergoing an operation for an abscess on his knee. Jake enlisted at Hespeler where he was working in a bank, and went overseas with the 111th battalion. His brother Jack is also in England, with the 147th Greys.

It was a very pleasant and appreciable event which took place on the evening of the 10th inst. at the residence of the Rev. W. Henderson, when a number of the congregation of St. James church called upon him and read a nicely worded address and presented him with a liberal cheque on the Royal Bank, as a mark of their appreciation of his past labours among them.

Some of the installations of the water system in town in private dwellings were frozen during the severe weather lately.

Mr. Dan Kreller had a somewhat unusual experience recently. Mr. and Mrs. Kreller had been away from home on a visit, and on returning home found their water system frozen. A fire was lighted, however, in the kitchen stove, with the result that it exploded, throwing chunks of iron about the room, one piece through the ceiling and another through a partition. Mr. Kreller was standing fairly close to the stove at the time, but luckily was uninjured. Mrs. Kreller happened to be in the cellar.

EAST BRUCE

BORN—On Feb. 10th to Mr. and Mrs. David McKinnon, a son.

Mr. A Shipley has bought Mr. A. Sinclair's farm on the 10th of Bruce. Mr. Sinclair intends to retire from farm work and Mr. Len Shipley bought farm and Hill lot 29 con 9 and intends moving shortly to it.

The roads are as high now as the high cost of living.

Mr. Jno. Geo. McKay was laid up for repairs for a few days but is able to be around again.

Miss Bessie Young who has been teaching for the past three years left last week for Chicago to take the course of nurse-in-training at the Cook County Hospital.

Mr. Dave Lamont is able to be around again after undergoing an operation.

A number of the young people took in the Box social at Pinkerton, Feb. 16th and report a good time.

Mr. Tom Bennett of Georgia spent the week end at Mr. Jno Metcalfe's.

Mr. Dunc. Currie is home after working in Kincardine for the past 4 months making shells.

A reward is offered to the one who can tell where Mr. M. went, left in day light and came back in day light and was going so fast the cutter was only touching the high spots.

Mr. Edgar Brownscombe spent the week at home, he is engaged in the shell works in Stratford.

CHEPSTOW

Messrs. Jos. Stapleton and N. Strick have each had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse during the past week. In the former case the animal collapsed in the bush where the owner was engaged in drawing wood.

Mrs. A. Graf and Miss Johanna Lang returned to Buffalo, N. Y., on Monday, following a week's sojourn with their parents.

Mr. Alf Mossel is under the doctor's care suffering from pleurisy.

Mr. John Doerr entertained a large circle of friends on Monday evening. Splendid time is the verdict of those who had the good fortune to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Mullin of Walkerton called on the former's parents here on Sunday.

Mr. Joseph Fritz of West Branch, Mich., who has been absent for some thirteen years, arrived on Monday on a visit to his father, Mr. Jos. Fritz sr., west of here.

Mrs. Golden left on Tuesday for Hamilton to visit her son James, of the 205th Tiger Battalion. She was accompanied by Mrs. Chas. Doerr who will visit her daughter Gertrude.

(Intended for last week.)

Mr. Albin Kroeplin, who two moths ago had the misfortune to fracture his thigh while engaged in the lumber woods at Trout Creek, has recovered sufficiently to enable him to come home. He was accompanied by Roy Friedman, who will holiday at his home here for some time.

Mrs. A. Graf (nee Miss Mary Lang) and Miss Johanna Lang of Buffalo, U. S., are here on an extended visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lang.

It becomes our sad duty to chronicle the untimely death on Thursday, in the prime of manhood, of a lifelong resident of this district in the person of John Uhlrich. Deceased had been the victim of a long standing illness and the end came quite suddenly, though unexpected at so early a time. The case is attended by particularly sad circumstances as three children, the eldest of which is ten years, are the sole survivors of the family, the mother having predeceased her husband about five years ago. Two brothers and a sister also survive. The remains were interred in the R. C. cemetery on Saturday.

Rev. Father Goodrow went to Hamilton Monday where he is spending the week with his parents.

The continuous stormy weather is apparently driving our boys to the woods. The crash of the trees which is audible here and the storm of chips which repeatedly falls over the town predicts that the Greenock Swamp is due to go down in the annals of history as a "has-been," and like all things earthly, pass away.

PINKERTON

Anniversary Services will be conducted in Cargill Presbyterian Church next Sabbath the 25th, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. by Rev McDonald B. A. of Atwood. Mr. McDonald was at one time a Student in Walkerton High School. A special offering will be taken at the Services.

Rev. Mr. Gale has been confined to his bed with an attack of the grippe. He was unable to occupied the pulpit on Sunday and in consequence the church remained closed. We hope Mr. Gale will soon be around again.

Mr. Wes. Caswell visited his sister in Bervie last week.

Miss Sharpe of Paisley visited her friend Miss Myrtle Garland last week.

There will be no service in the Presbyterian church here next Sunday. The Presbyterian church in Cargill is holding its anniversary services. Rev. Mr. McDonald of Attwood will conduct the services.

The splendid work that the Pinkerton branch of the Red Cross Society is doing will be seen by the amount of the following shipment was made and all these articles were made since. Hospital supplies:—13 suits pyjamas, 2 Hospital suits, 6 pillows, 2 pillow covers, 3 quilts, 110 mouth wipes. Soldiers' comfort:—4 pair wristlets, 9 shirts with collars, 27 shirts without collars, 89 pair socks.

The Box Social held in the Hall here last Friday night by the Red Cross Society was a splendid success. The weather was very stormy and disagreeable until Friday afternoon but it cleared up and was a beautiful night and a very large crowd gathered. Mr. Harvey Clark acted as chairman in his usual efficient manner. The program was lengthy and each number was well rendered. It consisted largely of local talent with the exception of Miss Webb of Port Elgin and Mr. Jas. Scott of Dunblane both of whom are musical artists of no small merit. Both sang several solos which were sincerely appreciated. Senator Donnelly gave a very excellent speech. After the program the boxes were sold by auctioneer R. C. Pearce of Paisley and several commanded very large prices, one reaching $12.00 and was bought by Chairman Clark. The proceeds amounted to $119. The ladies of the Red Cross Society are very grateful to Mr. Reynolds of Eden Grove who printed the bills for the social in a very artistic manner and whose advertising in various ways helped materially to attract a crowd.

CARGILL

All parents wishing to send their children to school this term are asked to send them on Thursday, March 1st.

Owing to Mr. Gale having an attack of La Grippe no service was held in St. Andrews Church on Sunday.

The social given by the Ladies Aid at the home of Mr. Geo. Welsford on Thursday night was a decided success. A nice sum was realized and everyone had a good time.

On and after march the 3rd, the Royal Bank will close at 1 p. m. on Saturdays.

A number of our snowshoers journeyed to Pinkerton to the Red Cross Box Social on Friday evening and enjoyed the hike and programme very much.

Mr. W. D. Cargill M. P. P. spent the week end at his home here.

Mrs. John Clancy attended the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. Thos. O'Donnel in Stratford on Thursday.

Mr. Jas. Alexander of the Royal Bank staff, who has been visiting relatives in Allenford returned home on Saturday and commenced his duties this Thursday morning.

We are sorry to report the death of Mr. Robt. Reed of Borden, Man., who formerly made his home with Mr. Thos. Moffat here. Mr. Reed went West about 10 years ago and took up farming in Manitoba. The deceased was well known and highly respected here. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

A load of young people attended a dance at Frank Hanmore's on Monday night and a number of others snowshoed out to Geo. Frook's. All report a fine time.

Mr. Chas. Thompson who has been working in Brussels is spending a few days at his home here.

The Patriotic tea which was held at the home of Mrs. S. Cargill on Tuesday was well attended and a nice sum was added to the fund.

EDEN GROVE

Mrs. Reynolds of London arrived in town on Monday owing to the serious illness of her husband, Mr. Reynolds, our genial station agent, who has been confined to his bed for the past week. His many friends are pleased to learn he is somewhat improved and hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Kyle and Mrs. Saunders snowshoed over to the village from Cargill on Thursday and called on their friend Mrs. Greenaway.

Miss Angeline Fair of Paisley spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. F. Philips of Stratford is relieving agent at the G. T. R. depot.

Owing to the condition of the roads Mr. R. Donnelly is having some trouble unloading his car of corn.

Messrs. Wilbert Watson and Frank Mossel have returned from the West none the worse of their experiences with cold weather and railway wrecks.

A number from here attended the box social held in Pinkerton on Friday evening last. All report a good time. We wish to congratulate our Pinkerton friends on the success of their entertainment.

Miss Viola Kerry of Walkerton spent Sunday at her home on the 10th of Brant.

Mr. A. Gallinger had a very successful sale on Wednesday last. Although the farm is changing hands we are glad to know that we will not lose the family from our midst.

Mrs. A. Blue is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. A. Catto.

We are glad to report that Mr. S. Childs is improving and we hope soon to see him out again.

Mr. Thos. Desmond received a message last week stating that the 118th in which his son, Pte. Dan Desmond is enrolled has arrived safely in England.

Mr. Wm. Todd who has been recuperating at his home here for the past ten days has returned to his duties with the B. B. Company of Grand Trunk.

Mrs. McCutcheon and son, Lorne, who has been visiting friends here returned to the West on Monday.

The annual meeting of the Red Cross was held Wednesday evening the following officers were elected for the coming year, Pres. Mrs. James Watson, Vice pres. Mrs. Wm. Todd, Secty. Miss Edna Emery, Treas. Miss Lizzie Watson, Buying committee, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Desmond, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. A. Alexander and Mrs. Amey Gregg. The society sent out a shipment last week consisting of, 40 Suits pyjamas, 61 Trench towels, 24 Pillow cases, 18 Surgical shirts, 13 Emergency gowns, 13 pair of sox.

Annual Report of Eden Grove Red Cross Society:—

Expenditures—sal. Goods shipped $142.86, Groceries for boxes and supper $10.52, Postage on Soldier's boxes $8.95, Postage .40, Express charges and order .78, McNally livery and horse feed $5.50, Bruce Herald and Times $2.50, Total $167.90.

Receipts—Box Social $66.10, Sox Social $10.75, Euchre Party $14.60, Fowl Suppers $59.90, Donated by Mrs. W. Overand $1.00, Ellengowan Red Cross for yarn $3.10, Membership Fees $5.75, Box Social S. S. No 7 $165.45, Total $332.45. Feb. 14th Bal. Cash on hand $164.55.

Mrs. J. Watson, Pres.
Lily Alexander, Secty.

MILDMAY

Mrs. J. M. Fisher and Mr. George Martin were in Elmira last week attending the funeral of the latter's brother who was 90 years of age.

Pte. George Schefter of 169th Batt of Toronto, was in town last week for several days on his last visit. George expects his battalion to go Overseas at an early date.

The Patriotic Carnival held in the rink last Thursday night provided an unusually good evening's entertainment for the young people of the town and vicinity. The people came out in large numbers so that made everything merry. There was not such a very large number of masqueraders but those who did mask had excellent costumes. The prizes were awarded as follows:—Best dressed lady, Miss Myrtle Friendship; Best national costume, Miss Rose Helwig; Best comic costume, Harley Sauer. The races were run off after the judging, the winners being:—Bun race, Peter Lobsinger, Boys' race, Fridolin Kunkel; Relay race, Wm. F. Wendt, Alex. Sauer and Elmo Schnurr; Egg race, Gladys MacNamara; Couple race, Alfred Sauer and Gladys MacNamara. The rink was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, by the ladies of the U. J. K. Club.

Mrs. Reba Schwalm went to Toronto on Tuesday morning on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hilger are both on the sick list this week.

The Teeswater hockey team played a return game here on Thursday night before the carnival. A rattling good game was played and at half time it looked as if Teeswater were going to put one over on us as they were 2 goals ahead. During the second half our team played strong and succeeded in scoring 3 goals while Teeswater failed to add another tally. Mildmay won, the final result being 3—4. Jack Devlin acted as referee. Mildmay's line-up was:—goal, Alf. Sauer; point, Wm. Kramer; cover, Pete Lobsinger; wings, W. Wendt and Herb Weiler; centre, "Sport" Schefter.

Rev. Mr. Kilburn, a student at Victoria College, conducted the Missionary services in the Methodist church last Sunday.

Two sleighloads of young people journeyed out into the country on Monday evening where they all spent a merry evening.

A new furnace has been installed in the Methodist church during the past week.

A goodly number of the young ladies enjoyed snowshoe tramps last Sunday afternoon.

FORMOSA

The Formosa Fire Insurance Co. has voted the sum of fifty dollars to the Mildmay Fire Department in recognition of their work in connection with the Formosa Church fire.

RIVERSDALE

Miss Grace McDonald is visiting her sister in Mornington.

Mrs. L. Beninger is visiting in Ayton.

Miss Eva Beninger returned home from her visit in Hepworth.

Miss Cecelia Dietrich visited at her Grandmother's, Mrs. O'Hagan, who is ill. Her two daughters Mrs. Helen Parker and Mrs. Wm. Beninger are with her now.

The men are busy hauling ice. It's a real good crop this winter.

Mr. Jack Scharbach of Alberta visited Stephan Scharbach's a few days.

Mr. Matt Stephan returned to Teeswater after spending two weeks with friends here.

(Intended for last week)

Miss Jennie McClennan, Messrs Hodgson and Edgar of Gorrie visited at Gib Chatreau's for a few days.

Mr. Jos. Dietrich and Mr. John Volkel visited friends in Stratford last week.

School has started again after being closed for a week on account of German measles.

A number of young people spent Friday evening at Gib Chatreau's and report a real good time.

We are glad to know that Mr. J. Cassidy has fully recovered from a bad attack of la grippe.

Pte. Tom Loftus was home on his last leave. A number of young friends gathered at his home on Monday evening and after spending a couple of hours in games and music, presented Tom with a wrist watch and the following address was read by Mr. Cleo Beninger:

Mr. Thos. Loftus

Dear Friend:—It is with mixed feelings that we your friends and neighbours meet to-night to wish you God speed in your journey. Although we are happy to have one more son who is not afraid to fight for a just and noble cause we cannot but be sad to see you depart from the scenes of your boyhood to brave the unknown dangers of a war with a cruel foe. It is because we are proud of you that we are here to-night. We are proud to think that you are going to fight our just battles. In a peaceful community like ours we scarcely think of war or realize that Brute Force is trying to upset the laws of civilization. Yet such a war is now on and our armies confident of victory will fight on to overthrow militarism and brute force and established a just and lasting peace.

In token of our appreciation of the service you are rendering your country we beg of you to accept this watch.

We sincerely hope that the horrors of war will have ceased before you reach the Front but this token in bright and dark days alike will prove we trust, not only a help but will also remind you that your friends at home are thinking of you and longing for your safe return.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
William Black,
J. H. Dietrich.

GLAMIS

On Friday morning Feb. 9th, 1917, an old and highly respected citizen and friend of this neighborhood, in the person of Mr. Kenneth McLennan, passed peacefully away in his 80th year. He had been confined to his bed for the short period of about two weeks, during which time he suffered severe pain but it was borne with great patience. He had been a sufferer of Kidney trouble for some months. His death was not unexpected.

The late Deacon McLennan was born in Scotland, in May 1837. When one year old he came with his parents to Prince Edward Island, where they remained for 15 years, and coming to Bruce Co. in 1852.

He taught school for a number of years, teaching in his home school, on Bruce and Kincardine Boundary, also at Kinloss and Bruce Mines. In 1861 he married Ann Campbell, and took up farming work on his farm Lot 32 Con 12, Kincardine Twp. about one mile west of Glamis, where he resided until his death. The deceased was one the most highly respected citizens, a loving friend and neighbor to every one, always ready to help all he could in any way. His many friends will long retain fragrant memories of his kindly, cheerful, Christ-like character. Through his death the Glamis Baptist Church have lost one of their most active and chartered members, also Deacon, and Sunday School Teacher. Up to a short time ago he was a regular attendant at all the services and prayer meetings. Weather conditions never prevented his [illegible]ing. He leaves to mourn his demise, a loving wife, two sons, Duncan [illegible] home and John K. also residing [illegible] his parents, and two daughters [illegible] Ed Wood of Superior Wis. and [illegible] Margaret at home. Also two brothers, Rev. Donald of Walkerton [illegible] James near Glamis and four sisters [illegible] siding in the States. To the bereaved ones heart-felt sympathy is extended. The funeral took place from his late residence on Sunday afternoon Feb. 11th. Service at the Baptist Church conducted by Mr. McCauley assisted by Revs. Mr. Keith and Mr. M[illegible] nan. Miss McIntyre rendered [illegible] "The Christian's Goodnight." [illegible] burial took place at Fordyce Ceme

The Central Grocery

FISH FOR LENT

Fresh and Salted Lake Herrings
Fresh Smelts,
Trout and Pike
Smoked Haddie,
Ciscoes, Fillets,
& Boneless Cod

W. G. Searle
Phone 101 Walkerton

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES
Three months........ $ .40
Half year........ .75
Year........ 1.50
In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)
Great Britain........ $ 1.50
United States........ 2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts........ 2.00

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

OL. XLIX, NO. 9 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, MARCH 1st 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

HEALTHY KIDNEYS NECESSARY

Medical science has never found anything much better than good old Buchu and Juniper for the kidneys. Nine times in ten the doctor will prescribe one or the other for kidney troubles.

Nyal's Kidney Pills contain buchu and juniper combined in scientific proportions with other valuable kidney and bladder tonics.

These pill banish backache and give permanent relief in kidney and bladder ills that have not reached the advanced chronic stage.

25c and 50c Boxes

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

TRY

Sieveright's Drug Store

FOR

Cough Mixtures

Tasteless Cod Liver Oil

Cod Liver Emulsions

Cold Tablets

Anything for Coughs and Colds

A. P. Sieveright

Druggist

For a short time we will give

Special Bargains

in

WALL PAPER

To make room for our New Stock for 1917 which is arriving.

R. McCrum & Co.

People aren't fooled by words these days. They want facts. There are plenty of facts behind

Regal Shoes

National Style

Backed by real leather and honest workmanship. Sold by

Ramsey

The Shoeman

'17 SPRING '17 OPENING

The New Spring & Summer TAILOR-MADE FASHIONS AND FABRICS FOR MEN AND WOMEN ARE HERE.

Watch for Window Display.

Our principle of making garments is being maintained by a spirit and determination of all our staff to produce the best.

Our Guarantee

Because of our high standard of workmanship, and because of our rapidly increasing number of pleased customers, we feel confident of our ability to satisfy you.

For this reason we feel safe in guaranteeing every suit we make.

Easter will Soon be Here

Order Early

Ladies' Suits, Skirts and Coats made to measure in all the latest styles. (Cloth sold in suit ends.

Order at once to have ready for Easter (April 8th.)

Men's Furnishings

All the latest styles in Men's Hats, Ties, Gloves, Collars, Shirts, Vests, are here. Give us a call, we will please you

T. ROURKE

Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.53
Year	1.50

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA

(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts	2.50

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia. More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The Central Grocery

FISH FOR LENT

Fresh and Salted Lake Herrings

Fresh Smelts,

Trout and Pike

Smoked Haddie,

Ciscoes, Fillets,

& Boneless Cod

W. G. Searle

Phone 161 Walkerton

ANOTHER WALKERTON BOY

Private Adam Leith Russell, Son of Walkerton's Reeve, Killed in Action in Flanders—One of Four Brothers to Serve the King.

A telegram from Ottawa yesterday morning announced that still another Walkerton boy has made the supreme sacrifice. Adam Leith Russell, youngest son of Reeve Robt. Russell of Walkerton, was killed in action on February 15th. The news was received on all sides with deep regret and Mayor Johnston ordered that the flag on the Town Hall be flown at half mast in honor of Walkerton's heroic son who laid down his life for his country.

As Leith had been reported wounded on Feb. 10th, news of his death in action only three days later is rather confusing. Walkerton people remembering the pluck that has been shown by the young soldier as well as his three soldier brothers, believe that he ignored the wound and gamely kept in the firing line in spite of everything until he received a fatal hit. Leith wrote home on Feb. 2nd that he was feeling fine and dandy. The letter arrived just the day before the first telegram announcing that he was wounded. That was the last word that came from him.

Leith belonged to a family that has given probably more freely of its sons than any other Walkerton family. Stanley, now of Toronto, is a South African Veteran, and fought at Hart's River where so few Canadians came out alive. Another brother John is now with a British Battalion Somewhere in France. His brother "Jim" also saw eleven months service at the Front and is now serving at a Medical Training School in England. Leith was the youngest of all the family. He was keen to join his plucky brothers at the Front and the moment his eighteenth birthday arrived he went off and enlisted with the 71st Batt'n. After arriving in England, he was transferred to the Trench Mortar Battery, 10th Brigade, 4th Div., along with Ed. Eidt, Alvin Wilton, Chester Cunningham, Ted Wilhelm, Everett Truax and Roy Oberle. As he was working side by side with his old chums it is expected that full particulars will be received from the Walkerton boys in due time.

Leith was a native of Walkerton, a smart, bright plucky chap, and a soldier who would be game to the last.

Dr. Rayson Ill

Rev. Dr. Rayson of Delaware, who supplied the pulpit of Knox Church during two summer vacations recently was operated upon for gallstones at Victoria Hospital, London, last week and his condition is still very serious. Dr. Rayson made warm friends while in town who are hoping for more favourable news of his condition.

Died In Detroit

Mr. Ephraim Runstadtler received a telegram from Detroit on Thursday, announcing the death of his son Albert. The deceased had been suffering for some time from Bright's Disease but his death was unexpected. He was about thirty years of age and leaves a wife and young son. "Ab," was engaged as a piano-tuner with a large firm in Detroit for a number of of years. Many old friends here remember him well and sympathize deeply with the family in their sad loss. Mrs. Trusler of Walkerton is a sister and Mr. E. Runstadtler of Kitchener, an only brother. The funeral took place at Detroit on Monday morning.

More $200 Fines

License Inspector J. M. White and Barrister O. E. Klein braved the storm last week and drove up to Lion's Head to prosecute some parties for violation of the Liquor Act. George Williams, a hotel boarder, was fined $200 and costs for keeping liquor in his room. A farmer was fined $200 and costs for taking booze in his cutter to an auction sale. Two candidates in the recent municipal elections were charged with buying liquor for voters but the charges were not proven. With the coldest winds of the winter doing their worst, and the roads piled high with drifts in the Peninsula the officials had an experience getting up and back which they will not soon forget.

FOR SALE

Four brood sows and pigs, several Clyde horses and colts, coming three years, two grade bulls. Shorthorn and boars for service, Paul Huffarth, 14th con. Carrick, R. R. 1, Carlsruhe.

BORN

WATTS—At 169 Howard Park Ave. Toronto, Feb. 17th, to Mr. and Mrs Fred H. Watts, a daughter, (June Lillian.)

ENSEWEIN—In Walkerton, on Feb. 15th, to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Ensewein, a son.

Wanted

General servant. Apply to Mrs. (Rev.) Wilson

Just Arrived

Have you seen them? Those nice spring suitings and pantings at Woodman & Co. next to Vogan's Hardware.

Muff Lost

Ladies' Sealette Muff either on 14th con. Carrick, or Walkerton Road. Will finder kindly leave at Telescope office.

Mrs. Fortune's Mother

Mrs. (Dr.) Fortune was called to Toronto on Sunday owing to the death of her mother, Mrs Cairn, who succumbed to pneumonia after a short illness. She was in her 75th year.

County Women's Hospital Meeting

A special meeting of the Bruce County Women's Hospital Aid, will held in the Town Hall on Saturday, March 3rd at 3.30 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

Charge Of Sedition

Stewart, the Harriston farmer, reported to have used violent language against the British Crown, has been charged in the County Court at Guelph with sedition and will be brought up for trial shortly.

Bravest Of The Brave

Signaller Jack McGarity writes home that he is again back in the thick of it after being in the hospital with a severe cold. He mentions meeting a member of Leslie Young's battalion who speaks of the Cargill boy who fell in battle as one of the bravest of the brave.

Passed Vocal Exams

Miss Donalda McKechnie, teacher, of Shelburne, took honors in vocal at the Toronto Conservatory Examinations recently. Miss McKechnie, who visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. McKechnie, over the week-end, sang a solo at Knox Church Sunday night which was very much appreciated.

Hydro Rates To Be Cut

Hydro rates which have already reduced the cost of domestic current in Hydro towns from 9.3 to 3.9 and commercial rates from 10.5 to 2, are to be still lower according to a recent statement of Sir Adam Beck at Toronto. It is a remarkable fact that each and everyone of the 101 Hydro towns of Ontario had a surplus during the past year after paying all expenses.

Date For Registration Extended

Postmaster Tolton has received word from the Department that the time for receiving registration cards has been extended to March 31st. Mr. Tolton will be glad to obtain cards for any parties who have not yet signed them. He reports that the cards at this post office were well filled out and nearly all signed, it being pretty generally understood that the registration is not for military but for Industrial purposes.

Use Knitting Machines

We notice in our exchanges that the Women's Organizations of some towns have installed knitting machines in their rooms, where women can go and knit socks by machinery in their spare hours. The expense of installing the machines is not heavy and the output of socks is tremendously increased. Here is an opportunity for some of our local plutocrats to do their bit by donating a machine or two.

Jim Leech Ill

Mr. Amos Leech had a letter from London, Eng. on Saturday saying that his brother, Gnr. James Leech, was in New End Hospital, Hampstead, London, Eng. with a severe cold. Gnr. Leech had been in England on ten days' leave and was about to return to Flanders, when he was urged by his friends to consult a doctor with the result that he was ordered to the Hospital. Gnr. Leech has been at the Front almost since the war started and has been through a lot of the hardest fighting.

Children's Aid Meeting

The County Council Committee composed of Warden Izzard, Reeves Russell of Walkerton, and Filsinger of Carrick met the Children's Aid Officials here on Thursday in regard to the purchase of a building for Children's Shelter. Three properties in the town were suggested by the Children's Aid Officers for consideration. After the County Council Committee has looked at the properties, a deal will probably be put through. The officers were also instructed to sign a private bill which is being prepared to be presented to Parliament to provide for the transfer of properties willed by the late James Moore to the Children's Aid Society.

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, B, Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan. Executor, or Chepstowe

D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley

47 t. f.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

March.

Renewed your Telescope yet?

County Correspondence pages 4 and 8.

Assessor J. A. McGill started on his rounds last week.

Mrs. E. T. Gibson was a visitor in Clifford on Sunday.

Mr. William Forsythe left Tuesday on a trip to the West.

Ontario Women are to have votes at the next Provincial election.

Men's and Boy's winter caps at clearing prices.—Woodman & Co.

Mr. James Rae of Brant has been quite ill with quinzy and influenza.

Miss Anderson of Chatham is visiting at her uncle's Mr. Alex Rae of Brant.

Mrs. D. G. Disch is visiting her brother in Toronto, Mrs. Fred B Watts.

Mr. V. McNamara of Sault Ste. Marie is visiting his brother, Mr. L. H. McNamara.

Monarch Knitted Mufflers and Sweater Coats at reduced prices at Woodman & Co.

Mrs. O'Hagan Sr. of Chepstow who has been suffering from heart trouble is reported to be very low.

Mr. David Robertson was able to be out for the first time Tuesday, after a second siege of la grippe.

Mr. E. Runstadtler of Kitchener visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Runstadtler, this week.

Evelyn, the eleven year old daughter of Coun. Chas. Prechnow, had her tonsils removed on Saturday.

Liberals are rejoicing over sweeping the strongly-entrenched Provincial Govt out of power in New Brunswick.

Miss S. Watts will represent the Methodist Sunday School at the Temperance Convention at Toronto next week.

Housewives cannot afford to miss reading about the good things Telescope Advertisers have to offer. Read the ads!

Rev. D. McLennan, Children's Aid Agent, went to Southampton on Tuesday to investigate a case of child neglect.

The local Lutheran Congregation which has been without a pastor since New Years expects to reach a decision the coming week.

Mr. E. T. Gibson has been confined to the house for the past few days, as the result of a bad fall which he had at the rear of his home on Sunday.

Miss McKay, teacher of Hanover, who underwent a serious operation at Bruce County Hospital recently, was able to resume her duties this week.

Mr. H. A. Keyes of Kindersley, Sask. who has been spending the winter visiting relatives in this part, returned to Saskatchewan on Tuesday.

Rev. C. W. Cosens will preach anniversary sermons at Southampton next Sunday. His work here will be taken by Rev. J. W. Sanderson and Mr. John Leggat.

Miss Marg. Sewell, who has been on the staff of the Merchants Bank for the past year, has been transferred to Preston and leaves next week for that town.

Irwin Bros. shipped three loads of workhorses to the West via C. P. R. on Tuesday. This makes 18 loads since New Years that this firm has shipped West.

David Frock, son of Ex-Reeve Fred Frock, is moving to-day onto the John Parker farm, townline Brant and Greenock, which he has leased from Geo. Faust.

Mrs. Bandhauer left on Tuesday for Toronto where she will make her home. Mr. A. G. Lamont, who has rented her house, takes possession the first of April.

Rev. D. McLennan investigated a couple of cases of child neglect in the East Ward this week. It is probable that the children in both cases will be removed to foster homes.

The first auto to stick its nose out among the snowbanks here was Chris. Kolpin's which was out for a bit of exercise the other day. It looked like a real harbinger of Spring.

Miss Elizabeth Robertson, who has been here for some time with her sister, Miss Anne Robertson who was operated upon at the Hospital, returned this week to resume her duties as teacher at Toronto. Her sister is now making excellent progress towards recovery.

Mr. R. J. Wilson of Timmins, Ont., a son-in-law of Mr. B. Watts, has enlisted with the Battalion which is being raised to assist in railway construction in Flanders. Mr. Wilson, who has been engaged with the Hollinger Mining Co., was treated very generously by the Company and will have his position waiting for him when he comes back. Mrs. Wilson will spend the coming summer with her parents here.

A half a ton is better than no coal.

Miss Sophia Holm left for Toronto Monday morning on a week's visit.

Mrs. E. Glave spent a few days with friends at Hanover last week.

Regal on your shoes means quality in them. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mr. C. Gateman arrived from Gravenhurst Saturday on a visit to his parents here.

Try a pair of Drs. Special shoes for the Spring slush. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mr. Robt. W. Bell of Goderich is here on a visit to his sister, Mrs. Henry Williams.

Mr. John Quantz, now of Gowanstown, visited his old neighbours the past week.

Mrs. Robert Gillies returned home on Monday from a visit to friends at Harriston.

Mrs. Jas. Alexander and Mrs. Neil Thompson spent Sunday with friends at Eden Grove.

James McKinnon and his sister, Mrs. John Ward, spent Sunday with friends at Eden Grove.

Mrs. L. A. Eedy and children returned home Thursday from a visit to Mount Brydges and St. Marys.

Miss Emma Latchford has returned home from a three weeks' visit to her aunt at Guelph and friends at Drayton.

The advance in shoes has been heavy. We will still keep up the quality of our stock. Ramsey the Shoeman.

Will Weidner was up from London for the week-end. He is still on Special Service duty for one of the battalions.

Tan Mexican Kip boots for hard wear can't be beaten. Keeps soft and turns the wet. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

We have a splendid stock of shoes for Spring; shoes that will stand the slush, made of solid leather. Ramsey the Shoeman.

Jos. J. Ernst has bought a piece of swamp in Greenock from T. Austin and is busy at cutting. He seems to be an industrious fellow.

Mr. John Hergott was called to Wingham this week owing to the death of his mother. The funeral took place at Wingham on Monday.

Victor Bail writes home from the War prisoners' camp in Germany that he has at last begun to get mail. Several letters reached him on ChristmasDay.

Mr. Fred Lobsinger, of Bruno, Sask, who is spending the winter with his father, Turnkey Geo. Lobsinger, underwent an operation for appendicitis successfuly at the Hospital on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross and little son of Bridgeford, Sask. who have been visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs J. G. Erb, Culross, for a couple of months returned to their home in Saskatchewan last week.

Many friends were glad to see Mr. J. H. Hunter down town again yesterday, his first day out since he underwent an operation on his foot eight weeks ago. Mr. Hunter is making good progress but does not expect to have full use of his foot for some time yet.

Mr. Harold Crawford who was taken seriously ill at Detroit last week as a result of catching cold after an attack of measles is very much improved and was able to return home from Detroit with his father on Saturday. He will remain here for some time to recuperate.

Mr. W. M. Bush arrived home last week from the West where he had been since last August. Since the harvesting operations were over, he has been acting as night clerk at the American Hotel, Saskatchewan. Mr. Bush likes the West fine but he could stand the weather a little milder. When he left Saskatoon the thermometer stood at 50 below.

Rented Morden Farm

Mr. Robt. Simpson has rented the Morden farm adjoining the town limits in the East Ward.

For Sale

General store and dwelling, good business; reason, dissolving partnership. Oberle Bros., Formosa, Ont.

Dog Lost

Longhaired brown Collie, four white feet, star on head. Finder kindly notify Patrick McGarity, R. R. 1, Elmwood.

Stone Fell on Foot

Mr. J. E. Skelton has been laid up the past week with an injured foot, the result of a large stone dropping on it at his marble works.

Box Social

S. S. No 5, Brant, under auspices of Brant Branch Preparedness League and Brant Ladies' Hospital Aid on Friday, March 9th. Admission 25cts. and 15. Ladies with boxes free.

Highest Price Yet

The Anderson farm of 150 acres con. 9, Elderslie, was sold last week to Wm. Pender for $13,500. This is the highest price per acre ever paid for a farm in Elderslie—$90 an acre.

Died At Stratford

The death occurred at Stratford on Saturday of Mr. H. S. Rapp, a brother of Mr. John Rapp of Brant. Deceased was in his 40th year and succumbed to an attack of paralysis after a week's illness. He leaves a wife and family. He was a traveller for the Peppler Furniture Co. of Hanover and was well-known in Walkerton. The remains were taken to Hanover for interment on Wednesday afternoon.

Garden For Every Home!

Everybody will have a chance to get into the gardening game the coming season. Ignorance of how to make the little potatoes grow will not be taken as an excuse. If you don't know how, free booklets issued by the Agricultural Dept. will tell you. The Dept. is urging a "vegetable garden for every home in 1917." An advertising campaign is being started in the local papers urging the planting of gardens as a means of economizing and as a patriotic duty. Practical gardeners will be sent out through the Province to give instruction. One of these gentlemen will visit Walkerton under the auspices of the local Horticultural Society. An announcement on page 4 of this week's Telescope gives further particulars.

A Tight Game

The best hockey game of the Season was played here Tuesday night when the locals succeeded in winning from a fast Chesley septet after the closest and most exciting contest seen here for some time. When the time was up the score stood 3—3. After an extra five minute interval had been played it was again a tie 4—4. Walkerton finally succeeded in finding the nets in the second interval, and holding the visitors in their half, the final score being 5—4. The Walkerton line-up was:—Goal, Don Wallace; Point, Herm Runstadtler; Cover-point, Wes Russell; Rover, Walt Paterson; Centre, Vic Eidt, Left, Jack Chalmers; Right, Alf Schefter. Referee—A. McCartney. The boys expect to play a return match at Chesley Friday night.

Put Up Great Game

The rink of Walkerton Curlers who played in the big bonspiel at Owen Sound, put up a wonderful game and while they did not come home with the silverware, they came as close to it as they could come without winning. It was in the semi-finals that "Skinny" Richardson's rink, which landed winner out of 40 rinks, beat Walkerton. Richardson, who is a Walkerton old boy, did it in the last shot of the last end. Walkerton was lying shot, when the last stone came down and moved in by the merest fraction of an inch. Otherwise Walkerton would have had the honour of landing the premier honours. The local rink, which comprised S. Fink, L. H. McNamara, A. E McNab and A. Collins, skip, had a fine outing and enjoyed every minute of the play. They were pitched against the hardest rinks there, winning from Shelburne, Owen Sound, Orangeville, Southampton.

Going Overseas

Lieut. Harold Patterson, one of the best and most popular officers of the 160th Batt'n, who was stopped by the final physical examination when the Bruce Battalion was going Overseas last Fall, has at last succeeded in breaking into His Majesty's Overseas Forces and will go to England in less than two week's time with a Forestry Draft from Toronto. Although holding a Capt's certificate, Harold was willing to go as a private but on account of his previous experience will start as a Sergeant and will no doubt win further promotion. Harold did fine work for the 160th last year recruiting at Cape Croker. It was a source of great disappointment to everybody when he could not go across with the Battalion he trained with. He may not see the firing line, but when he once gets over there, we predict they will have a hard time keeping Harold away from the big doings.

Boy Burglars Caught

Three intelligent-looking young boys from Elmwood, all under fourteen, were arraigned before Magistrates Tolton and Richardson of Walkerton yesterday morning on the serious charge of burglarizing. The boys who are sons of respectable parents, got nicely started on a career of crime, when Chief Ferguson arrived on the scene on Monday afternoon and ordered the parents to produce the boys here for trial. The offence consisted of breaking into Mr. Jno. Thaler's general store last Sunday night and stealing a quantity of goods. Entrance was obtained by breaking a pane of glass at the rear of the store, and then unfastening the inside latch. The Magistrates gave the boys a severe lecture and allowed them to go on suspended sentence with the understanding that the goods would be restored to the owner and all costs amounting to $24 paid by the parents.

WON MILITARY MEDAL

Signaller Jack McGarity, Soldier Son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGarity of Brant, Will be Decorated for Gallant Conduct at the Front.

Mr. Patrick McGarity, of Brant, who has lost one much beloved son by death in action in Flanders, learned indirectly through a friend recently that another son, Jack, now at the Front, has been decorated for gallant conduct. A copy of an English newspaper bearing the names of those awarded the Military Medal was the first and only intimation received here of the distinguished honor that has been conferred on one of Brant's brave sons. Letters from Jack have been received right along, but he modestly refrained from mentioning the matter at all. The McGarity name will be indelibly connected with the history of Brant Township's part in the Great War. "Dan." McGarity was the first brave boy from Brant to make the supreme sacrifice in Flanders, and now his brother, Jack, is the first native of the old township to be decorated by the King for gallantry on the firing line.

Pupils Help Red Cross

As a result of the High School pupils' canvass for old papers, they were able to load on Saturday no less than eleven tons of paper to be shipped to Toronto. This shipment will mean over one hundred dollars which the pupils by their worthy effort have raised for the Red Cross.

Great Discovery At Durham

A Scientist who has been experimenting at the Durham Cement plant, claims to have made a discovery of great importance. He has found that potash, which is almost priceless since the War cut off the supply from Germany, can be made in Canada as a by-product from Canadian feldspar in the manufacture of cement. The cost of producing it is cut to a mere fraction of the price before the war. Potash used to be $36 a ton. Now ordinary commercial potash ranges from $250 to 600 per ton. By the newly discovered process the cost "is so low even now that it is less than the freight charge paid on a ton of the imported German product before the War." The Durham people claim to be able to turn out 15 tons a day. They expect that all the Canadian cement works will soon be making potash as a by-product and the German product will be entirely driven from the market here. America's requirements are 1400 tons a day.

Mildmay Boys Committed

County Constable Briggs was summoned to Mildmay a few days ago to investigate several cases of stealing and petty burglarizing which has been going on in the village for some time. As a result of his investigation he laid information against three young lads of 14 to 10 years of age, who appear to have run wild through lack of parental control. The boys were brought before Magistrates Fisher and Tolton on Tuesday and after seventeen witnesses had been examined two of the boys were committed to the County Gaol pending trial, and the third discharged. Crown Attorney Thos. Dixon appeared for the Crown. The offences charged against the boys include: stealing ninety-five dollars from Schuurs's shoe store, five dollars worth of tobacco and other goods from Helwig Bros. store, a quantity of goods from Weiler's store, pigeons from Jas. Lobsinger. It is also charged that they broke open the collection box at the R. C. Church taking about six dollars.

FACTS ABOUT BRUCE TOWNS

A little book of Municipal Statistics just issued by the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture gives some interesting figures regarding the towns of Bruce and surrounding district:—

Population: — Walkerton, 2,888; Lucknow, 963; Paisley, 787; Port Elgin, 1318; Tara, 500; Teeswater, 825; Tiverton 320, Chesley, 1973; Kincardine, 2,300; Southampton, 1,647; Wiarton, 2008; Neustadt, 490; Hanover, 3,221. Durham, 1,600.

Municipal Debt—Walkerton, 18,817; Wiarton, 151,935; Kincardine, 122,857; Chesley, 122,357; Paisley, 57,202; Hanover, 96,010; Meaford, 206,447; Goderich, 537,500; Wingham, 206,147.

Assessed Acreage—Walkerton, 1,407; Wiarton, 718; Chesley 575; Kincardine, 1000; Southampton, 1,628; Port Elgin, 610; Hanover, 820; Durham, 950; Wingham, 2,441.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, Feb. 28.)

Hay, per ton,	8.00 to	10.00
Oats, per bsh.	65 to	66
Wheat " "	1.70 to	1.70
Barley, " "	85 to	90
Buckwheat "	1.00 to	1.00
Hogs, per cwt,	14.00 to	14.00
Butter, per lb.	33 to	33
Eggs, per doz,	40 to	40

A PUZZLING CASE

This closed the conversation for the time being, as the curtain was now rising on the second act, and Dallas, therefore, held his tongue, for which boon I was very thankful, not caring to be worried much more by his incessant questioning and bad temper. I had a good deal to say against Mazzucata; but who would be such a fool as to ignite this mass of gunpowder? Dallas, as I well knew, had a very bad temper, and no respect for age; so, in such circumstances, a wise man holds his tongue. I am a wise man, so I held mine—for the time being.

The second act of the lyric drama, as 'tis now the fashion to call an opera, consisted mostly of intrigue, in which the queen, Chastelard, Murray, and John Knox, were all involved, ending in a fine scene, in which Mary banishes the poet from her presence for his presumptuous passion. From a musical point of view, I did not consider it so fine as the first act; but, probably, Renaud had purposely restrained his genius at this part, in order to accentuate more fully the splendid third act, which was said to be a triumph of melodic inspiration and harmonic cunning.

When the curtain fell for the second time, I saw Gilbert Tressinger rise from his seat, and go out into the vestibule of the theatre. Upon seeing this, Dallas touched my arm, and hastily followed him. I arose with considerable reluctance, as, not smoking myself, I find a tobacco-impregnated atmosphere extremely disagreeable, and would much preferred to have remained quietly in my place, or visited the boxes of my friends. Dallas, however was so anxious to see why he desired such a meeting, that we both followed the young man—a thing I would not have done under any other circumstances.

"There he is," whispered Dallas, when we were in the smoking-room, leaning against the wall."

"You won't wait a moment," I said, crossly; but, nevertheless, for the sake of peace, walked across to Tressinger, holding out my hand.

"How do you do, Gilbert?" I said, using the privilege of an old friend, and calling him by his Christian name. "So you are back from Paris?"

"Yes; I only ran over on business, major."

"Mazzucata business," I murmured, under my breath. "Oh, by the way, let me introduce you to my friend: Mr. Dallas—Sir Gilbert Tressinger."

"Lawrence Dallas," said Gilbert, with a bow. "I know you very well, Mr. Dallas. We have a mutual friend, I think."

"Signora Mazzucata," replied Dallas, in a marked tone; and they eyed each other with considerable curiosity, while I, wondering what was to be the outcome of the meeting, stood aside, watching the comedy.

"I knew Signora Mazzucata in Italy," said Lawrence, at length, in an agreeable manner, evidently considering it best to be diplomatic.

"So she told me. Some time ago, is it not?"

"About eighteen months, or thereabouts. Since then, I have been travelling in the East, and only returned to-day."

"Oh!" murmured Gilbert, significantly. "And you patronize the opera on the first night of your arrival! You are fond of music?"

"Yes, very," said Dallas, who saw at what Tressinger was hinting, and determined not to gratify his rival by showing that he did.

"So fond," said I, interposing amiably, with the intention of preventing a quarrel between those hot-headed youngsters, "that he brought a bouquet to throw to the lady."

"I'm afraid I also must plead guilty," observed Gilbert, with a laugh, upon which Dallas half frowned, then recollecting his manners, smiled quietly.

"One cannot pay too many compliments to an artist of Signor Mazzucata's standing," he said, carelessly; "do you know her well, Sir Gilbert?"

"Yes, very well, I saw a great deal of her in Paris."

"Ah!" said Dallas, jealously, and made no further remark about the singer.

On his part Tressinger scrupulously refrained from either discussing Mazzucata, and for the rest of the conversation the two young men, both eaten up with jealousy about this woman, behaved in a regulation society manner. This conversation puzzled me more than ever, and when we were once more seated in our stalls I spoke to Dallas on the matter.

"Well!"

"Well," he replied, stolidly.

"You are a riddle to-night," I said, shrugging my shoulders, "you got into a vile temper with a man you do not know, and when I introduce you to him at your express request you are positively agreeable to one whom I verily believe you regard as your enemy."

"If he loves Mazzucata I do regard him as my enemy."

"And why?"

"Because I also love her."

"There are always two to a bargain," I observed, sapiently; "so far as I can see, you are both in love with this woman. Now the chances are that she prefers one of you—which one?"

"Myself!" said Dallas, promptly.

"Well, supposing it's Tressinger?"

"In that case I would kill her," he replied equally promptly. I started in surprise, upon which he broke out into a harsh laugh which had the effect of making several people turn their heads to look at him.

"Oh, you wonder at my melodrama," he said, at length in a low voice, "but I tell you I would. You have no idea how I love her—of the encouragement she has given me. I heard all about Tressinger—oh, yes, you told me nothing new, and knowing he was to be here to-night, I came with the intention of being introduced to him. Well, I have been introduced to him, and now I know——"

He paused suddenly, and, much impressed by his manner, I spoke at once.

"Know what?"

"That which I desired to know."

"My good fellow, you rave," I said in calm despair at the hopelessness of extracting sense from this erratic maniac.

"Wait till to-morrow," he whispered, harshly, "and you will see if I rave."

I was about to make a further remark when the curtain rose, and as Dallas obstinately refused to speak again, I was obliged to turn my attention to the stage, though I wondered much at the strange manner in which he was behaving. However, I put down his extraordinary conduct to an attack of love, and prepared to listen to this famous third act which had been extolled throughout Europe as a miracle of musical excellence.

The stage was set to represent the queen's chamber in Holyrood, and after half the act had passed in chorus and songs from Chastelard and the queen, the great duet which was so famous, began. Chastelard lies hidden in the room, the queen sees him and runs to call her guards, but he, throwing himself at her feet, implores her to forgive what he has done for love's sake. He appeals not to the queen, but to the woman, and she, forgetting her royalty, is about to confess that she loves him, when the sight of the crown recalls to her what she owes to her race and to her country. With a cry she breaks from his encircling arms and summons the guard. The guards pour in, there is a splendid and exciting finale, and the curtain falls on Mary ordering Chastelard to prison.

It was a great performance on the part of both artists, and when the curtain fell they were called before the footlights to receive the applause which they had honestly earned. The enthusiasm of the audience recalled to me the triumphs of Jenny Lind, especially when a perfect hail of flowers fell on the stage. Tressinger rising in his seat, threw his bouquet to the prima-donna, upon which Dallas, not to be outdone, also arose and threw his. Ivan picked up some flowers, but whether they were those of my two friends I am not prepared to say, and presented them to Mazzucata. The singer, all smiles, bowed first to one side of the house, and then to the other, pressing the bouquet she held to her breast. Suddenly she looked at it and gave a shrill cry of horror—a cry that was drowned in the frightful explosion which followed.

There was a cloud of smoke which slowly dispersed, and then through the smoke veil I saw, as in a dream, that which was once a lovely woman lying a mangled corpse on the stage. Ivan was leaning back against the curtain with a white face, half stunned with the noise of the explosion—a thrill of horror ran through the crowded house—there was a dead silence, then the vast audience arose with a roar of alarm and made for the doors. The cries of women, the curses of men, I heard half confusedly, but higher than all I heard a cry of terror—

"Dynamite!"

CHAPTER II.

I am not so young as I was, therefore the catastrophe of the previous night unnerved me so much that I lay longer in bed the next morning than was my custom. Pointer was greatly concerned—Pointer is my man—and wished to send for a doctor, but this extreme proceeding I sternly forbade, knowing I should be quite recovered by noon, which indeed proved to be the case. After an excellent breakfast—for Pointer tempted me with my favorite dishes—I sent for the principal morning papers, in order to acquaint myself with the reports of this terrible calamity, which had so abruptly brought the performance of the previous night to a close.

It is not my intention to set forth a full report of what the papers contained, as anyone who so desires can turn up the case for himself, but merely to incorporate herein the gist of the matter so far as is requisite for an understanding of the events which followed the committal of the crime. Judging from the frank admissions of the press, the whole affair was veiled in mystery, and not even the most imaginative dared to put forward any theory as to the reason of the crime. All that was known appeared to be the barren fact that Mazzucata had been killed by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge concealed in the bouquet which she had held to her breast, but why such a crime should have been perpetrated in so bold and open a manner appeared to be quite inexplicable. Some of the papers indeed suggested that the dead woman had enemies, but so far as that goes, everyone in a public position has enemies, yet, as a rule, they refrain from letting their enmity carry them to such extreme lengths.

At all events, whatever theories were put forward to account for the affair, the actual fact remained the same, that Mazzucata had been killed by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge which formed the handle of a bouquet thrown to her on the stage. The whole question as to the detection of the crime lay in the discovery of the person who threw the fatal bunch of flowers. This, on the face of it, was utterly impossible, and one might as well try to find a needle in a haystack, as attempt to discover the owner of one particular bouquet flung at the feet of a prima donna in company with several hundred tributes of the same kind.

Clearly, therefore, nothing was to be gained from the papers, so I placed them all on one side, and discarding them as useless, sought in my own mind for an explanation of this hideous mystery. Here was a beautiful woman barbarously done to death in a public manner by some unknown enemy. Now the question was to find that enemy, and to do so it would be necessary for me to make myself acquainted with all circumstances connected with the early life of this unfortunate singer.

In this respect I was absolutely ignorant, as, beyond the bare facts that Mazzucata had appeared in Italy, Vienna, Paris, and now London, with great success, I was quite in the dark regarding her previous history. Nowadays a public person's private life is known to all, thanks to society papers, who search into matters better left alone, but hitherto Mazzucata had escaped their pryings, and beyond the gossip of clubs, little was known of her life or personality. As to the latter she was reported to be a singularly charming woman, attractive in the highest degree, not so much on account of her undeniable beauty, as for a certain magnetic influence she exercised over all who came in contact with her. Her life, according to common report was not by any means a blameless one, as she was said to affect the society of rich young men, and having squeezed all their money out of them, let them die broken-hearted at her scorn. Not that I believe any young men of the present day ever died of a broken-heart; but whatever might be the cause of their death, it was undeniable that all who had anything to do with this modern Lamia, either perished in the flower of their youth when she tired of them; or were ruined through her extravagant caprices which in many cases were scarcely those of a sane woman.

All this information, however, I had gained from the gossip of clubs. It was not to be found in the papers, and the general public knew nothing of Madame Mazzucata save that she was a great artiste. Now, however, the tragic event of her death would inspire the press to find out and publish all they could about her, in which case something would be found in her past life which would probably point to a reason for the manner of her death. In an ordinary case I would have left all this unravelling to the papers, the detectives, to whomsoever it might concern, but having witnessed the death of the singer I was unwilling to await such a slow method of solving the mystery and therefore determined myself to find out the cause of the crime. In two weeks I had detective fever.

So far, so good, but the question was how was this fever to be cured: and the obvious answer was, by finding the assassin of Mazzucata and handing him over to justice. The reason of the crime was to be found in her past life, so the first thing to be done was to seek information on this point from someone who had been intimate with her before she came to England. To find such a person I had not far to go. In fact, two persons who could give me information were at hand, namely, Lawrence Dallas and Gilbert Tressinger.

Now, what struck me as curious about these two young men was that each on the previous night had carried a bouquet of white flowers, and both bouquets had been thrown to Mazzucata shortly before the fatal event. Could it be possible that in one of these bouquets had been concealed the dynamite cartridge which caused the death of the singer? I could not believe it, as I deemed both my friends incapable of such a crime; and yet, when I recalled Dallas' wild words regarding his intention of killing Mazzucata should she prove false to him, I confess that doubts began to creep into my mind.

"Dallas said he would kill her if she loved Tressinger," I said to myself, as I dressed slowly, "but when he did not know the truth of that until he met Tressinger, and between such meeting and the explosion he never left my side, therefore could not have prepared the bouquet with the intent of killing her. No, that infernal machine which formed the handle of the bouquet must have been carefully constructed, and as Dallas, in spite of his wild words, had no reason to think Mazzucata false until he met Tressinger, he could not have brought the flowers with the dynamite cartridge concealed therein. Clearly then Dallas had nothing to do with the death; and as to Gilbert—"

I sent Pointer out of my room at this moment, for having the habit of talking aloud to myself, I noticed that he was eagerly listening, and not willing to admit him so far into my confidence, I got rid of him by some trivial excuse, and resumed my soliloquy.

"As to Gilbert there is no doubt he did not commit the crime, for he had no reason to do so. It was Mazzucata's favorite lover, and doubtless had seen her just before the performance, so even granted he wished to kill her, he would hardly have done in public what he could have done in private. But there, such arguing is ridiculous—he had no reason to murder her, and therefore must be innocent. Dallas, even though he wished to kill her, had no time to prepare his infernal machine, therefore must also be innocent. It is apparent that neither of these young men is responsible for the death of Mazzucata, so the assassin must be sought elsewhere."

It was all very fine arguing in this manner, but there was absolutely no clue to start from, and until some clue was discovered, the assassin of Mazzucata would certainly escape the consequences of his crime. I had no doubt that by this time the matter was in the hands of the police, but notwithstanding this, seized as I was with detective fever, I determined to search for a clue to the crime myself, and with this intent left my room to call on Dallas.

"If anyone be acquainted with Mazzucata's past life it will be Dallas," I said to myself, as I walked along Piccadilly, "and he may be able to tell me of some jealous lover, some lyric rival, some unsuccessful suitor, who had a motive for desiring the death of the singer; once I find a motive for the crime, there will be no difficulty in tracing the criminal."

So I spoke, but, alas! too confidently, for I little knew how difficult was the task I had undertaken. It is just as well that detective fever is such a virulent disease, for were it not for the insatiable curiosity of the same, the strongest and boldest man would hesitate before venturing on such a difficult quest as searching for a criminal. The labor is intense, the fatigue terrible, and every nerve must be strained if the matter is to be brought to a successful issue. In spite of all dexterity and every care, the great factor in the discovery of crime is chance—and chance, although I knew it not, was guiding me in the right direction for the detection of Mazzucata's assassin.

"Dallas," I said to myself, as I went upstairs to his rooms in Half Moon street, "Dallas will be able to tell me what he knows of her life, and where he fails Tressinger may possibly supply the information, so by putting this and that together I may arrive at some conclusion. The question is whether Dallas will tell me all I wish to know."

I found the young man sitting in an armchair reading the Telegraph's account of the crime, and by his white set face, his clenched hand, his disheveled hair and red eyes, I saw that he was profoundly affected by the catastrophe which had robbed him of the woman he so much loved. With such a spectacle of despair before me, I knew it could not be Dallas who committed the crime, and yet in my heart there was a doubt, a doubt which could only be set at rest by his solemn assurance of innocence.

"Major Granby," he said, in a dull voice when I entered: 'you here? Well!"

(To Be Continued).

"What is this?" "A letter press. What did you think it was?" "I was in hopes you had decided to run those stock certificates you are trying to peddle through a wringer."—Pittsburg Post.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Commentary.—I. Sick people at the pool of Bethesda (vs. 1-4). 1. After these things (R. V.)—After the healing of the nobleman's son and other events of that time. Feast of the Jews—This has been spoken of by scholars as the "unknown feast" because there is given no information as to what feast it was. Early writers thought it was the Passover and that opinion is still held by some. Many suppose that it was the feast of Purim, held in commemoration of the escape of the Jews from slaughter in the time of Queen Esther. If it had been the Passover, it seems almost certain that John would have mentioned the fact. Jesus went up to Jerusalem—There were two motives that Jesus had in attending the feasts at Jerusalem. 1. He was careful to observe the Mosaic law. 2. On such occasions he would have an opportunity to reach great numbers of Jews from various regions. At Jerusalem he had previously met with opposition and that opposition had not ceased, but he had a mission there and unhesitatingly went to fulfil it. As the city is situated on much higher hills than Galilee, it is proper to speak of going up to Jerusalem. 2. By the sheep market—"By the sheep gate"—R. V. As there is no word in the text for market, it is as allowable to supply "gate" as "market," and, as in Nehemiah's time there was a gate that was called the sheep gate (Neh. 3: 1, 32; 12: 39), it is reasonable that it was the sheep gate. A pool—Bethesda—The name Bethesda is Aramaic, the form of the Hebrew language then used, means "house of mercy." Sick people received benefit here. The exact location of this pool is uncertain. The traveler is shown a large pool near St. Stephen's gate, which is declared by the priests in charge to be the pool of Bethesda. It is reached by a descent of thirty feet from the present level of the street at that point. Some believe that the pool of Siloam, which is fed by the Fountain of the Virgin, east of the walls of the city, is the pool in question. Having five porches—These were shelters constructed about the pool for the sick who came to the place.

3. A great multitude—The curative power of the water of the pool was supposed to be great. Then, as now, there were great numbers of sick people in Jerusalem. Impotent folk—Diseased persons. Halt—Lame. Withered—Afflicted with paralysis. Waiting for the moving of the water—The Revised Version omits this phrase and the following verse because these sentences are not found in some of the best ancient manuscripts. It is possible that some copyist inserted this portion as an explanation of v. 7. The moving of the water indicated that at that instant the pool had special curative powers. 4. An angel—Or messenger. Troubled the water—The messenger, or agency, for troubling the waters may have been the intermittent character of the springs which fed the pool. First—Not the first one only was healed, but as many as stepped into the water at once after the moving of the waters, were made whole, or sound. This was the belief the people held in the virtues of the pool of Bethesda.

II. An afflicted man healed (vs. 5-9). 5. A certain man—Neither his name nor his family connection is given. There is nothing in the narrative to show the social position of this man. He was afflicted with a bodily weakness of thirty-eight years' standing. From v. 14 it might be inferred that his infirmity was induced by his own sins. 6. Saw him lie—We are not told expressly why Jesus was at the pool of Bethesda, but it is natural to conclude that he was there for the purpose of performing the cure here described. There were many sick persons there, but the record speaks of his noticing the condition of this man only. A long time—He had been afflicted for thirty-eight years, but we are not told how long he had been lying by the pool. Wilt thou be made whole—Would you like to be made well? It is not often that a sick person is found who is not desirous of being made well; but the cases are many of those who are morally diseased who prefer to remain in that condition. 7. Sir—The sick man did not know Jesus, but he answered him respectfully, and doubtless hope began to arise in his breast. I have no man ... to put me into the pool—The curative power of the water lasted but a few minutes after being "troubled," and haste was necessary to enter the pool. He could go but slowly, unaided, and he had no friend to help him quickly into the water.

8. Jesus saith unto him—Jesus singled out this man, as we view the case, for two reasons. 1. He had been seriously afflicted for nearly forty years and he had lain for some time at the pool, hence his condition was known to very many in Jerusalem. 2. Jesus saw that he was in a condition of soul to accept his ministry and to exercise the necessary faith. Arise, take up thy bed, and walk—Jesus spoke directly to the impotent man, giving him a command that he of himself could not obey, and yet a command that he would gladly obey. The command came to him from Jesus with such force and assurance that he saw a new world opened before him. He was to arise, take up his sleeping mat and walk. It does not require much effort on our part to imagine the thrill that went through his entire being at the words of Jesus. This is one of the few recorded instances of healing that Jesus performed without a request to that effect by the afflicted one. 9. Immediately the man was made whole—The cure was wrought instantaneously. The man responded in desire and faith, and the power of Jesus wrought the cure. More than half a full lifetime had been spent in physical affliction, but now the man was completely restored to health. Took up his bed, and walked—This man who had been afflicted for thirty-eight years may have been told many times before this to take up his bed and walk, but was never able to do so until Jesus gave him the order. He acted his faith by taking up his sleeping-mat and walking.

III. The Jews finding fault (vs. 10, 12-16). 10. The Jews therefore said unto him, etc.—There is no record that the Jews congratulated the cured man upon his restoration to health and strength or that they praised God for what he had done. Apparently all they could see was what they considered a violation of the law regarding the observance of the Sabbath. His bed was simply a heavy blanket, or a thin mattress, that he could roll up and carry easily under one arm. The following are a few passages bearing upon Sabbath observance among the Jews: Exod. 20: 8-10; Neh. 13: 19; Jer. 17: 21, 22. What man is that which said unto thee. The Jews first criticised the man for carrying his bed on the Sabbath and then inquired who told him to do it. They would have been more reasonable if they had made the inquiry first. 13. Wist not—Knew not. Jesus had conveyed himself away—There were many in the porches around the pool and Jesus moved away in the crowd before the healed man learned who he was. It is not improbable that Jesus wished to pass unnoticed from the place lest he should be thronged and great opposition should be raised against him. 14. Jesus findeth him in the temple—The man seems to have gone at once to the sanctuary, perhaps a privilege of which he had long been deprived. They who are healed from sickness should seek the sanctuary of God, and give him thanks for his mercy. There is nothing more improper when we are raised up from a bed of pain than to forget God, our benefactor, and neglect to praise him for his mercies.—Barnes. Thou art made whole; sin no more—Jesus had a further word to say to the man whom he had healed. Health had come to his body and Jesus exhorted him to sin no more, indicating that his bodily affliction may have been caused by sinful indulgence. There came spiritual blessing to him in connection with his physical healing. He was warned against falling again into sin. 15. The man ... told the Jews that it was Jesus—He promptly testified to the mercy and power of Jesus in healing and curing him. This stirred up the Jews to persecute Jesus, and Jesus delivered to them his remarkable discourse on his Sonship with the Father.

Questions.—From what place did Jesus go up to Jerusalem? For what purpose did he go? Whom did he find at the pool of Bethesda? Describe the scene at the pool. What criticism did the Jews offer? Where did Jesus next meet the healed man? What did he say to him? What testimony did the healed man give? What was the effect upon the Jews?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic—A miracle of mercy.

I. Performed for bodily healing.

II. Included the saving of a soul.

I. Performed for bodily healing. Attention is directed to a man who had been a great sufferer for half a lifetime, a friendless outcast, touching the lowest depths of human wretchedness; for years a disappointed seeker after health. Misery, helplessness and hopelessness were combined in his life. Jesus understood the man and his malady. His first words were an affectionate inquiry, the extending of a gracious invitation with the expression of conscious power. His question was designed to shake off the apathy of years and to revive hope in the afflicted man. It was intended to draw his mind from Bethesda waters and to bring him into touch with himself. The question brought from the sufferer a sad tale of human helplessness on his part and human selfishness on the part of others. The most helpless one and the one farthest from the reach of human assistance, answered well the purpose of Jesus in revealing himself as the Son of God. In his command was the voice of divine power, authority and mercy. He brought healing when the arm of flesh had failed. The cure was perfect and immediate. He touched the chord that needed to vibrate. He aroused a dormant faculty, whose exercise was essential to a cure. The word of healing was also a word of command. The sick man's healing depended on his turning from the pool to Jesus, though at first his expectation had been that Jesus would help him into the waters of the pool. The command to arise and leave the place required faith, which proved itself by practical activity.

II. Included the saving of a soul. The pitiable condition of the suffering cripple, the prolonged duration of his distress, his utter helplessness and despondency enlisted no help from the Jews. They had no true sympathy with suffering, neither had they any true conception of the nature of the Sabbath. They were prompt to observe any violation of rabbinical dictation or the letter of the scriptures, as they defined them. The healed man was censured and charged with obeying a Sabbath-breaker, thus making his physician a greater sinner than himself. It was a serious charge, for it involved the punishment of death by stoning. The healed man could not defend his action for his enemies were learned in the law, while he was not. His only argument was that the cure made the Healer an authority above the greatest rabbi. He emphasized the miracle rather than the Sabbath-breaking, while his accusers passed unnoticed the great gift of restored health, and magnified an imagined infringement of Mosaic law. They sought to weaken and undermine any influence which Jesus had exerted over the cripple whom he had healed. This miracle marked the beginning of the angry unbelief on the part of the Jewish rulers. It was the occasion for that great utterance which Jesus gave concerning his Sonship and his divine working. He put his own work side by side with the Father's, as the same in principle, the same in method, the same in purpose, the same in its majestic repose and energy. He repudiated the ordinance which rendered criminal a natural and necessary action. His vindication was based on three facts: the supreme Lawgiver ceased not from Sabbath activity; he stood toward that supreme Sabbath worker in the relation of Son; as such he was co-worker with God in all that God did. He held that the law of the Sabbath is a law of a Being who never rests from doing good. The miracle had a beneficial effect upon the persecuted man, for he went to the temple, thus indicating his desire to worship. There he came to understand who had restored him to health, and from him learned the need of divine grace. Being healed, Jesus bade him be holy. It was he who had relieved him of his infirmity, who met him in his attempt at worship, and gave new direction to his powers. Prompted by gratitude to Jesus, with a desire to make him known to others in distress, and with the hope of bringing the Jews to recognize him in his true character, the enlightened and restored man left the temple to declare openly that Jesus was his benefactor and Redeemer. While he stood as a living witness to Jesus as the Messiah, the enmity of the Jewish rulers increased and their designs against Jesus took more decided shape.

T.R.A.

Porto Rico produced more than 182,000 short tons of sugar last year, the greatest output ever recorded for the island.

Ethel—I'll back out and let you marry the wretch. Marie—Why do you do that? Ethel—He proposed to both of us, and I want to see him punished.—Boston Transcript.

The accompanying model is carried out in some soft art shade of brown or green velvet, the full graceful lines of the suit, the novel trimming of beaver on the collar, cuffs and quaint pockets makes a striking finish. Note the soft effect of the loose bob tassel belt accentuating the absence of all hard lines.

Some Ways to Serve Apples

Now that the cost of living is so greatly advanced and is steadily rising, it is a matter of economy to fall back on the apple as a healthful helper in furnishing further the daily food supply. The following apple recipes are both tasteful and timely:

APPLE ORANGE FRAPPE.

Entirely new. Make a syrup by boiling together for twenty minutes one and a one-half cupfuls of sugar and four cupfuls of water, add one pint of sweet cider, one pint of well flavored sweet apple sauce, one-half cupful of lemon juice and two cupfuls of orange juice. Cool, strain and freeze to a mush. Serve in glasses, a sprig of mint or a few shreds of candied orange peel as decoration for each glass.

APPLE SAUCE.

Toward spring apples are apt to become somewhat tasteless, and the flavor is improved in cooking if a suggestion of spice is added. For eight cooking apples allow one quarter teaspoonful of cinnamon, or one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg with one tablespoonful of lemon or two tablespoonfuls of orange juice. Wash, quarter and core the apples—if red, and a pinkish sauce is desired do not peel. Put in an enamelled saucepan with one cupful of water, one cupful of sugar and the seasoning. Cook, covered, until apples are soft. Press through sieve. If desired to serve apples in shape, make a syrup by boiling the sugar and water together for seven minutes, add seasoning and the apple quarters (peeled)—enough to cover the bottom of the saucepan; watch carefully during cooking and remove as soon as soft. Continue until all are cooked. Strain remaining syrup over apples.

APPLE MOLD.

Boil one pound of sugar in one-half pint of water until it makes a thin syrup. Peel, core and thinly slice two pounds of good flavored apples that will cook soft easily. Add apples to the syrup, with the juice of one lemon and zest of half a lemon and half an orange. Cook until stiff. Watch carefully that it does not burn. Pour the mixture into a wet mould. Next day turn out and serve with a custard. A tablespoonful of granulated gelatine dissolved perfectly in water may be added to the apple mixture as soon as it becomes smooth; mould at once. This will considerably shorten the time of cooking.

A very attractive dessert may be made by putting a teaspoonful of melted currant jelly in each well round individual mould or small cup and pouring the hot apple in. When set and turned out the apples will be prettily colored. A green coating may be given by sprinkling with chopped pistachio nuts, or with the green part of candied citron.

APPLE BUTTER.

Boil ten gallons sweet cider in a brass kettle until reduced to five gallons; take one bushel apples, pare, core and quarter, and put them into the boiled cider and when soft stir constantly with a wooden spoon until finished. Four hours will be required if cooked slowly. Add cinnamon and cloves to taste and remove from fire. While hot, pour the butter in a well glazed crock or stone jar and set away to cool.

ROSE APPLES.

Put on in saucepan two gills water, three tablespoonfuls sugar, the juice of half a lemon. Take six large apples about one size, pare and core them and when the syrup comes to the boil put in the apples and let them simmer very gently until quite cooked. Lift them out carefully. Add to the syrup half a dozen drops of carmine. Put in glass dish and serve with whipped cream over top.

APPLE MERINGUE.

Stew about half a dozen of tart apples, pass them through the colander and sweeten to taste; to a pint of the soft pulp stir in the whites of three eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, flavor with the grated rind and the juice of a lemon, and serve with a custard made of the yolks of the three eggs and a pint of milk.

DATE APPLE SAUCE.

When making plain apple sauce add dates stoned and cut in two. They give a delicious flavor and change an otherwise plain dish to a welcome dessert.

FRIED APPLES AND ONIONS.

Use twice as many rather sour apples as onions. Slice the apples without paring them and also slice the onions fine, and fry them together in butter, being careful to keep the pan covered to hold the steam, which will prevent burning. While cooking sprinkle slightly with sugar to give added flavor.

APPLE SAUCE CAKE.

One cupful of sugar and a half cupful of butter, creamed, two cupfuls of seeded raisins or cleaned currants; one and a half cupfuls of unsweetened apple sauce, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, a little nutmeg, one and a half teaspoonfuls of soda, a little salt, enough sifted flour to make a medium stiff batter. Mix well and bake.

BAKED APPLES.

There are numerous ways of baking apples to make a delightful dish, using either sour or sweet fruit. Earthen or porcelain vessels should be employed; never tin, as the acid of the fruit will be liable to act upon it. By removing the cores of whole apples and filling the cavities with raisins and other delicacies, as the wit of a bright woman will easily suggest, the variations may be extended indefinitely.

APPLEADE.

A refreshing drink is made by baking three or four sour apples, mashing them in a porcelain dish, adding half a cupful of sugar, and pouring boiling water over them. When cold, strain, and sweeten to the taste. A still simpler way is to stir a tablespoonful of apple jelly into a tumblerful of cold water.

APPLES AND CREAM.

A very pleasant breakfast dish, with the oatmeal, may be made of fresh mellow, uncooked sweet apples, pared, sliced, and covered with sweet cream, a light sprinkling of sugar being added.

ENOCH ARDENS OF GREAT WAR

Many Cases Have Developed in French Armies.

Widows May Be Prohibited Remarriage During War.

There is a notable multiplication of domestic dramas of the type familiar to us through Tennyson's "Enoch Arden," and to the French in Balzac's "Colonel Chabert," who, lost on a Napoleonic battlefield, returned home to find his wife remarried to a nobleman of the Restoration, says the Paris correspondent of the London Chronicle.

Thus, a Madame D——, of Arras, was informed at the beginning of the war that her husband had been killed. Removing to Paris, she waited some months, and then married her brother-in-law. The household is now expecting a child, and the first husband is on his way back from Germany.

M. Charles le Goffic cites other cases in the Liberte.

"In a small commune near the Channel two soldiers' wives remarried in this way. The death of their first husbands was registered, and all the papers were in order. But these husbands reappeared one fine morning, both of them with amputated limbs.

"More curious is the tale of the Breton soldier, whose arm, cut off by a shell, was found on the battlefield, while the rest of him had disappeared. As the arm carried the identification plate, the owner was reported dead. The wife received a certificate to this effect, and was permitted to remarry. The first husband, however, proves to be alive, and inclined to insist upon his rights."

But the most unfortunate of these tragic misadventures was found in Switzerland recently, in one of the parties of seriously wounded soldiers returned from Germany. A French visitor stopped before an unfortunate fellow whose face was so disfigured as to seem no longer human. He asked if he could do anything for the sufferer, if he could seek his family and tell them.

"Useless," was the reply. "He is dead."

The soldier had risen to the heroic delicacy of deciding that, rather than horrify those he loved, he would have them to believe he was dead.

There is a ray of light in this case, for the surgeons hold out hope of great improvement, and if it is accomplished their patient will give up his name and come to life again. "But, perhaps," adds M. le Goffic, "it may be then too late."

This is no question of a few curious disasters. It is said, with some show of authority, that there are 70,000 French prisoners in Germany who have not been able to communicate with their families. The French law requires ten months of widowhood before remarriage. The question is being asked whether this delay should not be extended, and Maitre Henri Robert, the eminent pleader, is one of those who think that soldiers' wives should not remarry before the end of the war.

CRUSHING OATS UNPROFITABLE

Makes Little Difference to the Work Horse.

Cost of Doing So is Merely Waste.

(Experimental Farms Note).

The practice of crushing or grinding oats for horses is increasing. The best authorities have for years contended that grinding oats for draft horses does not pay, and if the meal is made too dusty or fine it may often be injurious.

However, the practice of rolling or crushing has largely replaced grinding in many districts. Many large city companies are now using crushed grain, and report favorably as to its economy. Advocates of oat crushing claim great benefits therefrom, such as:

1. Increasing the percentage of digestibility of oats for horses on hard work and having little time for feeding.
2. Greedy feeders are made to eat more slowly.
3. Horses with bad teeth are assisted to digest the grain properly.
4. That twenty-five per cent. of grain fed whole is not digested, and is lost in the manure unless crush is adopted.
5. Proper crushing leaves the gr free from dust and fine meal.
6. Crushing exposes the grain m fully to the digestive juices, thus ing digestion.
7. That crushing even at a con erable cost is profitable in that gr is saved and that horses are health

These and other arguments are u by advocates of crushing oats horses. Considering the high cost grain and also of crushing, it been considered advisable to con an experiment along this line. The results of this trial given herewith bear to answer conclusively most the above stated claims.

RESULTS OF EXPERIMENT.

Five teams of horses were selec for this experiment and these w fed experimentally for eight mont starting in October, 1915. The obj of this trial was a comparison of t same quantity by weight of whole an crushed oats. One horse from ea team was started on crushed, and th mate on whole oats, thus insuring a fair comparison as to work performed on each feed. At the end of each month the feeds were reversed in each team. Careful records and weights were kept as to the feeds consumed. All horses received their usual supply of hay, water and salt. Horses were weighed each week.

As all experiments and practical trials have proven the value of some bran in a grain ration the following mixture: Oats 5 parts, bran 1 part, was adopted for both the whole and crushed oats.

The first week of each month, the transition period, was disregarded in compiling results. The following observations were made:

1. The gains and losses in the weights of the horses were closely related to general health and vigor.
2. No horses became fat, but remained in good condition, in spite of extra heavy work in fall, spring and early summer, and regular work in the winter.
3. During the whole trial the gains or losses in weight were approximately the same for both whole and crushed grain.
4. The slight difference in weights was in favor of crushed grain, but amounted only to 125 pounds gain for ten horses fed half the time in crushed grain during the eight months.

This is .16 pound per horse per day. At the average charge of $2 per ton for crushing, such slight gains would cost 1 1-3c per pound. However, no difference was apparent in health or general condition.

5. When bran was mixed with the whole oats, the horses could not eat too rapidly owing to the dry flakey character of the bran.
6. When horses were properly watered, and not fed too much hay, whole grain was found in but very small quantities, when at all, in the manure.
7. Both from the weights and appearance of the horses and the condition of the manure, crushing did not appreciably increase the digestibility of oats.
8. Whether fed crushed or whole grain, horses must have sufficient time after meals to start digestion at least if time is short, feed less rather than allow too rapid eating of the regular feed.

In conclusion, it seemed to be definitely shown that, to horses fed in the proper manner, the crushing of oats had little if any advantage, and was unprofitable. In other words, the cost of crushing is wasted.

"What's that you've got all over your ears, Baggs." "That's the trouble with pumpkin pie! I just been eating a piece."—Browning's Magazine.

WHOOPING COUGH

The Infant's Most Dangerous Disease.

Whooping Cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than in male children.

Whooping Cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop," Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, and weeks of suffering prevented, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. Nellie Bailey, Amherst, N.S., writes: "I have much pleasure in saying that there is no cough syrup like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. My little girl took whooping cough from a little girl who has since died with it. I tried lots of things, but found Dr. Wood's to give the greatest relief. It helped her to raise the phlegm, [illegible] now better. My young brother is also taking the [illegible] and I am getting 'Dr. Wood's' to [illegible]."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Refuse substitutes.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WAS WEAK and RUN DOWN

SUFFERED WITH "NERVES."

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak and the nerves unstrung it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and you will find that in a very short time you will become strong and well again.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FARM GARDEN

FEEDING COWS FOR MAINTENANCE AND MILK.

Some years ago the Missouri Experiment Station conducted a test with a dairy cow to determine if possible what bearing the inherent milk-producing characteristics had on her ability to produce milk, even provided she had given no feed with which to make it.

The cow was on test for thirty days after freshening, and was fed only enough to satisfy maintenance requirements. So strong was her inherent stimulation that instead of milking poorly she took that feed which should have gone to maintenance and used it for the production of milk. As a result she was so emaciated and weak at the end of the period that she could hardly stand, yet she had produced in the month approximately the same amount of milk as she had in the corresponding thirty days of her previous lactation period when she had been fed enough to meet both production and maintenance requirements. Her inherent tendency to produce milk had been so strong that she had ruined her body, but had not stopped giving milk.

This inherent ability to produce milk is present in every dairy cow to a certain extent, and should be given a chance to develop at a time of freshening. One of the greatest mistakes made by dairymen is in feeding cows heavily the first month after they freshen. Most men believe that such a practice is necessary in order to make a cow come to her milk; but the test at Missouri demonstrates that it is not the feed that causes the milk secretion the first thirty days; it is the birth of the calf and the consequent need for her offspring.

A cow's ability to produce milk is limited by two factors: First, her inherent stimulus, as represented by her dairy breeding; second, her capacity to eat and digest food. A profitable producer must have both to a marked degree.

Purification is a severe strain on a cow's system, although in most cases no particular outward sign is visible. For months the blood has been flowing to nourish the growing fetus; then the calf is born and there is a quick change of blood from the fetus to the mammary organs. If at the same time heavy feeding is started an extra supply of blood is called to the digestive tract. Such a strain will not be apparent immediately, and the cow will seem to be doing well. But bad results will show later. About the sixth or eighth week the milk yield will drop several pounds and the milker will be puzzled to explain the reason. The explanation is simple: The strain of the heavy feeding early in her lactation period has had its effect, and her system has rebelled.

On the other hand, take the cow that has been carefully handled. When she has freshened feed has been given to her as her milk has increased. There has been no forcing to make her come to her milk; her natural stimulation has been allowed to take care of that. This cow will develop her milk-producing qualities and her digestive capacity at the same time, with no undue strain on either. When she reaches her full milk flow and her full feed at the fifth, sixth or seventh week she is there to stay because her whole system has been gradually developed and strengthened, and is in sympathy with the work that it has to do.

A pair of milk scales is indispensable at this time. A record of the cow's performance for the year is a splendid thing to have, but it is as a guide to the intelligent feeding of the cow that the scales stand pre-eminent. Hang the milk scales in a convenient place in the barn and watch the milk production after the cow freshens. Let the feed follow the milk for the first six weeks, rather than make the milk follow the feed. The results will not be startling for the first week or two; the cow's production will not jump two or three pounds daily, but when she does reach her limit she will stick to it.

SOME MEASURES.

One barrel contains 31 1-2 gallons.

One cubic foot of water contains 7.46 gallons.

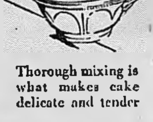
One gallon of water weighs about 8-1-3 pounds.

One pint of water weighs about one pound.

Pine weighs about 36 pounds per cubic foot.

Oak weighs about 45 pounds per cubic foot.

Concrete weighs about 150 pounds per cubic foot.



Thorough mixing is what makes cake delicate and tender makes the best cake because it creams quickly and thoroughly with the butter which is the hardest part of the mixing. Its purity and extra "fine" granulation make it dissolve at once.

Lantic Sugar

2 and 5-lb. Cartons
10 and 20-lb. Bags

"The All-Purpose Sugar"

MURAD CIGARETTES

Everywhere Why?

The blending is exceptional

S. Anargyros

COOKING FOR AN ARMY ON CANADA'S MILITARY "SPECIALS"

4,000 lbs. fresh meat and bacon.
1,200 lbs. beans.
1,500 loaves of bread.
60 bags of potatoes.
1,400 lbs. of sugar.
400 lbs. of coffee.
100 lbs. of tea.
300 gals. of milk.
600 lbs. of butter.
600 lbs. of oatmeal.
Some of the staples provided for a battalion en route Camp Borden, Ont., to Halifax, N.S.

Grand Trunk Commissary Car.

When the full account is written of Canada's participation in the war there will be no more interesting chapter than that dealing with the methods employed in transporting this great army of men from the training areas to the seaboard, over distances, in many instances, of thousands of miles, and thence from our Atlantic ports to the English camps and the trenches of Flanders and France. One side of this work which stands out most clearly is the use of the Military dining cars which have been specially created in Canada to provide our soldiers with meals while on their long railway journeys. No country in the world ever faced the problem of carrying over so great a distance by rail so many men and to meet the situation something new in railroad equipment had to be provided to attend to the cooking and serving of meals. The ordinary dining car, as compact as a watch in its arrangement, can feed thirty people at one sitting, but how to dine hundreds of men at one time was the problem. That it has been mastered in splendid fashion is a compliment to the dining car experts of Canada, and particularly to Mr. E. W. Smith, Superintendent of dining and parlor car service, Grand Trunk Railway System. So successful have been the methods adopted on the Grand Trunk that they have attracted the attention of authorities in all parts of the world and were recently inquired into by the United States Government.

The Grand Trunk Commissary Car shown in the illustration is the largest travelling kitchen ever devised. It is eighty feet long, has a full-sized hotel range ten feet in length, steam-cooking apparatus and sixty-foot refrigerator space and store-room capacity for many tons of provisions. [illegible] cooks work in it without confusion, while a passageway running the whole length of the car allows the military waiters to pass on their way to and from the coaches. In the movement of a battalion two of these cars are used, the military special being run, as a rule, in two sections. The commissary car is placed in the centre of the train in order that it is easy of access from all the coaches. When a battalion entrains the Commissary Department is always the subject of keen interest among the men in khaki. The military cooks are for the time being out of action. The comfort of the men, so far as diet is concerned, depends upon the railway's crew, in charge of a specially chosen steward. The system of service is explained to the soldiers for the steward at the first meal on the train. The non-commissioned officer of each coach appoints his own waiters. Punctually as the minute hand of the watch reaches the meal hour the waiters from the first car on the train and the last car walk through to the commissary. The cooks have been preparing for hours and everything is ready and piping hot. Along the great counter is spread the various portions of the meal. If it is breakfast time and the morning menu calls for oatmeal porridge, steak, potatoes, bread and butter, jam and coffee. Two men take the big trays of steaks and potatoes, another the bread, already sliced and buttered, another the porridge, another the coffee and so to the end. As soon as the first two coaches have been supplied two more squads of waiters arrive until all are served. Within fifteen minutes every man on the train is busy with his meal. Serving over twelve hundred men in fifteen minutes without fuss or [illegible] means organization and that is the secret of this railway's method of handling the problem. The rule is that every man shall be amply supplied and nothing delights the cook more than to see boys who have some favorite dish so well that they come back for "more." Three fine meals a day make happy interludes on the long rail journeys. The appreciation of the officers and men for the service given makes the hard work necessary in carrying out the task a pleasure to the men concerned.

Stone weighs from 135 to 200 pounds per cubic foot.

Seventeen cubic feet of clay weighs about a ton.

Eighteen cubic feet of gravel in bank weigh about a ton.

Twenty-seven feet of gravel, dry, weigh about a ton.

Lime weighs 75 pounds per bushel.

NOTES.

Sell the cream and feed the skim milk to the stock on the farm. This is the safest and best system of dairy farming, and it is made possible by a good dairy-size cream separator.

A man who isn't sufficiently interested in good breeding to familiarize himself with the fundamental principles which underly stock improvement will never make a successful cattle breeder, no matter how good his foundation stock.

There is no best time to prune a tree unless we define it as the time the orchardist sees the need of it. There are advantages in fall and winter pruning. The fruit grower is not so busy then with other work. Then the tree is dormant, so the fruit grower can see the branches and the general type and growth of the tree. It is easier to determine what branches should be removed and what leaders to train, how to balance the tree, open the head, etc., where there are no leaves.

Green maturing, turning under legumes and other green crops, in addition to either chemical fertilizers or stable manures will enable the farmer to maintain the fertility of his soil indefinitely. In fact, with this combination it is possible for him to increase the productiveness of his farm. Commercial fertilizers, lime and stable manures are all essential to profitable farming, but the growing of green manuring crops is the foundation of permanent soil improvement.

Speaking of the work of the Gloucestershire Regiment on the Somme, a staff officer now in London, writes:

Very little has been said about the work of some battalions on the Somme. The Gloucesters, for instance, have seldom been referred to except briefly in the official despatches. And yet they have performed deeds that will never die so long as the British Empire stands. They are called the "Glorious Gloucesters" by those out there who have seen their work and are no mean judges of the worth of such work. I saw them as they stood on the threshold of hell as it were, waiting for the order to enter and grapple with the foe, on the other side. They were magnificent. Not the slightest sign of hesitation. The youngest recruit carried himself like a veteran, and all were anxious to bring credit and honor to the country of their birth and the glorious old regiment under whose name they were fighting. The order to advance came. The Gloucesters sprang forward. They were assailed by a tempest of fire. The whole place seemed swept by the enemy's guns. Never a sign of flinching on the part of these noble lads. On they dashed into the thick of it. Comrades fell at every step. Still the survivors pressed on. The enemy's fire became more severe, and soon the Gloucesters were without the support of our own guns, which had ceased their fire as the attack was pressed home. It was now for the Gloucesters a race through a death-dealing tempest. They kept steadily on, paying little heed to the merciless fire that swept through their ranks. At last they reached the enemy's position. For a few minutes they were held up by barbed wire. It was only for minutes. Quickly the leading men got to work and cut a way through. All the time they were at work it rained death and wounds. These brave men kept on as long as life was left to them. Finally they made a lane through which their comrades were able to pass to victory. Quickly they forced their way into the enemy trench. With levelled bayonets or uplifted bombs they flung themselves on the foe. The latter strove with all their might to fling back the onrushing Gloucesters. They might have tried to hold back the Cornish express when travelling at its highest speed. The Germans were swept away by that angry tide of Gloucester heroism, and those who were lucky enough to escape death or wounds sought shelter in the dug-outs. For them there was not even a moment's respite. The Gloucesters were on them. Showers of bombs were rained on the dug-outs. Terrified Huns who escaped injury came rushing out to make their choice between surrendering and dying on the bayonets of the Gloucesters. Some preferred death to surrender, but the majority were glad to be captured. The first group of dug-outs cleared the Gloucesters dashed on to complete their work. A machine gun barred their progress. Without waiting for orders, three men of the battalion detached themselves from their [illegible] and rushed at the gun with uplifted hands. Simultaneously with the first rattle of the machine gun three bombs crashed through the air.

Three brave Gloucester lads went down, one never to rise again, but the German machine gun and its crew were wiped out. Then the Gloucesters pressed on, and before night they were masters of the whole trench. For three days after that they held it against repeated attacks of the enemy. The whole of the time the position was shelled by the enemy, and the attacks made were of the most furious description. During one of these attacks the enemy fought their way into the first line trench. The Gloucesters sprang forward with the bayonet to meet the attack. A hand-to-hand struggle of the most violent character ensued. Three times the enemy were flung out neck and crop. A fourth time they came to dispute possession with the weary Gloucesters. The Gloucesters were as keen as ever. They smashed that last attack with bomb and bayonet, and in doing it won their new name of the "Glorious Gloucesters."

Washington was a happy man because he was engaged in benefiting his race.—Lincoln.

PILES

You will find relief in Zam-Buk! It eases the burning, stinging pain, stops bleeding and brings ease. Perseverance, with Zam-Buk, means cure. Why not prove this? All Druggists and Stores—50c box.

Zam-Buk

Inflammatory Rheumatism Permanently Cured

NEW BRUNSWICK LADY GIVES FULL PARTICULARS OF HER RECOVERY.

There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.

It was this kind that almost killed Mrs. [illegible] Wartman, of [illegible], N.B.

Every known remedy she tried, different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.

Weak and despairing, she was at her wits' end when the remarkable cure of Thos. [illegible] was published. This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently, Mrs. Wartman used the same remedy. Here is her statement:

"For five years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints and muscles, these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame, and prevented me from working. Week by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased the painful joints, gave me energy and a feeling of new life. Ferrozone cured my rheumatism, cured it so that not an ache has ever returned. Even damp weather no longer affects me."

Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mrs. Wartman's statement proves this.

By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy, Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a CURE, order to-day, 50c per box, or six for $2.50, sold by all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

AMERICAN PEOPLE TO ALLIES.

If they tell you that we hold
Right and wrong are much the same,
That with equal share of blame
The defender of the fold
And the ravening wolf we name—
Don't believe it!

If they tell you that we think,
When the robber comes by night
And we see 'neath murderous Might Innocence unfriended sink,
We should be "too proud to fight"—
Don't believe it!

If they tell you we are cold
When strong men, and maids as brave,
Slay and life from bondage save—
We who ever [illegible] gold,
And our heart's blood, for the slave—
Don't believe it!

If—O gallant souls and true!—
If they tell you we judge well
Ways of Heaven and ways of Hell;
That the honor dear to you
Also in our souls doth dwell—
Oh, believe it!

If they tell you our heart's cry
That, whate'er the danger near,
One, one only [illegible] we fear,
And are ready, [illegible]
For the things that you hold dear—
Oh, believe it!

—Florence Earle Coates in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Does a coal merchant always have the right of weigh?

Poultry World

CHICK RAISING FOR WOMEN.

On many of the farms, especially in the west, the poultry is given in charge of the women of the household. It is work naturally adapted to women; it calls for patience and attention, and at the same time kindness and gentleness—traits that do not always dwell in the sterner sex.

There is no event in connection with poultry culture during the year, which has not its interest for those who care for innocent creatures of the farm yard—whether it is feeding the stock, gathering the eggs, hatching out the chicks, or culling the flocks in the fall to meet the capacity of the winter quarters. They all have their charm, and excite the interest and sympathy of those who have a love for the work.

Physiologists tell us that American women lose health and beauty earlier than they should, for want of sufficient out-of-door air and exercise. Whether or not this is true, we may be certain that the poultry business has among its other benefits the virtue of sending the caretaker into the pure outer air, and inciting a love for natural beauty no found among those whom no such duty tempts from the fireside.

FORM PARTNERSHIP.

It seems that woman is fitted by nature to care for young animals; her instincts teach her to understand their wants. Consequently, when she becomes interested in any living creature neither time nor labor is spared to promote its welfare. It can also be said that woman is much more ingenious than man and quicker in devising new ways and means of doing things. Tom Barron, the English poultry raiser, who came to America in 1914 and delivered a lecture before a poultry convention held at Storrs, Conn., dwelt at considerable length on this very subject. It will be remembered that Mr. Barron, previous to his visit here, won in one everlasting contest after another, and it made our poultrymen sit up and take notice.

As Mr. Barron said, when he concluded to go into the poultry business he felt he must consult Mrs. Barron. He talked the matter over with her because he believed that a good wife could be of great help in this line. She encouraged him, and he was confident of success with her help. "I can tell that I would not have been where I am today only for my wife," was the way Mr. Barron put his tribute. "Many times a sensible woman can help a man out of a hole a great deal better than a lot of friends."

NOTICES DETAILS.

I like this wife-partnership, and I believe, with Barron, that if a man takes his wife into his confidence he seldom goes wrong. She is more careful and quick to notice details. Poultry culture is a business of details.

A woman of my acquaintance who devotes a few moments daily to three dozen hens kept in a small pen clears [illegible] a year, which is her "pin money."

Another instance is told of a woman who raised 700 chicks from [illegible] hens in one season and sold [illegible] worth of eggs during the same period. The following autumn she disposed of [illegible] worth of stock.

Two young women are, [illegible], hatched 375 chicks, lost [illegible] of them. From [illegible] hens reserved they netted a profit of [illegible] in the sale of eggs and surplus stock.

A quarter of a mile from the home of the writer lives a middle-aged woman who averages [illegible] a week raising broilers and selling table eggs. Her trade is entirely local, which she supplies daily with from 100 eggs. Her broiler orders generally come on Saturday and it keeps her pretty busy killing and dressing stock for those orders. Not more than 175 head of breeding stock is kept and all of the work is done at regular hours so arranged not to interfere with household duties.

PAYS HER TAXES.

I have the [illegible] of another poultrywoman here in New Jersey who, with 50 hens, is able to pay taxes, insurance and other minor bills.

Years ago I visited a farm in New England, owned and managed by two spinsters. With 500 hens these women made a good living. They did all their own work, such as running the incubators and brooders, feeding and caring for the stock, besides performing all the household duties.

In the writer's experience some of the most successful broiler raisers were women. I know of one woman who raises and markets 500 broilers a year. I could cite many more instances, such as the wives of laborers devoting a portion of their time to raising fowls for market, realizing enough to pay the rent, or buy the groceries, or clothe the children. Again, I know of women who were compelled to support the family on account of an invalid husband, or some other misfortune and where raising and selling eggs and table poultry solved the difficulty. And I know of another case where a woman earned enough money from her hens to pay for her son's education at college.

HEN IS MORTGAGE LIFTER.

Here is a story that shows quite forcibly what can be done. It happened in the writer's own town. A certain farmer made dairying the feature of his farm; he did not have sufficient ready money, so he put a mortgage of $130 on the farm. He bought 12 cows and retailed the milk to residents of the town. He had to work hard, and yet he found a little spare time to raise some vegetables and fruit. He was reasonably successful, but there were so many things he needed that he was unable to cut down his mortgage. In the meantime his wife kept poultry. She began with a flock of pure breds and eventually enlarged her flocks into hundreds. The enterprise being her own, she bought and paid for the feed and saved the income. She never told her profits to her husband. For that matter he never thought much of her enterprise.

The debt of the farm, small as it was, continually worried the farmer, and his wife noticed it. One morning she told him she was going to lift the mortgage. He smiled, thinking she was joking. When she produced the ready cash he could scarcely believe his own eyes. To this day that farmer has the greatest faith in hens.—Michael K. Boyer, Poultry Editor of The Farm Journal.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Magic Baking Powder costs no more than the ordinary kinds. For economy, buy the one pound tins.

MADE IN CANADA

E.W. GILLETT COMPANY LIMITED
WINNIPEG TORONTO ONT. MONTREAL

HOLD UP YOUR HEAD.

It Will Stimulate You Mentally as Well as Physically.

In a letter to Robert Grimshaw of the New York University, William Muldoon gives advice that it would be well for every man and woman, boy and girl in America to take to heart. He says:

"I was taught in early manhood not to [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] a brighter outlook."

LITTLE WORRIES IN THE HOME

These Bring the Wrinkles and Pallid Faces That Make Women Look Prematurely Old.

Almost every woman of the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. The care of her little ones, the work about the house all contribute a share of these worries. Most of them may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but they constitute a constant strain that affects the blood and the nerves and makes women look prematurely old. The effect of these little worries may be noticed in sick or nervous headache, fickle appetite, tiredness after slight exertion, and the coming of wrinkles which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy cure, a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a hearty appetite and a sense of freedom from weariness. Among the many thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and strength through these pills is Mrs. [illegible], Acton West, Ontario, who says:—"I am the mother of three children and after each birth I became terribly run down. I had weak, thin blood, always felt tired and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse, and was very badly run down. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills, and soon gained my old time strength. Indeed, after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones and have found them a splendid medicine for childhood ailments."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can procure them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Furniture Again.

Good designs and pleasing woods are the rule and not the exception.

There is a great deal of the popular period furniture—but don't mix your periods indiscriminately!

There is much handsome dining-room furniture, too—furniture vies with food nowadays in importance, and one could almost enjoy a poor dinner served in a well-furnished dining room.

For the living room and library there are great sofas and comfortable davenports, inviting looking chairs and tables of pleasing designs.

It would seem that tastes in general have improved—that of the public surely and certainly the shopkeepers and the manufacturers'.

OYSTERS AND MACARONI.

Ever try it?

It is very good.

Have a kettle of boiling water.

Throw in four ounces of macaroni.

Cook 20 minutes, drain and throw into cold water.

This whitens and swells it. Drain again and cut in inch lengths.

Now drain and wash the 25 fat oysters and get out a baking dish.

Cover the bottom with the boiled macaroni and then a layer of oysters, and dust with salt and pepper.

So continue until the dish is full, the last layer being macaroni.

Then sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of Parmesan cheese and then with bread crumbs. Add bits of butter and baste with milk, baking 20 minutes.

"Here, you! What do you mean by telling that red-nosed bachelor friend of yours that marriage is all a lottery?" "I was just about to assure him, m'dear, that I won a prize."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WORKED WRONG WAY.

His Efforts to Be Famed for Courtesy Met With a Check.

"You read in the papers now and then," said the sad faced street car conductor, as a deeper shade of sadness crossed his face, "that some rich person had left a policeman or a conductor a fine legacy for being courteous to them. After I had read two or three of such things I made up my mind to put on an extra touch of courtesy in cases of old women and old men. I, too, had a chance offered me. A fine old lady took my car, and I helped her to find a seat and answered all the questions about how to reach Mercy street. She had to change from my car to another, and I tenderly helped her off the platform and gave her the most minute directions. For the next two days I felt that I would be named in her will, but then something happened that made me believe that I would not."

"And what happened?" was asked.

"I was called to head quarters on a complaint made by that very old woman I had used so nicely. She had entered a complaint of negligence against me, and I was called on to explain."

"But what excuse had she?"

"It was that I did not raise my cap to her when turning to get on my car after directing her. I have given up all hope of a legacy and gone back to my usual politeness and no more, as [illegible] all the grateful old women died off before I took the job."—Baltimore American.

Sore Corns Go!

Absolutely Painless

No cutting, no plasters or pads to press the sore spot. Putnam's Extractor makes the corn go without pain. Takes out the sting overnight. Never fails—leaves no scar. Get a 25c bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor to-day.

Gallagh Gap.

Gallagh Gap, and the spring sun shining
On Leinster's valleys far down below;
Gallagh Gap, and the hedges lining
The roadways, blossomed like [illegible] snow.

'Tis there I'd be with youth's comrades playing,
In gladness maying through sweet May days,
The gold-eyed primrose green banks arraying,
And daisies spangled in faerie maze.

Again I'd hear, as the wind came sighing
Across Mt. Leinster and [illegible]
The plovers fluting when day was dying,
And all the west was a magic glow.

'Tis there I'd be when the sun, new-risen,
Brought vales Elysian to raptured eyes,
And the spirit saw, from its clayey prison,
God's hand bedizen the seas and skies.

Too soon, alas, from those fair scenes banished
The friends of boyhood all passed away,
And youth's fond hoping too quickly vanished
In grief and groping when skies were gray.

Yet I still have visions that flash and quiver—
Dark gloom can never my soul enwrap—
For I see God's sunshine pour down forever
A golden river o'er Gallagh Gap.
—James B. Dollard, in Ireland.

Spring Silks.

And extremely gay they are, too.

There is a great deal of that heavy, oyster-white, crepy weave.

Striped tub silks in new colorings are also in evidence.

Taffetas, shimmering and colorful, chiffons, filmy and lovely, charmeuse and satins are also modish.

And the crepes-de-chine, [illegible], are enchanting and approved of Fashion.

They Made Him A Different Man

WHAT B. DRAPER SAYS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

His Troubles Were Numerous and of Long Standing, But Four Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills Drove Them All Away.

Fedley, Sask., Feb. 12—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills made me a different man." The speaker was Mr. Benjamin Draper, well known and highly respected here. He is a fine, healthy representative of the prairie province, and he says he owes his health to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was in bad shape all round when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mr. Draper continued. "My trouble came from hard work when I was young. My joints got stiff, my muscles cramped and I suffered terribly from a sore back. I was depressed and low spirited, I was always thirsty and I had flashes of light before my eyes.

"I had rheumatism and heart flutterings, my appetite was fitful, my memory was failing and I was troubled with shortness of breath. Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made me a new man."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured all Mr. Draper's troubles because they all came from sick kidneys. If you have any of his symptoms Dodd's Kidney Pills will help you.

WIT AND HUMOR

ONE WAY.

(Judge)

He—What my son needs is to get some will-power, somehow.
Neighbor—Oh, he'll marry.

THE REASON.

(Boston Transcript)

She—I wonder why men lie so.
He—Because their wives are so blamed inquisitive.

QUITE HUMAN.

(Baltimore American)

"The thermometer has a very human way of behaving."
"How is that?"
"When it once begins to take a drop it falls by degrees."

DOWN AND UP.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Getting down to brass tacks."
"Yes?"
"I see they're gone up."

A SELF-STARTER.

(Baltimore American)

"I'll bet you do some cranky thing to make your wife begin the [illegible]."
"Nothing in the cranky way [illegible]. She's a self-starter."

A GENTLE HINT.

(Boston Transcript)

Father—You have been running ahead of your allowance, Robert.
Son—I know it, dad. I've been hoping for a long time that the allowance would strengthen up enough to overtake me.

"LIT UP."

(Baltimore American)

"Did you see where they arrested a pedestrian because he wasn't lit up?"
"And they arrested me because I [illegible]."

OF TWO EVILS.

(Boston Transcript.)

Ma—I think Josephine had better start painting instead of music, then she won't make any noise practising.
Pa—Oh, I don't know. There's no end to noise, but pictures will last [illegible].

JANITOR'S VENGEANCE.

(Washington Star.)

"If I give you a box of cigars will you promise not to hand them to the janitor?" said the wife.
"I promise," replied the husband. "I did that last year and the flat was cold all winter."

AN EASY JOB.

(Puck)

"What are you doing now, Pete?"
"I'm collecting."
"Collecting what?"
"My thoughts."
"Gosh, you always were lucky getting light work."

A CAPITAL NEEDED.

(Baltimore American)

"Why is the official spelling of government with a big G?"
"Because they could hardly begin government without a capital."

BOTH AFRAID.

(Judge)

Nancy—I wonder why Tom and Elsie are behaving so strangely.
Sadie—Tom's afraid Elsie's going to propose, and Elsie's afraid Tom isn't.

THE CHAUFFEUR'S TASK.

(Life)

The Master—You look worried. What's the matter?
The Housekeeper—The nurse has just left, and there is nobody to wash the baby.
Master—Have the chauffeur do it. There isn't as much mechanism about a baby as there is about a car, anyway."

POVERTY.

(Boston Transcript)

The Reporter—The scene beggared description.
Editor—So I should imagine. Your description of it is very poor, at any rate.

TIME'S REVENGE.

(Boston Transcript)

"I wrote that poem to kill time."
"Well, you may be sure that Time will have revenge and kill the poem."

CAUSE FOR GLADNESS.

(Judge)

He—I guess they are glad they saved [illegible] a home.
[illegible]—Well, I guess! Why, if they hadn't what could they mortgage to get their car?"

SMITH'S GAIT.

(Baltimore American)

"Smith told me when he went out in the country in his new machine he struck quite a gait."
"He struck a lot of gates before he ran into a barbed wire fence."

New French Cottons.

They are sheer, fine voiles.

And in exclusive bordered designs.

The designs were all printed by hand.

Some new ones in unusual Egyptian patterns are interesting.

And there are more conventional designs, too—flowered effects and dots.

A BETTER WAY.

(Washington Star.)

"That diplomatist insists on a personal communication."
"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "maybe it will be a good thing to have him perform by [illegible] instead of by [illegible]."

KEPT COOL.

(Judge.)

Wilkins—Does your janitor keep his temper?
Watkins—Yes; time after time I have heard tenants call him names because their rooms were so cold and I have never known him to reply with any heat.

THE FIRST SPEAKER.

(Yonkers Statesman.)

Mr. Bacon—How was the Sewing Society meeting?
Mrs. Bacon—Very well attended.
"Did anyone speak?"
"Oh, yes."
"Who spoke first?"
"No one. They all spoke at once."

WISE HUBBY.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Hubby, I saved ten dollars today."
"Doing what?"

POETIC LICENSE

(Boston Transcript)

"Pa, what is poetic license?"
"It's the tacit permission given to poets to [illegible]."

ONLY ONE WAY.

(Judge)

Traffic Officer—You can't turn here. This is a one-way street.
Fair Motorist—Well, I'm only going one way.

"The world do move," mused old Kris, as he packed his Christmas car into his Zeppelin. "Just to think, I used to do this stunt with nothing but a string of reindeers and a sleigh."

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY • PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance . $2.00 (50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance . $1.50
France, paid in advance .... $2.50 ($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, MARCH 1st., 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE man who has potatoes and coal in his cellar knows what real happiness is.

+ + +

SOME of the best war news will become public only after the war is over and this is more particularly true of the operations of the navy.

+ + +

VERY often the man who can tell you where the churches are falling down is some old scalawag who has put many pant buttons on the collection plate that he was forced to stay at home.

+ + +

WONDER what would happen if some person went down the railroad yards and confiscated a car of coal belonging to the railway. It might be worth trying, just to see if the trick wouldn't work both ways.

+ + +

WAR has shown us many things, but even war could not quite curtain the sky or blot out the exultation with which we have followed the progress of our brave brothers and sons in their battle for the great things of the world's life.—Catholic Record.

+ + +

ROLLED oats leads all foods for food value according to scientific tests made by Prof. Harcourt of the O. A. C. A dollar's worth of oatmeal at present market prices will go as far as twenty dollar's worth of eggs or ten dollars worth of beefsteak. It has nearly three times the food value of potatoes and nearly twice that of white bread.

+ + +

WOODSTOCK Sentinel Review.—In London there is a movement to cut the salary of the police magistrate in two on the ground that the Ontario Temperance Act abolishing the sale of liquor in bar-rooms has left police magistrates with very little to do. This may be a little hard on the magistrates, but it is a fine advertisement for the Ontario Temperance Act.

+ + +

THE story is told of a certain lumberman's wife in a neighbouring town, who upon looking through her husband's correspondence, found in the waste paper basket, a fragment of a letter from a party whose daughter writes his correspondence, and who wanted some shingles. Noticing the lady's handwriting, of course curiosity was aroused at once, when, "Horrors" the letter read:—"Dear Mr. —Next time you come this way be sure to call and see me. I want about 25000 XXX." The innocent husband upon returning home that evening was met at the door by a frowning wife, who loudly demanded an explanation of his conduct and the name of this woman who wanted so many kisses.

+ + +

THE high cost of living certainly gets its dole from the head of a Chicago family by the name of Sharp, for when the good lady of the house undertakes to prepare a meal for her family, she peels a peck of potatoes, cuts up four loaves of bread, scrambles two dozen eggs or fries $3 worth of meat, boils five head of cabbage, measures out four quarts of coffee and sets the table for eighteen people. Mr. and Mrs. Sharp have sixteen children ranging from 21 years to 10 months, and the father and mother are 44 and 43 years old, respectively. During an interview recently, Mrs. Sharp said, "We use ten quarts of milk each day, we cook a peck of potatoes for a meal; ten loaves of bread a day, and it takes a bar of toilet soap to wash all the children." These figures may be correct, says the Guelph Mercury, but at the same time we imagine that it would be good business for them to consult a tape worm specialist some day.

+ + +

WHILE congratulating Sir William Hearst on the honor conferred on him in knighthood, Newton Rowell in his speech in the Legislature in reply to the address from the throne said: "I am sure that although we may not all agree in the wisdom of developing the system of titled honours on this side of the Atlantic, we will agree that when such things are being conferred the man who occupies the honored position of Prime Minister of this province is well deserving of such recognition." But Mr. Rowell proceeded to comment upon the recent conferring of the title of "Baron" upon a Canadian and said that a statement in the press pointed out that this was the first native Canadian resident of Canada on whom such a title had been conferred. "In the free democracy of Canada," said Mr. Rowell, "we are not improving conditions by imparting hereditary titles passing from father to son. If this is the first, I hope it may also be the last."

VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Continued on Page Eight

OWEN SOUND has appointed two assessors at a salary of $500 each.

+ + +

YOU will find profit, week by week, in reading the advertisements in the Telescope.

+ + +

BRACEBRIDGE hereafter will pay the two town papers $25 each for publishing the minutes of the Town Council.

+ + +

IT'S going to be quite the proper caper this year to have a garden plot, and go around airing superior knowledge about potatoes and carrots.

+ + +

THE Guelph Mercury Seer remarks:—Some men are classed as just common liars. Then again there are others who predicted an open winter.

+ + +

THE man with a few hundred bushels of spuds to dole out at 45c a peck doesn't need to worry about getting after any government contracts.

+ + +

FASHION letter this week says that skirts are going to be worn longer. In fact, some of the longer ones will reach almost to the knees.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

IF COLONEL Currie continue his present line of talk, to the effect that the Liberal party is an anti-war party, he is likely to get hurt—and if he does it will serve him jolly well right.—Hamilton Herald.

+ + +

THERE is a college in London for "Decayed Merchants." What is a "decayed merchant?" The following definition is suggested: 1. He is a merchant who thinks advertising adds to the cost of the goods. 2. He is one who dislikes to see new faces in his shop. 3. He does not train his staff for fear they will know as much as he does. 4. He believes in nobody's experience but his own. 5. He believes that the old ways are always the best.

+ + +

A COLLINGWOOD lady sent a pair of socks she had knit to the front along with a bale from her town. In the toe of one was a note bearing her address which in due time brought the following acknowledgement:—

Thanks, Lady, for the socks. Some fit.
I used one for a helmet and the other for a mitt.
Here's hoping to see you when I've done my bit,
In the meantime where in blazes did you learn to knit?

YOUNG LOCHINVAR

(As Revised for Use in the Movie)

"Oh, Young Lochinvar is come out of the West;
Through all the wide border his steed was the best."
And so forth and so forth; 'tis needless to quote
Any more of the verses which Walter Scott wrote;
Suffice it to say, what we're getting at here
Is a Lochinvar "movie," attuned to the ear.
The scene is the wedding; Young Lochinvar's there;
He's treading a measure with Ellen, the fair,
The bridegroom, of course, doesn't like it a bit,
And Ellen's old father is having a fit,
But Lochinvar laughs at the general gloom
And fox trots with Ellen the length of the room.
"One touch to her hand" when he gets to the door,
Then hey, to the saddle, with Ellen before!
Then hey, and away! (For Sir Walter? Nay, nay?
Young Lochinvar works for the Movies today.)
"There is mounting 'mong Graemes of the Netherby Clan."
They follow a gallop as fast as they can.
Young Lochinvar leads them—they're gaining—they shoot;
In short, it's a regular movie pursuit.
They come to a river; can Lochinvar swim?
Well, rather, a river is nothing to him.
He plunges right in, and he ducks when they fire,
For a pretty fair shot is sweet Ellen's old sire.
(They didn't have guns in Young Lochinvar's day?
No matter; they do, in a Lochinvar play.)
And when they emerge from the water, you bet
That Ellen, the fair, is alluringly wet,
You rather admire Young Lochinvar's taste,
As he puts a strong arm around Ellen's wee waist,
And tosses her up to the saddle once more
And beats it away on the opposite shore.
Again the pursuers—again the bang-bang
Of pistols discharged by that Netherby gang,
Again they are gaining—and Ellen's scared stiff
For the pathway it stops on the brow of a cliff;
But Lochinvar urges his steed with a blow
And leaps, ninety feet, to the torrent below.
The baffled pursuers arrive at the top
In time to be staggered by Lochinvar's flop,
And Lochinvar, getting the Netherby goat,
Makes good his escape in a gasoline boat.
He shoots seven rapids, himself at the wheel,
Then leaps from the bow to an automobile.
"So daring in love and so dauntless in war,
Have you e'er heard of gallant like Young Lochinvar?"

—A. H. F., in Puck.

GLAMIS

(Intended for last week)

The wedding bells are ringing in the East end of the burg.

Mrs. Neil McKinnon and family returned to their home near Riverdale on Thursday.

Mrs. Angus McLean is home from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Matheson of Southampton.

Miss Bertha McGregor has returned to her home in Sidewich, Alberta, after a two month's visit with relatives on 6th Con.

Mr. Wilson Carr of Paisley is working with Mr. J. K. McLennan.

Mr. Fiddes of Vesta, Sundayed at Mr. George Webb's.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Fisher of Didsbury, Alberta, have returned home after a few weeks' visit here among relatives and friends.

Mr. Dan A. McLean is on the sick list.

Pte. Ed. (Teddy) Chapman, of the 256th Railway Construction Battalion Toronto, was here last week bidding good-bye to his friends, and looking up recruits. His Batt. will soon go overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Carr, and Miss Margaret, Sundayed with friends near Dunkeld.

Miss Isabelle Cann of Port Elgin is a guest of her friend, Miss Mabel Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. George Webb celebrated their Silver Wedding Anniversary on Saturday last. A number of invited guests were present. All report a very enjoyable evening. Many Happy Returns!

Quarterly Services will be held in the Free Methodist Church, over the week end. District Elder Rev. D. Allan of Hamilton will be present.

Mr. Earl Percy, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. G. Percy, enlisted with an Ambulance Corp in Alberta. Earl's many friends wish him every success, and safe return.

Mr. Charles Graham returned from Sarnia on Tuesday with his bride. The young couple have the Good Wishes of many friends for a long and happy bon voyage through matrimonial life.

On Thursday last the Red Cross here made a small shipment of goods of 48 pairs of socks, 8 suits of pyjamas, and 42 pillow covers.

Miss Irene Colwell of Lorne, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. D. Robertson last week.

Mr. Thos. Colwell attended the funeral of Mr. Stanley of Kinloss, to Kincardine on Saturday.

Mr. Gordon Smith who was hired with Mr. Jas. Ferris, enlisted last week with the 256th Railway Construction Batt. and left for Toronto on Friday.

Miss Lily McKenzie of Kincardine is a guest of Misses Currie, 2nd Con.

Rev. and Mrs. De Mille and family returned from Sarnia on Tuesday.

We are sorry to report this week the death of one of our young men of this neighborhood in the person of Mr. Martin McKinnon, second youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKinnon 10th Con., who passed away at Kincardine Hospital on Saturday afternoon after a few weeks illness from a disease contracted while working in Fords Automobile factory in Detroit, Mich. His death was not unexpected as all medical services was of no avail. To the bereaved parents, brothers and sisters deepest heartfelt sympathy is extended in their sad bereavement. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to Purdy's Cemetery under the I. O. O. F. Order.

OTTER CREEK

Mr. Salomon Hillgartner of Hanover was a visitor at Mr. John Fenner's.

Mr. Wilfred Miller of Clifford was a business visitor here.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Grenzenbach were visiting friends out here.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Schumacher and daughter were visiting Mr. Phillip Greer who is laid up with a bad attack of blood poison in his foot.

On Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. John Teglar, after the close of the meeting, the Carrick Bible Union presented his daughter Lillian with a handsome Jardiniere and Lemonade set to show the appreciation of the Union for her work as assistant organist.

We must be coming back to ancient times because everybody finds their own path thro' fields, snow banks and pitch holes.

What might have proved a serious accident happened to a Doctor from Walkerton who was called to see a patient on the 15th. The road has been changing off and on through Mr. Hossfelds field. This was not the case before the sides were cut away. The Dr. not knowing this went straight on through the cut: the horse plunged into the snow and he had to cut some of the harness before he could get out. Then opened the fence into the field then a good Samaritan from Mildmay happened along and helped him out. The harness being cut the horse ran away down to Mr. South's mill where he rolled out but he hung on to Mr. John Smith's where he with great generosity gave the Dr. a harness so that the Dr. could get to see his patient about 12 o'clock at night. It seems gross carelessness on the part of the pathmaster who passes along that road most every day. Why not put up a notice so that people coming along after dark can see where they are going. The Dr. was the second one to come through here. If anything had happened to him he certainly would have sued the Township for damages because the public highway has to be passable for everybody.

Mr. Jno. Quantz of Listowel is renewing acquaintances and visiting friends in this vicinity.

Misses Lavina and Virginia Gress were visitors at Mrs. Klein's in Mildmay on Saturday.

JOHNSTON'S CORNERS

(Intended for last week)

Roy McCarter and Cecil McLeod have been shovelling snow for the Grand Trunk the past two weeks. They have taken the job of cutting fifty cords of wood for Wm. Reilley.

Joe Zettler, our livestock shipper, succeeded in getting cars again yesterday for another big shipment.

Miss Cecilia Rentz gave a small farewell party last week to a few neighbouring friends last week prior to leaving for Kitchener.

Several of our young folks are laid up with the grippe.

Miss Isabella Ernst is able to be out again after three week's illness with grippe.

HANOVER

The 39th Annual meeting of the Grey and Bruce Fire Insurance Co'y. was held on the 10th inst. The following officers and committee of management were re-elected:—Thos. H. O'Neill, President; A. MacCuaig, Vice-President; John Mills, Manager and Secretary and as additional members of the Executive Committee Wm. Glasser, D. McKinnon and T. H. Hunter.

Frederick Zinn, of Grand Rapids, Mich. who has been serving in the Foreign Legion in France, visited his grandfather Mr. Fredrick Zinn, last week while home on twenty-one days leave in this country. Mr. Zinn is a graduate in engineering of Ann Arbor University, is at present serving in the Flying Corps. He is enthusiastic over the effectiveness of the aeroplane and says that the aviator is really taking the place of the colonel in infantry fighting.

SOLWAY

Mrs. C. Fuller from Bolton, spent a few days last week at the home of her sister, Mrs. David Thompson.

Miss Adeline Spitzig from near Chepstow is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex Knoll here.

Miss E. McGarrity spent the week end at her home here.

Miss Mary Whitehead from near Walkerton is visiting at the home of her sister Mrs. B. Michell.

A very successful euchre party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Pat McGarrity at their home here on Friday night last in aid of the Red Cross. About eighty of their friends and neighbours were present and about $40 was realized. The first prizes were awarded to Miss Viola Hanmore of Vesta and Mr. Andrew O'Neil of Walkerton.

Mr. Alex Knoll's sale of farm stock and implements on Thursday last was well attended and Mr. Purvis the auctioneer secured the highest prices for everything sold.

HYDRO FACTS

Each of 101 Hydro Towns had a net surplus during 1916.

+

The Village of Granton, the smallest hydro user in Ontario, using less than 5 h. p. for 4 months only, had a net surplus of $165.98.

+

Hydro now uses over 200,000 h. p.

+

Hydro now represents an investment of over 40 millions.

+

Hydro towns had a total net surplus the past year of $900,000.

+

The municipalities having hydro plants in actual operation comprises 39 villages, 63 towns, 17 townships, and 20 cities. This does not include users of less than a year or new contracts.

+

Hydro power is supplying nearly 500 munitions plants with 80,000 h. p., the plants employing 40,000 people.

+

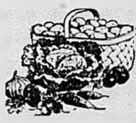
Hydro is relieving the coal famine to the extent of 1,000,000 tons per annum.

+

Hydro has applications for 63,000 horsepower more than it is able to supply.

☞ To City, Town and Village Dwellers in Ontario

A Vegetable Garden for Every Home



IN this year of supreme effort Britain and her armies must have ample supplies of food, and Canada is the great source upon which they rely. Everyone with a few square feet of ground can contribute to victory by growing vegetables.

Four Patriotic Reasons for Growing Vegetables

1. It saves money that you would otherwise spend for vegetables.
2.—It helps to lower the "High cost of living."
3. It helps to enlarge the urgently needed surplus of produce for export.
4. Growing your own vegetables saves labor of others whose effort is needed for other vital war work.

The Department of Agriculture will help you

The Ontario Department of Agriculture appeals to Horticultural Societies to devote at least one evening meeting to the subject of vegetable growing; manufacturers, labor unions, lodges, school boards, etc., are invited to actively encourage home gardening. Let the slogan for 1917 be, "A vegetable garden for every home."

Organizations are requested to arrange for instructive talks by practical gardeners on the subject of vegetable growing. In cases where it is impossible to secure suitable local speakers, the Department of Agriculture will, on request, send a suitable man.

The demand for speakers will be great. The number of available experts being limited, the Department urgently requests that arrangements for meetings be made at once; if local speakers cannot be secured, send applications promptly.

The Department suggests the formation of local organizations to stimulate the work by offering prizes for best vegetable gardens. It is prepared to assist in any possible way any organization that may be conducting a campaign for vegetable production on vacant lots. It will do so by sending speakers, or by supplying expert advice in the field.

To any one interested, the Department of Agriculture will send literature giving instructions about implements necessary and methods of preparing the ground and cultivating the crop. A plan of a vegetable garden indicating suitable crops to grow, best varieties and their arrangement in the garden, will be sent free of charge to any address.

Write for Poultry Bulletin

Hens are inexpensive to keep, and you will be highly repaid in fresh eggs. Write for free bulletin which tells how to keep hens.

Address letters to "Vegetable Campaign," Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Ontario Department of Agriculture
W. H. Hearst, Minister of Agriculture
Parliament Buildings Toronto

Commercial Printing

WE are in a position to handle all kinds of Commercial Printing with satisfaction to our customers.

Expert Workmanship. New Type. Moderate prices.

Try the Telescope for your next job of Printing.

TELESCOPE
Job Department

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war. Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in these cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war; our armies are still growing; the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund still must be maintained. And what do we find, in every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.

Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONTROL, BECAUSE—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum those families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden. Why take from them this task, and give it to all, rich and poor?

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

MEN AND WOMEN OF ONTARIO:

Bend your backs once again to this burden. If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally; taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty; your wartime part, in this day of national sacrifice.

The Fund requires $12,500,000 for 1917. Of this Ontario is asked to raise $6,000,000, being the estimated requirements of Ontario's families. If there is no local Fund to which you can subscribe, send your gift direct to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Victoria Street, Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

JEWELLRY
OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, Jeweler

INSURANCE &
REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan. Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "T and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
☞ Next to Vogan's Hardware

DENTAL

W. E. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lonut's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

Clearing Sale of

WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

There are:—
Dining Room,
Parlor,
Hall,
Sitting Room,
Bath Room,
and
Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

CENTRAL
Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time. Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

NOTICE

Commencing Monday Feb. 12th, Transcontinental train for Sudbury, Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, North Battleford, Edmonton; Vancouver, and the Pacific Coast, will leave Toronto Union Station at 9 P. M., instead of 10.45 P. M., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 10 & 20 Concession, B, Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, or D. Forrester, Barrister,
47 1. f. Chepstowe Paisley

Seeds! Seeds!!

We always carry a full stock of all kinds of

Timothy and Clover Seeds

All No. 1 for quality and prices right.

Paints

We have a complete stock of Lowe Bros. High Standard Paints, the paint of performance.

S. W. VOGAN

Giant Flowering Carnation

FREE!

Address a postcard to us now and receive by return mail a copy of our new Illustrated 80-page catalogue of Garden, Flower and Field Seeds, Root Seeds, Grains, Bulbs, Small Fruits, Garden Tools, etc.

SPECIAL.—We will also send you free a packet (value 15c) of our choice

Giant Flowering Carnation

This carnation is a great favorite; the flowers are large and fragrant and the plants do well outdoors. Transplanted into pots in the early fall they bloom profusely from October till the end of May. Extra plants are easily propogated from them by cuttings, "pipings" or layering.

Send for our catalogue and learn of our other valuable premiums. 18

Darch & Hunter Seed Co., Limited, LONDON CANADA

LOW FARES and THROUGH TICKETS
TO ALL POINTS IN

WESTERN CANADA AND THE PACIFIC COAST

ELECTRIC LIGHTED AND COMFORTABLY EQUIPPED TRAINS

To obtain the lowest fare and most convenient routing, apply to—

T. E. ATTWOOD, AGENT

Or write to R. L. Fairbairn, Gen'l Passenger Dept., 68 King St. E., Toronto

VIA CANADIAN NORTHERN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

WILLIAM WARREN.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies -- English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

POETS' CORNER

KING COAL

Our old King Coal is a jolly soul,
And he laughs with a fiendish glee
When old Jack Frost crawls out of his hole,
For he corners the market.—See!
His minions slave like the imps of Hell,
In the depths of the grimy earth,
For the ore which this poor old king will sell
At double its actual worth.
And his billion free born slaves bow low,
While the north wind shrieks and cries:
'Tis their hearts' blood makes his fat cheeks glow
And brightens his twinkling eyes.
The rich and the poor, the halt and the blind,
All dance while his fiddlers play,
And the dance is the grimmest of its kind,
For each must a fiddler pay!

News About Town

Coun. Alex McCarter, who spent most of last week in Toronto, says the city seems to be almost as full of young men as ever after having sent fifty thousand soldiers to the Front.

It has been reported in the village that Capt. J. C. Little was ill with spinal meningitis, but this is not correct. On being examined a few germs of the dreaded disease was found, but Capt. Little is better now and out of quarantine.—Teeswater News.

W. Northgrave, of Port Elgin, a brother of Walter Northgrave of the Bell Telephone office here, has been promoted on the field of battle at one jump from private to a lieutenant. The promotion was made for bravery and for his splendid example before the troops. $250 for uniform and equipment were included with the promotion. Lieut. Northgrave enlisted at Winnipeg but was transferred in in England to a British machine gun section unit.

Won Poultry Prizes

Mr. Hugh Garner, the editor of the Sutherland, Sask. Press, and son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Garner, Walkerton, is quite a poultry fancier. Hugh showed eight birds at the Provincial Poultry Show recently winning no less than four firsts.

Province Gets O's Money

Under the heavy penalties of the Ontario Temperance Act, the fines have meant quite a revenue for the Provincial Department since Sept. 16th. Those $200 touches count up fast. Inspector White of Bruce County has already forwarded $1100 to the Department, and two more $200 fines at Lion's Head last week will bring the total up to $1500.

Those Canadians

The latest story we have heard about the Canadians came in a letter to a Walkerton lady this week from a friend in Montreal. A German officer prisoner, it goes, was asked: Do you really expect to win the war? "How can we," he replied. "The French are struggling like madmen to regain Alsace and Lorraine. The British are hammering like demons to restore Belgium. And the Canadians are fighting like devils to capture Souvenirs.

Horses vs. Motors

In speaking of the demand for horses in the west this season, Mr. John Ewing who is down from Alberta, tells the Advocate that the big motor ploughing outfits are not the general success that they were expected to be. The machines work alright on dry, firm land, but where the land is wet they get into difficulty and soon run up a big bill of expense and lost time. For this reason many farmers are throwing the motors aside and turning back to the use of horse-drawn outfits. There will be a big push on the spring cropping this year which will cause an extra demand for horses.—Paisley Advocate.

Grain Much Better Filled

H. RICHARD, Dorchester, Ontario, says:

"I used Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer on four acres of oats last Spring with very good results. The field consisted of ten acres of sod, half of which had been manured the previous year, while in meadow, and we applied the fertilizer 200 pounds to the balance of the field. The growing crop showed much better growth all through the season where the fertilizer was used than where it had been manured, and at the time of cutting the grain seemed much better filled."

Good For 25% Gain

GEORGE W. ADDY, Ethel, Ontario, says:

"This is to certify that I purchased some Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer last Spring from your agent, Mr. J. K. Baker, and I am well satisfied with it. I used it on our oats and I believe if I had sown it on the whole field I would have had 25% more grain."

30 Bushels Wheat On Poor Land

JOSEPH MOLLARD, Park Hill, says:

"I used Homestead Fertilizer on my wheat, about 300 pounds per acre, where I have not been able to grow a crop, and wheat on that land will run thirty bushels per acre."

Write Michigan Carbon Works, Detroit, for free book and particulars about their Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer.

CONCERT A SUCCESS

Good Program Put On By School Children for I. O. D. E. Netted Over $130 for Patriotic Purposes.

The Public School, Separate School, and High School joined forces in a patriotic concert which was given in the Town Hall last Friday night under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire. It was a splendid success netting over $130 for Patriotic purposes after paying expenses. The program was good throughout, some of it especially good. The training was done by Miss McGregor of the H. S. Staff, Misses Stead, Halladay Warren and Thompson of the P. S. Staff, assisted by Misses M. Robertson and M. Havill, the Sisters of the Separate School, assisted by Mrs. Ralph Krueger and Miss Oberle. Miss Truax and Miss Ernst acted as accompanists.

A new original feature which made a great hit was "The Old Album," shown to the new neighbour by Rebecca Sparks Peters, aged eleven (Jean Nasmith). The photographs which included all the old styles to be found in family albums two or three generations old, were shown as tableaux in front of a large screen. The posing was done splendidly and the effect was such that the audience simply shrieked as one by one the old familiar likenesses of tintype days were reproduced.

"In quarantine" showed the 160th Bruce Batt'n quarantined for mumps. A score of khaki clad youngsters with their jaws tied up in handkerchiefs gave a very touching representation of what the Bruce Boys have been suffering at Bramshott.

The program included: The Salute, a Children's Chorus, singing the National Anthem, the salute being part of the daily routine at the Public School; Chorus, It's just like being at home; Piano Duet, Kathleen Oberle and Elizabeth Connors; Doll drill, a pretty drill by little girls; Tableau, "See-Saw, Marjory Daw"—the "teeter" being occupied by little Dorothy Trimble and Jack Nutting; Chorus; The Home Bells are Ringing; Motion Song, by Sep. School girls, in which they formed a flag, the singing being particularly good; Instrumental duet, Sadie Bremner and Stella Taggart; Chorus "Pack Up Your Troubles In Your Old Kit Bag" and Smile, Smile, Smile,—The Character solo being well taken by Bruce Hunter; Parasol Drill, by a number of girls; Tableau, Mistress Mary (Gladys Hutton); piano trio, Edna Giesler; Louise Lippert and Loretta Schuett; Chorus and Tableau, We're all for Johnny Bull, the solo part being taken by Walt Lettner.

Considering the fact that there were throngs of children going on and off the stage between the numbers, the order was fine, and a great deal of credit is due to the children for the entire absence of noise.

OUR WESTERN LETTER

Written for the Telescope
By an Old Bruce Boy.

During the last week in January we had a touch of Arctic weather in Alberta. We had some eight days of it. It made one feel glad that we have only eight months winter in this country. The thermometer got under 60 degrees below zero (how much I wont tell.) The highest it got to during those days was 22 degrees below zero. That week was what in the highest society circles would be called a ring tailed snorter. Since then we have had fine balmy weather more like June with the horny handed toiler labouring in his shirt sleeves and with bare hands. To day a chinook is blowing and our sleighing is disappearing by leaps and bounds or rather by creeks and cataracts. I have just finished with the threshers and I think it may safely be said the last year's threshing is completed in this section. For this year I can claim being one of the earliest to thresh. Considering the adverse season my crop was not bad, on 55 acres I threshed nearly 1000 bushels of barley. On the adjoining farms the barley and wheat was frozen early in August and had to be plowed under as there was nothing in it.

The introduction of simplified or phonetic spelling would be a great help to some people. The other day I received a note from a neighbour he wrote in part. "If you are not zuisin your slat." The man with fat hogs is the man whose smile does not come off these days. We have got as high as $12.65 and $13.00 per cwt in the local market the past few weeks. That isn't bad for the 'Last Best West'. I used to fatten my hogs in a bunch and have a lot of say 60 in the spring and another of the same in the fall. Last spring I took in a bunch of sixty and the next week the market dropped $1.00 a cwt and was away down for weeks. Had I kept my hogs a week longer I would have received $150 less than I did. That set me to thinking that the big lot business was too much like all the eggs in one basket. Now I feed so that I have about a load a month to sell and so average the market and dont face a big loss if I had to sell in a low market.

Wingham is talking Hydro. Power would be brought from Eugenia Falls via Hanover.

Woolen and Cotton Hosiery at the old prices while they last at Woodman & Co.

HOUSE CLEANING!

Why not rent one of our

Electric Vacuum Sweepers

and save the trouble of moving all rugs and furniture in the house. They will do the work just as work just as well with half the expense and work. All ready to attach to the cord for

75c. $1.00 Per Day

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE PLUMBING HEATING

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

"There's no place like home" when
PURITY FLOUR
makes the pies, cakes and bread.
More Bread and Better Bread
4

ONTARIO FARMERS!

Existing war conditions demand that you give the question of seed special attention this year. Seed of desirable varieties and high germination power will be factors influencing yields.

If you have not secured your seed

Let the Department of Agriculture Help You

Farmers having Seed Grain or Potatoes for sale may forward samples to this office stating varieties, price and quantity.

Farmers wishing to purchase seed are also invited to communicate with this office stating variety and quantity and an effort will be made to put them in touch with farmers having seed for sale.

Write to N. C. McKAY,
District Representative
WALKERTON

W. H. Hearst.
Minister of Agriculture.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE, THOMPSON, BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
48—9 Solicitors for Applicant.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal; and Washington, D.C. U.S.A.

Your Photo

There is no gift that more truly carries the sincerity of the donor.

FRASER STUDIO

CURRENT COMMENT

The Providence Journal, a well-posted newspaper on German intrigues in the United States, asserts that, in the event of war with the United States, the Germans will wage war against the States from Mexican territory. It declares that hundreds of German officers have found their way there from Russia, and that a large quantity of munitions has been sent to Mexico from the States. This has been going on under the supervision of Bernstorff and his satellites. We are willing to believe anything of the Germans.

THE NAVAL FIGHT.

At this writing the exact results are not known of the fight off the Dutch coast, between the British light naval forces and German torpedo-boat destroyers, which had ventured outside the Kiel canal. The British Admiralty has issued no supplementary statement to the early morning one. In it it was announced that the British had sunk one of the German destroyers, and the rest were scattered. It was too dark to find what became of them. The Admiralty also announced that a British torpedo-boat destroyer was sunk in what looks like another engagement. No other casualties were suffered. There were unofficial reports that six or seven German destroyers had been sunk, but the Admiralty makes no such claim. The Germans have issued an official statement declaring that they sank one British destroyer and that another was seen in a sinking condition. Their own casualties they limit to one destroyer damaged, putting in at Ymuiden in Holland, and the others returned with slight damages.

This latter statement will not be accepted without proof. We all remember the bombastic claim they made when they declared that they had beaten the British fleet off Jutland. When the Germans admit that their vessels ran for home after the fight we have the Jutland battle all over again. Victorious ships do not run away.

CAN GERMANY WIN?

By this question we mean, can Germany, by her new submarine warfare, starve Great Britain into submission and thus win the war? Does Germany believe that she can win in this way? She may or she may not be engaging in it as a last desperate effort, only hoping that it may succeed. We cannot answer for Germany. No matter what she thinks, she has taken the step. As the Lokal Anzeiger says, after all possible consequences had been duly weighed. This new frightfulness at sea is an admission that Germany has failed on land, that she no longer looks for success with her armies. They have done their worst and their best, and she is farther from victory than ever she was. To help cover up the Satanic atrocity of her submarine outrages, she declares that she is in this murder business so as to prevent further misery and suffering, and she denounces Britain as the most inhuman of her enemies.

This is really a compliment to the effectiveness of the blockade, which is making itself felt in Germany, and against which all Germany's armies are powerless. The Kaiser cannot save his people from suffering, and they cannot continue always to suffer. The Kaiser sees this. He sees that if he cannot achieve victory soon he will be defeated by his own people. We do not know what the British navy is prepared to do to block the German submarine onslaught, but we may be sure that it has not been idle. Vessels will be sunk as they have heretofore been sunk, but the U-boats have not exhausted the resources of civilization. The seas are wide and Britain has a long coast line, and it will be a miracle if Germany can completely close her ports to all navigation. We do not believe that she can.

The Kaiser may be a fool, but the German statesmen must be credited with a certain modicum of common sense. To court war with the United States seems to us to be a strange way of winning the war. The Germans must believe that they can starve Britain within a few weeks, and that they can then defy the United States, or they are putting up a big bluff with a view to give them a [illegible] place on which to fall when the fight is over. A few weeks will tell the tale. What the Germans do they must do quickly, if they are to cut off Britain from the rest of the world. We have, however, become accustomed to Germany's threats. She was to destroy London with her Zeppelins; she was to harry Britain's coasts with her flying squadrons, and she was to destroy the British fleet by the process of attrition. She has done none of these things. We have every confidence that in this, her latest threat, she will also fail, and then will come the end.

Anent Sleeves.

They're long.

And cuffed, usually.

Crepe sleeves are used with silk and satin dresses.

And satin sleeves in some of the smart serge frocks.

Some sleeves have rows of covered buttons reaching most to the elbows.

Little fullness at the top and much at the cuff seems to be the rule.

Horizontal tucks, touches of white and pointed cuffs and ruffles over the hands are other of the new sleeve modes.

To be happily married a man must be a good listener.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

Though the ladies dined alone, the table was bright with the old family plate, and the dinner elaborately planned and served, with a footman behind each of their chairs, and the majestic butler presiding with as much solemnity as if it were a state affair.

Once or twice in a pause of the conversation—for Lady Blyte tried her utmost to make herself agreeable, and succeeded—Signa found herself unconsciously thinking: "All this was offered to me last night, and I refused it"; but there was no regret in the thought, only a vague wonder how she, so insignificant and poor, could have had the courage to refuse.

"Good night, my dear," said the old lady, as they took their candlesticks. "Remember you are your own mistress. If you would like to have breakfast in your own room—"

"Oh, no, no!" said Signa, with a smile.

"You shall do just as you like, my dear," and once more she kissed her. Not once had Sir Frederic's name been mentioned.

On the morrow Signa found that her ladyship had meant what she had said in the most literal manner, for the butler came to inform her that the head groom had come to receive her orders, and as Signa looking toward Lady Blyte, the old lady said, quietly:

"If you would wish to ride or drive, my dear, tell him so. I will go with you if you like."

The orders were given, and they went for a long drive round the estate, stopping now and then at some outlying farm; Lady Blyte pointing out in an indirect way the beauty and richness of the place, and impressing Signa with the value of all she had refused.

In the evening she asked Signa if she would sing to her, and praised Signa's voice with such earnest approval and admiration that Signa's heart warmed still further toward the proud old patrician.

So three days passed in the pleasant, easy fashion with which the rich can make them pass; sometimes the two drove together, sometimes Signa took her book and wandered through the park. During one of these rambles she came upon the ruined tower which Sir Frederic had shown her.

It stood somewhat lonely in a corner of the park, and was kept by an old man as deaf as a post. Signa got him to unlock the iron gate at the top of the steps; and he would sit at the bottom while she coiled herself up in a shady nook on the round platform at the top, and read or mused. It was more often the latter than the former; the book would lie on her lap unheeded, and her thoughts would go back to the deserted Grange and Hector Warren. From where she sat she could see the island on which they had been driven, and where they had sheltered in the cave. How gentle and thoughtful he had been that day! How full of meaning [illegible] every word and look! And yet he had gone without a word of good-bye. In all her life she had never met a man who came more near to her beau-ideal of what a man should be, she thought. And she found herself wondering if she should ever see him again; her heart ached with a strange pain as she told herself that they might perhaps never meet while life lasted, that she had heard his voice for the last time.

On the third evening, as they sat in the drawing-room after dinner, Lady Blyte leaning back on a couch, Signa mending some old lace which she had begged to be allowed to do, Lady Blyte gently approached the subject which was always in her heart and mind.

"Do you know, my dear," she said, "I am rather uneasy to-night?"

"Yes?" says Signa, looking up from her lace.

Layd Blyte nodded, and moved the screen so that the light fell on the beautiful face opposite her.

"I have not heard from my son, Sir Frederic."

Signa started slightly, and took up the lace again.

"Did you expect to hear from him?" she asked, for the sake of something to say.

"Of course, my dear. He never goes away from me without writing. I suppose I ought not to say it, but Sir Frederic is a model son."

"I don't know why you should not say so," said Signa, gently.

"Well, my dear, every mother is supposed to think that her goose is a swan. I don't know about Frederic's being a swan, but he is a very good goose, at any rate."

And she smiled and sighed.

Signa was silent. It was dangerous ground they were approaching.

"You don't know much of him as yet, my dear," said her ladyship, softly. "If you did, I think you would admit that he is a good son. They say that a good son makes a good husband, and I think it is true. But Frederic is more than that. You know, my dear, how well the estate is managed; I don't suppose any place is so well looked after, that anybody's people—I mean the farmers and the tenants—are so comfortable and satisfied. There is not one of them but would give Frederic a good character as a landlord and master."

Signa murmured something inaudible.

"They have never had so popular a master of the hounds as he has been, and is," went on Lady Blyte, rather seriously, for all her pride. "They like a man who rides straight, as they call it, and who keeps a good field. Frederic takes a high place in the county, and he could take a still higher if—if he married the right sort of person, my dear."

"I am sure of that," said Signa, warmly, but flushing crimson.

"Of course it is time he was married," resumed the old lady, with a pause. "His father was settled before his age. Nothing would give me more pleasure than to see a young mistress at the Park."

"It has a very good and fitting mistress now, dear Lady Blyte," said poor Signa.

"Thank you, my dear; but I have passed my time. I am old and lazy, and don't care for company, and there should be more life at the Park than I can have in it. As for me, I should be glad to retire into the shade. You know I have that pretty little house I pointed out to you in the Park. I should like to go there very soon. I should not be a very troublesome mother-in-law, my dear, for I think that when a woman in my position has served her time she should retire gracefully."

There was silence for a moment; Signa looked through the window, in which the last rays of the setting sun were pouring faintly, mingling with the light from the few wax-candles. What could she say? She knew now that Lady Blyte was aware that Sir Frederic had asked Signa to be his wife, and she dreaded what the old lady should say next.

"If Frederic had made his choice, I think I could say something in his favor to the girl he had chosen," said Lady Blyte. "I could say to her, in simple truth, that he was one in a thousand; that though he may not be as clever and brilliant as some, that he is stanch, and true, and steadfast, and would make a woman happy, if devoted love and unceasing tenderness could bring a woman happiness."

There were tears in the proud eyes, and Signa felt her own grow dim.

"Forgive me, my dear, for boring you," said Lady Blyte, gently. "I did not mean to speak of it, but out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaks and my heart is very full of Frederic's welfare. I cannot tell you how anxious I am to see him settled and happy; but I can tell you this, that whomsoever he may bring to me, I will receive as a daughter and love as a very daughter of my own. I will not say any more, dear; not a word."

"Do not," said Signa, almost inaudibly, and she rose and came and stood beside her, and put her hand hesitatingly on the satin-clad shoulder.

"No, I will not say any more," repeated the old lady. "But I am glad I have opened my heart to you, my dear. If—if—it had been you whom Frederic had chosen, I could say what I have said with even greater earnestness;" and she turned and put her hand in Signa's.

Signa looked down at her—at the proud face so humble and almost pleading, and her heart ached! If she could but have knelt beside her and whispered, "He has chosen, Lady Blyte, and I will be your daughter if you will have me!" But she could not. There seemed to be a hand upon her heart keeping her back.

With a little nervous gasp she turned away and left the room. A footman stood at the door ready to receive any commands. Her maid waited for her in her own room. The whole place seemed devoted to her. If she could but say "Yes," and take it all!

With a sense of spiritual and mental bewilderment and indecision she went upstairs and got her hat from her maid, and wandered out on the terrace.

At that moment she almost thought that she would try and forget Hector Warren, who had gone without a word of farewell, and strive to give herself to Sir Frederic.

The evening seemed stifling; the young moon sailing in the blue heavens seemed to eye her with impatient scorn for her weakness in thinking of a man who had, by this time, no doubt, clean forgotten her.

With a sigh she wandered across the lawn, and aimlessly, absently, found herself in the path leading to the Tower. With a longing to be quite alone, and away from the great big place, she hailed the sight of the round, ivy-grown turret with a welcome sigh, and hurried on.

The old man who kept the key was sitting at the door of his cottage smoking a short pipe and half asleep, but he rose and touched his hat mechanically, and drew the key from his pocket.

Signa nodded, and he crawled up the stairs and unlocked the gate at the top—looked round aimlessly with the manner of all keepers of show sights, and crawled down again, leaving Signa seated on the rustic chair on the platform.

With a gesture of relief she took off her hat to let the cool air fan her forehead, and gave herself up to deep and troubled thoughts. Could she bring herself to be Lady Blyte, of Blyte Park?

She was still battling with the problem when she heard a step ascending the stairs. It stopped near her, and, thinking it was the old man grown impatient of waiting, she picked up her hat and rose.

As she did so, she saw it was not the keeper of the tower, but Sir Frederic Blyte stood beside her.

With a cry of alarm, for it almost seemed as if her intense thought of him had called him to her side, she shrank back.

CHAPTER XVII.

So sudden and unexpected was the presence that Signa shrank back and uttered a faint cry of alarm.

Sir Frederick put up his hand reassuringly, and took a step toward her. As he did so, he came within the moonbeams, and Signa saw that his face was white and haggard, and his whole manner quite different to that which belonged to him usually. He looked like a man who had endured either a long silence or some terrible anxiety; his eyes were bloodshot—his lips tremulous—his whole bearing eloquent of deep and barely suppressed excitement.

"Sir Frederic!" she said, in a tone of surprise.

"Yes," he said. "It is I. I am afraid I—I alarmed you?"

"A little," she assented, trying to speak naturally, even to smile; for, after all, there was nothing to be alarmed at. "I did not know you were in Northwell, and certainly did not expect to see you here."

He was silent for a moment, as if struggling for calm and composure, and he clasped his hands on a stick he carried and looked hard at the ground; then he said:

"Yes, I am here. Are you—are you glad to see me?" and he lifted his eyes to her face with an unsettled, troubled gaze.

Signa murmured something, and glanced at the gate. A vague feeling of uneasiness and alarm possessed her, though she strove to dispel it by mental self-ridicule.

"Have you been to the park?" she asked. "I suppose they told you I was here? I hope I have not alarmed Lady Blyte. I ought to have said that I was going out for a stroll."

He shook his head.

"No, I have not been home. I knew you were here, because I saw you—because I watched you."

Signa colored.

"Watched me, Sir Frederic?"

He nodded.

"Yes," he said, huskily. "I have been watching you ever since you came here. That is the truth. I do not know what you will think of me."

"Then—then," said Signa, astonished and troubled, "you have not been to London, Sir Frederic?"

"No," he replied. "I intended going. I took a ticket, and travelled half way; then I found I could not go, and I came back by the next train. I could not leave you, knowing that you were here!"

"Sir Frederick!"

He shook his head.

"It is of no use. Call it madness, what you will. I could not tear myself away from the spot where you might be. Do not be angry with me."

"I ought to be very angry," said Signa, coldly. "Lady Blyte assured me that you had gone to London, or I should not have come to the Park after what had passed between us. You must know that, Sir Frederic."

"I know it," he said, almost sullenly. "I offer no excuse. I have found out that I cannot bear to be away from you, Signa——"

"I think you had better call me by a more formal name, Sir Frederic," she said, gravely, and with an appearance of calmness, which belied her trembling frame and beating heart.

"Do not be angry," he pleaded. "Let me call you by the name by which I think and dream of you, night and day, unceasingly; it can do you no harm. Signa, you will think me mad to plead in this way, and I think that I am almost mad; but it is for love of you. You asked me to forget you, and I tried, but I cannot. Signa, if you still refuse to accept my love, I am a ruined man, utterly ruined and undone! Think how madly I must love you when I can forget honor and self-respect as I have done. I have crept about my own place like a poacher or a thief, just to get a glance at you, just to hear your voice, though only at a distance; that was all. I did not mean to approach you, to speak to you. It was sufficient for me to know that I was near you, watching over you—"

"Sir Frederic——"

He put up his hand, and Signa saw that it trembled against the moonlight.

"Hear me out. I say I did not intend to approach you, but to-night, as I paced under the trees within sight of the house, afraid of my own keepers, I saw you come from the house; I saw that you were unhappy and troubled, and I could not resist the temptation. I followed you here, even at the risk of arousing your anger and scorn." He paused for want of breath and stood staring at her, indeed, more like a man bereft of his senses than a rational being.

"I feel that I ought to be angry," said Signa, trembling, and attempting to pacify and soothe him, "and I am sure that Lady Blyte will be very sorry and annoyed, but let me go, please," and she made a movement toward the gate, between which and her he stood.

"Stay for a few minutes," he pleaded. "I—I cannot go to the Park to-night. I could not face my mother. Will you not stay with me for a few minutes? I will see that you reach the house safely."

"I cannot stay," said Signa. "It is getting late, and Lady Blyte will be uneasy."

"Are you afraid to trust yourself with me?" he asked, half angry, half painfully. "You need not be, Signa. I love you as deeply and passionately as a man can love a woman."

"Sir Frederic, I cannot. I will not listen."

"Why should you be so hard to me?" he pleaded, almost with a sob. "What is there in me that should make you hate me so?"

"I don't hate you!" she said, trembling and troubled, her eyes fixed on the gate, before which he stood fixed and immovable.

"Then why cannot you promise to try and love me? Why will you not, at least, permit me to love you? I will wait—wait for years, if you will but say the word. I am not fearful of the result; I can and will be patient. Signa, for Heaven's sake listen to me!"

"I have listened too long, Sir Frederic," she said, flushing with indignant pride. "Is this a time to—to press your suit? It—it is almost an insult to talk to me like this!"

"I insult you!" he exclaimed—"I who worship and revere the ground you walk on. Ah, you would not say this if Hector Warren had spoken as I have spoken."

Signa turned pale, and confronted him with all her maidenly pride blazing in her eyes.

"What right have you to speak of me of him?" she demanded. "Mr. Warren is no more to me than any other man——"

Then she stopped, for something—the very falseness of the retort—choked her.

"Let me pass, please," she demanded, tremblingly.

But he did not move.

"Will you tell me plainly and distinctly, that you do not care for him?" he said, hoarsely.

"I will tell you nothing—I will not answer such a question," she replied, looking him full in the face.

"Then it is true," he groaned, biting his lip. "But for him—this opera-singer, this adventurer, coming from no one knows where—you would have learned to love me!"

(To be continued.)

What one has, one ought to use; and whatever he does he should do with all his might.—Cicero.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $6.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz)

CANADIANS
WANTED FOR THE
ROYAL NAVY

Canadians wanted for the Royal Naval Canadian Volunteer Reserve for immediate overseas service. Only men of good character and good physique accepted.

Pay $1.10 Minimum per day—Free Kit.
$20.00 per Month Separation Allowance.

Experienced men from 38 to 45, and boys from 15 to 18 accepted for service in the CANADIAN NAVAL PATROLS for defence of the Coasts.

Apply to COMMODORE AEMILIUS JARVIS
Naval Recruiting Officer, Ontario Area
103 Bay Street, TORONTO, or
Dept. of the Naval Service
OTTAWA

JEWELED BOOKS.

Ancient Volumes Bound in Gold and Incrusted With Gems.

Bibliophilists will tell you that the bookbinding of the ancient has never been equaled, let alone surpassed. They will extol the beauties of the bindings of the Byzantine period, when books had covers of gold, silver and copper studded with jewels, the massive tomes being carried in imperial processions.

The book production in the middle ages were of remarkable beauty inwardly and outwardly. Religious manuscripts were enriched with illuminations [illegible], while their covers were of silver, gold or enamel, incrusted with gems. [illegible]

The duke of Burgundy [illegible]

[illegible] Weekly.

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

The Ten Commandments.

(As Used in Germany.)

First. The Hohenzollern spake these words and said: I am the Lord thy God; thou shalt have none other gods but me.

Second. Thou shalt make to thee graven images of thy victorious generals, and bow down before them in the market places, and worship them, and make them offerings of gold, silver and iron.

Third. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for this were lese-majeste.

Fourth. Remember that thou keep holy the Lusitania Day, when I triumphed over my wicked enemies, and cast them and their wives and little ones into the deep.

Fifth. Honor thy father and thy mother, unless I bid thee kill them, when thou shalt do so, that thy days may be long in the land.

Sixth. Thou shalt do all murders that I command thee to do.

Seventh. Thou shalt commit any kind of crime against thine enemies.

Eighth. Thou shalt steal all that is possible from countries that I have invaded, and what thou canst not carry away thou shalt destroy.

Ninth. Thou shalt bear false witness against thy neighbor, and shalt continue to bear it and shalt affirm it with many oaths and [illegible] of innocence.

Tenth. Thou shalt covet thy neighbor's land, his house, his wife, his ox, his ass, and everything that is his, and thou shalt hate thy neighbor.

And to each and every commandment the obedient German people answers "Amen!"—Western British American, Chicago.

Avoid Harsh Pills!
Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

TRADE BRIEFS.

Crops and animal products of the United States in 1916 had an estimated value of $13,449,000,000, an increase of $2,674,000,000 over 1915, which was the former record year.

The Peruvian Government will pave the city of Iquitos at a cost of $13,666. This will be paid by revenues from rubber plantations in the Department of Loreto.

There are opportunities for several lines of American supplies in West Africa, including canned goods, pork, cotton prints, hats and clothes.

As a result of the efforts of consular agents at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, American machinery worth $45,000 was installed in a wool washery in that district.

High grade motorcycles are gaining in favor in Brazil. They retail at about $200 each. Care should be taken in packing the machines for export.

Mr. G. H. Thompson has discovered that celluloid can be made plastic by soaking it in other solution. It can then be moulded into any shape for application to various tissues of the body.

India's small output of saltpetre is due not to any scarcity of the product, but to the difficulty of securing labor.

One hundred thousand pounds of lemon grass are used annually in the United States by manufacturers of perfume and soap. The Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to interest farmers in growing this grass on the high pine lands of Florida. Lemon grass is now imported from the East Indies.

A new natural dye has been discovered in a native grown root of Porto Rico, known as "gengibrillo" or sweet ginger. The root is sold by farmers at Mayaguez for $1 a hundred pounds.

Brightly colored belts with pockets and polished buckles make big sales at Aden, Arabia. Dealers who hope to compete successfully for this trade should export an article that will cost not more than 25 cents.

Structural iron, cement and wood are needed in Colombia.

The Venezuelan Government plans to construct a road which will extend through the States of Miranda, Anzoategui and Bolivar, and will connect all the important cities in those States.

A dealer in France has inquired about American machinery for the bookbinding industry.

American biscuits and small cakes are in demand in British East Africa.

The United States has exceeded England in the supplies of lead in pigs and bars to Foochow, China. [illegible] are lined with this product.

Two portable sawmills have been placed in operation at Salisbury, New Brunswick. It is expected that the mills will saw 2,000,000 feet of lumber. The portable mills reduce the cost of hauling lumber in sections remote from existing sawmills.

Bermuda's 1917 vegetable crops will not be so good as usual, it is asserted, for the reason that there is less land under cultivation than in previous years.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS OF GREAT HELP

Mrs. Wm. Arnott, Amherst, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for three years for my little girl and baby boy. I have found them of the greatest help during the teething period and always keep them in the house." The Tablets aid teething babies because they regulate the stomach and bowels, thus preventing constipation, diarrhoea and [illegible]. They promote healthful sleep and keep baby well and happy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

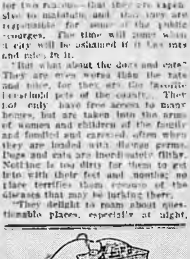
Dogs and Cats Germ Carriers.

"Dogs, cats, rats and mice are mediums through which disease is scattered," says the Texas Medical Journal. "People are constantly making war on rats and mice from economic necessity, but they seldom think of them as disease carriers and germ spreaders.

"There is no possible good that can [illegible] a place [illegible], aside from the harm they do in spreading sickness. They should be exterminated, even by national, state and municipal action, if that is necessary. New Orleans and some other cities are endeavoring to do this for two reasons—that they are expensive to maintain, and that they are responsible for some of the public scourges. The time will come when a city will be ashamed if it has rats and mice in it.

"But what about the dogs and cats? They are even worse than the rats and mice, for they are the favorite household pets of the country. They not only have free access to many homes, but are taken into the arms of women and children of the family and fondled and caressed, often when they are loaded with disease germs. Dogs and cats are inordinately filthy. Nothing is too dirty for them to get into with their feet and mouths; no place terrifies them because of the disease that may be lurking there.

"They delight to roam about questionable places, especially at night, and expect to receive their customary caresses next day. They are expensive to feed and dangerous to have around. Why will sensible people keep them? They may be written as foreign to the scope of a medical journal, but it is written in the hope that the physicians of the country may interest themselves in exterminating these useless household pests."



FOR ALL BLACK LEATHER

EUREKA HARNESS OIL

is unexcelled for preserving and lengthening the life of black leather.

This scientifically prepared oil makes harness a rich, inky black—shiny, soft, tough.

THE IMPERIAL OIL COMPANY, Limited
Branches Throughout Canada

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

The Grey North Sea.

Landsmen at home, in comfort,
Having and getting, too,
Smoking your pipes together,
Just as you used to do;
Think of the sailors striving
To keep you safe and free,
Out on the North Sea riding,
Out on the grey North Sea.

Women at home, in safety,
Sleeping and waking, too,
Tending the home and garden,
Just as you used to do;
Think of the sailors straining
To keep your children free,
Out on the North Sea watching,
Out on the grey North Sea.

All ye in England dwelling,
Free from the war's alarm,
Just as in peace-time living,
Sheltered from want or harm;
Think of the sailors daily,
For the sake of you and me,
Out on the North Sea dying,
Out on the grey North Sea.

Kingston-on-Thames. Constance M. Savage.

Lumbago's Misery Ceases, Every Aching Muscle Cured

JUST RUB ON OLD-TIME "NERVILINE."

Not necessary to drug inside!

That awful stiffness that makes you yell worse than a kicked dog will be cured—cured for a certainty, and quickly too, if you just rub on Nerviline.

Rub Nerviline right into the sore spot, rub lots of it over those tortured muscles, do this and the pain will go. You see Nerviline is thin, not oily. Therefore it sinks in, it penetrates through the tissues, it gets right to those stiff, sore muscles and irritated nerves that make you dance with pain.

You'll get almost instant relief from muscle soreness, stiffness, aching joints, lameness or rheumatism by rubbing with Nerviline. It is a soothing liniment and doesn't blister, doesn't burn or even stain the skin.

It's the most harmless cure in the world for Lumbago, Back Strain or Sciatica. It takes away the ache at once and ends your misery quickly.

Now quit complaining—don't suffer another day. Nerviline, that good soothing old-time liniment will limber you up in a jiffy quick. Get busy to-day. Any dealer anywhere can supply Nerviline, 25c.

TRY USING RICE.

It Will Often Take the Potato's Place.

Now that potatoes, owing to unprecedented prices, are no longer within reach for common use, rice is the best possible substitute.

Boiled rice is the best thing in sight. It is at once available, and, measured by its nourishing qualities, is far greater, pound for pound, [illegible] keeping up the strength of those who eat it. Where a family needs to be roused into a fondness for rice instead of potatoes, try serving it some specially attractive fashion. There is much in appearance. A mound of fluffy rice, well cooked and lightly piled in the centre of a platter, lends itself to a great variety of appetizing variations.

The secret of properly cooked rice lies in an abundance of rapidly boiling water. After washing the uncooked rice so that the last rinsing water is perfectly clear, the grains should be sprinkled into a kettle of rapidly boiling water, the rice being added so gradually that the violent ebullition of the water will not be checked. There must be plenty of water and every grain of rice must fairly dance up and down.

For instance, try a decoration of green peppers, cut in rings and scalded until tender in slightly salted water. Lay these green rings in an alternated row, well up on the mound of rice. The effect will be found exceedingly good and the peppers will also add a delicious bit of flavor to the rice when served together.

Pimentoes cut in strips and dropped for a few minutes into boiling water make another excellent garnish for boiled rice, the pieces being scattered irregularly around the edge, as a border.

A sprinkling of finely chopped parsley over the mound of rice is pretty as well as appetizing and a few spoonfuls of minced boiled ham, lightly strewn over the rice, is an improvement to the appearance of the dish as well as a piquant addition to the taste.

A little trick which goes a long way toward the satisfactory serving of rice is the use of a fork rather than a spoon. When cooking, the rice should never be stirred with a spoon, but with a fork; when serving, where possible, use two forks instead of a spoon. The spoon crushes the delicate particles and gives the rice a mushy look which must always be avoided.

Chicken livers in brown sauce, boiled calves' liver, creamed codfish, or minced meat of any kind, are all improved when served with a border on boiled rice, in which case potatoes need not figure in the meal in any form.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT myself as well as prescribed it in my practice where a liniment was required and have never failed to get the desired effect.

C. A. KING, M. D.

ANTIQUES

Have you any old articles of merit which you are desirous of disposing of—such as Antique Furniture, Old Plate, Brassware, Prints, Engravings, Old Arms, Armour, Curios, etc.? If so, you will find it of interest to you to consult us.

ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E., HAMILTON, ONT.
THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS.
Importers and Dealers in China, Glass, Fancy Goods and Antiques.

Father's Failure.

Johnny Blank, who had seen eight summers go by, not very long ago developed a fondness for playing "hookey" from school. After two or three offences of this kind he was taken to task by his teacher.

"Johnny," she said, "the next time you are absent I want you to bring me an excuse from your father telling the why you were not here."

"I don't want to bring an excuse from father," protested the boy.

"Why not?" asked the teacher, her suspicion plain.

"'Cause father isn't any good at making excuses. Mother finds him out every time."—New York Times.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

CHAT IN PASSING.

Spring-Like and Dainty Are Some of the New Negligee.

Some of the daintiest negligees imaginable are new and spring-like, and made of crisp, pretty white-dotted Swiss with linings of pink or delicate blue China silk. They have just enough embroidery in colored silk to match the lining to make them altogether delightful.

* * *

Now that we have long passed the stage when "her feet like little mice stole in and out her petticoats," it behooves Mademoiselle to have them shod with exceeding care. What with our short skirts, they are out, and out to stay. But if they are encased in a pair of those new black satin slippers with hand-tinted heels in the prettiest colors and bewitching designs she'll not mind how much they show!

* * *

Any woman who has ever had the misfortune to have the hot-water bottle burst just when it was most needed, will appreciate a new bottle which is waterless but not lacking in hotness. It is flat and of metal and one has but to boil it for several minutes and it will stay hot (and unburst!) for hours at a stretch.

* * *

This is a good time to pick up an inexpensive evening frock. All the shops are having sales and clearing out winter stocks, and if one will but take the trouble to look there are many gowns which have possibilities marked for very little. Freshened up with new tulle or perhaps a bit of lace or silk, a new gown may be had for an absurdly small outlay.

LET a woman ease your suffering. I want you to write, and let me tell you of my simple method of home treatment, send you ten days' free trial, postpaid, and put you in touch with women in Canada who will gladly tell what my method has done for them.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN!!

If you are troubled with weak, tired feelings, headache, backache, bearing down sensations, bladder weakness, constipation, catarrhal conditions, pain in the sides, regularly or irregularly, bloating, sense of falling or misplacement of internal organs, nervousness, desire to cry, palpitation, hot flashes, dark rings under the eyes, or a loss of interest in life, write to me to-day. Address: Mrs. M. Summers, Box [illegible] Windsor, Ont.

Frock Fashions.

There are many dresses of stockinet.

And numbers of very bewitching gowns are of lustrous charmeuse.

Beads are quite frequently used for trimming on crepe, satin and silk dresses.

Chenille embroidery is another feature of some new spring gowns.

Coat dresses are youthful, becoming and fashionable—as you'll see by the early spring exhibits.

High-waisted effects are promised a vogue; so, too, is the barrel skirt, the round neck and the combination gown of two kinds of silk.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Shop Sights.

Many new sports hats of fine straw in mushroom shape and that new chartreuse green which is so fashionable and so difficult to wear.

New sports skirts of white wash satin, in smart pleated models; also some of white pongee.

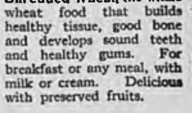
New white and gold velour checked suitings that are quite smart, quite wide and will make attractive spring suits.

New spring frocks for young girls made in a rather trying style with the new round, and rather high, neck.

More sports silk than have ever before been shown—and destined to make coat linings or coats, also suits, frocks, blouses, hats and parasols.

Even with equal rights for all men, it wouldn't be long before half the world would be left.

The Business of Being a Boy is a strenuous employment. Sturdy boys and girls are not built out of books alone. The best food for growing youngsters is Shredded Wheat, the whole wheat food that builds healthy tissue, good bone and develops sound teeth and healthy gums. For breakfast or any meal, with milk or cream. Delicious with preserved fruits.



Made in Canada.

Tank, Reincarnation of Irish War Car

British "tanks," lumbering their irresistible course across the pitted wastes of the battlefields "somewhere in France," are but the reincarnation of the battle penfolds of ancient Uladh, now known as Ulster.

The similarity, making due allowance for such things as petrol motors and machine guns, is really striking, and emphasizes once again the partial return to battle tactics of the past which has been one of the developments of the war.

Hand-to-hand fighting, regarded as almost impossible before the war, owing to the power and range of the modern gun and rifle fire, has developed to such an extent that the French troops in their trench raids seldom take their rifles with them any more, but rush forward armed with revolvers and specially designed knives with large broad blades—almost the counterpart of the short Roman sword borne by the legionaries who for centuries held the world in subjection.

The steel helmet has found its way back to the list of equipment of all the armies on the west front. The shield, modified into a folding steel protection behind which the soldier lies in open field, also is playing a large part on the west front, while the Italian regiments, slowly worming their path up the mountains against the Austrian defense, all have details of picked troops, who crawl ahead of the general advance, heads, arms and bodies encased in armor of almost medieval type, to cut the wire entanglements.

The "bombard" has made its reappearance to cough bombs across the intervening space of the enemy trenches, and even the spring devices of ancient armies formerly used to hurl great rocks against beleaguered cities, are being made use of, except that they throw bombs instead of stones. Grenade fighting is as common as in the days of Frederick the Great.

Of course, the movable shelters used in nearly all wars of ancient times as protection for the battering ram hurled against enemy walls are familiar to all readers of history, but the point about these penfolds, was equipment of the days when all the Irish, under the leadership of the High King, before the dawn of Christianity in the "Wooded Isle," ravaged the coasts of England, holding in check the advance of the Roman eagles, and as those eagles gradually withdrew with the constantly shrinking boundaries of the decaying empire, carried their forays deep into Gaul in search of plunder and glory, even as the Viking cohorts which followed them—the point is, that these penfolds were used in the open field, hurled forward on great wheels, bearing their battalions of 30 warriors each, to break the ranks of the enemy.

EXCERPTS FROM GAELIC MANUSCRIPTS.

The following are excerpts from the translation of a collation of ancient Gaelic manuscripts, made by Professor Dunn, of the Catholic University in Washington.

"Then came these three huge, strong well-braced, cunningly-built castles, three mighty wheeled-towers like unto mountains, in this wise placed in position; three royal castles with their fully armed battalions and thirty round-shielded heroes. A bright, beautiful, glistening shield-guard was on each of the three strong, stout, battle castles, with black, deadly armament of huge, high, blue, sharp pine-lances, such that one's bent knee would fit in the socket of each huge, terrible, strange shaft of the awful, heavy, monstrous indescribable armament that I saw. A third part of each shaft was contained in the socket of the rivetted, very long, securely-placed spears: As high as two clubs was each citadel from the ground: as long as a warrior's spear was the height of each battle-hurdle.

"As loud as the clash of a mighty wave at the great spring-tide, or of a huge weary fleet upon the sea when toiling with the oars along the shore, was the similitude of the din and the clamor and the shouts and the tumult of the multitude, and the to-and-fro of the 30 champions, with their 30 heavy iron clubs that they bear in their hands. And, when the wheeled-towers advance massively and boldly against the line of heroes, these almost leave behind their arms at the fierce charge of the outland battalions."

This account is typical of the Homeric style of the old Irish epics, and the tendency to produce impression by extravagant use of adjectives. But there follows a bit of vivid, straightforward description which sounds really modern.

"The three stout, strong, battleproof towers on wheels careered over rough places and over obstacles, over rocks, and over heights."

ANCIENT IRISH TACTICS.

Now we come to a simple and practical discussion of the military theories and tactics involved in the use of these ancient land battleships by Fergus Roy, a plain fighting man of those days of an exiled chief of Ulster.

"They are hard to contend with, for all such as are unfamiliar with them, is the opinion held by them, but they are readily to be dealt with for such as do know them. These are three battle-wheeled towers, as I perceive from the account of them. Once I saw their like, namely, when as prentice I accompanied Bare to Spain so that we entered the service of the King of Spain, Esorb to wit; and we afterwards made an expedition to Soda, that is, to the King of Africa, and we gave battle to the Carthaginians. There came their like upon us against the battle line in which we were an hundred battalion, and three score hundred in each battalion. One of the wheeled-towers won victory over us all, for we were not on our guard against them.

"And this is the way to defeat them: To mine a hole broader than the tower in the ground in the front hereof, and cover over the pitfall; and for the battle line to be drawn up over against it and not to advance to attack, so that it is the towers that advance and fall into the pit."

And in what land were the ancient "tanks" first conceived? Hear the following:

"Letarcham told me, as I passed over Teltown, that the Ulstermen brought these towers from Germany; and Cualgae is their name, namely, battle-penfolds."

Bread cast upon the waters by the Teutons beyond the farthest bounds of old Rome!

The "tanks" are returning to Germany, careening through the slaughter with hundred-fold terror.

U. S. GOING TO WAR

Reasons Given Why States Should Fight Germany.

(The Kernel, New York).

We are going to war! The United States must enter the European struggle for compelling reasons which are clearly developed by analysis of present conditions. This assertion will not surprise the practical shipping man at all, nor the business man whose mastery of business principles carries him down to the fundamentals, though it may shock the western farmer and millions of our unthinking population who are governed by prejudices or sentiments. There are but four developments, all of which are unlikely, that can keep us out of the war, and one of these would probably be regarded as a cause of war by Germany:

1. Germany must quit sooner than seems probable and submit to dictation of peace terms by the Allies, or

2. Germany must abandon her plan for a greater and more ruthless submarine activity, or

3. United States must reverse the rulings of her State Department in violation of the accepted principles of international law with regard to defensive arming of merchant ships, which seems altogether impossible, or

4. England must give up her plan to arm merchant vessels fore as well as aft.

In the event of none of these four unlikely things happening we must enter the war as an Ally or invite a frightful panic in our own country—one that would bring the most serious hardship to all of our citizens of whatever class.

WHEN MERCHANTMEN BECOME WARSHIPS.

Our prosperity is based on export trade. Even President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo admit this, now that the election campaign is over. England is our carrier. She controls  per cent. of the tonnage afloat to-day. Without service of British ships we could not carry on our business and our factories would have to close. Our shipments cannot be made via Halifax because Halifax can boast total railroad terminal capacity no greater than that controlled by the Baltimore & Ohio on Staten Island alone. Our State Department has ruled that a submarine is a warship, and it has been long settled that a merchantman may arm for defensive purposes, but that she must carry her gun on the stern. When she carries a gun on her bow she becomes a warship. When England arms her merchantmen fore and aft as she is doing as rapidly as possible they will not be admissible to our harbors as commerce carriers. Knowingly to permit them to disarm and rearm with the assistance of British men-of-war at the 3 mile limit or to disarm and rearm at Halifax, making their way to and from our ports within the 3 mile limit, and we could not deny knowledge of this if it became a practice, would be looked upon as a violation of international law the same as if we received the ships without change of armament.

WHAT MUST WE DO?

What must we do? Already shipping conditions have become almost intolerable. Insurance rates are not quoted until practically the time of sailing. It is impossible to engage vessel room for a reasonable time ahead of shipments. Sailing dates are decidedly uncertain. Shippers cannot figure on foreign deliveries. We can easily withstand a blockade of Germany by England, because England carries our exports, but we cannot withstand a blockade of England by Germany because Germany is not in position to carry our merchandise. So, we will have to break off relations with Germany, on the ground of any one of the forty or more grievances we have against her, and permit British merchant vessels to come and go from our port as they please. If necessary, we must lend our navy to the convoying of British ships carrying our goods. That they are British ships is but a matter of registry. Many of them are owned by Americans. They are our carriers because they are carrying our goods. When a submarine sinks a British ship she sinks an American carrier.

ANOTHER WEIGHTY REASON FOR WAR.

So much for proposition No. 1, which deals with the needs of the immediate future. Proposition No. 2 presents a reason why we must enter the war of no less importance, but looking farther into the future, into the after-the-war conditions. Economic conditions already are so grave that any peace arrangement that we as a nation are not party to is likely to put us at a great economical disadvantage. In ancient wars the vanquished people were driven in slavery to the homeland of the victors. Later they were left at home subject to the rule and taxation of the victorious nation. Now they are left at home an independent people, but enslaved by an agreement as to trade tariffs. The system of tariffs will be the device by which the indemnities of the present war will be collected. When the European nations begin to consider ways and means of recouping losses suffered in the war they will seek wealth where it is to be had, and where is wealth if it is not in the United States? Where is the United States going to get off if Uncle Sam doesn't have his knees under the conference table at which the terms of war settlement are made? As a neutral he cannot have a seat at that table. The world is so small and the war is so big that we cannot possibly afford to be without a voice in the peace arrangements. Therefore we must enter the war, if for no other reason than to prevent the possibility that we, with the losing nations, may be subjected to aid the recouping tactics of the victorious nations.

WOULD SHORTEN THE STRUGGLE.

If we enter the war the struggle will be much shortened, no doubt. In the first place, U-boat efficiency will be greatly reduced by the British arming of merchantmen fore and aft, reduced practically to torpedo carrying capacity, which is not nearly their present capacity. Most sinkings are now accomplished with a few sticks of dynamite and opening of sea valves after the victim ships have been halted by signalling or shelling and boarded. In case of a ship armed in the stern only, a U-boat can come up to her bow with impunity. Before the ship can manoeuvre so as to use her gun the U-boat can submerge. Not so if a ship is armed fore and aft. The U-boat will have to work altogether with torpedoes. These are bulky, measuring 25 feet, and weighty. And the greater timidity of the U-boat crews will further reduce their fighting efficiency.

BEST EXCUSE FOR HOHENZOLLERNS.

Germany is beaten. What the Hohenzollerns want more than anything else is a reasonable excuse for her defeat with which to go before the German people. A declaration of war against Germany by the United States would be the best thing imaginable along this line. Kaiser Wilhelm II. could say to his people: "We've beaten all Europe, but we can't be expected to beat all the world, even with God's help!"

* * *

All New.

Paisley cotton bands, made in France, and useful for trimming collars, or making borders, revers and so forth.

New spring hats entirely of narrow ribbons, and faced with straw of the same color. One in rose hue was charming.

New English cotton voiles in pleasing dark colorings, with all-over designs, will make attractive little dresses.

Smart new stockinette sweaters in plain colors—one with belt and collar of shepherd's check cloth.

Quite new is a perfume idea—the perfume is a solid cake, which may be slipped into one's bag. There is violet, lily or lavender, and the price is nominal.

R Stands for Oyster

In the home economic alphabet R stands for oysters because that popular article of food is only good when the month of the year has that letter in it. It is just chance, of course. But it is true, nevertheless, that in May, June, July and August the oysters are soft and flabby and unfit for use.

The Chesapeake Bay is the greatest oyster field in the United States, or for that matter, in the world. Oysters are so plenty here that almost every farm on the eastern shore of Maryland has its own little oyster bed—I was going to say right in its backyard—just as most people have parsley and onions. At any rate the beds are so near that the family can almost run out on the bank of the stream and pick up a few oysters for breakfast with their tongs. Other important oyster regions are Delaware Bay, Narragansett Bay and Long Island Sound. Of the oyster producing States Virginia and Maryland lead in production while New York and Connecticut get the most money for their oysters.

Although oyster farming has become such a prominent business that about half of the oysters we eat are from planted beds, it is no novelty, for it was practiced when the Roman Empire flourished and has been kept up in Italy to some slight extent ever since. There were oyster beds in the Acehron that Virgil made famous. In some foreign countries the system of oyster farming is so closely supervised by the Government that the price of oysters is very high. It takes a whole army of officials, commissioners, inspectors and watchmen who have to protect the oyster industry so carefully that it fairly makes one look with awe upon the oysters produced there. Of course this horde of men has to be paid and paid indirectly by those who eat the oysters.

The food value of the oyster rests not only in its nutritive qualities, but also in the ease with which it is digested; for this reason oysters are a valuable food for invalids and for others whose digestive powers are weak. Although the greater part of the oyster is water, it contains protein, fat and carbohydrate in such proportions as to more nearly approach milk than any other common food. When oysters are cooked in combination with milk or eggs as so often is done, the nutritive value is greatly increased, as, for instance, in oyster stew or in fried oysters.

Oysters should be as fresh as possible and to insure this see that you have a reliable dealer who will not serve you with oysters that have been dead a long time, or that have been fattened. Oysters that have been "plumped," that is, fattened by being allowed to stand in fresh or brackish water (with a little cornmeal added in some cases to help the process), are liable to become infected. Accordingly the process is considered very dangerous.

The digestibility of an oyster may be impaired in the cooking. Too long cooking toughens it and renders it unfit for the sick or delicate, and also destroys the fine flavor. Fortunately it is such a simple thing to cook an oyster properly that an amateur can readily learn to do it.

The point to remember is to let the oyster cook just long enough to permit it to swell and to cause the edges to begin to curl. Then take up and serve immediately. In making oyster stew have everything ready to serve; the milk hot and seasoned and the serving dishes ready. Then put in the oysters, standing right over them until they plump and curl; take up quickly.

Creamed oysters should be treated the same way. Have the white sauce hot and the toast ready; then drop in the oysters. It only takes three or four minutes to cook the oysters unless a large quantity has been added at one time. It will take a little longer to heat up the mixture in that case.

Scalloped oysters should be cooked just long enough to allow them to plump out and to brown the crumbs. It toughens them to cook them longer.

Pan roast oysters are easily prepared. Run the oysters through the fingers to remove any particles of shell that are sticking to them. Put a bit of butter in the frying pan, add oysters and stir gently until the edges begin to turn, season with salt and pepper and serve on rounds of toast with a few sprigs of watercress and a slice of lemon. An eighth of a lemon is sufficient for each serving.

* * *

"Truth is mighty," exclaimed the idealist. "Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "But a well managed rumor will answer just as well if you want to get the stock market going."—Washington Star.

Chats With the Doctor

(By A PHYSICIAN)

WORK AND DIET.

In a recent number of the British Medical Journal appeared an article on munition workers' food, with some suggestions on diet in general. The article is chiefly concerned with the investigations of Prof. Leonard Hill, and his examinations of the diets popular with the workers, both male and female, of all ages. He does not, like most food reformers, advocate radical changes in the diet of working people, nor does he spend much time in telling them what to eat and what to avoid. On the other hand, he pays attention to their habits and to their predilection for certain sorts of food. His examination of the diets popular with the workers has been made primarily to ascertain their yield of energy, especially bearing in mind their cost. It will be seen that the discrepancies in food values and prices are very striking. Thus a meal in a popular restaurant, consisting of steak pudding, potatoes and cabbage with syrup pudding, costing 1s. 3d., yielded 1,234 calories, or 79 calories (or heat-producing units) for each penny. A meal in a factory canteen managed by amateurs, consisting of steak pudding, peas and potatoes, jam roll, and rice pudding, cost only 5d., and yielded 1,435 calories, or 288 calories for each penny, thus having more than three times the nutritive value of the meal obtained at the restaurant for each penny spent. On the whole, the canteen meals were found to be much more nourishing in proportion to cost than the others.

An examination was also made of the meals brought by munition workers to the factory. These were found to vary very much. A meal of rabbit and vegetables in a basin, contained only 682 calories. A man who brought sausage roll, bread and butter, and ham and cheese, got 1,118 calories. And a boy of 15 who bought a dish of potatoes, tomatoes and bacon, a jam puff, a cake, bread and butter and jam, got 1,219 calories.

Dr. Hill points out that this meal shows the effect of growth and work in increasing appetite; but remarks that the boy was probably over-eating himself, if all his meals were of the same size. The meal of women workers was proved in most cases to be insufficient in nutritive yield. Dr. Hill considers that to maintain efficiency of workers there should be a good meal in the longest break in the day's work, with a short walk to precede it if possible. Meals as a whole are taken too hurriedly—especially in the case of women. He insists on the importance of ventilation of the workshops during the dinner hour, and urges that the custom of eating meals in the workshops should be abolished, thus relaxing the monotony of the day by a change of surroundings.

Fatigue prevents the proper digestion of food, so that some persons will benefit more by taking a rest before a meal than from a walk. Food should be taken regularly, and, as has been said, not hurriedly, and the meals should be distributed over the day. One of the most important things to be remembered is that few people can with impunity, take food between meals, as a good digestion depends largely on good appetite. There are, however, others with whom frequently repeated snacks and refreshments agree better than do less frequent and more substantial meals.

SCRATCHING.

There are few things which give one such immediate relief from annoyance as scratching an irritating spot on the skin, and there are few which so soon bring redoubled irritation. My readers may have noticed that most answers to queries concerning bites or skin irritations contain the advice to refrain from scratching, and this is because, although the scratching relieves for the moment, by driving the blood from the surface vessels of the skin, yet the blood returns more freely than before after the stimulation, and intensifies the itching tenfold. In the case of insect bites, in which the irritation is due to actual acids injected by the insect, the scratching further does harm by dispersing the poison through the tissues, and thus neutralizing the efforts made by nature to localize the poisoning. When, in addition to this dispersal, the blood-currents are accelerated by the stimulus to the surface vessels, it will be readily understood how scratching only makes itching worse, and why it should be refrained from when possible. A good general treatment for insect bites consists in dabbing them with a lotion of weak carbolic acid and water, allowing this to dry on the skin.

THE EVILS OF TEA-DRINKING.

Possibly no single cause of indigestion is so common and so potent as the habitual and excessive drinking of tea, and it is an interesting fact that in those countries where tea is the normal beverage, as is the case in Cornwall, indigestion is more common even than in districts where alcoholic drinks are unduly indulged in.

It is not, however, fair to attribute this ill-effect entirely to the tea itself. Rather it is due to the times at which it is drunk and the manner in which it is prepared. In Cornwall, at any rate, it is customary to keep the teapot on the hob, the infusion standing on the leaves for an indefinite time, and to drink large cups of this highly astringent preparation with every meal.

Properly prepared, that is infused for three minutes at the most, and then at once served or decanted into another teapot, and drunk only between meals, tea is for most people a perfectly harmless drink.

* * *

About Sleeves.

[illegible] are long

And cuffed, usually.

Crepe sleeves are used with silk and satin dresses.

And satin sleeves in some of the smart serge frocks.

Some sleeves have rows of covered buttons reaching most to the elbows.

Little fullness at the top and much at the cuff seems to be the rule.

Horizontal tucks, touches of white and pointed cuffs and ruffles over the hands are other of the new sleeve modes.

* * *

To remove sewing machine oil, rub with lard and stand for several hours, then wash with soap and water.

CANADIAN RANGE CATTLE TOP U. S. A. MARKETS

Choice Steers Knowing Not the Taste of Corn Bring $11—A General Review for Breeders and Feeders of American 1916 Markets—by Paul D. Hammett.

During the first ten months of 1916 Canada took 4,592 head of cattle valued at $178,898 from the U. S., as against 249 head, worth $11,924, in 1915, and 5,136 head, worth $229,292 in 1914. Horses to the number of 16,456 and worth $1,661,097, were taken by Canada as against 89,092 head, worth $12,143,449 in 1915. Canadians also took a large number of sheep from the border markets, and they did cattle, principally from the plains states in the West.

Records during the coming year will be measured by 1916, for in every branch of the food animal industry new marks were hung up. The highest prices on the Chicago market were established as follows: cattle, $12.60 for "regular" market; beeves, fancy stock fed with show animals for the International selling to $13.25, the premier load at the exposition making $28 a hundred, and the individual champion selling for $1.75 a pound; hogs topped in September $11.69 and sheep and lambs sold to $10.25 and $13.65 respectively. The highest price for range cattle was $11 paid by Canadians.

Records for averages also went by the board during this year of prosperity. Fat steers averaged $9.50, rangers $8.10, calves $10.85, hogs $9.60, sheep $7.85 and lambs $10.75, while horses averaged $181.

The broadest demand in history was made upon the American live stock producer all through the year at highest wholesale and retail prices on record, the consumers' purchasing power being expanded to meet the high cost conditions. The demand from the warring nations also furnished an enormous outlet for American meats, and this tended to raise the prices. Packers alike had their greatest year of profit-making, and the reports from the leading packing companies showed their earnings to be far and away above all former years, although the percentage of profit on the business turnover was held to a slim margin. Shipper demand at all the markets was a strong factor in price making, and of the total receipts at the Chicago market there were sent out 701,672 of which 255,696 were feeders. Thus the crop for slaughter elsewhere was 445,976, an increase of approximately 64,273 over last year, when no feeders left the market. Eastern states' fat cattle shipments were by no means of volume sufficient to have effect during any part of the year in restricting shipper demands and especially was this true in the trade in choice steers.

The enormous world demand for beef, North America being the only continent economically fitted to materially increase production, is stimulating beef production. Europe's depleted live stock herds since the war started have made that continent logically a large buyer of American beef, and while South America has shipped some carcases, drought in the southern countries has materially curtailed shipments. The ending of the great war is bound to bring about some price adjustment, but the disturbance of this transition period cannot seriously handicap beef growers' prosperity, since domestic orders in the American and Canadian industries are sufficiently large to keep the plants running at full time for months after the war demands have ceased. And then the rehabilitation of the farms of Europe is not a matter that can be taken care of for months and years, and during that time Europe must continue buying her meat, or a very large share of it, from the continent. The general prosperity of the country is reflected to a very large degree in the buying of beef. Despite the highest prices for the consumer in history of this country and with shortage of long fed steers in the market in fall higher prices in retail than during the summer months, there was no abatement in the demand.

It is an old axiom that high priced corn makes high priced beef, and this was never proven more satisfactorily than in the year just closed. Prices of corn, starting at a high level, increased during the first six months of the year, and although lower in the summer, when prospects for a new crop were bright advanced speedily netted owners less money, carrying again when drought hit the corn belt, effecting a serious shrinkage in the yield, and when the demands from Europe for this cereal kept up. The 1916 beef crop was made at a high cost and record prices were necessary for the feeder to emerge from the year with a margin on the right side of his ledger. The feed bill, which in the face of bounteous yields and lighter demands in former years appeared almost mountainous finally was paid, and many were the shippers that returned to their homes with profits of 90c to $1 on their corn for short feeding.

PROFITS DESPITE HIGH FEEDS

The grand average of $9.50 for fat steers stands against $8.10 in 1915, and $8.65 in 1914. The receipt of 2,730,136 cattle during the year in the Chicago yards is an increase of nearly half a million over 1915, and shows an increase in production that plainly is not spasmodic, but an evidence of stability in the industry. During each month of the year new records were hung up for the respective periods, and coming down the home stretch his December prices mounted to dizzy heights never dreamed of in previous years.

The average weight of 1916 steers was 987 pounds, as against 1,046 in 1915, and 1,002 in 1914, and stood the lightest since 1912.

The troubles and losses for the feeders during the last two years were all wiped out during 1916. Prices were high at the first of the year, and from March to June climbed fast, receding slightly in summer only, to come into the final months with sensational advances. The steers passed the $10 mark in March, and thereafter in only two weeks, late in April and early in May, did tops sell below $10, June marking the first $11 sales, and before the close of that month $11.50 was paid.

Drought unloaded southwestern pastures of tens of thousands of cattle, and the same conditions was true in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota, but expanding demands for beef, millions of pounds of which went into the freezers, provided the outlet for the great runs without seriously impairing values. Cattle which would have been fed out to maturity had corn prices remained normal, came trooping into the markets in an immature condition by thousands in fall months. The effect of this liquidation will be a severe strain upon the late winter and early spring fat beef supplies. With the feeders it was a question of taking a profit while a profit was very plainly in sight, and thousands of cattle purchased in the fall months as feeders were fed 90c and $1 corn for thirty or fifty days and rushed back to the market, attracted by the high prices in vogue. Information which has come from all parts of the corn belt shows the feeders determined to get rid of cattle as fast as they were ready for beef. Unlike 1915, when by reason of supplies of big steers in excess of trade demands, these grades had rough selling in comparison with the handy and yearling classes, the heavy beeves of 1916 were premium getters. The production of yearlings, however, was by no means overdone, and yearlings of choice grades always sold within a fair range of the prime bullocks. The high price of feed accounted for a too liberal percentage of yearlings, and the same is true of the middleweight steers while scarcity of the big beeves of choice quality put these classes in keen favor with the slaughter, and they made strong price advantages over the yearlings.

Evidence was not lacking in any month that the conservation of calves that has been urged by many, both practically and theoretically inclined, persons has been carried to an illogical conclusion. The trade of 1916 had many thousands of cheap quality steers, half blood, dairy cattle black and whites, and Jerseys, offsprings of dairy stock, which had run in the fields and pastures since calfhood. Tens of thousands of these were shunted into the market in late summer and fall months from all parts of the country the greater percentage from Wisconsin, northern Iowa and Minnesota, which could find only canner outlet, and the prices they brought charges considered, than would have netted owners less money, carrying been had by vealing them in season. A dairy calf under no conditions will make a satisfactory beef critter, and the longer he is held on the farm the dearer property, from a beef stand point, he becomes. Hardly would country buyers take them for stock purposes, and the majority of them went into the canner trade at prices of $4.50 to $6.50.

The feeders who matured cattle at the distillery sheds had a more prosperous year than for a decade, this grade of cattle making advances in keeping with the grain fed stock. A new top of $10.55 was made for this grade. A smaller crop was fed this year because of the prohibition wave, while the foot and mouth disease during 1915 caused many feeders to shorten the crops they put in the slop sheds.

The new top and average for the range cattle has been mentioned, the majority of this grade of steers coming from the Canadian, Montana, Wyoming and other western states. The quality was good, although the marketing at the first of the year showed soft flesh. Plentiful rains in the spring and again in the summer made grass bountiful, but the failure to cure grass in seasonable time accounted for the late shiping from most range sections.

VEAL THE DAIRY CALVES.

Cows and heifers followed the upward turn of beef steers to new records. Record prices for hides was another factor in pushing the prices upward since the hide of a cow or heifer brought a price which tended greatly to reduce the cost of carcass. Well-bred heifers and cows were retained on the corn belt farms to a very great extent for breeding purposes, the incentive to grow beef being accentuated by the high prices of beef. Dairy farm cast-offs comprised a large proportion of the year's supplies of the female stock, and with the small receipts of female stock from the rangers this only tended to enhance the value of fat cows and heifers. The year's average for the female stock was $6.75, an advance of 65 cents over 1915 and comparing with $6.55 in 1914. The fancy yearling heifers had broad and urgent demand and the Christmas yearlings cashed in load lots at $10 to $10.50. Breeding and feeding calves for maturity as yearling beef bullocks is increasing at a fast pace with the growth of silage feeding. And this was a strong factor in reducing beef-bred calves in the market.

First purchasers of feeding cattle from Indiana, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania were on the markets in great numbers. An average price of $7.20 was made for the year, and this stood against $7.35 in 1914 and $7.05 in 1913 and $5.79 in 1912. The high point was $8, paid in May, June and December. Fewer range feeders were marketed than in recent years, good range grass being responsible for this and likewise the inclination of rangemen to hold back yearlings and thin two-year-olds for maturity. Many corn belt feeders went direct to the ranges to satisfy their wants for the range feeders.

HOGS SHARE THE PROFITS.

Despite a run larger than ever was known in the history of the hog trade, growers were well paid for the crop. Packers were the life of the markets most months, and as a general rule prices were higher than anyone predicted. The general average for all grades, pigs excluded, figures $9.60, standing $2.50 higher than 1915, even showing 70 cents gain over 1910, the highest priced year since the early '70's. The prices paid showed the men responsible for this great catering did not err in their judgment of conditions. Prices were the lowest in the first month of the year, and then showed a gradual rise to May, when after a short reaction another climb to records was started. The $11.60 top, which was made in September. The average price of light weights was $9.45, $2.25 higher than 1915. The average of the butchers $9.60, an increase of $2.40, and heavies averaged $9.65, an increase of $2.65. Fresh pork loins were obtainable in January at 11 1-2 to 12 cents, but in September they sold up to 22 cents, and during December they usually cleared at 14 to 15 cents.

—CANADIAN COUNTRYMAN.

Problems of Concealment

The long range of weapons employed in modern warfare has given importance to the study of the appearance of distant objects. A constant contest is taking place between the observer trying to locate the position and numbers of the enemy and the observer who endeavors by all possible means to conceal these factors.

Generally speaking, an object becomes indistinguishable when its brightness and color are identical with its surroundings, says Nature magazine. For this reason such colors as gray and khaki, which blend well with the surroundings, are preferred for modern uniforms. Yet their effectiveness in this respect depends on the nature of the ground over which the troops are moving. Khaki is doubtless difficult to distinguish amid sandy wastes; gray or green might be better against grass or foliage.

Of all colors, red is the most conspicuous at a distance. Not only is it the color which presents the most vivid contrast with the ordinary background, but there appear to be certain physiological factors which accentuate this impression.

SENSITIVE TO RED.

For example, it is well known that the central region of the eye (which is mainly used for the observation of distant objects) is highly sensitive to the red end of the spectrum and correspondingly insensitive to blue and green. It has also been alleged that, owing to the eye lens not being achromatic, most people find it difficult to focus distant blue and violet light; and that such objects readily merge in the landscape because their outlines are hazy and blurred.

Skilful gardeners in designing a flower bed arrange the blue and lilac flowers in the foreground when possible, and rely on vivid red and orange blossoms for a distant effect.

It is known, however, that in a dim light conditions obtaining in full daylight do not apply. In a feeble illumination the eye becomes more or less color blind and is highly insensitive to red, which appears dead black, whereas green and blue objects appear an uncanny grey. A party of men in gray-green uniforms, advancing across a grass field in twilight, would therefore be extremely difficult to detect.

All this suggests that the problem of selecting an inconspicuous uniform is a complicated one, especially when it is borne in mind that it is also important that bodies of men, besides being conspicuous to the enemy, should be clearly visible to their own side. It has been suggested that this condition might be secured by differentiation in the coloring of the front and back of the uniform.

It is interesting to observe that on several occasions during the present war scouts have taken special steps to accommodate the color of their clothing to the surroundings. For example, it is stated that the Germans provide some of their men with white uniforms in order to match the snow in the Polish campaign, and that the Turkish snipers in Gallipoli painted their hands and faces green so as to be indistinguishable amid foliage.

USING THE PATCHWORK.

It is clearly more difficult to secure resemblance to surfaces which are constantly changing, such as the sky and the sea. But there is a second principle which can also be used to secure inconspicuousness in these circumstances, namely, what may be termed the "patchwork" principle. This is based on the experience that the outlines of an object may be rendered difficult to distinguish by breaking up its surface with stripes and patches.

This method has been applied to aircraft and hydroplanes and to forts and temporary defences of various kinds. Besides painting the hulls of tunnels of warships a slaty-blue or "battle-gray," experiments have been made with mottled patches of black and irregular serpentine black lines painted on a gray background. Some experiments in this direction recently carried out in the United States navy are said to have been very successful, and it may be only a question of time before dreadnoughts are rendered practically invisible at the long range of modern sea battles.

A combination of patchwork and imitation of surroundings may also be applied with good results in order to conceal aerodromes and similar objects. For example, if the adjacent ground is cleared and the grass is scraped away at intervals, leaving bare patches, and if the aerodrome itself is painted a patchwork of brown and green, identification from above becomes very difficult.

Yet another instance is furnished by the recent correspondence in the Times regarding the color of sandbags. It is stated that the Germans insert black sandbags at intervals among those of lighter tint. An officer at the front wrote: "It was the first thing I noticed about the German trenches. Their patchwork device made it impossible to spy their loopholes, whereas ours take a long time to build, and then are easily seen."

A device such as this, which would apparently save a considerable number of lives in a long campaign, is well worth attention.

USING THE MIRROR.

There remains one other possible device for concealing objects, which, although difficult to apply, is probably the most perfect of all when realizable. This is to make use of mirror or semi-mirror surfaces which reflect their surroundings and thus automatically imitate them. Such a device would be applicable to any surroundings.

The chief instance known to the author of the use of this method is afforded by the latest Zeppelins, which are reported to have a coating of bright aluminum powder, which reflects the sky and makes the vessel very difficult to detect at any considerable height.

For aircraft flying at a height the problem of concealment is a particularly difficult one, as whatever pigment is adopted, the framework is seen silhouetted against the bright sky. It is possible that by making use of reflecting surfaces, in addition to the other devices mentioned, this contrast could be considerably lessened.

If to a noiseless engine could be added the quality of practical invisibility, aircraft would become very much more dangerous offensive machines than at present.

UNSIGHTLY PIMPLES

COVERED HIS FACE.

B. B. B. Cured Him.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, a medicine that has been in use for over 40 years, so you do not experiment when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. My face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B. B. B. so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

TORONTO.—Wholesale business was fair for the week, and a large proportion of dealers report increases over the same period of last year. Drygoods firms report that a fair volume of orders are being shipped out, but there is a feeling of uncertainty about conditions that will exist when the spring orders have been sent out. Collections in this line are reported to have fallen off slightly in the last week. Activity in retail trade centers principally in household furniture, boots, shoes and rubbers, men's furnishings and staple drygoods. Drygoods are somewhat quieter than last year. There is seasonable activity in the grocery trade. Hardware firms report uncertainty on account of the extreme advance on iron and steel products. Money is fairly plentiful.

MONTREAL.—The volume of business is ahead of last year in most lines. Remittances have been affected to a slight extent, but the country retail trade which has been picking up after the quiet period early in January is beginning to be reflected in more satisfactory remittances, and a number of large drygoods houses report collections so far this year as ahead of those of the same period, while city collections are fair. Leather prices are being firmly upheld. Groceries are rather quiet. Very high prices for all iron and steel products, as well as ropes, etc., has checked activity in hardware lines to some extent.

OTTAWA.—In view of conditions, country trade is holding up well and the collections are quite up to normal. Local trade is fair; winter commodities are still moving out satisfactorily at the high prices.

HAMILTON.—The placing of an embargo on American roads from Pennsylvania to Buffalo has made the coal problem even more intricate than last week, and many local manufacturers are again faced with the probability of an early shutdown. Hard coal is being delivered in small quantities, but anthracite for industrial purposes is very scarce. Further embargoes within the last week have increased the difficulty of getting goods in and out of this city. The retail trade is fair, with activity noted especially in winter clothing, furniture, boots and shoes, etc. Groceries are fairly active, and retail hardware is a trifle quiet at present.

LONDON.—City trade is fair in all staple lines, and travellers operating in Western Ontario have already secured quite satisfactory orders for fall delivery. Country trade and collections are particularly good, and city payments are ahead of those of last year.

WINNIPEG.—Local trade is in a fairly healthy condition, although the high prices of iron and steel goods have curtailed the hardware trade to some extent. Seasonable weather has sustained the demand for heavy clothing and other winter commodities, such as felt shoes, boots and rubbers, etc. Stocks of fur goods are reported to be low. Country collections are very good, while city payments are fair.

CALGARY.—Western trade generally is well above that of last year. Cold weather has been responsible for the maintenance of a healthy winter trade, and collections are fair to good.

VANCOUVER.—Trade in British Columbia continues to reflect general prosperity. The cut of lumber for the season measured well up to normal. The pack of salmon reported by [illegible] centres in Prince Rupert give 1916 figures as 4,600,000 lbs. larger than 1915, with corresponding increases in halibut and cod, and an increase of 30 per cent. in the catch of herring. Mercantile business is fair, and collections show improvement.

QUEBEC.—Business is much about as preceding week. Wholesalers and retailers appear satisfied. Collections as a rule are fair.

A WINTER PUDDING.

Though the Name of It is Fig Pudding.

Here are the articles required for a fig pudding:

One cup of suet.
One pound of figs.
Three eggs.
Two cupfuls of bread crumbs.
One cupful of sugar.
Two cupfuls of milk.

Wash, pick over the figs and chop. Chop the suet. Beat the eggs light without separating. Mix all the ingredients thoroughly, turn into a well-greased mould, cover and boil three hours. Serve hot.

Molasses for Gasoline.

A company in South Africa has built a plant for the manufacture of natalite, a distillation product of molasses. Experiments have shown that natalite can be used as a motor fuel. In one of the tests, a 22 horse-power car covered over 500 miles, using 30.69 gallons of natalite. The new plant includes necessary buildings for manufacturing 2,000,000 gallons of natalite a year, thus rendering South Africa largely independent of the world's gasoline supply.

Petroleum deposits that have been discovered in Somaliland are being investigated by the British government.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER

FOR FIVE YEARS.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, belching of wind, heartburn, water brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will clear away all the effete matter which collects in the system and thus do away with constipation and all its allied troubles.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Brittania Bay, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach and liver for the past five years, and have had constipation causing headache, backache and dizzy spells, and sometimes I would almost fall down. I tried all kinds of remedies without obtaining any relief.

I commenced using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and they have cured me. I have recommended them to many of my friends, and they are all very much pleased with the results they have obtained from their use."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, 25c. a vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Buy All You Need of These Cotton Goods NOW

All of them will be much higher soon.

Bordered Cotton Towelling per yard 10c
Bordered heavy Linen Crash Towelling per yard 15c
English Prints Dark and Light, worth 18c, 20c and up to 22c a yard, all at per yard 15c
Fine soft quality Flannellette, good heavy weight, per yard 15c
40 to 46 inch Circular Pillow Cottons, per yard ..... 25c and 35c
70 inch Twill Bleached Sheeting (extra value) per yard 35c
80 inch Twill and Plain Bleached Sheeting, extra heavy per yard 35c
20 doz. Bath Towels, Canadian made extra value, per pair 25c

We Would Also Say
Buy Your Dress Goods Now

We urge the buying of Dress Goods and Suiting Fabrics now, because not only are prices reaching the prohibitive stage but there is every indication that imported fabrics will be unobtainable at any price in the near future and while our present stocks are large, every day's selling breaks into or cleans out the most wanted lines.

We Call Your Attention Particularly to
Our Spring Suitings

Every yard is pure wool and dependable dyes and prices are extremely moderate.

British Serges and Cheviots; navy, gray, brown and black; $1, 1.25, 1.50 to $2

British Broadcloths and Gaberdines; almost a complete color range of these popular fabrics. Best quality, per yd. $1.50 to $2.25.

British Tweed Suitings. For separate skirts and suits, per yard 75c, $1, $1.25.

Smart New Sport Coats for Spring

They come in a variety of pretty new cloths, Checked Tweeds, plain Covert and Serges. All beautifully made and trimmed. Prices are very low considering the cost of these cloths.
Special at $7.50, $10.00 and $12.50

STEPHAN BROS.

MARMALADE TIME

February is the big Marmalade month. Now is the time when the Oranges, Grapefruit and Lemons, so necessary for the making of fine Marmalade are at their best.

GOODE & McKAY
"The People's Grocery"
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

Stop! Look! Listen!

Have You a Supply of Tea and Sugar? Both are advancing in price.

Package Tea is up and going higher. I have Bulk Teas bought before the advance which I am selling at the old prices for a short time. Secure what you want now.

Sugar is also advancing again so if you require any, buy at once.

I want Potatoes, Onions, Butter and Eggs for Cash at the highest prices.

LENT—A supply of all kinds of Fish arriving.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Special Values this Week
All Winter Goods
Must Go Now

Sweater coats, all kinds, plain colours and combination colours at a saving of 15 to 25 per cent.

At the prices we are selling Boys' Overcoats, it will pay you to buy for next winter.

Broken assortment of Ladies' Waists, sizes 34 to 42, In the lot about 6 dozen. Reg. prices $1.00 to $3.00, on sale now 25c, 39c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

Ladies' Cashmere Hose 60c for 49c, 50c for 39c, 35c for 25c.

Overall working aprons, all sizes, worth 75c for 50c.

Men's 60c lined Mitts on sale at 49c per pair.

8c, 10c and 12½c Embroideries and Laces at 5c a yd.

Comforters for cold weather, $2.00 for $1.60, $2.50 for $2.00, $3.00 for $2.50, $4.00 for $3.50, $4.50 for $3.95.

Men's heavy ribbed Underwear at old prices, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Come in and get your share of these bargains while we are sacrificing winter goods to make room for the new Spring goods coming every day now.

McBurney & Co.

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

EDEN GROVE

Mr. and Mrs. B. Megaffin have returned to Sunnyside, Sask.

Miss M. Elphick and Mrs. A. Watson have returned to Hartney, Man.

We are glad to report that the sunny smile of "Sunny Jim" has never quit smiling and that our esteemed friend is on the mend. We have missed his sunny countenance and obliging manners and we wish him a speedy recovery to good health.

The new agent relieving "Sunny Jim" is a very faithful man tabulating the trains and counting the hours from early morn till late at night.

Mrs. N. Thompson of St. Thomas is visiting her father, Mr. John Killen.

We have a lot of good financiers in our burg, even "Mike" can make a dollar go a long way.

"Perry Fair" came home on a flying visit from Palmerston.

A merry band of Edenites went to the Paisley Carnival in a sleigh load. They all got home before the cock crowed.

When our minister doesn't get to the church before Sunday School, we may safely guess he is detained on the road talking to the wayfaring men and backsliders.

Last week the G. T. R. section shepherd lost his sheep and did not know where to find them but he called others which were not of the fold.

Mr. Smith of Elmwood is loading a car of turnips here.

Mr. McKillop expects to bring his wife home this week.

Mr. Phillips spent Sunday at his home in Stratford.

GLAMIS

Rev. Donald McIntyre of Toronto, and nurse Ethel Oliver of Winnipeg, (who is on her way overseas) spent the first of the week here, attending his parents' 65th anniversary on Monday.

Miss Eva McKenzie of Hespeler, attended the Groves—Currie wedding last week.

Mr. Peter McLean, 2nd con. Bruce is seriously ill. All hope for his recovery.

Mrs. James McLennan was called to Kincardine last week owing to the illness of her mother, Mrs. McLeod.

Mr. John C. McLean returned to his business at Lawson, Sask, on Tuesday.

A few from here took in the Box Social on 6th Bruce on Thursday night and report a huge success. This is the record social for this year, over $210 being realized. Tattles a fine patriotic spirit in Bruce.

Mr. Alex Carr purchased a pony from a Toronto party last week.

Miss Tessie Patterson is under the Doctor's care.

Mr. John A. McKeeman made a business trip to the city the end of the week.

Misses Mabel Kirkton of Hanover and Alberta of Paisley were home for their sister's wedding on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. McIntyre of this village celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary on Monday of this week. Congratulations.

Miss Minnie Bowen is on the sick list. All hope to see her around soon.

Mr. McCauley visited his parents at the home of his sister Mrs. Bell of Dobbinton, the latter end of the week.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. McNally of "Maple Lane Fruit Farm" Sarnia, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, Feb. 14th, 1917, when their daughter Lottie May, was united in matrimony to Mr. Charles T. Graham of Glamis, Ont. Rev. E. A. De Mille of the Free Methodist Church, Islands, officiated. To the sweet strains of the wedding march played by Mr. W. L. Atkins of Toronto, friend of the groom, the bridal party took their places under a beautifully decorated arch. The bride who was given away by her father looked charming in a gown of cream silk. The ceremony concluded, congratulations extended to the happy couple, after which the bridal party and guests numbering twenty-five sat down to a sumptuous repast. The wedding presents were beautiful showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Graham left Sarnia on Tuesday, Feb. 20th for their future home in Glamis. The young couple have the Best Wishes of their many friends for many years of happiness and prosperity.

CHEPSTOW

Miss Johanna Spitzig of Kitchener spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Spitzig.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyer and family of Hanover spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Mullin.

Mrs. M. McNab has gone to Hillsdale, having received word that her daughter Irene, who has been teaching there, is seriously ill. Late reports indicate that her condition is improving and an early recovery is hoped for.

Mr. J. M. Graf, our iceman, supplied the wants of his local patrons for the coming summer, during the past week. The ice this year because of the continuous cold weather is exceptionally thick and of a good quality.

The Greenock Twp. Health Board met in its quarterly session here on Friday.

Mr. Chas. Madden, who prior to taking over the farm formerly occupied by his brother, Dan, was connected with extensive mercantile interests in Chicago, is spending a few weeks in the windy city.

Mr. John Doerr spent Sunday with friends east of Walkerton.

MILDMAY

Pte. Geo. Pross and Pte. R. E. Pinkney of 234th Batt. Brampton visited at the former's home here over Sunday returning on Tuesday. If Geo. passes his final examination next week, he will go overseas soon.

Rev. Mr. Glover of Victoria College Toronto occupied the Methodist pulpit both morning and evening last Sunday.

The Moltke Hockey aggregation played a second game with our local team on Friday evening last and suffered a defeat. Moltke scored the first but Mildmay rolled up six tallies at half-time. Both teams played six men during the last half "Sport" Schefter being unable to play as he received a bad cut on the right side of his face. At the end of the game

Additional Correspondence on Page Four

Mildmay had a lead of 4 goals the score being 8—4. Mr. Harry Young and Charlie Schmidt starred for Mildmay. Mr. Bill Baetz acted as referee.

Miss Melinda Plotsch and Mrs. B. D. Patten entertained a number of friends to a School Days, Dear Old Golden Rule Days party at their home on Thursday night, Feb. 22nd.

Miss Elda Gowdy has accepted a position on the Gazette staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Frank and daughter visited friends in Walkerton over Sunday.

Misses Clara Klemmer and Lillie Mauer spent Sunday at Mrs. P. D. Liesemer's.

Dr. Huck has purchased a 1917 Ford car from Liesemer and Kalbfleisch.

Say do you know the very latest thing to wear in the lapel of your coat is a potato instead of an orchid.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Johnston made a visit to the County Town on Monday afternoon.

KINLOSS

Mr. Carl McDonald spent Sunday at home.

See the smile on Mr. Bannerman's face. He caught the stork leaving a fine little girl in the house the other night.

How our choir is growing! It is a good stunt, keep on girls.

We expect our regular Red Cross meeting next Saturday. Don't be afraid to come out in the evening boys. We will try to please you, give you everything good to eat, and lots of talk to pass the time away. It only costs 10 cents but please don't ask for change.

Mr. Allan Orr sold a fine colt to Mr. Will Irwin last week.

Mr. Sam Moulton and Mr. Gordon spent Sunday evening in the neighborhood.

Kelso says that Abb has the mumps. We sure sympathize with him.

Mr. Lauchlin McDonald leaves on Thursday for Saskatchewan.

Mr. Lorne Hodgins and family Sundayed at Mrs. Smith's.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Campbell spent Friday afternoon and evening at Mr. G. W. Herd's.

CARGILL

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Keeling were in Listowel on Friday.

Mrs. George Shrumm left on Saturday for Stratford where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Wesley Brownscombe.

A sleigh load of local sports attended the carnival in Paisley on Friday night and all reported a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Saunders entertained the snowshoers on Monday evening. After a long hike a dainty luncheon was served and much enjoyed by all.

Mr. W. D. Cargill M. P. P. spent the week-end at his home here.

Mr. H. N. Brownscombe spent a few days of last week with his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Grainger in Stratford.

Mrs. James Taylor and daughters left on Thursday for Brussels where they intend spending the summer.

Mrs. Wm. Monahon spent the week-end with her daughter Mrs. Railey in Paisley.

The Womens Patriotic League shipped about thirty boxes the latter part of the week to Cargill boys in France and England.

Mr. James Alexander the popular Junior in the Royal Bank here was transferred to the Branch in Elmwood on Tuesday. Jim is an amiable and very obliging young man and will certainly be missed by all, both young and old, all of whom he was a friend. Jim has been filling the position of Librarian and was also Secretary of the Bowling Club. Although we hate to lose Jim we all wish him every success in his new office. Mr. Lorne Carr of Kincardine is his successor.

The Anniversary services held in St. Andrews Church on Sunday were very well attended. Rev. Mr. MacDonald of Attwood, whose former home was in Riversdale took charge of both morning and evening service. He was a very fine speaker and delivered his sermons well. A good collection was received.

FORMOSA

The Annual Meeting of the Formosa Mutual Fire Insurance Company was held in Formosa on February 8th was as usually well attended by the policy holders, some seventy being present. The president, Mr. E. G. Kuntz, gave a summary of the past years' business. The expenses of management of the Company being lower per $1000 insurance, than that of any other Company in Ontario. This item is the one item that can be controlled by the management of the Company, and the expense of management should be considered by any party desiring insurance. The Fire losses cannot be controlled by any insurance company, as the company, is as liable to have losses, as buildings are liable to be damaged or destroyed by fire. The risks accepted by the Formosa Mutual being of the best that could be desired, without having them spread in far off portions of the province. During the year 1916—1803 policies were issued covering insurance to the extent of $2,765,483.00 while the total amount of insurance carried by the company amounts to $7,441,893. The cash on hand and in Banks on Dec 31, 1916 was $5379.72. The total assets of the Company was $127,733.12. The losses were promptly inspected, and losses paid within reasonable time after inspection. Market values were paid for live stock killed by lightening. The staff of agents for the company are all earnest to promote interest of the Company and prompt attention given to any matter of insurance that may be brought before them. The election of directors; Mr. E. G. Kuntz and Thomas Ingles were re-elected as directors by acclamation.

VESTA

The Red Cross Work is in good progress here.

Vesta had the honour of being one of the coldest places during the recent cold weather spell.

A number from this vicinity attended the funeral of the late Mr. Andrew Rae of Malcolm.

We are sorry to report that Miss Eva Fortune was unable to attend High School last week owing to sickness.

Mr. Burns of Chesley Sundayed at Mr. and Mrs. Peter McGarrity's.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Percey McGarrity is under the weather. We wish him a speedy recovery.

GLAMIS

On Wednesday morning, Feb. 21st, 1917, the home of Mr. Neil Currie 2nd con. Bruce was the scene of a very pretty wedding when his eldest daughter Annie Gertrude was united in marriage to Mr. John Groves of Kerrobert Sask, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Mr. Neilson of Paisley. The bridal couple took their places under an arch of evergreens, tastefully decorated. The bride who was given away by her father looked charming in a gown of white silk georgette crepe and satin, and wore the gift of the groom, a beautiful pearl necklet. After congratulations and good wishes were expressed, the bridal party and guests, numbering twenty-five, proceeded to the dining room, where they partook of a sumptuous repast, after which the happy couple left amid showers of rice and confetti, to board the 5 p. m. train for the West, visiting at Port Arthur, and Winnipeg thence to their home at Kerrobert, Sask. The bride travelled in navy blue suit with hat to match. Mr. and Mrs Groves are well known here and their many friends join heartily in wishing the young couple best wishes for many happy years o'er the matrimonial sea.

GREENOCK

REPORT OF S. S. NO. 9.

Sr. IV.—Honours.—Gertrude O'Hagan, Wilfred Kroeplin.

Pass.—Anthony Dieboldt.

Jr. IV.—Honours.—John Doyle, James O'Hagan.

Pass.—Evelyn O'Hagan.

Sr. III.—Honors.—John McKinnon, Maurice O'Hagan.

Jr. III.—Honors.—Andrew Doyle Marguerite O'Hagan.

Pass.—Venetia O'Hagan, Harold O'Hagan, John Quinlan, Laura Kroeplin, Viola Cassidy

Class II.—Honours.—Mary Doyle.

Class I.—Joseph O'Hagan, Harry Kroeplin.

Primary.—Honours.—Margery O'Hagan, Agnes O'Hagan.

Pass.—Loretta Cassidy, Beatrice Kroeplin, Jessie McKinnon.

The following pupils missed no days in the month of February.—James O'Hagan, John Doyle, Mary Doyle, Margery O'Hagan, Joseph O'Hagan, Venetia O'Hagan.

POETS' CORNER

THE COMING MAN

A pair of very chubby legs,
  Encased in scarlet hose;
A pair of chubby boots,
  With rather doubtful toes;
A little kilt, a little coat,
  Cut as a mother can—
And lo! before us stands in state
  The future's coming man.

Those hands—those little busy hands,
  So sticky, small and brown;
Those hands whose only mission seems
  To pull all order down—
Who knows what latent strength may be Hidden within their clasp.
Though now it's but a taffy stick
  In sturdy hold they grasp.

Ah, blessing on those little hands,
  Whose work is still undone!
And blessings on those little feet
  Whose race is yet unrun!
And blessings on the little brain
  That has not learned to plan!
Whate'er the future holds in store,
  God bless the coming man.

Winter Footwear

The Latest Styles and the Best Qualities. No misrepresentation here. Repair department in connection.

C. PETTEPLACE

Wonderful Invention
-The New Edison

It is not a talking machine. It is a wonderful invention which baffles detection from the original.

Superiority of the New Edison
NO NEEDLES TO CHANGE
NO PARTIALLY REPRODUCED MUSIC
INDESTRUCTIBLE RECORDS

No unevenness in playing, no harsh, discordant qualities, no shortened records.

Won't you please call or write for further information about this new invention. I shall esteem the privilege of giving you a free demonstration at your home.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON

Shopping Satisfaction

That's what you get at our store.

Everything you need or want—and plenty of it.

Prompt service — courtesy — full stocks. Do your shopping here and see how convenient it is.

THE BEST IN QUALITY, PRICE AND SERVICE.

Put us to the Test.

Butterick Quarterly

Complete forecast of the latest Paris and New York fashions as interpreted by exclusive Butterick Designers.
25c WITH COUPON GOOD FOR 15c IN THE PURCHASE OF ANY BUTTERICK PATTERN.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerton

MAKE YOUR DOLLARS
FIGHT
AT THE FRONT.
BUY
DOMINION OF CANADA
THREE-YEAR
War Savings Certificates

$25.00 for $21.50
50.00 " 43.00
100.00 " 86.00

INDIVIDUAL PURCHASES LIMITED TO $1500.

FOR FULL PARTICULARS APPLY AT ANY BANK OR ANY MONEY ORDER POST OFFICE

JAN. 9, 1917
FINANCE DEPARTMENT OTTAWA

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE
REQUESTS
THE PEOPLE OF CANADA TO BEGIN NOW
TO SAVE MONEY FOR THE
NEXT WAR LOAN

JAN. 9, 1917
DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE OTTAWA

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

IX, NO. 10 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, MARCH 8th 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Get Your Horses
Shape for Spring!

ry feed commences to tell on your stock and they eed a tuning up before the spring work opens.
easiest, quickest and least expensive way to do this use
HESS' STOCK FOOD
in 65c and $1.00 packages and 25 lb pails at $2.25.
y dose means more vitality.
We also sell Hess' Louse Killer, Poultry Food, Heave Worm Powders, Etc.

unter's Drug Store
and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

"Ready for Spring
TAKE Rexall Sarsaparilla
A Splendid
Blood Purifier
$1.00 a Bottle
A. P. Sieveright
Drugs and Kodaks

or a short time we will give Special Bargains
in WALL APER
ke room for our New k for 1917 which is arriving.
cCrum & Co.

's Tan Mexican Kip
OOTS near water proof as
r can be made.
e soft till worn out.
ll stand all kinds of hard ade on the regulation
ast.
ice $4.75
amsey
e Shoeman

PRING '17
ENING
w Spring & Summer
OR-MADE FASHIONS
FABRICS FOR MEN
WOMEN ARE HERE.
h for Window Display.
rinciple of making garments is maintained by a spirit and de-ation of all our staff to produce est.
r Guarantee
ecause of our high standard of work-anship, and because of our rapidly inreasing number of pleased customers, e feel confident of our ability to satisfy
For this reason we feel safe in guaranteeing every suit we make.
Easter will Soon be Here
Order Early
Ladies' Suits, Skirts and Coats made to measure in all the latest styles. (Cloth sold in suit ends.
Order at once to have ready for Easter
(April 8th.)
Men's Furnishings
All the latest styles in Men's Hats, Gloves, Collars, Shirts, Vests, are here. Give us a call, we will please you.
G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

Memorial Service

Memorial service for the late Private Leith Russell will be held at St. Thomas Church Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

Wedded 49 Years

The Telescope joins with many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Justus Helm many happy returns of Monday, March 5th, the forty-ninth anniversary of their wedding day.

Visit From Old Pals

Letters from boys of the 160th Bruce Batt'n state that they had a recent visit from Roy Oberle, who was on ten days' leave in England and Stan. Scott, son of Judge Scott of Perth, who recently joined the British Navy.

Buys More Land

Mr. Frank Rennie has added to his holdings in Brant a fifty acre farm on Concession 1 north of the Durham Road bought from the F. J. Allardyce Estate. This property almost adjoins his farm. The consideration was $2000. Mr. Rennie now has two hundred acres.

Second-Hand Cars

We have several 1914—15 second-hand Ford touring cars in stock which we will sell at reasonable terms and prices. These cars have been overhauled and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. If interested come and see us or write to Liesemer & Kolbfleish, Walkerton or Mildmay.

Rev. Mr. Walker Improved

Rev. D. A. Walker's many friends here will be glad to learn that he is making a good recovery from his recent nervous breakdown. The reverend gentleman is already taking some some of the weekly meetings in connection with his work and may return to his duties again after Easter.

Gone To California

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Harriett of Galt left this week to spend the rest of the winter in California. The Dr. has not been feeling very well the past year and it is hoped that the change will do him good. Their little daughter, Margaret, has come up to stay with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. McCrum.

Advertising For Supt.

The Hospital Board has been advertising in the city papers for a Superintendent to succeed Miss Thirsk, who handed in her resignation recently. A number of applications have been received but no selection has yet been made. Miss Thirsk has consented to remain for a short while until a successor can be appointed.

BORN

KNOLL—In Brant, on March 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. Alex Knoll, a daughter.

KUENEMANN—In Dezmelton, on Feb. 22nd, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kuenemann, a daughter.

KINZIE—In Mildmay, on Feb. 21st, to Mr. and Mrs Elam Kinzie, a daughter.

BERBERICH—In Mildmay, on Feb. 22nd, to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Berberich jr., a daughter.

DIED

McKINNON—In Brant, on Sunday, March 4th, Miss Flora McKinnon, formerly of Walkerton, aged 81.

MARRIED

SMITH—LOBSINGER—At Carlsruhe, on Feb. 13th, by Rev. Father Leuhardt, Miss Sadie Lobsinger, daughter of the late Reinhardt Lobsinger of Carlsruhe to Mr. Douglas Smith of Brant Tp.

FOR SALE

Four brood sows and pigs, several Clyde horses and colts, coming three years, two grade bulls. Shorthorn and boars for service. Paul Hoffarth, 14th con. Carrick, R. R. 1, Carlsruhe.

Shirt-Making Bee For The Soldiers

All ladies of the town are invited to the armouries Friday, March 9th, at 2 o'clock, to make shirts for our soldiers. The need is great. Come and do your bit.

D. D. G. M. At Paisley

Mayor Johnston paid his official visit as D. D. G. M. to Paisley Masonic Lodge on Friday night. The Paisley brethren exemplified a degree in particularly fine form. Afterwards a banquet was tendered the D. D. G. M. at the Town Hall.

Brant Preparedness League

A meeting of the Brant Branch of the Bruce Preparedness League will be held in the Council Chamber of the Town Hall, Walkerton on Wednesday afternoon of next week at 2.30 o'clock. A full attendance is requested as business of importance will be brought before the meeting.

Gets Promotion

Mr. A. McEwen, who has been accountant at the Rattan factory of the Can. Furniture Co. here the last three years returns next week to the head office at Woodstock to take an important position at the head of the Cost-finding Dept. there. In his quiet way, Mr. McEwen has made many good friends in Walkerton who wish him every success.

Ed. Wettlaufer Married

Ed. Wettlaufer, one of Walkerton's best-known Old Boys, was quietly married at Toronto on Thursday, March 2nd to Miss E. M. Jackson of Kitchener. Mr. and Mrs. Wettlaufer are spending their honeymoon in Florida. On their return from the South they will live at Kitchener, where Mr. Wettlaufer is a member of a wholesale leather firm.

Joins Flying Corps

Mr. F. J. Fraser had a telegram on Monday from his son, Mr. Dick Fraser of Hamilton, stating that he had been accepted as an applicant by the Royal Flying Corps. He will train for a short time at Camp Borden Aviation School before going Overseas to fly a plane for the British. He expects to spend a few days in Walkerton before long.

Council Makes Grants

Deputations from various patriotic societies waited upon the Brant Tp. Council on Monday. The Council showed its appreciation of the excellent work that is being done, especially by the women of the Township by making the following grants —$60, Cargill Women's Patriotic League: $40 to Eden Grove Red Cross Society: $30 Brant Women's Hospital Aid.

Sent Up For Trial

Alex Stewart, the Harriston farmer who roundly abused the British Crown in the hearing of Mr. John Rowland recently, is now in trouble up to his ears as a result of his disloyal talk. At Guelph yesterday he was committed for trial on a charge of Sedition, and had to put up $3,000 bail to secure his release. County Crown Attorney McDonald of Guelph is the prosecutor and Stewart will be defended by Nicol Jeffrey of Guelph.

Ladies To Advise Board

The County Hospital Board has recognized the loyal support which it has received from the Women's Organizations of the County by inviting the County Association of Ladies' Hospital Aids to appoint a committee of three ladies to act in an Advisory capacity to the Hospital Board. The County Association has responded by naming Mesdames Norman Robertson, David Noble, and James Whitehead.

Save Your Papers

The pupils of the High School wish to call the attention of the public to the fact that they are collecting newspapers and magazines and to ask for their cooperation. They will call on Saturday, March 10th and once a month thereafter and would be grateful if the people of the town would save newspapers and magazines. The proceeds from the sale of these papers are to be used entirely for patriotic purposes.

Easter Parcels For Knox Soldiers

Knox Congregation are preparing to send an Easter parcel this week to each one of the ninety-six soldiers on the church Honour Roll. As a result of the Shower held on Saturday, there will be a pair of hand-knit woollen socks to go in each parcel as well as chocolate, coffee, chewing gum and other things that the boys like. The work was taken in hand by the young ladies of the congregation. Enclosed in each of the parcels will be a personal greeting from the Pastor.

Plot Against Recruiters

Lieut.-Col. Rorke, Commanding Officer of the 248th Grey Batt'n, stated at a meeting at Owen Sound Sunday night that he had reports from Neustadt of the young men being actively against recruiting. His officers had discovered a plot whereby they were to be tarred and feathered, and bills which the recruiting officers put up were promptly torn down. Col. Rorke said he had reinforced his recruiting staff at Neustadt and was taking active measures against any unpleasant events occurring.

Cow For Sale

As I am leaving town to look after my farm in Elgin Co., I offer for sale an ideal town cow, calved Jan., dehorned, inside roller, a splendid cream cow. Come and see her. W. H. Paterson 8t9

Joins Flying Service

Leslie Huether B. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Huether of Guelph, has joined the British Naval Air Service and leaves in about two weeks for England. Less is expected here this week-end on a last visit to his Walkerton friends.

Potatoes High But—

Government officials claim that while wage earners are being taxed an exorbitant price for potatoes, the country is full of tubers that are being stored away for higher prices. If that is the case, there is going to be a rude awakening. New Brunswick has a million bags ready to ship and when freight starts moving freely again, there will also be large importations from the Canandian West. If the people who are holding for a tremendous price get "stung" in the Spring, they won't deserve much sympathy.

Expected Home Soon

Two Walkerton men, Pte. Dick Addley, and Pte. C. F. Nutting who have done a heroic part at the Front and are being invalided home, sailed for Canada on Feb. 19th, it is reported, and are expected home in a few days. Mr. Nutting has been confined to military hospitals in England for some time. "Dick" Addley was wounded in the chest, in the arm and in the face and is unfit for further service. It is hoped that when they arrive at Walkerton the town will turn out and give a proper welcome to these heroic soldiers.

Death Of Flora McKinnon

Miss Flora McKinnon, a very old resident of Walkerton, passed away at the home of her niece, Mrs. A. Milne of Brant on Saturday. Death was the result of old age. The deceased was engaged as a servant in the home of the late Judge Barrett for many years. About a year ago her health failed her and she removed from town to the home of her niece where she was cared for up to the time of her death. The remains were taken to Saugeen on Tuesday for interment, the service in Brant being conducted by Rev. Thos. Wilson, pastor of Knox Church.

Neglected Children Taken

A nine year old boy who has not been properly cared for, was taken away from his step mother this week by the Children's Aid Society who will endeavor to place him in a good foster home. The step-mother is an English woman who recently returned from the Old Land, her husband being a soldier at the Front. A small boy was taken away from another Old Country soldier's wife this week. And two small sisters have also been taken as wards. The little girls will be left with the mother for a while to give her an opportunity to look after them better.

Won't Buy This Year

The Children's Aid Society has decided not to buy a property for a Shelter this year. Warden Izzard and the County Council Committee has recommended that the Society rent a building for the coming year on the ground that none of the available properties are suitable. The County Council Committee spent a couple of days here last week inspecting a number of places suggested by the local officials as being more or less suitable. In their written report the Committee suggested that if no place turned up during the coming year it would then be advisable to go ahead and build.

Sunday Night Lecture

Rev. J. H. Dyke the Field Secretary of the National Sanitarium Association will give a lecture in the Town Hall, on Sunday evening, March 11th, after church services, on the subject of Tuberculosis, its nature, treatment and prevention, illustrated with instructive lantern views. You will find this lecture both interesting and instructive. Not only those afflicted with this dread disease will learn how to help themselves, but the information gained may be the means of preventing you yourself from contracting the disease. Collection taken in aid of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Sixty-five Years Wedded

Mr. and Mrs. John C. McIntyre of Glamis celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Feb. 20th. Although in his ninety-sixth year, Mr. McIntyre enjoys excellent health and manifests lively interest in everything, especially in the war. Mrs. McIntyre is in her ninetieth year, and yet she has in the last few weeks knitted three pairs of socks for her two soldier grandsons and her soldier grandson-in-law. John Campbell McIntyre and Sarah McEachren were married in 1852, in the village of Manilla, county of Ontario, both being natives of the Isle of Tiree, Argyleshire, Scotland. There are four sons, four daughters, twenty grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Renewed your subscription yet?

See free Palmolive soap offer on page 8.

Mr. G. Searle is in Toronto on business.

Miss Ruth Howie is visiting friends at Barrie.

Mrs. Duncan is visiting friends in Stratford.

For the best farm shoes go to Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Miss Ella Beattie returned from her holidays last week.

Mr. James Whitehead was in Fergus on business Monday.

Mr. Nelson Wettlaufer of Lindsay spent Sunday at his home here.

New spring styles in women's fine shoes at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Miss Shaw of the Hospital Staff, visited her home at Queensville last week.

Made Supreme Sacrifice

PTE. ADAM LEITH RUSSELL

Of the Trench Mortar Battery, 10th Brigade, 4th Division, and son of Reeve Robert Russell of Walkerton, Killed in Action February 10th, 1917.

Dr. R. L. Clapp has been appointed a member of the County Hospital Board.

Mr. Thomas J. Halliday of Kilfield, Sask., is here on a visit to the old home.

Mr. Alex. MacGregor of Toronto is visiting his uncle, Mr. Robert MacGregor.

Miss Violet Laithwaite the new assistant at "The Elite" arrived in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Walford of Hespeler are expected here for the week-end.

Miss Emma Latchford has returned home from a visit to Guelph and Drayton.

St. Marys will try to raise $15,000 for the Patriotic Fund on Thursday and Friday.

Miss Hilda Reddon of the Bell Telephone Staff spent Sunday at her home in Teeswater.

Clearing on the bargain table a lot of women's shoes at $2.25. Ramsey the Shoeman.

Mr. Arch. Tolton went to Guelph yesterday to attend the sale of thoroughbred cattle.

If you feel "grouchy" come to the Ebony Lady Minstrels. They will make you laugh.

Mrs. Robert Smith of Hanover has been visiting Mrs. F. Latchford and other friends in town.

Miss Violet Laithwaite of Goderich has been engaged as assistant at "The Elite" for the coming season.

Mrs. Herman Becker is leaving the first of next month to join her husband who is working in Detroit.

Dr. D. A. McCrimmon of Ripley, one of Bruce's best-known pioneer residents, died at his home on Friday.

The Fischer Bros. who have been visiting their old home at Carlsruhe return this week to Saskatchewan.

New Millinery at "The Elite" and advance orders can be promptly attended to. Opening announcement later.

Telescope readers should find much to interest them in the report of the I. O. D. E. work during the last year, on page 4.

Mr. Jno. Scanlon of Beaver Glen Farm, Brant, is in Toronto this week owing to the very serious illness of his son, Frank.

A meeting of the Brant Farmer's Club will be held at Mr. John D. Little's on Tuesday evening, March 13th. Ladies welcome.

Rev. (Dr.) Ross, of Norwich, a former pastor of Walkerton Methodist Church, is completing his fiftieth year in the pastorate this year and expects to retire shortly, after a life of great usefulness.

Renewed your Telescope yet?

C. P. R. Town Ticket office at Hunter's.

Home made candy to be sold in ice boxes at the Ebony Lady Minstrel.

Regal on your shoes means quality in them. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Our new shoemaker will be here Monday, March 12th. Ramsey the Shoeman.

Quality is one thing we never forget in the selection of our stock. Ramsey the Shoeman.

The Telescope does not mail receipts for subscriptions. The address label on the paper is the receipt.

Bruce Presbytery held its regular meeting at Paisley Tuesday, disposing of considerable routine business.

The plan for the Ebony Lady Minstrels will open at McCrum's Book Store on Monday, March 12th, at 11 o'clock.

Miss Ethel Lindsay, who has been visiting at her home here for the past couple of months, returned to Toronto last week.

Mr. James Carroll, who has been spending the winter in the East left on Saturday afternoon for his home at Alsask, Sask.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wingelelder attended the funeral of their sister-in-law, Mrs. Chas. Wingelelder at Stratford last week.

Mrs. Joseph Lindsay returned home from the County Hospital last Wednesday and continues to progress slowly at her home.

The ladies of the Baptist Congregation packed on Tuesday well-filled Easter parcels to send to the boys in England and France.

Prin. and Mrs. H. S. Sanderson and child of Chesley were Sunday visit with their parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Sanderson.

Mrs. Richard Golon, formerly of Walkerton, is reported to be very ill at the home of her son, Rev. J. L. Golon, at Lancaster, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Eckel and little son, left for their home near Didsbury, Alta. on Monday after a three months' visit in Walkerton and vicinity.

Coun. Walter Findlay, Frank Fisher, and Herman W. Monk of Brant attended the United Farmers of Ontario Convention at Toronto last week.

Teeswater public school has been closed on account of measles and whooping cough. Three or four deaths have resulted from the epidemic.

Come to the Opera House on Friday March 16th and laugh with the Ebony Lady Minstrels—All local talent. Proceeds in aid of the Bruce County Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. John Meyer, who have been East on a visit to friends in this district the past three months, left Tuesday afternoon for their home at Lebrett, Sask.

Mr. Oliver McConnell intends erecting a fine brick residence in the Spring on the vacant lot which he recently purchased from Mr. W. M. Shaw, opposite the Armoury.

The Central Military Convalescent Hospital of Toronto have acknowledged with heartiest thanks the generous donation of jam and pickles sent them from the I. O. D. E.

Mr. W. Cheshire of Wiarton, who succeeds Mr. McEwen as accountant at the Rattan Factory, has arrived here and intends bringing his family from Wiarton as soon as he can secure a suitable dwelling.

Miss Birdie Schumacher of Saskatoon, is visiting at her uncle's, Mr. J. J. Schumacher. Her father Mr. Philip Schumacher, a former well-known Walkerton citizen, is proprietor of the King Edward Hotel, Saskatoon.

Mrs. Vansyckle (nee Aggie Paull) and her two children, who have been spending the winter with her mother, Mrs. S. Paull, leave to-day for their home at Swan River, Man. Miss Mary Paull is accompanying them.

Mr. John A. Hogg had a letter from his daughter, Marion, from Perth, Scotland, on Saturday, saying that her brother Gordon is improving slowly but satisfactorily. It will be months before he will be up and around again.

Mrs. Frame and little daughter of Alberta who have been visiting old friends in Walkerton and vicinity are returning home on Saturday. Miss Carrie Allan, has disposed of her household effects and will accompany her sister, Mrs. Frame, to the West where she will make her home.

Rev. J. W. Sanderson occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church Sunday morning in the absence of Rev. C. W. Cosens, who was away preaching anniversary sermons at Southampton. Mr. Sanderson made an earnest appeal from the text: "My child, give me thy Heart." At the evening service, Mr. John Leggat gave a thoughtful discourse on "The Devil."

Boy wanted. G. T. Rourke, Men's Wear.

Girl wanted to learn sewing. G. T. Rourke.

Dr. Wells of Waterloo is holidaying with friends in town this week.

The Ice crop, which is now all harvested, has been the best in years.

Order your suit to-day and be ready for Easter. G. T. Rourke, Taylor and Men's Wear.

Miss Holmes of Clinton, who has been visiting Mrs. J. McCool, returned home last week.

Mr. Hugh McKerracher of Paisley, spent Wednesday with his brother, Mr. D. McKerracher.

Mrs. J. Bailey of Paisley was a visitor yesterday at Mr. D. McKerracher's and at Mrs. Gordon Bell's.

Fred Zero, who has been working at Durham the past year, is preparing to return and make his home in Walkerton.

Walkerton Masonic will receive an official visit next Tuesday night from the D. D. G. M., R. Wor. Bro. Johnston.

Mr. A. A. Rehn, who has been spending the winter at his old home near Formosa, returned lately to Youngstown, Alta.

Mrs. Sidney Inch and little son of Swift Current, Sask., arrived on Saturday night on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lewis.

Mrs. John Tolton, who had the misfortune to fracture her arm by a fall on the icy pavement last Wednesday is reported to be doing as well as may be expected.

Dr. Hanmore V. S. of Cargill, who has been on veterinary service at the Front the past two years, is expected home shortly. The Dr. was injured by a fall from a horse.

Mr. Con Voelzing, who sold his 200 acre farm in Brant recently, has bought a house and lot in Hanover from Mr. Ezra Kumpel and will remove to that town shortly.

Mrs. Frank Player and daughter Winnie of Kincardine spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Casbert and renewed acquaintances in town. They appear to have done well in Kincardine.

Mr. Thos. Dixon had word recently from his son, Dr. Dixon of Stavely, Alta., that he has been laid up lately with a badly bruised leg. At present the Doctor is attending to his practice on crutches.

Rev. C. W. Cosens preached anniversary sermons at Southampton on Sunday and stayed over for the entertainment on Monday evening. A special financial effort to wipe off a floating indebtedness of $500 during the day was completely successful.

Mrs. John Fehrenbach, an aged resident of the town, is lying dangerously ill with pneumonia. For several days her life has been despaired of. She is in her 82nd year. Her daughter Mrs. Paul Miller of Toledo, arrived here on Monday.

Wanted

A good general servant. Apply to Mrs. W. M. Shaw.

For Sale

Organ, cheap, also a few pieces of other furniture. Apply at this office.

For Sale

General store and dwelling, good business; reason, dissolving partnership. Oberle Bros., Formosa, Ont.

Camera Lost

Between Dunkeld and Chepstow on Feb. 27th, a pocket kodak. Will finder kindly return to Rev. Father Goodrow, Chepstow.

Auction Sale

Of farm, farm stock and implements on lot 7, 8, 9, 8. D. R., Greenock, on Thursday, March 15th. Mrs. Hector Herd, proprietress. John Purvis, Auctioneer.

Gone To Malta

Mr. Joseph Lawson of Guelph had word from his son, Dr. Smirle Lawson lately that he has gone from Saloniki to Malta to recuperate from an attack of rheumatism.

Auction Sale

Of farm stock and implements will be held at lot 42, con. 3, Brant, on Tuesday March 20th, at one o'clock sharp. Conrad Voelzing, prop., John Purvis, auctioneer.

Walkerton Man Vice-Pres.

Ex-Mayor Fred W. Lippert was elected to the important position of Vice-president of the Dominion Marble Dealers Association at their recent Annual Convention at Toronto.

Methodist Honor Roll

A nicely illuminated Honor Roll is to be hung in the Methodist Church shortly, bearing the names of young men of the Congregation who signed up to serve their King. The names to be inscribed on the roll:—Charles R. Sutton, Chester Cunningham, Hugh Threndyle, Walter M. Pitt, Alvin Wilton, Ralph B. Glave, Wilbur A. Cryderman, Elliot R. Dixon, Louis Dippel, Wm. Wolfe, Harry Bolden, Walter Bryce, Charles Bryce, Everett A. Truax, Geo. Flewelling, Dick Fraser, Sam Truax.

Specialist's Opinion

"I consider the Dominion Life one of our really successful Canadian Companies, economically and honestly managed, and giving best results."—Saturday Night. M. G. Dippel, Agent Walkerton.

Horticulturists Reorganize

The Walkerton Horticultural Society met recently and reorganized for the coming year with the following officers:—President, M. G. Dippel 1st vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. G. Searle, 2nd vice-Pres.—Miss E. Truax, Sec. treas. James Tolton. Directors,—H. M. Lay, L. C. Benton, N. C. McKay, T. E. Attwood, H. M. Norrish, David Taggart, Mrs. O. E. Klein, Mrs. H. Pletsch, Mrs. E. J. Skelton. Auditors,—D. McKechnie, G. D. McKay. The Society decided to take advantage of the Agricultural Dept's. offer to send up a scientific garden instructor to give a public lecture on gardening.

Hockey At Chesley

The local hockey team went to Chesley Friday night and played a return match with the hockeyists of that town. The boys had previously trimmed Chesley on Walkerton ice by a narrow margin and hardly expected to win the return match. Chesley has a fast bunch of players and their goal man Friday night was particularly good, stopping many hot shots that looked like counters. The score at the end of the second interval was 2—0, at full time 4—1. The local line-up was: —Goal, Don Wallace; Point, Herm. Runstadtler; Coverpoint, Wess Russell; Rover, Walt. Patterson, Centre, Vic Eidt; Left, Jack Chalmers; Right, Alf Schelter. The most exciting experience on the way home from Chesley when the sleigh capsized spilling the occupants in the ditch.

Off On Suspended Sentence

Jacob and Harry Schnurr, the two Mildmay boys charged with burglarizing at Mildmay, came up for trial before Judge Greig on Friday morning and pleaded guilty. The Judge remanded them until Monday morning for sentence. After giving the two lads some wholesome advice as to how to become good and useful citizens of the community, the Judge allowed them to go on suspended sentence. Otherwise he would have had to send them to penitentiary, as the maximum penalty for the offence of which they pleaded guilty is fourteen years. And it is only in the case of crimes where the penalty runs up to five years that the statutes provide that boys up to 16 years may be sent to a reformatory. As the boys are both under 16 years, it is hoped that with the encouragement they have been given by the Court, they will mend their ways.

Too Many Slow-pays

Walkerton citizens are not paying up as they should the money they subscribed to the Patriotic Campaign last May, according to the figures presented by H. M. Lay, sec.-treas. at a committee meeting held on Friday. $7501 was subscribed in all. $4495 has been paid in. Of the $3006 that is still owing, no less than $1209 is due from citizens who have not yet paid a single cent. As there remains only three months to make up the full amount it is hoped that the citizens who have not done so, will show their good faith by paying up promptly. In some towns the Committee is suing delinquents who have not settled and in other Committees the threat has been made to publish the list of slow-pays. The Committee here has taken no step in this direction yet but if the money does not come in, some definite action will be necessary. The money is urgently needed and even now the Central Committee is talking of cutting down allowances and it will be necessary to do so if the people fail to meet their obligations more promptly.

WHOLE COUNTY SHOULD HELP

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton

Dear Sir:—

Will you give space to a suggestion from a Ratepayer in town re the maintenance of the Hospital. Judging from the frequent contributions in different ways for its maintenance by the Ladies of Walkerton, and so little from outside sources. Am I right in thinking that if the different municipalities of the county were given to understand that the hospital has equal rights to their interest and support that the town of Walkerton would be justified in saying to the other towns and villages of the County, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."

Ratepayer.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, Feb.28.)

Hay, per ton,	8.00 to	10.00
Oats, per bsh.	63 to......	65
Wheat " "	1.75 to......	1.75
Barley, " "	85 to......	90
Buckwheat "	1.00 to......	1.00
Hogs, per cwt,	14.00 to......	14.00
Butter, per lb,	33 to	33
Eggs, per doz.	35 to	35

CURRENT COMMENT

HOPE TO STARVE BRITAIN.

Having failed to accomplish the overthrow of the Allied Powers on land, the Central Powers now hope to defeat them on sea by starving Great Britain into submission. Judging by the reports from Germany and Austria, and even from Bulgaria, the feeling in these countries is that this last desperate gamble is depended upon to finish the war, to bring success to the Central Powers. Should it fail, we imagine they may struggle on a while, with defeat staring them in the face all the time, until the final collapse. In her difficulty with the United States, Germany has fished out an old treaty between the two countries which she seeks to use to her own advantage, but it is pointed out that the self-same treaty has something in it which should prevent Germany from sinking ships at sight. The following agreement about the freedom of the seas appears in it:

"The free intercourse and commerce of the subjects or citizens of the party remaining neutral with the belligerent powers shall not be interrupted.

"On the contrary, in that case, as in full peace, the vessels of the neutral party may navigate freely to and from the ports and on the coasts of the belligerent parties, free vessels making free goods, insomuch that all things shall be adjudged free which shall be on board any vessel belonging to the neutral party, although such things belong to an enemy of the other.

"And the same freedom shall be extended to persons who shall be on board a free vessel, although they should be enemies to the other party, unless they be soldiers in actual service of such an enemy."

To sink American vessels or drown American citizens would be contrary to this agreement. But evidently Germany has determined to make of the treaty another "scrap of paper." It is now apparent that Germany's promise to the United States last May that she would refrain from sinking vessels until they were warned and the passengers and crew placed in safety, was merely a blind to cover up her real designs. Since then she has been busy building a fleet of the boats for the very purpose of increasing her frightfulness. She held her hand until she had everything ready for the onslaught. The German proposals of peace were made public at a time when she had everything in order to carry out her devilish purpose. Her promises to the United States were, as we have said, a mere blind, and her peace offers were not intended to be taken seriously. This latest submarine campaign was not kept back for any other reason than that Germany was not ready to launch it. It is on a par with the Zeppelin outrages, and the hope is that it will meet a similar fate.

THE SUBMARINE FAILURE.

We have the cheering statement of Lord Curzon that Admiral Jellicoe is not dissatisfied with what has been done to check the German submarine menace during the past two weeks, and that he is quite pleased with the number of German submarines that will never return to their own shores. They have been bagged by the British. This is good news. Another matter for congratulation is that Admiral Lord Beresford is satisfied with the situation. He is the admiralty's arch critic, and when he admits that it is doing well nobody else need complain. He says that Britain has lost four million tons of shipping since the war began, but that three million of this has been made good. The situation might be serious, says his lordship, but there is no reason for panic.

Speaking for the Admiralty, Lord Lytton declared that everything was being done that ingenuity could devise to circumvent the intentions of the enemy, and he adds: "We are the sea police of the whole world, and Germany is playing the role of highwayman. We are confident that we can continue in the future as in the past not merely to supply our armies at the front with munitions and supplies and carry out our obligations to our allies, but also to keep free certain routes for neutral commerce and obtain necessary supplies for our own people." Britannia still rules the waves. It is by the courtesy of the British navy that Count Bernstorff can cross the Atlantic in safety. British ships are entering and leaving British ports as usual and although we hear of vessels being sunk we do not hear of the fate that is overtaking many of the enemy's submarines.

The Egg Boycott.

Let the subject not be broached;
I refuse to eat them poached.

'Tis in vain the hen has toiled,
I decline to eat them boiled.

Any weakening I spurn;
From an omelet I turn.

Till the prices downward slide
I shall scorn to eat them fried.

Till they grow more circumspect
Any scramble I reject.

Though I take my stand alone
I shall not receive them thrown.

But it might be—well ahem!
I perhaps may weasel them.

—McLandburgh Wilson, in New York Sun.

INCONSISTENT.

(Life)

Johnson—Who's that vestryman who delivered the Christmas address to the Sunday school children on peace on earth, good-will to men?

Thompson—"He's a millionaire who got rich making munitions for the belligerents."

No man should go into the business of dealing in magicians' outfits unless he knows the tricks of the trade.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"Never!" said Signa, bitterly.

"But I know that it is so!" he retorted, almost fiercely in his despair and jealousy. "He has won you from me; he has stepped in between us with his fine airs and lying speeches. I felt it from the first, and I hated him from the moment I saw him!"

"All this is nothing to me," said Signa, panting with indignation. "Let me pass!"

"You say he is nothing to you," he said, desperately. "Swear that it is so; tell me that you do not care for him—that you will not marry him—and I—I will be satisfied; yes, I will not torment you any more. Tell me here and now that he is nothing to you, and I will be satisfied."

Signa remained silent, and, with a look of mingled anguish and fury, he turned upon her.

"You will not? No, I knew you would not; I felt sure of it! Even at this moment perhaps you know where he is—perhaps you came here to meet him."

"Let me pass!" said Signa, white and terrified. "I will not listen to another word; indeed, I think you are mad, in truth. Let me pass!"

With a muttered oath, he flung the gate to and locked it, and thrusting the key into his pocket, he turned on her.

"To go to him? No, you shall not! My love for you can do no more. It can at least guard you against yourself."

And he leant against the gate, and folded his arms with an air of dogged, sullen determination.

Signa steadied herself against the battlement of the turret with one hand. She had now come to the conclusion that he was mad indeed, and a cold chill fell upon her, and deprived her of speech for the moment, but she struggled against the deathly numbness and gained courage. If he were indeed mad, she must coax, not exasperate him.

"Sir Frederic," she panted, "what am I to think of such conduct? You cannot intend to keep me here a prisoner. It is—it is too ridiculous!" and she forced a laugh that sounded hollow and fearful in her own ears.

"Give me your promise to have nothing more to do with this fellow," he said, hoarsely, "and I will go down on my knees and implore your pardon."

"I do not wish you to do anything of the kind, Sir Frederic. I wish you to open that gate and allow me to pass."

"I cannot, I dare not!" he said, wiping the perspiration from his face. "I will save you, even against your will, from this man. Tell me that he is nothing to you, that you will not listen to him or have any communication with him and I will be content. It is of you, not myself, that I am now thinking. Signa, Signa, listen to me!"

Signa shrank back—for he had extended his arms imploringly—and leaning over the buttress called quickly for help. The cry seemed to madden him.

"It is useless, useless!" he said. "The man is deaf, and if he were not I have sent him home. There is no soul within hearing. Give me your promise, Signa!"

Signa took no heed of him but ran to the furthest end of the tower, and leaned over with the intention of leaping over it if need were. But a glance showed her that to leap meant a broken limb, if not death. With a low moan she turned and faced him, leaning heavily on the stonework, for the trying scene was beginning to tell on her strength, and she felt physically weak and faint; and yet the situation was almost absurd. She knew for a certainty that he would not harm her; mad with jealousy as he was, she knew that he would have died rather than lay a finger upon her; but she also felt convinced that he would keep her there the whole night, and the mere thought of such a catastrophe drove her to despair.

For a moment, as the moonlight fell upon his white, haggard face, she thought that the whole scene must be a horrid dream, and that she should wake and find herself in her room at the Rectory. Then, as he moved, she knew that it was real, and a low cry rose from her parched lips and cleaved the air. The cry seemed to wring his heart.

"Your promise," he cried; "that is all I ask. Great Heaven! you cannot think that I mean to harm you, Signa; it is of yourself and your welfare I am thinking. Promise me——"

He stopped abruptly, and stared beyond her with an intent gaze, then made a step forward, and Signa, thinking that at last his madness had taken an evil turn, swung round prepared to leap into the darkness, when suddenly there rose above the tower the vision of a man's head and shoulders, and the next moment Hector Warren swung lightly on the grassy platform.

Signa uttered a low cry of relief and thanksgiving and sank down on the ground, overcome and almost prostrate. Then she felt an arm round her, and knew that Hector Warren had carried her to the seat.

"Do not be afraid," he murmured in her ear; then he turned to Sir Frederic, still standing staring with stony astonishment.

Signa, looking up with an effort, saw that Hector Warren's face was as white as that which he confronted, but white with an unspeakable wrath and indignation. Like an avenging spirit, he stood, with broken fragments of stone and ivy that had clung to him as he climbed the tower; like a man waiting to exact reparation for a cruel wrong, he confronted the dazed, bewildered Sir Frederic.

"What does this mean?" he demanded; and his voice, stern, though low and well in command, almost struck terror even to Signa's heart. "Are you mad?" And he went to the gate, and shook it with a force that must have torn it down if it had not been of iron and strongly made. "Give me the key! Do you not understand that you have alarmed the lady—terrified her almost beyond endurance? Give me the key——"

And he advanced to Sir Frederic, standing motionless, with an ominous darkening of the handsome face.

"No, no!" exclaimed Signa, darting between them. "He does not know, he does not understand what he is doing. You must not touch him—you must not indeed!"

Hector Warren's hand fell to his side.

"I will not; leave him to me," he murmured, gently. "Go you and sit down. I will get the key from him."

"Come, give me the key," he said, firmly, but not roughly. "I am not to be trifled with," he added, sternly, under his breath.

"I will not," said Sir Frederic, awakening as if from a stupor. "This place is mine; you have no right here; you have no right to interfere between me and this lady. Take your hand from my shoulder!"

"The key—the key! Give him the key!" implored Signa, clasping her hands in her terror.

Hector Warren looked round at her with a reassuring smile.

"Come, Sir Frederic," he said. "Be reasonable. Let me have the key. This farce—it is nothing more than a farce—has been played long enough. You have alarmed Miss Grenville by your tomfoolery, and should be ashamed of yourself. Give me the key."

"I will not," said Sir Frederic, with the intense stubbornness of a man half insane. "She has but to give me her promise, and I will not only give her the key, but implore her pardon."

"Promise—what promise?" demanded Hector Warren, sternly.

"Do not ask him!" implored Signa, a burning flush spreading over her face. "Persuade him to let you have the key, and let us go. Every moment is one of intolerable misery to me!"

"You hear!" said Hector Warren, ominously. "The key—the key!"

"I will not give it to you," said Sir Frederic, sullenly. "Say what you will, do what you will, she shall not leave here till I have her promise."

"You will not!" said Hector Warren.

Then, before Sir Frederic could guess at his intention, he had seized him by his arm, and dragged him to the buttress.

Signa sprang toward them with a cry of alarm.

"Oh, what is it you mean to do? Hector!"—the word slipped out before she was aware of it—"you will not hurt him?"

"Listen!" he said, sternly, with fierce determination in his voice. "You tell me that you mean to keep Miss Grenville in this place till dawn. You know what that means; you are not so bad as not to understand that by so doing you subject her to scandal, that you run the risk of injuring her reputation. That may be your intention, perhaps. I am indifferent as to your intention, and think only of the result. Now listen to me. I intend that she shall leave here within an hour. You say that you will not give up the key?"

"By Heaven, I will not!" said Sir Frederic, hoarsely.

"Good! Then I am going for assistance. But you will go with me. Do you understand? No?" and he grasped him suddenly round the shoulders and sprung upon the buttress. "I mean to leap from this beastly place, and to take you with me. Are you ready?"

Sir Frederic glanced down; the darkness into which he gazed seemed to strike him with a sudden chill.

"Are you ready?" demanded Hector Warren, calmly, sternly.

"Stop—stop—I do not care! I will stay!" shrieked Signa. But Hector Warren seemed deaf even to her.

"Once more—ah! you will not? Come, then!" and with a herculean grasp he dragged Sir Frederick to the edge.

And at this moment his opponent's courage failed him. With a shuddering look into the darkness below he drew back, and thrusting his hand into his jacket, drew out the key and flung it on the ground without a word.

Without a word Hector Warren secured the key, and going calmly and quietly to the gate, unlocked it. Then he opened it wide and motioned to Sir Frederic.

"Go" he said, slowly, and with a despairing glance full of anguish and despair, Sir Frederic passed down the broken stairs. They heard him staggering like a drunken man till his footsteps were drowned on the turf.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Silent and trembling, Signa leant against the stonework of the tower, her hand pressed to her heart, her breath coming in quick, short gasps. The horror of the scene was still upon her, and yet a faint thrill of joy was beginning to flutter in her bosom, for she began to realize that Hector Warren was standing beside her. Quite silent he stood, not looking at her—waiting with the truest, subtlest, tenderness, that she might have time to recover. Another man would have pressed his attentions upon her—would have been fussy, and sympathetic, and soothing, but he was too wise; he simply stood, the strong hand—the hand that had grasped Sir Frederick with a grasp of iron resting on the gate. Moments that seemed minutes passed thus; then, as with a sigh she raised her head and glanced at him, he came toward her.

"Are you rested now?" he asked, and his voice, which when she had heard it a few minutes before was so stern that it struck terror even to her innocent soul, was as soft and gentle as a woman's.

The simple question, the gentle voice, brought the tears to Signa's eyes, and she put up her hand hastily to wipe them away.

"Yes—yes, quite," she murmured.

"That is well," he said, soothingly. "Will you not sit down for a little while——"

"No, no," she broke in, with a faint shudder. "Let us go at once," and she looked round loathingly.

He understood that the sight of the place, the very atmosphere, was unendurable to her, and he stretched out his hand, and taking hers, drew her arm within his.

"You are sure you feel strong enough to walk?"

"Yes! oh, yes."

"Lean upon me; so," and he drew her nearer so that she would really lean her weight on him.

So, almost supporting her, he led her down the stone steps. At the bottom he paused a moment and flung something behind him. It was the key, and Signa shuddered as she heard it strike against the wall. No word he could have spoken could have been more full of scornful contempt than the gesture with which he flung the hateful key behind him.

"Will you rest here?" he asked, as they entered the park, but she shook her head.

"No; let us go," then she stopped, troubled and bewildered. Where could she go? Not to the Park, certainly not there.

He looked down at her, a strange light in his eyes, a commingling of tender pity and passionate love.

"Can you bear that I should ask you a question?" he whispered.

"Can I bear——" she sobbed, in a low, tremulous voice. "Who should have more right to ask me anything than you who—who have saved me from that madman?"

"Hush!" he whispered. "Do not speak of it. Try and forget it. There was no real danger; he would not have touched you."

"No—no, I understand that. But—ah, it was terrible!" and she covered her eyes with her hands.

"You must not—you shall not think and dwell on it!" he said, with an intense tenderness that was almost fierce. "Treat it as an ugly dream."

"Ah, if I could! But I shall never forget it. If you had not come! How did you come? I did not know you were near——"

He almost groaned in his remorse.

"If I had never gone!" he murmured. "I would give ten years of my life to have remained near you to have protected you. How did I come? It was"—and his voice grew solemn—"it was more than mere chance, it was Providence. To the day of my death I shall believe that something within me warned me of your danger, and drew me to this accursed spot! I only returned to Northwell this evening; I could not rest in the house, and set out for the Grange, but at the turn of the road I felt drawn to the Park, and followed the impulse. Thank Heaven! Thank Heaven!"

She did not echo the thanksgiving, but he felt her hand tremble on his arm.

"I strolled in the moonlight till I came to the tower, and was looking up at it when I heard your voice; no matter! No more of this! Remember, it is only an ugly, miserable dream! And now—how does it happen that you are here?" and he looked down at her with tender, earnest anxiety.

"I was—I am on a visit to the Park; Lady Blyte asked me—Sir Frederic was away," she winced at the name—"and she felt lonely, and wished me to come."

"I understand," he said, in a low voice. "And she—she did not know he was here?"

"No, no, a thousand times no! I am sure of that!" said Signa, earnestly. "And now—ah! what am I to do? I cannot go back to the house!" and she raised her eyes to his with real alarm.

"No; certainly not," he said, calmly. "Do you know the nearest path across the Park to the Rectory?" he asked, as if it were the most natural question in the world.

Signa started.

"What will they say?" She looked up at the moon, now high in the heavens.

"What will they say to your returning so late at night and unexpected, and escorted by me?" he said, with that calm, masterful air which inspires confidence even in the most timid of women. "You must leave that to me. I will explain——"

"You will not tell them——"

"Does one ever tell one's bad dreams?" he asked, with a grave smile. "No. You shall leave it all to me. Are you sure you are strong enough to walk yet?"

Signa sighed, but the sigh was of a different nature to that which had a few minutes before burst from her pale lips.

"I am quite sure," she answered, simply.

And it was true. Her heart still beat fast and furiously, but a feeling of quiet serenity and peace was beginning to fall over her like a refreshing dew.

The blood crept back slowly to her lips, the terrified expression vanished from her eyes, and a soft, tremulous glow took its place. It was almost as if she had obeyed his command, and had taken the horror of the last few minutes as a dream from which she had now awakened.

Looking down at her in the moonlight, he saw the change that had come over her lovely face, and his own brow lightened, and he drew her arm still more closely to his side.

So they walked along the narrow path in silence. Signa tried to speak, to find some words in which to express the heartfelt gratitude toward him that throbbed in every vein of her body, but she could not. A sensation, half of delight, half of pain, was taking possession of her, and she almost fancied, as she looked up at the starlit sky, that this, too, would prove a dream, and that she should wake and find that he had gone. Presently they came to a seat under a tree, and without a word he led her to it.

"You must rest a few minutes," he said, gently.

"I am not tired, indeed I am not. And—I am afraid it is dreadfully late," and she smiled, but she sat down nevertheless.

He stood beside her, and took out his watch.

"It is not so late. No, I will not tell you the time," he added, as she opened her lips. "What is the matter?" for she bent forward with a sudden pallor and a low cry.

"Your hand!" she murmured.

He looked down at his outstretched hand; it was cut and torn, and was streaked with blood.

"It is nothing," he said, with a smile. "Really and truly nothing," and he felt for his handkerchief.

(To be continued.)

"Is that dog of yours a watchdog?" "To a certain extent. He's always on the lookout for something to eat."—Washington Star.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.
Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.
GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

ROYAL YEAST CAKES
The best yeast in the world.
Makes perfect bread.
MADE IN CANADA
E.W.GILLETT COMPANY LIMITED
TORONTO, ONT.
WINNIPEG MONTREAL

A $100 Prize Poem.

The best poem of 500 entered in a competition held by the St. Louis Art League was written by Evelyn [illegible], of Hollis, L. I., who won the $100 prize. The poem is as follows:

AS THOU WILT.

If in the sheltering circle of my arms
  No little child of mine shall ever rest,
[illegible] I may feel the touch that thrills and charms
  Of helpless, searching lips against my breast,
Yet for the sake of that beloved child,
  Of whom my dream is ever, night and day,
Teach me the mother spirit, tender, mild,
  That from no childish need can turn away.

And if the love that I had held so sure
  Grow dim and distant till it vanish quite,
Grant me that changeless love that shall endure
  Strong and sufficient for earth's darkest night.
Take from my heart all bitterness and pain
  Until these futile, selfish strivings cease;
Use Thou the life I should but spend in vain,
  And in the joy of service grant me peace.

Ask for Minard's and take no other

Exquisite Baby Clothes.

They are all hand made.

Of soft white stuffs, they are very simply made but beautifully fine and dainty.

There are dear little slips with the tiniest tucks imaginable, and some finished with a frill of real lace.

Finer dresses, too, are tucked and embroidered and finished with real Valenciennes, and sometimes have ribbon rosettes for further elaboration.

There are even hand-made flannel petticoats as well as handmade and hand-embroidered white petticoats with scalloping or lace-finished ruffles.

Bootees, too, are hand-knit, and there are hand-made and embroidered pillow slips on which to lay his sleepy head.

Pale-Cheeked Girls Tired-Out Women Quickly Built Up

WONDERFUL RECORD MADE BY NEW BLOOD-FOOD REMEDY.

Certain Results Guaranteed.

Pale people have pale blood.

In other words, the blood is watery and lacks red corpuscles.

The stomach is weak.

Assimilation is poor and food is not changed into blood. Naturally the system is robbed of vitality, lacks strength and [illegible].

Don't [illegible] into weakness. Don't allow the appetite to fail, but instead use Ferrozone.

You're bound to feel rejuvenated and strengthened at once.

Appetite is braced up, digestion is stimulated, vigor imparted to the stomach. Everything you eat is transformed into nutriment that supplies what your thin, weak system need.

Vital, life-giving blood that makes rosy cheeks and dancing eyes—that's the kind that Ferrozone makes.

The strength and buoyancy that defies depression and tiredness, that's the sort you get with Ferrozone.

Every pale woman can transform her bleached-out appearance with Ferrozone.

Not only will it improve looks and spirits, but by rebuilding all weak, tired organs, Ferrozone establishes a soundness of health that's surprising.

For women and girls who want to feel well, to look well, to be well, and stay well, nothing known to the annals of medicine is so certain as Ferrozone.

Won't you try Ferrozone?

Concentrated cure in tablet form, that's Ferrozone, 50c per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

PROHIBITION AND CONSCRIPTION

(Chicago Tribune.)

Prohibition is a denial of free will. It asserts the right of the state to command the individual. If it were only for the right of personal selection would be merely moralistic meddling. It is not the part of Smith and Brown to determine by law what Jones shall do for his own good unless Smith and Brown prove that Jones is not doing what he ought to do imposes a burden on them.

They are justified in objecting to Jones' habits if those habits cause them trouble. They then are justified in putting a law on Jones.

The community is justified in interfering with the volition of its citizens only as it regards its own security as important and considers that its citizens, left to their own free will, might or would do injury to it.

There is no excuse whatever for any law requiring any kind of conduct from a person if that conduct injures no one but himself. So long as the individual alone is concerned his conduct must be left to himself. He will take the consequences.

There are many ardent proponents of restrictive and custodial laws. They intervene to say what people may see at the movies; what they may read; what they may drink; how long they may remain in saloons and restaurants; what they may see in the theatres. Occasionally we attempt to say what they may wear.

If the individual may be regulated thus and commanded thus for the benefit of the state, logic suggests that he may be compelled to do other things for the state.

When a state is in military danger it is in much greater danger than it is when saloons threaten its security. When it is in military danger we permit each man to consult his own will and his conscience, his desires and his timidity. We permit him to do as he wants to do, regardless of the needs of the state.

If he has a right to exercise his own judgment when the state is in great danger, he certainly has the right to do so when his own personal habits are concerned. We regulate as to habits and will not regulate as to duty. We may require a man to stop drinking because it is bad for the state, but we have not seen that it is necessary to compel him to serve the state if it is bad for the state to permit him to escape from service.

Prohibition and compulsory service are two pieces from the same bolt of logic.

She Does Her Bit In Patriotic Work

AND TELLS OF BENEFIT RECEIVED FROM DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. H. A. Standish Strong, Hearty and Enthusiastic at Sixty-two, Advises Others to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Ayers Cliff, Stanstead Co., Que., March 1.—(Special.)—One of the most enthusiastic patriotic workers in this district is Mrs. H. A. Standish. Though sixty-two years of age, her splendid health enables her to keep house for three hearty men and still have time and strength to devote to the welfare of the boys in the trenches. And Mrs. Standish will tell you she owes that abundant health to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I must say that Dodd's Kidney Pills are very good for sick kidneys," Mrs. Standish states. "I have recommended them many times for rheumatism, as they helped me very much for that disease. You can say for me that Dodd's Kidney Pills are beneficial for everyone who is troubled with bad kidneys."

The kidneys are the keystone of woman's health. Keep the kidneys right and the rest will be right. Dodd's Kidney Pills keep the kidneys right.

EDUCATING OYSTERS.

How the Japanese Teach Them to Make Pearls.

In Japan there is a great oyster farm where the bivalves are taught to make pearls. It was Dr. Mikimoto, a well-known scientist, who conceived the idea that oysters might be educated and made to work for man. After many years of costly experimentation he discovered the method in use today.

The farm has an area of about fifty square miles, and the water varies in depth from five to fifteen fathoms. The farmer selects the spots where the larvae of oysters are most numerous and then he plants small rocks and stones. These are soon covered with oyster-spat. They are then removed and placed in special beds, where they lie undisturbed until the third year.

An oyster will not produce a pearl unless it be irritated by some foreign substance. As soon as it feels this it proceeds to cover it with layer after layer, until after a few years it has made a pearl. When large enough the oysters are taken from their beds and carefully opened, a tiny speck of some foreign substance is introduced into their bodies, and they are replaced in the sea. By the end of [illegible] years the oyster has coated the foreign substance with nacre and this has become a pearl.

All the work on this oyster farm is done by women, who bring the oysters up and down by diving.

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house.

TRADE BRIEFS.

[illegible], tablets and [illegible] are to be manufactured at Messina, Sicily. Sicilian fruit growers are financing the venture.

Swiss dairy [illegible] are asking [illegible] continue the feeding of oil cake to their stock because of the difficulty of obtaining this food, which was formerly imported from France.

Wages of miners in [illegible] have increased to approximately [illegible] per cent since November 1, 1916. [illegible]

The autumn crop of cocoons in Japan was a large one, [illegible] bushels being gathered.

There is a demand in Hawaii for American shoes. Foot wear is coming into use among the Japanese, Chinese and Corean inhabitants.

Rubber to be used in making [illegible] air tight is needed in Norway.

Ten thousand pounds of oiled worsted yarn is needed by a dealer in the Netherlands. Correspondence should be conducted in French or Spanish.

A school of aviation will be established in Lima, Peru. The Government has passed a law providing for an annual appropriation of $21,[illegible] for its maintenance. There is a possible market for American supplies.

Automobile tires made of coir fibre are being experimented with in Australia to test their durability on the rough roads of that country. It is asserted that these tires are bullet, nail and glass proof.

There is no opportunity at present in Brazil for the introduction of American made shoes. Brazilian shoes are made, however, of American tanned leather and on lasts imported from that country.

Shoulder braces are needed in Australia.

A Spanish merchant has made inquiries about American petroleum and machine oils.

Machinery for the making of furniture is needed in Norway.

One hundred American tractors have been ordered by the Russian Department of Agriculture. In recent tests the one defect pointed out in these machines was that the plowshares are set too close together.

Riga, Russia, offers a fair market for American signs and marking devices. Heretofore Austria, Germany and England have supplied the demand.

Textile plants, such as agave and "caraguata," are to be cultivated in Argentina by a Scandinavian syndicate. A mill with a capacity of 120,000 leaves a day is to be established.

A royal order provides for the use of electric lamps in Spanish mines. It is asserted that this lighting system is safer than the illuminant now in use. Most of the lamps to be used are manufactured in domestic plants.

An inundation tunnel will protect the city of Nuremberg, Germany, from the frequent flooding of the Pegnitz River. The tunnel will cost $2,000,000.

A dealer in British East Africa is in the market for cotton and silk hosiery.

Small sized American nails find a ready market in China. Those most in demand are of Belgian pattern with a checker head countersink.

A [illegible] has been built at [illegible], Kamchatka, at a cost of $100,000. American machinery was installed.

One hundred locomotives have been ordered in America by a railroad company in France. Their combined cost is to be $[illegible].

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

ANTIQUES
Have you any old articles of merit which you are desirous of disposing of—such as Antique Furniture, Old Plate, Brassware, Prints, Engravings, Old Arms, Armour, Curios, etc.? If so, you will find it of interest to you to consult us.
ROBERT JUNOR
62 KING ST. E., HAMILTON, ONT.
THE HOUSE FOR GIFTS.
Importers and Dealers in China, Glass, Fancy Goods and Antiques.

THE DOOR TO HEALTH

Is Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

The blood is responsible for the health of the body. If it is good disease cannot exist. If it is bad, the door is shut against good health, disease is bound to appear in one form or another. The person may be seized with [illegible] or sciatica, [illegible] anaemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, headaches or backaches, unstrung nerves, or any of the many other forms of ailment that come when the blood is weak and watery. There is just one certain, speedy cure—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich, red blood, and this good blood strengthens the whole system and brings good health and happiness. Thousands now more pleasant [illegible], life itself [illegible] Charles [illegible], says: "Four years ago my [illegible] so run down that life seemed nothing but a burden. I suffered for two years with little or no benefit. I could neither work, eat nor sleep well. While in this condition a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before doing so I thought I would consult my doctor, and he told me he knew of no better medicine for building up the [illegible]. I started to take the pills and after a short while found they were helping me. I took the pills for nearly three months and am thankful to say that they completely cured me. I have since kept a box of the pills in the house, but have not found it necessary to take them."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or they will be sent by mail, postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TRADE BRIEFS.

[illegible] a chemical plant and a [illegible] plant will be built, costing [illegible].

Plans have been completed for the erection of a coal briquet plant at Norfolk, Va. This plant will have a capacity of forty tons an hour of sixteen ounce briquets.

Sea Island cotton growers in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina will convene to discuss the best methods of fighting the boll weevil pest. The meetings will be under the supervision of the Georgia State Board of Entomology.

The Nashville, Chattanooga, and St. Louis Railway has completed plans to extend its road to Mill Creek, Tenn., where it is asserted there are 25,000 acres of coal lands awaiting development.

A new method of building wood block flooring has been invented by C. J. Carter of Kansas City, Mo. The process consists of dovetailing the ends of the blocks to the baseboards and smoothing the block surface to fit as tightly as a hardwood floor.

Agriculturists of Spain have been called upon by the Central Provisions Board to declare the quantity of foodstuffs they possess. Embargoes on exports of cereals and vegetables will be lifted if it is found that the country is abundantly provisioned.

Low priced American pianos should find a market in Portuguese East Africa.

The output of manganese ore in the States in 1916 amounted to 27,000 tons, which was three times the production in 1915.

Ocean freight rates to British East Africa have increased from 100 to 500 per cent. over the rates prevailing before the European war.

Coal deposits have been discovered on the Island of Spitzbergen. The extent of these fields is estimated at 200 square miles, which represents about 1,000,000,000 tons of coal.

American magnetos should make large sales in Brazil, as shipments of these supplies from Europe have ceased.

A company of Japanese capitalists has started a plant to manufacture egg products at Tsingtao, China. Sales will be made almost exclusively to the American market.

Merchants in Cochin, China, are in the market for American shoes. Oxford styles and high shoes retail at $5 upward.

U. S. Consul E. A. Wakefield, at Port Elizabeth, South Africa, asserts that office appliances from America are rapidly gaining favor in that district.

The Rittman process of transforming petroleum waste into gasolene, benzine and toluene will act as a check upon any movement to increase the prices of these products. Gasolene made by this process costs six cents a gallon.

Construction of national roads in Peru is under the control of the national Government. An annual appropriation of $[illegible] is made for the maintenance of these highways. There is a possible market for American supplies.

Asbestos sheets are in demand in Switzerland.

LADIES WANTED TO DO PLAI and light sewing at home, whole spare time; good pay; work sent a distance; charges paid. Send stamp particulars. National Manufactur Company, Montreal.

WANTED—COOK-HOUSEMAID; FI home for suitable girl; wages, $ Address, Mrs. Going, [illegible] Aberdeen Hamilton, Ont.

Minard's Liniment Used by Physicians

Speaking of Worries—

[A bit of philosophy passed around in the trench.]

You have two alternatives either you are mobilized or you are not. If not you have nothing to worry about.

If you are mobilized you have two alternatives; you are in camp or at the front. If you are in camp you have nothing to worry about.

If you are at the front you have two alternatives, either you are on the fighting line or in reserve. If in reserve you have nothing to worry about.

If you are on the fighting line you have two alternatives, either you fight or you don't. If you don't you have nothing to worry about.

If you do you have two alternatives, either you get hurt or you don't. If you don't you have nothing to worry about.

If you are hurt you have two alternatives, either you are slightly hurt or badly. If slightly you have nothing to worry about.

If badly you have two alternatives, either you recover or you don't. If you recover you have nothing to worry about. If you don't and have followed my advice clear through, you have done with worry forever.

Had ship's anchor fall on my knee and leg, and knee swelled up and for six days I could not move it or get help. I started to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, and two bottles cured me.

PROSPER FERGUSON.

A Word About Roaches.

The cockroach, according to the bulletin on that insect issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, is one of the most ancient and primitive of insects, for fossil remains of them abound in early coal formations, ages before our more common forms of insect life began to appear. Now, however, the species in existence are much fewer than at that time, which might with propriety have been called the "Age of Cockroaches", for then the moisture and warmth were much more favorable to the multiplication of the family.

Nevertheless there are enough at present to afford considerable annoyance to the housewife, for the dam that they do is not confined to consumption of food products, as they soil and render foul every with which they come into con They leave wherever they are pre in any numbers a fetid, nauseous very persistent, which is known as "roachy" odor. Any food tainted it is hopelessly spoiled. The comes from the excrement, a fluid that is exuded from the and also from the scent glands body, which secrete a disagreeab liquid possessing a distinct and disagreeable odor. Dishes on often become impregnated wi odor which becomes noticeable anything is served in them.

The bulletin offers the fol method for trapping them. A and practical method of tr roaches in large numbers was by a correspondent in Brocton, who took several tin bread pans vertical sides, about three inches height, greased the bottoms an with a little rancid butter and them where the roaches were num. Each pan in the morning cont ed hundreds of the pests unable climb out because of the greased The roaches were shaken out water and the pans were read use again, without regreasing.

Minard's Liniment lumberman's f

The Three Scutars.

By this time we should all k enough about the Near East not to found the various Scutaris—the o Albania, the one opposite Consta nople and the one in southern Gr It is curious that each name co from a different original form. Greek Scutari is otherwise Scal, the Albanian one is the Illyrian Scod ra, and the Asiatic one is the Turkis Uskudar. This last means a couri carrying royal orders from station station and commemorates the fact that this place, the ancient Chrysop olis, or City of Gold, was the starting point of the Asiatic couriers.—Youth's Companion.

The Barrel Frock.

It comes via Paris.

And it is one of the rumored spring fashions.

It is no queerer than some other sartorial whimsicalities we have seen—and worn!

This new frock fits snugly at the top, widens out at the knees and is caught in at the foot.

One new model was of soft crepe, with new long sleeves and the new collarless neck, and, of course, the barrel-like skirt.

Eyes alone frequently send wireless messages during courtship.

PATENTS
IN ALL COUNTRIES
Book "Patent Protection" Free
BABCOCK & SONS
Formerly Patent Office Examiner. Estab. 1877
99 ST. JAMES ST., MONTREAL
Branches: Ottawa and Washington

Warships of Future To Fight Under Sea

Bache, in Philadelphia Record.)

q submersible battleship destined b arrive? Many naval authori ctable among them Captain Wil 3, Sims, U.S.N.—think so.

great war in Europe, so far as e is concerned, has been to a extent a conflict of new military itions. But its most novel and king defensive feature has been cealment.

has been a war of hiding. Mars, the first time in history, has put the cap of invisibility.

n the warfare of the future this thod of fighting will be extended m the land to the sea. Already, ind, the tendency has made itself nifest in the submarine boat.

The submarine is undergoing wonfully rapid development. Even now has assumed such dimensions, and a acquired such speed, as to have ined the character of an undersea estroyer."

Types of warships nowadays are wing a tendency to merge into each ther. The "destroyer" is merely an larged torpedo boat. Magnified still rther, it becomes a "light cruiser"—e up-to-date naval scout.

The difference between a heavy cruind a battleship is mainly one of mor and size of guns. As times goes on, the submarine is certain to grow to a bigness at least approaching that e dreadnought; and the latter may driven, for self-preservation's sake, hide under water.

Thus there may come a time when e dreadnought and the submarine, pproaching each other in design, will, to speak, coalesce structurally. The submarine will become in effect a battleship, and a battleship a submersible craft.

It is argued that, with the enlargement and indefinite multiplication of submarines, and the increase of their efficiency as engines of maritime warfare, their threat to surface craft (no atter how heavily armored and forfidably gunned) must compel the latter to seek the only possible refuge—hich is under the sea.

CHANGE IN TACTICS COMING.

When two fleets of submersible dreadnoughts are engaged, battle tactics necessarily will be very difficult from those followed to-day. Success in the fight will depend very largely upon cleverness in hiding. A ship, finding itself opposed by a superior antagonist, will escape punishment by disappearing—to come to the surface again miles away, perhaps, and attack from an unexpected quarter.

It goes without saying that such a battleship must have high speed and great steaming radius—meaning by the latter term that it will be able to cruise a very long distance without replenishing its fuel supply. For both surface and underwater running it will employ enormously powerful automobile engines of the "internal-combustion" type.

This problem, of using a single set of engines for surface and sub-surface cruising, has not yet been solved; but, in the opinion of experts, it will be before long. When the puzzle has been finally worked out, there will be no more trouble with battery leakage. Oil will be the only fuel. Electricity (for propulsion with water) will be dispensed with, and there will be no ne essity for coming to the surface to rge exhausted batteries.

The naval programme newly adopt by Congress provides for the build of nine "fleet submarines," which a be much bigger than any known have been constructed up to date by y foreign power. They might be lled submersible cruisers; for each them will be 260 feet long, with a d of 20 knots, and a steaming rad of 7,000 miles on the surface, or 0 miles under water.

e shall have 12 of these submers—money for three having been ropriated some time ago. They all be substantially alike, with erful engines and a displacement 1,000 tons, and will cost $1,300,000 ce. Each of them will have 10 pedo tubes, four of which, being nted on pivots on the deck, will n effect guns that discharge torpes instead of shells.

ow, this type of supersubmarine s more than a suggestion of the bmersible battleship of the future. It ven provided with 3-inch guns, hich, when the boat is about to sink, withdrawn into the hull in much e same way as a typewriter disapars into a desk, water-tight steel tches being bolted over them. But, course, weapons of such small cali are useful only for defense against stroyers and other small warcraft.

The practicability of mounting big guns on a submersible battleship is puted. On the other hand, torpedo bes cannot take the place of huge igh-power rifles, such as dreadnoughts carry, because the firing range of a torpedo is too short. Hence it is possible (and by Captain Sims is deemed likely) that the coming underwater battleship will be a distinct type not replacing the dreadnought, but supplementing it. He calls this warcraft of the future a "torpedo battleship."

The torpedo battleship (as he describes it) would be in effect a monster submarine, perhaps of 20,000 tons—two-thirds the size, that is to say, of a modern dreadnought. With very little in the way of upper works, and possibly of "whaleback" patterns, it would be heavily armored, so as to be able to fight on the surface of the sea. The machinery and other "vitals" of the craft would be further defended by a "protective deck" just above the water line—an arched sheet of steel six inches or more in thickness.

The vessel, when cruising on the surface, would expose to the enemy's view nothing worth mentioning except two small and heavily-armored conning towers (one forward and one aft), and an armored smokepipe for her oil burning, internal-combustion engines. She would lie so low in the water that, with a moderate sea running, her armored decks would be awash.

She would be, perhaps, 600 feet long, and would carry no guns, save a few small ones for defence against small-fry warcraft. Her sole reliance for offence, would be torpedoes. She would have 16 torpedo tubes—eight on the port and eight on starboard side—so arranged as to be fired from 20 feet beneath the surface. Give such a vessel a surface speed of 30 knots, and she would be a tremendously formidable fighter

WOULD NOT BE A TARGET.

She would offer no vulnerable target to gunfire. It would be difficult to put her out of action, because of her heavy armor protection above the water-line. With almost no deck or upper works showing, she would be hard to hit. The modern high-power naval rifle has a very flat trajectory. In other words, the path of its projectile is almost horizontal. A 14-inch shell, striking the curved steel-back of the torpedo battleship, would be likely to glance or gouge, rather than to penetrate.

Vessels of this type (according to Captain Sims' idea) would not operate in line of battle with dreadnoughts but would lie behind the latter, hiding from the enemy's view, but ready to make a dash at the opposing battleships and sink them with torpedoes. The suddenness of their attack and the terror of their torpedo equipment would be relied upon to disarrange the foe's fighting plans. Meanwhile in the midst of the turmoil of battle it would be difficult for the enemy to sink or disable them.

It is easy to imagine the tactical influence—especially through demoralization of the foe—of a dozen or more swift submersibles of giant size, lying in wait behind the first line of battleships, their turtle-backs barely showing above water, and, of course wholly invisible to the enemy; their immediate object being to destroy or throw into confusion the opposing first line.

The special tactical object of the torpedo battleships would be to get behind the enemy battleships, to charge the line on its unengaged side and fire torpedoes at such short distance that misses could hardly be made. In order to operate effective individual interests and rights utterly in this fashion high speed—implying greater engine bulk would be indispensable. The torpedo battleship, in fact must be swifter than the dreadnought.

Captain Sims says that the suggested torpedo battleship would cost about as much as a dreadnought to build, but the total expense of putting it afloat as a fighting unit would be about $3,500,000 less because it would require no big guns or ammunition for such guns. He lays emphasis on the fact that such a vessel could be utilized only as an auxiliary. For pruposes of offence, it could carry only a few dozen torpedoes, whereas a first-class battleship is provided with 1,400 big projectiles. The decision of a fleet action must ultimately be determined by gun power; no other type of craft can replace the battleship.

This, of course, is only one man's opinion. There are other experts who think that the battleship of the future will be a submersible, and yet carry the biggest of guns in low turrets arranged monitor-style. One should not forget, perhaps, that the American-invented monitor, of the civil war and afterwards, was, and still is, in a sense, a semi-submersible, all of it below, the deck being under water.

In a submersible battleship with turrets, arrangements would be made to close the gun ports automatically, and to seal the gun muzzles when the vessel was about to sink.

Rene Bache.

VAIN EVEN IN PRISON

"You might very reasonably think," said a prison chaplain to the writer, "that vanity could not long survive in the atmosphere of a jail, but I can assure you it flourishes within the walls of a cell and behind iron bars as bravely as in my lady's boudoir in the haunts of fashion.

"And the strange thing is, it is by no means confined to one sex, or to those who have any pretension to youth and good looks. It is prevalent among men as well as women, and certainly there are few women too old and ugly to escape its thrall.

"But, you may ask, what opportunities are there for indulging vanity in a prison? Really, there seems to be none. But you may be sure of this, when a woman wishes to make herself attractive, she will find the materials somehow.

"The artifices and ingenuity of the female prisoner would be very amusing if they were not pathetic. She will collect any odds and ends of red stuff, and steep them in water to impart the coveted rose-tint to her cheeks. She will scrape the whitewashed walls of her cell and chew the lime fragments into a paste to provide a substitute for powder.

"To keep her teeth 'pearly' she will use salt or chewed oakum, and pencil her eyebrows with a piece of wood reduced to charcoal over the gas jet. She makes her locks glossy with the fat of the meat supplied to her, and provides herself with curling papers by tearing papers stealthily at intervals from library books.

"As a substitute for a corset some women wind strips of cloth, torn from their skirts, tightly round their waists, and one ingenious prisoner actually constructed an efficient corset from the wire of a cell window-grating, and it was only discovered when one day she fainted in chapel from tight lacing.

"Another resourceful woman—a terrible character, by the way—used to retire every night (until she was discovered) wearing a beauty mask made from the hot bread and milk provided for her supper.

"Such are some of the ingenious ways in which woman prisoners cultivate their beauty under difficulties; and, as far as possible, the authorities wink at it, for it serves the excellent purpose of keeping them more content and amiable. Indeed an appeal to a woman's vanity is often much more effective than any disciplinary method, as I myself have found more than once.

"At one of his majesty's prisons of which I was chaplain, we had an old woman (70 if she was a day) with a shocking record and the most violent temper.

"I could do nothing with her. She scowled at my approach and refused to speak a word to me, until one day I chanced to remark: 'What lovely hair you have!'

"It really was the truth, but the words looked like magic. She gave me one suspicious glance, and then seeing that I was serious, she said with a smile: 'Do you really think so? I have often been told that, you know.'

"And from that moment I had no more trouble with her.

"But, as I have said, even age and ugliness have no power to abate their vanity. In —— prison there was an old woman of 60 or more, who was almost repellently ugly, and yet she was one of the vainest women you could find in England. When I visited her I invariably found her rouged and powdered and pencilled, and with her hair as elaborately dressed as a society beauty. She would apologize for any defect in her toilet, and would proceed to simper and ogle and sigh to me—middle-aged and unimpressionable as I am—with all the arts of a finished coquette.

"And some of the men, who interest us less, are almost as vain as the women. I have known them to struggle furiously and have to be held down by force while having their treasured locks shorn and their moustaches and whiskers removed.

"They are almost as resourceful as the women in obtaining toilet expedients, from improvising a mirror from the polished top of a tin to making a razor out of a piece of tin, or an old nail scraped down to the required fineness.—London Answers.

SAVING MONEY IN THE FEED BILL

How to Figure Out Which Are the Cheapest Feeds to Use—Bran at $32 Per Ton is Too Expensive to Feed Economically—Cut Up Some Hay or Straw and Mix It With the Heavier Meals Instead.

Even though prices for finished cattle are about $2.50 per hundredweight better this winter than they were last winter, with the high price of feed we must feed as economically as possible so as to make a reasonable profit. Early in the winter many farmers, despite the plentiful amount of roughage in the form of hay they had, got—to use a vulgar phrase—'cold feet,' and sold, with the result that at present time of writing, Jan. 25, choice steers are bringing on the Toronto market almost as much as Christmas cattle.

For some time now we have been publishing on our market pages tables and figures showing the relative value of the different feeding stuffs, and in the present article I want to show how, by studying the information that is given from week to week a man may save a lot of money in his feeding operations.

COMPOSITION OF FEEDS

KIND OF FEED.	Dry Matter per cent.	Digestible Protein per cent.	Starch Equivalent in 100 lbs.	Crude Fibre per cent.	Nutritive ratio.
Cotton Seed Meal	92.0	40.0	72.0	9.5	1:1.8
Oil Cake	90.2	30.0	72.9	9.0	1:2.4
Brewers' Grains (fresh)	24.0	3.5	12.7	5.1	1:3.6
Brewers' Grains (dry)	91.0	18.8	53.7	12.7	1:2.8
Malt Sprouts	88.0	11.4	38.7	12.3	1:3.4
Corn (feed)	87.0	6.6	81.5	2.2	1:12.3
Wheat (feed)	86.6	9.0	71.3	1.9	1:8.0
Oats	86.7	7.2	60.0	10.3	1:8.3
Barley (feed)	85.7	8.0	67.9	5.9	1:8.5
Bran	87.9	9.1	42.6	10.2	1:4.6
Shorts	88.0	11.1	48.1	8.0	1:4.3
Middlings	88.0	11.0	73.0	4.3	1:6.6
Timothy Hay	85.7	3.2	29.1	28.5	1:9.0
Red Clover Hay	84.0	5.5	32.0	24.0	1:5.8
Alfalfa Hay	84.0	7.0	24.0	28.0	1:3.4
Oat Straw	85.7	1.0	17.0	28.7	1:17.0
Wheat Straw	85.7	0.0	10.9	40.8
Corn Silage	18.0	0.4	8.6	5.7	1:21.5
Swede Turnips	12.2	0.3	7.5	1.3	1:25.0
Mangels (medium)	12.0	0.1	6.3	0.9	1:63.0
Molasses	78.0	0.9	48.0	0.0

Suppose we are feeding our cattle: clover hay, 5 lbs.; oat straw, 10 lbs.; silage, 30 lbs.; barley 2 lbs.; oats, 2 lbs.; and bran 8 lbs. per animal per day, and we want to know if this is an economical ration, and if it is not, what we should feed.

The first thing to do is to figure out the composition of the ration we are feeding. When changing rations it is important to have the composition of the new rations as nearly the same as the old as possible. If not, digestive troubles are likely to occur, and indeed the animal may get a setback. In the composition of a ration only three things have to be considered, the amount of dry matter of protein and of starch equivalent. The table shows the composition of some common feeding stuffs. The figures represent per cent. or parts per hundred, so that it is a simple matter to figure out the composition of the ration. Five pounds of clover hay is being fed. From the table we see that 100 parts of red clover hay has 84 parts of dry matter. By dividing this figure by 100 and multiplying by five we get the amount of dry matter in five pounds of the hay. Similarly by dividing the figure given for protein by 100 and multiplying by five we get the amount of protein in the five pounds of hay. The following table shows the composition of the ration figured out in this way:

	Dry Matter	Digestible Protein	Starch Equivalent
Clover hay, 5 lbs.	4.20	.275	1.60
Oat straw, 10 lbs.	8.57	.100	1.70
Silage, 30 lbs.	5.40	.120	2.58
Barley, 2 lbs.	1.71	.160	1.35
Oats, 2 lbs.	1.73	.144	1.20
Bran, 8 lbs.	6.96	.728	3.40
	28.57	1.527	11.83

Having determined the composition of the ration, the next thing to do is to see if it is economical. By turning to the market pages of The Countryman we find the following table which shows us at a glance the relative values of the different feeding stuffs.

Feed	Price	Value of Nutrients bought for $1.
Clover hay, ton	$12.00	$1.52
Cotton seed meal, ton	50.00	1.37
Brewers' grains, dry, ton	25.00	1.15
Wheat (feed) bush	1.07	1.05
Oil cake, ton	56.00	1.05
Malt sprouts, ton	26.00	1.03
Brewers' grains, fresh.	8.40	1.02
Middlings, ton	33.00	1.03
Timothy hay, ton	15.00	.99
Corn, feed, bush	1.12	.98
Oat Straw, ton	9.00	.86
Barley (feed) ton	1.00	.84
Shorts, ton	36.00	.84
Oats, bush	.61	.83
Bran, ton	32.00	.82
Wheat straw	9.00	.48
Molasses, ton	40.00	.48
Turnips, ton	16.00	.21

We see that clover hay at $12 per ton is the cheapest feed we have. For every dollar spent in clover hay at this price we get $1.52 worth of nutrients as compared with only 86 cents worth in oat straw at $9 per ton. This at once indicates that it will pay us to sell our straw and buy clover hay with the money, if we have got sufficient on hand. Barley, oats and bran are all very dear as compared with some of the other feeds. Thus for every dollar spent in bran at $32 per ton, we only get 82 cents worth of nutrients, as compared with $1.05 worth in feed wheat at $1.07 per bushel and $1.15 worth in dried brewers' grains at $35 per ton. This shows us that at the prices given, oats, barley and bran are not economical feeds.

In making up our new ration we need not reduce the amount of silage given. Silage as a succulent feed is a valuable feed in giving palatability to the ration. If silage costs to produce as much as $4 per ton, it is a cheap feed. Clover hay, as has been seen is a very cheap feed, so that it will be well to eliminate the straw from the ration altogether and feed clover hay. Suppose we feed 15 lbs. per animal per day. Let us see what kind of a ration we have now got with the silage and clover hay. By using the tables as described above we get the following:

	Dry Matter	Digestible Protein	Starch Equivalent
Silage, 30 lbs.	5.40	.120	2.50
Clover hay, 15 lbs.	12.50	.825	4.80
	18.00	.845	7.38

We have not got sufficient of either dry matter, protein or starch equivalent. From the table showing the relative value of nutrients we see that after clover hay, cotton seed meal at $50 per ton is the cheapest feed. By feeding 1 1-2 pounds of this with the hay and silage we would have as much protein in the former ration, but we would not have sufficient starch equivalent. This means that we will have to feed some other feed that has a wider nutritive ratio. The nutritive ratios of the different feeding stuffs are given in the last column of the table. After cotton seed meal dried brewers' grains are the next cheapest feed. Here again the nutritive ratio is too narrow, and to give the required amount of starch equivalent we would have to feed too much protein. Feed wheat, the next cheapest feed, has a wider nutritive ratio, and if we feed seven pounds in conjunction with the clover and silage we will have a ration that has approximately the same composition as the first ration.

	Dry Matter	Digestible Protein	Starch Equivalent.
Silage, 30 lbs.	5.40	.120	2.58
Clover hay, 15 lbs.	12.60	.825	4.80
Wheat, 7 lbs.	6.06	.630	4.99
	22.06	1.575	12.37

The new ration has less dry matter than the old one, but this is a small matter, as the digestive tract of an animal readily adapts itself to variations of 10 or 15 per cent. in volume of feed given.

Let us now compare the cost of the two rations. Valuing the various feeds at the prices given in the table, that is, clover hay at $12 per ton, silage at $4 per ton, straw at $9 per ton, oats at 64 cents per bushel, barley at $1 per bushel, feed wheat at $1.07 per bushel, and bran at $32 per ton, we find that the cost of the first ration is about 34 cents as compared with 27 cents for the second ration. That is, the second ration means a saving of seven cents per animal per day. This may seem like a small matter, but if thirty head of cattle are being fed it means a saving of $2.10 a day and for a month a saving of $63. Studying the composition of feeds and basing their worth on the value of the nutrients that can be bought for one dollar is a paying proposition.

In feeding wheat alone without any lighter meal it will be necessary to cut some of the hay up very finely and mix it with it. This will prevent the wheat from lying heavily on the animal's stomach and prevent danger from digestive troubles. The great value of bran is that it is food proof. When bran is fed in the ration it is not necessary to cut up any of the hay and mix it with the meal ration, as the bran contains a large amount of fibre which stimulates the digestive juices and helps in the digestion of the other feeds.

In the United States a popular feed with cattle feeders is corn and cob meal. It is found that when this is fed the animals never go off their feed. The reason of this is simply, that, like bran, the meal, on account of the large amount of fibre in the cob, does not lie heavily on the stomach, and not only that, but it actually aids in the digestion of the heavier meals. By mixing cut hay with the heavier meals the same results are obtained as if bran or corn and cob meal were fed but at considerably less cost.

—CANADIAN COUNTRYMAN.

Russia's New Winter Port

It has been officially announced from Russia that the much-talked of traffic. This is an event of great importance for the future conduct of the war, for by this railway Russia has obtained an outlet to an ice-free port through which she can obtain material from the West through the winter, according to a writer in the Manchester Guardian.

The railways is called after the Murman coast of the Kola Peninsula, which shuts in the White Sea on the north and is washed by the Arctic Ocean. It may seem strange that a port on the Arctic Ocean, situated some 350 miles north of Archangel, which is frozen up for six months in the year, should be free from ice all the year around. The explanation is that this coast is washed by the Gulf Stream, which, after doubling the North Cape, is in these parts still powerful enough to prevent ice from accumulating along the shore. This, of course, applies only to the open coast, for at Kola, which lies deeper down Katharine Bay, the water frequently freezes. Nova Alexandrovsk, which lies just at the mouth of the bay, is as free from ice as any Norwegian port of the same latitude. It was therefore Novo Alexandrovsk which was chosen as the terminus for the Murman Railway, though the actual port, with its quays, warehouses, docks, etc., will be situated on the other side of the bay, at Romanoff, where there is more available space for building.

It was worth noting that the idea of a railway to terminate at Novo Alexandrovsk was first conceived by the late Count Witte as far back as the middle of the 90's with the object of constructing an ice-free naval fortress. The idea, however, was ultimately discarded in favor of a fortress at Libau, and was only revived at the end of 1914, when the necessity of an alternative to the Archangel route for war purposes became obvious. Since then thousands of workmen from Russia and prisoners of war—sometimes as many as 20,000—had been engaged in the arduous task of constructing a port and a railway in an inhospitable, roadless and scantily inhabited country, with a rough climate, over ground sometimes marshy, sometimes mountainous, which necessitated in some places strengthening by means of wooden piles and in other places extensive trenching and blasting. This labor has been crowned with success, the whole line, about 680 miles in length, being now available for the transport of war material from Novo Alexandrovsk to Petrograd.

The line may be divided into five parts. The first, from Petrograd to Zvanka, is a section of an old line from the capital to Vologda, which is itself connected with Archangel. The second section, from Zvanka to Petrozavodsk, on the Onega Lake, was constructed by a private company at the beginning of 1915. The third section, from Petrozavodsk to Soroka, in the southwestern corner of the White Sea, and on to Kem, on the western coast of the same sea—one of the most beautiful spots in that country—was constructed in the spring and the summer of the present year.

The fifth section, across the Kola Peninsula, from Kandalaksha, at the northwestern corner of the White Sea to Novo Alexandrovsk, was ready at the end of last year, permitting of motor sledge connection with the Finnish railways. The fourth section, between Kandalaksha and Kem, was the last to be completed. This section was the most difficult of all owing to the abundance of lakes and the marshy ground, and its quick construction is due to the fact that the Russian Government had wisely renounced the idea of exceeding the limits of military requirements for the present, and deferred a more solid construction till better days come.

The line will now make it possible to transport goods from the Murman coast to Petrograd in two days all the year round. It is due to M. Trepoff to acknowledge that it was his energy and iron will, while he was Minister of Railways, which have brought about such a rapid completion of the important undertaking.

The Barrel Coat.

It is first cousin to the barrel dress.

And it is just about as attractive as the frock.

It is not inexpensive—one model cost considerably over $160.

It has a wide, braided collar and a wide belt—this latter, plain.

The skirt of the coat is the part which resembles the barrel—it narrows a bit at the waist, widens out below the hips, and then slopes in at the foot.

And it really deserves its name—you'll see the resemblance at once.

* * *

"Daughter, who was that young nuisance honking in front of the house last night?" "It was Montmorency, father. Sixteen honks means 'I love you.'"—Life.

FOR DISTEMPER PINK EYE, EPIZOOTIC, SHIPPING FEVER, and CATARRHAL FEVER

SPOHN'S DISTEMPER COMPOUND TRADE MARK

Sure and positive preventive, no matter how horses at any age are afflicted or "exposed." Liquid, given on the tongue; acts on the blood and glands; expels the poisonous germs from the body. Cures Distemper in Dogs and Sheep and Cholera in poultry. Largest selling live stock remedy. Cures La Grippe among human beings, and is a fine Kidney remedy. Cut this out. Keep it. Show to your druggist, who will get it for you. Free Booklet, "Distemper, Causes and Cures."

SPOHN MEDICAL COMPANY.

Chemists and Bacteriologists, Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

Sir William Robertson's Fascinating Army Career

London.—The fascinating story of how Sir William Robertson rose from the ranks of the British army to the top has often been sketched, but now all the facts of his life have been gathered together and are being issued in book form.

General Robertson is now chief of the Imperial General Staff, and as such is one of the most powerful and influential men in the Empire.

It was on a dismal November night of 1877 that a sturdy Lincolnshire lad of 17 entered the cavalry barracks at Aldershot and offered himself as a recruit for the 16th Lancers. Sir William's parents were both Scotch. Within a year he became a lance corporal, having secured the second-class certificate which in those days opened the way to promotion to the rank of sergeant. But on the day he obtained that second-class certificate he intended working for a first-class certificate.

"What is the use?" was all the encouragement he received. "You surely do not expect ever to become a commissioned officer?"

"One never knows!" was young Robertson's answer.

If that army schoolmaster had been told that the ambitious corporal of the 16th Lancers was destined to become the chief of the Imperial General Staff of the British army in the days of the world's greatest war he would probably have received the forecast with Gargantuan laughter.

From his early youth William Robertson made his own decision in favor of an army career. As his parents were not wealthy enough to buy him a commission, the only door open to him was that of the ranker. Already his character had been moulded by good influences, chief among them being that of the late Canon Leslie Melville, the rector of the lad's native parish.

AS A TROOPER.

As a trooper, William Robertson bought as many military text-books as his scanty pay permitted, and devoted all his spare time to mastering them. He rose from private to sergeant in three and a half years, and on being recommended for a commission he was summoned to pass the necessary oral examination. When his turn came to take command of the officers and men on parade, he gave the order for a very complicated movement.

Away went the adjutant and regimental sergeant-major to give the usual base, but they were on the wrong flank of the regiment. The colonel's eyes twinkled. He saw the mistake, and resolved he would catch out the base and the sergeant-major at the same time. The latter, however, had seen what was wrong, and delayed giving the word of command for the regiment to move.

The commanding officer immediately started to hustle and brusquely called out.

"Now then, Sergeant-Major, "get on—give the word of command."

"Very well, sir," replied Robertson. "I will, when the base is placed in the right position."

"Oh!" replied the colonel, "is that so? Dam-me, if you can put my adjutant and regimental sergeant-major in their proper place, that is, quite good enough for me. I don't want to see any more."

RAPID PROMOTION.

Thus William Robertson became a second lieutenant in the 3rd Dragoon Guards on June 27, 1888. Here are the dates of his other promotions:

Lieutenant, March 1, 1891; captain, April 3, 1895; major, March 10, 1900; lieutenant-colonel, Nov. 29, 1900; colonel, Nov. 29, 1903; major-general, Dec. 28, 1910; lieutenant-general, Oct. 28, 1915; general, June 3, 1916.

He won his spurs in India as field intelligence officer, being specially commended as "a very active and intelligent officer of exceptional promise." After passing through the staff college at Camberley and serving at the War Office, Robertson shared in the South African war, and then returned to the intelligence department of the War Office. His next important post was that of commandant of the staff college at Camberley, he being the first "ranker" to hold that position.

As will be remembered, Lord French selected Sir William Robertson to be his quartermaster-general in the field, and wrote of him that he in that position "met what appeared to be almost insuperable difficulties with his characteristic skill and determination." Then, in December, 1915, came his appointment as chief of the Imperial General Staff. One who knows him well has written this appreciation:

"Silent, cool, and clear-headed, the more you know him the better you like him. Absolutely straight and genuine in character, he has reached the very top of his profession, not as the result of personal charm, but of merit, of brain power, of hard work, and of determination always to devote himself to the serious side of his army career. He has faith in the army, and the army trusts him."

General Robertson's own explanation of the secret of success is this:

"Good digestion, determination; learn to be friendly; don't worry or brood over details; go to bed early and get up early."

"In addition he says he is "old-fashioned enough" to believe that the great war like those of the Old Testament, "is intended to teach us a necessary lesson—to see and deserve Divine help."

Sub. Crews On Active Duty

The submarine, with the memories it raises of a destructive career, dwarfs and shadows the land warfare of to-day. The successful submarine commander is the most skilful corsair of the time. He has all the military qualities. There is a marvellous mechanical grip in his set work—and something more. Nerve and endurance mark his management even of an ordinary manoeuvre, nerve which is as rare as inspiration, which, indeed, is often a kind of inspiration. But this officer's qualities reach higher than mechanical skill. His powers of observation, his command over himself and his command over the cut and thrust of the torpedo fight are wonderful. He cannot be surprised. He is ever ready to accept a challenge, and once in action he must not wilt out of the most appalling situation.

There is much mystery about the submarine commander. The Germans, who should know, have written nothing about him. Our official and authentic knowledge is due to Italian naval authorities. He is, they assert with truth, a machine, but more than a military machine and technical knowledge and mechanical skill are not all. He is ever a fighter, but he is not wholly a fighter. He has prudence and singular patience. He is not mastered by the dust and detail of the moment, but looks calmly and seriously at great actions, thinking, planning, and above all, seeing into the future. This is the secret of his success, of his magnetism and his firm hold on the imagination and will of his crew.

He appears to be little known. This truth is the theme of an authoritative essay on the physique and training of the officers and men of a submarine, which appears in the current number of the Annali di Medicina Navale. It is the work of a master hand. The writer is, in fact, an expert who has spent years in the Italian submarine service.

The narrative of the Italian officer reveals his grasp of the technique of submarine navigation. The commandant's part is perhaps the most difficult work in the whole range of naval warfare. The management of such a delicately balanced mechanism makes a tremendous demand upon the mental and physical powers of its operator. The final success of a manoeuvre may so easily be ruined and turned to disorder, and to fail may be immeasurably disastrous, as the danger is extremely great. There appears to be to-day no practised and successful submariner that does not possess certain special qualifications. These are described more fully and critically in the Italian report than in the scattered memoranda of our own literature of the subject. The following is a description of the kind of being upon whom the safety of the craft, the safety of the crew and of numberless people in passenger ships depends.

"Admiralty orders assign to a submarine (the context shows that a vessel of about 1,100 tons is meant) two chief officers, a commandant, and an officer to take his place. During submergence the commandant has control of several complicated mechanical connections. He has to regulate the speed, keep the ship level, attending to the depth and course; for every attack he had these things to look after: poise and launch the torpedo, read and reread the objects in the reflectors of the periscope. It is evident that the brain is thus subject to an extraordinary fatigue which cannot be continued for any length of time. How many mysterious losses are due to brain fag to the smallest thing going wrong with the officer's vision or nerve? The eyes are apt to grow tired, the sight to become dim, owing to the strain of looking into the glass of the periscope by the feeble light of the tossing, endless waters. If one eye be used the light is perhaps better employed, and in this way stronger, but monocular vision tires more quickly than the vision of two eyes. Soon the limit of endurance is reached through the great bodily eye strain.

In the crew of the submarine there must be technical experts to attend to the torpedoes, the electric motors, the steering gear, the horizontal planes, the machinery for letting in air or expelling water; there are electricians, firemen, oilers, polishers and others more like the sailors of ordinary times. A discussion has been going on in the Admiralty circles as to physique and fitness of men for such work. In a vessel so small it would be folly to be careless or neglectful about matters which concern the size of the men; in a vessel which the supply of oxygen is not inexhaustible it is a case of employing men who combine the greatest capacity of lung with the utmost economy of weight and bulk. German sailors of this type whom the writer has seen were remarkably deft, with a facile neatness that seemed incompatible with such merciless employments. They were quick and light, qualities that are indispensable to men who must overcome two physical forces, the pressure of the air, which tends to rise in a submarine under water, and the blood pressure and temperature, which also rise.

A rise of blood pressure and a rise of temperature are, of course, accompanied by nervous effects: pulse, breathing and involuntary nervous messages from the brain to the limbs are all increased and not always controllable. What is therefore to be said of the temperament of these men? Much time has been spent on this problem in Italy of late, and the most rigid rules have been enforced. The slightest sign of nervousness is a complete disqualification, and the men must be perfect examples of psychic stability. They are examined several times, and most wisely, under the actual conditions of submarine life. In this way a psychical flaw is found if it exists, and the stress of these manoeuvres often discloses a nervous weakness that was unsuspected. Medical and naval officers are complaining that such equilibrium of temperament is rare, and there is a disposition to make the qualifications less strict. It is almost certain that the Germans have been driven by the need of the men to adopt an easier standard. So far as known, the men of the German submarines do not quite bear out the opinions of theoretical experts. The value of these men rests upon their quickness and intelligence and rhythm of emotion rather than upon absolute psychic equilibrium, if such a thing exists. This is the best rule to follow in the case of American sailors. A well-tempered elasticity of psychic temperament joined with a fit physique in other respects is the most practical ideal.

Forty Sandwiches.

No, not for forty thieves.

Any any rate, this is the way to do it.

Open a can of [illegible]

Wash and [illegible] of celery.

When ready to mix these should be equal parts.

Many like a chopped green pepper added to this.

Mix all this with mayonnaise dressing and spread lightly on thin sandwiches.

They are delicious with [illegible] sandwiches.

Sick Headache and Biliousness

CURED BY

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Willard Tower, Hillsboro, N.B., writes: "I have suffered something awful with sick headache. At times I would become bilious, and would have severe pains in my stomach after eating, and have a bad taste in my mouth every morning. I told some of my friends about it and I was advised to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. This I did and they cured me."

When the liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the stomach foul and sick and bilious headaches occur.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean the foul coated tongue and stomach and banish the disagreeable headaches.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review.

TORONTO.—Restriction of business through the railway situation, and the attendant shortage of coal, is more serious than at any previous time this winter. Wholesale trade showed some improvement during the week, and representative houses report increases over the same period of last year. Drygoods lines are fairly active, and collections are better than a couple of weeks previous. Grocery lines are moderately active, and the advance of 10 cents per cwt. on sugar at mid-week served as a stimulus in contrast with the recent quiet markets. Both Ceylon and India teas were higher than last week, and the scarcity of tonnage promises to make stocks even more valuable. Shoe jobbers and wholesalers are busy shipping out spring goods, orders for which are much larger than normal.

MONTREAL.—The movement of travellers has been interrupted to a considerable extent, but in spite of unfavorable weather conditions the orders for drygoods for spring delivery give rise to expressions of satisfaction by wholesalers about trade conditions, and the general outlook in trade circles is more optimistic than it has been recently. Spring footwear is moving out at advances of 10 to 25 per cent. over last year. Commercial obligations are being fairly well met, especially by country customers.

OTTAWA.—Severe weather has placed a damper on business in this district. Intrinsic trade conditions are good, however, and spring orders of greater than usual volume are being shipped out. Collections are fair to good.

HAMILTON.—The industrial activity which has prevailed up to the present is in danger of being curtailed until deliveries of coal are made from the other side of the Niagara River. Stringent methods have been resorted to, in order to ensure prompt arrivals but in the meantime many local industries are in danger of being forced to shut down. In a number of cases operations were suspended, but the large plants have been successful in securing hand-to-mouth supplies. Wholesale and retail trade is described as good. Drygoods are fairly active, and spring orders are being sent out. Travellers are sending in fairly good orders, and payments are good.

LONDON.—Business throughout Western Ontario has been satisfactory. Boot and shoe orders for fall delivery are fair, as the bigger levels. Collections are quite good.

WINNIPEG.—Retail trade is fair. Wholesale trade is good, and prospects for an active movement of merchandise during the spring months are bright. Collections in Winnipeg and district are fair to good. Grocery lines are fairly active. Money is quite plentiful.

CALGARY.—General business conditions are good, and satisfactory movements of trade activity comes from Regina, Edmonton, and Saskatoon.

CRIMES AND NOISE.

Too Much of Latter Frequent Cause of Former.

Too much noise by the constant vibrations jars the brain and explains in part the conspicuous increase in functional diseases. Noises is one of the most potent inciters to crime, according to the theory of Dr. J. D. Quackenbos. He declares our disregard for the ear, one of the most delicate organs of the human body, through submitting it to barbarous and unnecessary noises almost all the time, cannot fail to bring lasting ill effects.

From long experience in psychotherapeutics, Dr. Quackenbos reached the conclusion that a criminal is a criminal by reason of some physical defect in the brain, invisible to the microscope and indistinguishable by chemical analysis. American business existence is a continuous brainstorm. The calm of a generation ago has given place to jostle and unrest. This continual racking and jarring of the brain from noise accounts in greater measure than is generally supposed for that irritability which impels to indulgence in alcoholic stimulants and drugs, for that unbalance which destroys susceptibility to moral control and so invites to crime.

What with the cruel and often preventable noises endured by commuters, the noises of city streets, standing for so much ear strain, the irritating electric lights of the office and the home exciting the eye, mental and physical afflictions; the life that is all noisy work or all noisy play; the life that is given to gambling, whether at bridge or poker, betting on races or stocks; the senseless bolstering of shattered nerve with stimulants and drugs; the vitiated air we are compelled to breathe; the adulterated food market to support the fagged and poisoned nerves of men and women. What, with all of this, men living in the twentieth century, amid the whirl of worry, work, noise and dissipation, constitutes a sufficient excuse for neurasthenia and other conditions that make it easy for man to be guilty of crimes.

Had Weak and Dizzy Spells.

WAS CURED BY

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood, and finds quick relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and are universally known as the very best remedy for all troubles arising from the heart or nerves.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 46
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance (50 for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance ($1.00 for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance.

WALKERTON, MARCH 8th., 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

INCREASED Production is the rallying call to the farmer.

+ + +

WINTER has been sitting tight in the lap of Spring but old Sol will soon rout him out of his seat.

+ + +

THE Hamilton Herald, (Ind.) says: "This Province appears to be governed by N. W. Rowell through the instrumentality of the Hearst Government."

+ + +

FIGHTING Billy McDonald M. L. A. of North Bruce has at last had the satisfaction of seeing the women get the vote after fighting hard for them for several years.

+ + +

ONE humorist rises to remark that the old word picture of a child crying and clinging to its mother's skirts is out of date, as the child would have to be pretty well grown-up to reach them.

+ + +

THE women are already recognized as a factor in Ontario politics. This week the Liberals of North Middlesex invited the ladies to send delegates to the Convention which is to select a candidate for the Legislature.

+ + +

WITHIN the last year the people of three provinces, New Brunswick, Manitoba and British Columbia have turned out Conservative Governments. The Liberals now rule the roost in seven provinces out of nine. Last week's election in N. B. is but a bit of handwriting on the wall.

+ + +

THE ratepayers of Kincardine will vote on a by-law proposing to loan $20,000 at four per cent. to J. D. Watson and also to grant a site and tax exemptions. Mr. Watson is a resident of the town, and formerly in the Coombe & Watson Co., from which he withdrew some time ago. He is a man of recognized ability in the furniture business.

+ + +

THE ruling out of Mr. Rowell's motion for women suffrage is of no importance, except as it shows that the Government was afraid of the vote. The motion cannot be abolished by any technical quibble. It stands as a declaration of a great principle, which ought to be embodied in legislation at once, so that women may vote in the next election.—Toronto Star.

+ + +

THE Advocates of church union are encouraged by the practical move of the churches of Northern Ontario, where a local union is looked forward to. The intention is for the Methodist and Presbyterian churches to co-operate, and according to plans formulated at a meeting at North Bay, a saving of thirty thousand dollars annually and thirty men will be effected.

+ + +

"TAKE time to be careful," warns the Ontario Safety League. And that means both you and I, whether we are driving a horse or car. The League advises extra caution—(1) When near any of the schools. (2) When children are on the roadway. (3) When approaching street corners. (4) When crossing a railway track. (5) When the roads are wet or slippery. "Better be safe than sorry," says the League.

+ + +

WM. McDONALD, M. L. A. of North Bruce has brought a Bill before the Legislature to amend the Public Health Act so as to give councils full control over the Medical Officers of Health, same as other Municipal officials, without reference to the Provincial Board of Health. There is a general feeling throughout this Province that the Legislature is taking away too much of the Municipalities' authority and centralizing power at Toronto.

+ + +

BRANT men had an active part in the big united Farmers Convention which was held at Toronto last week. The farmers talked Reciprocity but were at first at a loss how to deal with it without appearing to favor one political party. Finally Herman W. Mons of Brant hit an idea which met with the unanimous approval of the meeting. His resolution declared approval of Reciprocity and of free trade in all foodstuffs not covered by the reciprocity agreement of 1911, and called upon the Dominion Government to submit the question to the people in the form of a referendum. This resolution was enthusiastically carried by a standing vote. Mr. Frank Fisher, of Brant moved a resolution providing for an immediate reduction by one half in the tariff on British Imports and complete Free Trade with the Mother Country in five years.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE

Annual Report of the Walkerton Chapter Gives the Public A Good Idea of the Noble and Necessary Work the Women are Doing.

The annual meeting of the Walkerton Chapter of the I. O. D. E., took place in the Armoury, Tuesday evening, Feb. 20th, with the Regent in the chair and the keen interest in the welfare of the Chapter was shown in the large attendance. The following officers for 1917 were elected:—

Hon. Regent,—Miss Shaw.
Regent,—Mrs. J. J. Wisser.
1st. vice-Regent,—Mrs. W. M. Shaw.
2nd. vice-Regent,—Mrs. R. Perdue.
Secretary,—Miss Florence Rowland.
Assist. Secretary,—Miss E. Sheffield.
Treasurer,—Mrs. Taggart.
Standard Bearer,—Mrs. Taggart.
Auditors,—Miss A. Thompson and Miss McCormick.

The meeting was opened by a short address from the Regent, making a strong appeal to the members of the Chapter to do all in their power for those who are doing so much for us. The Secretary's report was then read.

Since the last Annual Meeting there has been made into Surgical Dressings about 2000 yds. of gauze 186 lbs. of Absorbent Cotton costing $214.79 and about 72 lbs. of Non-Absorbent worth $21.45 making total outlay $236.24

During the year we shipped 10,388 compresses, 2,000 wipes, 2880 large pads, 8202 small pads, 121 extra large pads, 234 Surgical kits, 150 bed pads, 1 bed ring, 77 wash cloths, 118 mouth wipes, 39 Hospital handkerchiefs, 84 sponges, 81 pan covers, 1 bath towel, 157 shaving pads 1 package of Boracic.

During 1916 the work of the Chapter has been carried on much as in the previous year, but one or two changes may be noted.

Our last Annual Meeting was held in the Town Hall and we were glad indeed to be allowed to return to our old quarters at the Armouries where Sergeant Pengelly takes a deep interest in our work, looks after our comfort. Another change during 1916 was that of the time of the monthly business meeting from the 3rd Saturday afternoon to the 3rd Tuesday evening. This was made in view of the many other meetings which our members have to attend, and has resulted in better attendance at business meetings.

During the year a change took place in the personnel of the Executive Committee. Miss Shaw was obliged to resign the office of Regent owing to ill-health and Mrs. Wisser was elected to fill the office. Miss Rolston being made 1st Vice-regent in Mrs. Wisser's place. Miss Shaw was then made Honourary Regent.

The activities of the Chapter have been many and varied, and many of people of the town have given their hearty support for which thanks are due.

Thousands of surgical dressings have been made and packed under the direction of Miss Shaw, and a separate report will be given by her committee. Six hundred pairs of socks have been made by members and others of yarn supplied by the Chapter and for some months all of these have been sent to our own boys in the trenches. A club-room was maintained at the expense of the Chapter for the 160th Battalion, mobolized here, and 12 cook-boxes were presented to the Battalion. A Christmas tree was given for the children of the soldiers. Parcels were sent for Christmas to the boys on active service and to three nurses, and letters received have shown how these were appreciated. Money contributions have been made to the following funds.—Y. M. C. A. Work at the front, British Red Cross, Sailors Relief Fund, Prisoners' Fund Tobacco Fund and for a library and pictures for a foreign School in the West.

But while much has been accomplished, there is still much to do, and your committee deplore the fact that so many women seem not to realize that the soldiers in England and France, and the sailors in the Navy are giving, not a few hours, but all their time and energy to fighting the battles for us, who cannot fight them for ourselves. They would bespeak for the incoming Executive the loyal and constant support of all the 102 members of the Chapter.

Treasurer's Statement from Feb. 16th 1916 to Feb. 20th 1917. Receipts, Soldier's Aid Society, $200; Mrs. Farewell musical, 21.00; Mrs. Hepburn's Parcel tea, 13.00, Public Library board lecture, 40.40; Minstrel Show, 179.12, Carnival, 69.20, Patriotic dance 41.70; Tom Marks concert, 10.00; Donations (Personal), 67.85; W. A. McLean of Louisville, Ky., 25.00; D. McGillivary, Halifax, 10.00; Jno. O'Connor, St. Johns N. B., 5.00; Mrs. Brewer Calgary 5.00; Major McNally, 5.00; Special Telescope, 177.00; Sock Shower, 47.75; Mr. Pilsson (Movie Land) 28.55; Fees (102 members) 25.50; Refunds, 10.44; Interest, 5.38; Total receipts for year $1318.49; Expenditures—Yarn, $13.43; Flannel, 60.00; Buttons, pin, thread, 3.47; Surgical supplies, 239.50; Cotton, 6.00; 160th Batt. photo, 6.50; Soldiers' club room, 73.77; Prisoners of War, 99.00; Xmas gifts to men in trenches, 58.80; Xmas tree to Soldier's children, 15.43; Postage on socks and parcels to men in the trenches, 21.00; Delegate to 'convention, 5.00; British sailor fund, 25.00; British Red Cross Society, 25.00; Canadian Prisoner fund, 25.00; Y. M. C. A. work at the front, 100.00, 160th Batt. Brass Band, 25.00; 160th mess boxes, 77.95; 160th lunch on leaving, 45.27, Library & pictures for a school out West, 15.04; Overseas Tobacco club, 6.00; Fees to National Chapter, 25.00, Official stationary, 2.00, Printing, 10.50; Special Telescope, 148.00, Minstrel show, 19.87, Sundries, 10.45 Total expenditures 1437.80.

Total receipts for year	$1518.49
Bal. from last year	361.82
	1880.31
Total expenses for year	1437.80
Balance on hand	247.51

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.75
Year	1.00

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts	2.50

THE P. S. HONOUR ROLL

Names of Walkerton Public School Scholars Who Head the List for the Past Month.

GRADE VII.

Sr. IV.—Honours—G. McCarter, V. Bush, G. Miller, E. Bell.

Pass—M. Royce, E. Clyderman, J. Flewelling, G. Thompson, W. George, L. Johnstone.

Jr. IV.—Honours—W. Wilson, M. Godwin, M. Petteplace.

Pass—D. Hunter, M. Lumley.

H. E. Willoughby,
Principal.

GRADE VI.

Seniors Honours—J. Knepfler, I. Harrison, A. Searle, E. Kolpin, D. Whyte, E. Faust, E. Forsythe.

Pass—M. Johnston, M. Perdue, E. Ramsey, E. Fennell, M. Hyslop, D. Van Horne, G. Sutton, R. Van Horne. (I. Glintz, D. Truax.)

Juniors—Honours—M. Schwindt, J. Nutting, H. Craig, C. Gordon, M. Whyte.

Pass—C. Yates, G. Ramsey, N. Webb.

J. Stead

GRADE V.

Sen.—Honours—Morris McCarter, Waldon Forsythe, Franklin Bush, Ila Moore, Charlie Wallace, Ethel Riley, Jack McConnell.

Sen.—Pass—Dorothea Crawford Harry Myles, Hazel Thompson, Delbert Anderson.

Jun.—Honours—Jack Van Horne.

Jun.—Pass—Willie Goode, Arthur Royce, Grace George.

M. Ross.

GRADE IV.

Honours.—N. McCartney, R. Hampson, J. Cotterman, R. Gowanlock, E. Singer, D. Gowanlock, W. Hehn, E. Webber, W. Ballantyne, W. Hunt.

Pass.—N. Forsythe, (M. Dietz, W. Hartman,) R. Johnston, O. Dietsche, C. Fields, H. Paull, A. Reichenbach, (D. McNeill, A. Taggart,) N. Loos.

Agnes Warren.

GRADE III.

Jr. II.—Honours.—K. Perdue, A. Buehlow, L. Mortimer, E. Truax, J. Hiscox, H. Moore, K. Fortune, Pass.—E. Abel, S. Hehn, O. Thompson, J. Webber, A. Beck.

Sr. I.—Honours.—V. Bell, R. Hunter, E. Dietsche, L. Searle, H. Bush, M. Appel, S. Fennell.

Pass.—M. Shaw, H. Ernest, M. Player.

A. M. Halladay.
Teacher.

First Book.—Honours.—M. Jones, S. Anderson, M. Faust, M. Pletsch, J. Godwin, D. Lancaster, A. Kerney, E. Watts.

Pass.—P. Webb, A. Craig, E. Taylor, M. Hunt, P. McConnell, M. Beamer, G. Schwindt, J. Hiscox.

Primer.—Honours.—F. Hartman, C. Buehlow, E. Leake. F. McCarter.

Pass.—R. Pye, W. Monk, A. Leake.

W. Thompson,
Teacher.

GRADE I.

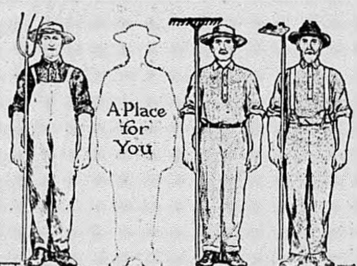
Sr Primer.—Marjorie Bell, Arthur Whitehead, Paul George, Eddie La Porte, Percy Nutting, Mildred Silver, Helen Reichenbach, Henry Taylor, Gwendoline Hilker, Hubert Dietz, Girda Bowlby, Milne Harrison, Dorothy Ernest.

Jr. Primer.—Agnes Gordon, Eldon Knepfler, Franklin Spierau, Wilbur Hampson, Johnny Kayfaky, George Gallagher, Dorothy Trimble, Dorothy Webb, Beverley Trimble, Clair Walker.

A. D. Thompson.

A Peculiar Case

A peculiar case is the following. At Christmas a family from Toronto named Bennet were at Teeswater visiting. The children took the whooping cough and for the last two weeks two of them have been lying at death's door. The grandfather, George Neo, received a telegram that Harrington a boy of four years, had died Tuesday night. Mr. Neo immediately took the train for Toronto, and shortly after his arrival there the little fellow revived. Apparently he had only been in a swoon, though the two doctors in attendance had pronounced him dead, and arrangements had been made for the funeral.



Recruits Wanted for Production

Just as surely as lack of food is strangling Germany day by day, so plenty of food is winning the victory for the allies. The French armies, for instance, were never better fed than now, for France cannot forget the awful lesson of 1870—the failure of her food supply. To this she attributed the loss of that war.

To feed the French soldiers around Verdun, more than 25,000,000 pounds of food a week were required. This gives a faint idea of the colossal task of feeding an army. Canada and Britain have a huge army of fighting heroes on the line; every man must have plenty of food, in spite of a world shortage. Upon Canada's food production all principally rely.

The Farmers of Ontario Urgently Need Help

The Department of Agriculture appeals to men and boys to enlist in the farm help campaign. The Department appeals to men unfit for military service, or who find it impossible to enlist in the army. Do your "bit" by helping to increase production of foodstuffs. This is your hour of opportunity.

The farmers of Ontario need the help of retired farmers, of men following no occupation (retired), of business men who can spare a portion of their time. We appeal to all who can so arrange their ordinary affairs to plan to help some farmer friend, particularly in seed time and harvest.

Confer with your county District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, or write, "Farm Help Campaign," care Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Ontario Department of Agriculture
W. H. Hearst, Minister of Agriculture
Parliament Buildings Toronto

Commercial Printing

WE are in a position to handle all kinds of Commercial Printing with satisfaction to our customers.

Expert Workmanship. New Type. Moderate prices.

Try the Telescope for your next job of Printing.

TELESCOPE
Job Department

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war. Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in those cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war; our armies are still growing; the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund still must be maintained. And what do we find: in every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.

Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD NOT CONTROL, BECAUSE—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum these families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden. Why take from them this task, and give it to all, rich and poor?

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

MEN AND WOMEN OF ONTARIO:

Bend your backs once again to this burden. If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally, taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty; your war time part, in this day of national sacrifice.

The Fund requires $12,500,000 for 1917. Of this Ontario is asked to raise $6,000,000, being the estimated requirements of Ontario's families. If there is no local Fund to which you can subscribe, send your gift direct to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Victoria Street, Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

DENTAL

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

The Winter Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "T and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your fall suit of overcoat at the old reduced prices.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
☞ Next to Vogan's Hardware

FARM FOR SALE

The Executors of the Will of Patrick O'Hagan, deceased, offer for sale the West Halves of Lots 19 & 20 Concession, D. Elderslie, 100 acres. This is a desirable grass farm situate about three miles from Paisley. For full particulars apply to

Patrick O'Hagan, Executor, or Chepstowe
D. Forrester, Barrister, Paisley
t.f.

Read the Ads.

ONTARIO FARMERS!

Existing war conditions demand that you give the question of seed special attention this year. Seed of desirable varieties and high germination power will be factors influencing yields.

If you have not secured your seed

Let the Department of Agriculture Help You

Farmers having Seed Grain or Potatoes for sale may forward samples to this office stating varieties, price and quantity.

Farmers wishing to purchase seed are also invited to communicate with this office stating variety and quantity and an effort will be made to put them in touch with farmers having seed for sale.

Write to N. C. McKAY,
District Representative
WALKERTON

W. H. Hearst,
Minister of Agriculture.

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

Clearing Sale of

WALL PAPER

All of my 1916 Wall Paper must be cleared out in the next 30 days to make room for next season's goods which are now coming in.—There is a large assortment of high grade Wall Paper that will be on sale at very low prices.

These are:—

Dining Room, Parlor, Hall, Sitting Room, Bath Room, and Kitchen Papers.

In fact Papers for every room in the house at less than cost.

It will pay you to secure your supply of Paper, as these goods will go with a rush.

I have a full line of Oat Meal Papers, at very reasonable prices.

G. T. STEAD
Two Doors East of Post Office

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

NOTICE

Commencing Monday, Feb. 12th, Transcontinental train for Sudbury, Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, North Battleford, Edmonton, Vancouver, and the Pacific Coast, will leave Toronto Union Station at 9 P. M., instead of 10.45 P. M., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400 000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Shingles!

New Brunswick White Cedar Shingles, Grades, Extra and Clear. Also a large stock of British Columbia Shingles in grades, 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 X. Call and get special prices.

R. Truax & Son

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application. 654

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

PURITY FLOUR
MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD
We make it good-our customers have made it famous.
14

LOW FARES and THROUGH TICKETS
TO ALL POINTS IN
WESTERN CANADA AND THE PACIFIC COAST
ELECTRIC LIGHTED AND COMFORTABLY EQUIPPED TRAINS
To obtain the lowest fare and most convenient routing, apply to—
T. E. ATTWOOD, AGENT
Or write to R. L. Fairbairn, Gen'l Passenger Dept., 68 King St. E., Toronto
VIA CANADIAN NORTHERN

TO INVESTORS

THOSE WHO, FROM TIME TO TIME, HAVE FUNDS REQUIRING INVESTMENT MAY PURCHASE AT PAR

DOMINION OF CANADA DEBENTURE STOCK

IN SUMS OF $500, OR ANY MULTIPLE THEREOF

Principal repayable 1st October, 1919.

Interest payable half-yearly, 1st April and 1st October by cheque (free of exchange at any chartered Bank in Canada) at the rate of five per cent per annum from the date of purchase.

Holders of this stock will have the privilege of surrendering at par and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash, in payment of any allotment made under any future war loan issue in Canada other than an issue of Treasury Bills or other like short date security.

Proceeds of this stock are for war purposes only.

A commission of one-quarter of one per cent will be allowed to recognized bond and stock brokers on allotments made in respect of applications for this stock which bear their stamp.

For application forms apply to the Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA
OCTOBER 7th, 1916.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

EAST SHIP HARBOUR, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefits I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

MRS. MARTHA DEWOLFE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.

MONEY to LOAN REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase.

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies—English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

POETS' CORNER

OUR OPEN WINTER

(Open Valentine to Old Probs)

Open enough, I have often been told,
To let out the heat and let in the cold
—Open to censure for acting so bold.
Open to let in the frost and the snow
—Oh! for the wings of a migrating —crow,
That south in Autumn each year might go.
Open to many objections, say you,
And I assure you the saying is true—
Days free from storm or cold weather are few.
Open to prevalent colds and la grippe,
When but few care for an ice-water dip
But to a southland would fane take a trip.
Open, wide open to let your cash out,
While prices soar like the storm clouds about.
But there's no reason to worry or pout;
For many people have money to burn,
—It goes up in smoke, no more to return—
But time is now called, and I must adjourn.

Bill Bert

Post Script

You wise (?) weather-witches who all prophesied
'Twould be "open winter," please pocket your pride,
For I must now tell you—you lied, Oh, you lied!

Feb. 14, 1917.

News About Town

Possibly the oldest inhabitant of Bruce County and one of the earliest settlers is Mrs. James Underwood, who resides at Arkwright and is 94 years of age. Up to last summer she was smart and active when she had an attack of la grippe which affected her eyes and she became blind. She is now confined to bed but is not suffering from any disease.

+ + +

Bruce For Horses!

The Paisley Advocate claims that Paisley is the greatest horse shipping centre of any small town in the world. Mr. George Craig, the well-known buyer, has shipped eighteen carloads in the last four months. While not wishing to discount Paisley's big record, we might state that Irwin Bros. of Walkerton also ship a few horses occasionally. In the last two months they have handled no less than thirteen carloads of choice work horses for the West and are shipping regularly now about every week. If Paisley buyers are shipping more than Irwin Bros. they have to go some. One thing certain Bruce is surely the part of the world where they raise the horses.

+ + +

'A Breath Of Spring"

Lottie Tillotson, the Hawaiian Lecturer, was billed to appear in Thessalon last week. The Algoma Advocate man likened, in advance, her appearance to a "breath of spring" He does penance last week as follows:—

This creature, Lottie,
Seems beastly naughty—
And not so very young.
It's only now we realize
How badly we've been—stung

Its too bad the fair Lottie wasn't pinched after instead of before her Thessalon engagement, although we would bet a fresh egg she'd get a bumper of a house here right now if shed favor us with a visit. "Like a breath of Spring," we said last week, in referring to her Thessalon advent, and every time we think of it, we stick our head in the ink barrel and ask the devil to kick us up and down the pressroom three times. "Like a breath of spring,"—50 years old, and still going. "Like a breath of spring," and six months in the bird-cage for shop-lifting. Like a——

Apparently the Algoma Advocate man has not been able to discover just exactly the class of a lecture "the fair Lottie" stages or he wouldn't mourn because she was plucked before her Thessalon engagement

+ + +

Homestead Increased Wheat 50%

G. E. MEADD, Park Hill, Ontario, says:

"I used Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer on my wheat I got one-half more wheat where I fertilized than where I did not."

Good Results on Grain and Sugar Beets

JOSEPH HAIST, Crediton East, Ontario, says:

"Last spring I bought and used Homestead Fertilizers on grain and sugar beets. In both instances I can safely say I met with very good results."

Equals Barnyard Manure

F. N. LOW, Park Hill, Ontario, says:

"I used Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer on my Fall wheat and I find that I can grow as good a crop with it as I can with barnyard manure, as I tried them side by side."

It Pays To Use It

CALVERT BROTHERS, Tilbury, Ontario, says:

"We used Homestead Bone Black Fertilizer on our wheat and meadow this Fall. We sowed a strip across the field without fertilizer and the difference between the fertilized and the unfertilized is so great that we surely think it pays to sow fertilizer. We intend using more on the Spring Crop."

Write Michigan Carbon Works, Detroit, for free book and particulars about their Homestead Bone Black

WALKERTON HIGH SCHOOL

Standing of the Pupils in the Different Forms for the Month of February.

The results of the weekly examinations held during February are given below. The names are in order of merit. 75% is required for honours; 60% is required for pass.

FORM 1

Subjects:—Algebra, Latin, Geography, History.

Honours—S. Greenzaback, C. McNab.

Pass—J. Norrish, S. Reichenbach, E. Pinkney, W. Leitner, G. Lambertus, L. Elder, B. Thompson, N. Shaw, I. Moore.

Below Pass—A. Condy, L. Wallace, M. Pinkerton, G. Ellis, J. Paterson, J. Kenny, A. Waechter.

On fewer than four subjects:—

Honours—F. Young, F. Garner.

Pass—A. Chisholm, F. Brocklebank, G. Van Horne.

Below Pass—S. Bremner, L. Hergott, W. Inglis, F. Meagher, N. McCarter, C. Attwood, G. Henderson, J. Bruder, E. Giesler, L. Bryce.

FORM 2

Subjects:—Latin, French, German, Geometry, Geography.

On four or three subjects—

Honours—E. Olave, N. Pinkerton, C. Tovell, W. Ramsey, V. Eidt, C. Cargill, A. Weiler, L. Yack, A. Johnstone, F. Scherrer, N. Ley.

Pass—W. Pollfuss, E. Moore, E. Milhausen.

Below Pass—E. Ramsey, G. Hibbert, C. Wilton, B. Farewell, J. Michell, I. Wiser, H. Johnston.

On two subjects—Geography, Geometry.

Honours—G. Young, E. Stevens, A. Reinhart.

Pass—M. Kenny, L. Bilger.

Below pass—S. Brocklebank M. Chisholm, H. Irwin, M. Bonnyman, S Taggart, D. Kenny.

On one subject—

E. Lindsay 60, F. Myles 51, M. Wilson 86.

FORM 3

Subjects:—Chemistry, Geometry, Literature, Composition.

Honours—A. Pinkney, G. Rogers, F. Taylor, G. Seigner.

Pass—L. McConnell, J. Chalmers, A. Garland, L. Bilger, W. Wilson, D. McCool, E. Bilger.

Below pass—M. Baechler, A. McCool, G. Pfohl, L. Batte, G. Lewis, M. Chalmers, M. Forsythe.

FORM 4

Subjects—History, Chemistry, Latin.

Honours—S. Bush.

Pass—M. Green, C. Fortune, M. Weiler, J. Wells.

Below pass—C. Thornburn.

On Algebra—M. Green 50.

On German—S. Bush 66, C. Fortune 45.

SEPARATE SCHOOL REPORT

Honour Roll of Pupils at Walkerton Separate School for the Month of February.

ROOM IV.

Sen. IV.—Clement Wilhelm, Madeline Weiler, Melvin Schmidt, Cecilia Cuneo, Harold Walker, Robert Wilhelm, Wilbert Weiler, Margaret Yaeck, Frances Ernst, Mary Gillen, Leonard Kelly, George Leitner, Margaret McCurdy, Thomas Monahan, Rose McGarrity, Kathleen Oberle.

Jun. IV.—Louise Lippert, Gladys Pohrenbach, Melinda Schumacher, Loretta Schumacher, Adeline Becker, Lizzie O'Connor, Frank Mosack, Rita Weiss, Fred Irwin, Tommy Reichenbach.

ROOM III.

Jun. IV.—Gladys Jarvis, Florence O'Bracht, Albert Weiler, Albert Ruetz, Agnes Ward, Christella Schnurr, Willie Batte.

Sen. III.—Edwin Schmidt, Alex McNab, Clarence Weiler, Eleanor Weber, Aloysius Zettler, Herbert Schnurr, Loretta Schuel, Edna Sutter, Cyril Oberle, Lyal Cousins, Mary Zettler, Wilbert Frieburger.

Jun. III.—Arthur Sutter, Laverne Yaeck, Beatrice Lumley, John Sweeney, Loretta Kuenneman, Willard Walker, Harry Oberle, John Obrecht, Violet Frieburger, Gladys Eckenswiller, Cyril Lumley, Fridolin Berberich, Clara Giesler, Audrey McNeill.

ROOM II.

Sen. II.—Agnes Weber, Kathleen Obrecht, Howard O'Neill, Albert Giesler, Albert Batte, Loretta Gillen, Katie Sidle, Philip Weiler, Norman Freiburger, Harold Schiestel, Joseph Gillen.

Jun. IV. — Joseph Batte, Leona Schnurr, Lilian Freiburger, Arthur Klein, Roy Walker, Vera Oberle, Willie Dentinger, Erwin Lobsinger, Ursula Lymberry, Joseph Lippert.

ROOM I.

Part II.—David McNab, Isabel Zettler, Kelly Lettour, Lilian Koller, Walter Weiler, Lionel Rich, Charles Schnurr.

Part I.—Eileen Freiburger, Wilbert Mullen, Clarence Schnurr, Mildred Becker, Edgar Oberle, Harry Schnurr.

All newspapers to the boys in France require two cents postage when mailing, consequently $1.04 postage must be added to the year's subscription.

The Hanover Post blossomed out last week as an entire home-print weekly. Although considerably cut down in size, the Post is very much improved by the change.

Mr. Will Henning, who recently took a position as cutter with S. A. Rife & Co. is well-known in lacrosse circles as one of the fastest lacrosse-men in Western Ontario.

"Good bye and Good Luck!"

"Thank you for the wishes and for

WRIGLEY'S

The Flavour Lasts

This great little pick-me-up is full of vigour and vim for the jaded soldier. Quenches thirst, allays fatigue, gives new life to enervated spirits. 5¢

MADE IN CANADA

Every letter or parcel for your soldier friend should contain a few bars. Appetite, digestion and spirits are the better for it.

Sold Everywhere

Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co., Ltd., Wrigley Bldg., Toronto

The Flavour Lasts!

SEALED TIGHT—KEPT RIGHT

CHEW IT AFTER EVERY MEAL

HOUSE CLEANING!

Why not rent one of our

Electric Vacuum Sweepers

and save the trouble of moving all rugs and furniture in the house. They will do the work just as work just as well with half the expense and work. All ready to attach to the cord for

75c, $1.00 Per Day

PATTERSON BROS.
HARDWARE PLUMBING HEATING

Seeds! Seeds!!

We always carry a full stock of all kinds of

Timothy and Clover Seeds

All No. 1 for quality and prices right.

Paints

We have a complete stock of Lowe Bros. High Standard Paints, the paint of performance.

S. W. VOGAN

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that JOHNSTON ALEXANDER ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, will apply to the Parliament of Canada, at the next session thereof, for a bill of divorce from his wife MARY CHARLES ABRAHAM of the Village of Wiarton, in the County of Bruce and Province of Ontario, on the grounds of adultery and misconduct.

DATED AT OTTAWA this 9th day of December, A. D. 1916.

PRINGLE, THOMPSON, BURGESS & COTE, Union Bank Building, Ottawa, Ont.
46—12 Solicitors for Applicant.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Picture Framing and Enlarging

FRASER STUDIO

A PUZZLING CASE

Sitting down in a comfortable chair near him I pointed solemnly to a glass of brandy and soda standing at his elbow.

"You should not fly to that for consolation."

Dallas turned his melancholy eyes on the drink and then looked at me with a bitter smile.

"Don't preach, major," he said harshly, "you don't know what it is to have loved and lost, therefore you are no judge as to what means should be taken to quieten one's conscience."

"Quieten one's conscience," I repeated, significantly; "is there need of that?"

"Need of that," he said, rising to his feet with a frown, "yes, great need."

"Why, did you treat her badly?"

"On the contrary, she treated me badly," he cried, walking to and fro in a state of uncontrollable agitation, "still I might have restrained my temper and we would not have parted."

"Parted where?"

"In Italy. Oh, yes! we were great friends in Milan; I saw her at the opera and she was so beautiful that I fell in love with her. Del Orto introduced me to her, and as I was English she took a great fancy to me."

"Why because you were English?"

"Like drawing to like, I suppose. She was English also."

"What?" I cried, in amazement; "Mazzucata English?"

"Or Irish if you wish to be particular, major. Yes, her real name was Magallan, but of course she took an Italian name when she went on the stage, and from Mary Magallan changed to Marietta Mazzucata."

"I never knew that before."

"There are a good many things you don't know."

"You are right. For instance: how she came to her death."

Dallas was leaning against the mantelpiece, looking listlessly at the carpet; but at my last remark he looked at me with blazing eyes.

"What the deuce has that to do with you?"

I am an old man, but, nevertheless, my temper is as fiery as that of a young one, and I would have resented Dallas' remark very promptly, but that a thought of my desire to learn all about Mazzucata from him restrained me. With this in my mind I therefore answered quietly, though I was much disposed to show my sense of the man's impertinence by leaving the room.

"It has nothing to do with me, certainly, but I would like to know who killed the woman."

"So would I! So would I!" he repeated, viciously; "if I did I would strangle him—or her."

"Do you think the crime was committed by a woman?"

Dallas looked at me keenly, then crossing the room resumed his seat and finished the brandy and soda.

"How should I know. It's none of my business."

"Considering what you said last night about killing her and what you say this morning about quietening your conscience, I should think it was a good deal of your business."

The young man sat quite still as I said these words, but I saw the knuckles of his fingers grow white as he suddenly clutched the arms of his chair.

"Major Granby," he said, at length, in a measured voice, "do you think I killed Mazzucata?"

"I don't know."

"Thank you, major, I am much obliged to you for your good opinion. So you have come here to spy out traces of the crime, and put a rope round my neck, eh?"

I kept quiet as long as I could, but evidently I was not born to be a detective, for at this last insulting speech I arose to my feet and poured forth the vials of my wrath on Dallas.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself speaking like that to a man old enough to be your father," I cried, excitedly; "I came to you out of friendship and to ask you to put my mind at rest. You say I suspect you of killing this woman. God knows I do not wish to suspect you, but look at the way you spoke last night—look at the way you speak this morning. If you are not guilty, why do you act as if you were—I only came to warn you not to speak to others as you did to me, lest they suspect you of what I am sure you are innocent."

"Oh!" he said, sneeringly, "so you are sure I am innocent."

"I bid you good-morning, Mr. Dallas," I replied, in a dignified manner, and walked towards the door. Before I reached it, however, he bounded across the room and stood with his back to the door, thus barring my exit.

"Major Granby," he cried, in a voice shaking with passion; "I want a plain answer to a plain question, and until I get it you do not leave this room. Do you think I am a murderer?"

I certainly felt that I occupied a very undignified position, for in my desire to begin unravelling this mystery I had unwittingly sought to know more of my friend's inner life than I had any right to. It seems to me that in becoming a detective, it is absolutely necessary to cast off all gentlemanly feeling so that one can press home questions which good taste demands should not be asked. Now, at this eleventh hour, I felt inclined to retreat from the position I had taken up, but so strongly was I seized with the detective fever, that crushing down all objections on the part of my conscience, I answered Dallas, if not directly, at least boldly.

"I think you know more about the affair than you admit."

"Admit," he retorted, scornfully, "I have admitted nothing."

"And will admit nothing, I suppose?"

"I may do so—to the proper authorities."

"In that event you may get into trouble."

"Oh, that's your opinion, is it, major!" he said, derisively, "but you are wrong. I am afraid you will find but little romance in this affair."

"A beautiful woman with two lovers, both at the theatre on the night of her death. It seems to me, Dallas, that there is a good deal of romance there."

"Oh! so you suspect Tressinger also," said Dallas, returning to his seat, and flinging himself down with a frown on his mobile face.

"I don't suspect Tressinger and I don't suspect you," I retorted, irritably. "If you will give me leave to speak plainly, I will tell you what I think."

"Very well! Speak as plainly as you will."

He filled himself a glass of soda and leaned back in his chair, while I sat down on the sofa and began to talk freely.

"Lawrence! have you ever had detective fever?"

"No!"

"Then I hope you never will have it, for it makes one feel the meanest man out."

"Oh! and you have detective fever?"

"Very badly! That is why I came to see you this morning."

"But what have I to do with your disease?"

"Simply this. Mazzucata is dead—murdered by an unknown person, and I wish, for the sake of gratifying my own curiosity, to find out the name of that person."

"You will never find out," replied Lawrence, gloomily. "How can you trace the owner of a bouquet, thrown from the centre of a crowded theatre?"

"Perhaps not in that way; but you know Mazzucata's early life, and can perhaps tell me of some one who wished her death."

"Beyond myself I know of no one who wished her death."

"You don't mean to admit that you killed her?" I cried, in a horrified tone.

"No, my friend. I'm too fond of my own skin to admit such a thing. It is true that I said I wished her death, but that was merely an expression of rage from a jealous man."

"Then who do you think killed her?"

Dallas turned his face away.

"I don't know," he said at length, in a husky voice.

"But you suspect," I persisted, feeling sure he was concealing something from me.

"No! No!"

"Yes, you do, Dallas. Tell me her name."

"Her name!" he cried, fiercely. "What right have you to think a woman is guilty of the crime?"

"Well, from what you said——"

"I said nothing, and I say nothing. Major Granby, if you are a wise man, you will leave this affair alone. Mazzucata is dead—I am sorry she is dead in one way, because I loved her. I am glad she is dead in another way because she deceived me. What my suspicions are I decline to say, but merely tell you that you will never find the person who threw the bouquet."

"I'm not so sure of that," I retorted, now growing suspicious; "at all events I will try."

"As you please. Try, and fail."

"I will not fail—if you will help me."

"I won't help you," retorted Dallas, harshly, rising to his feet. "I will not lift a finger to avenge the death of a woman who deserved to die."

I arose to my feet and walked slowly towards the door.

"Where are you going, major?" asked Dallas, coolly.

"I am going to see Gilbert Tressinger, and find out from him what you refuse to tell me."

"He can tell you nothing."

"You are wrong. He will tell me what parted you and this woman in Italy."

Dallas grew pale. As I looked at him steadily I seemed to see a guilty look on his face, but this was probably only my fancy, and I therefore opened the door to depart when he called me back.

"Major Granby?"

"Yes!"

"You are going to see Gilbert Tressinger?"

"I am."

"To ask about my former acquaintance with Mazzucata?"

"Precisely!"

"Well, if you want to learn more than you think, ask him about that flower."

"What flower?"

"The Black Carnation."

"What do you mean?"

Dallas came swiftly across the room and pushed me gently outside the door with a mocking laugh.

"Ask him about the Black Carnation," he said, sneeringly. "Good day, Major Granby."

MAJOR GRANBY'S THEORY.

I firmly believe that Lawrence Dallas murdered the singer Marietta Mazzucata, and my reasons for such belief are as follows:

Last night he said that if he discovered she loved another man he would kill her.

Last night he discovered she was in love with Gilbert Tressinger, and doubtless thereupon determined to kill her.

Mazzucata was killed by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge concealed in a bouquet of white flowers, with one dark one in the centre.

Dallas threw Mazzucata a bouquet of white flowers with a dark one in the centre, and immediately after it was thrown the explosion occurred.

To-day Dallas says he is glad she is dead, and refuses to tell me anything about his past connection with this singer.

CHAPTER III.

So far as I could see, up to the present I had made but little progress in my efforts to unravel the opera house crime, and in my interview with Dallas had gained no definite information. Certainly, those doubts of his criminality which I had entertained before my visit were more or less confirmed, as his whole attitude seemed to favor the idea of his guilt. If he were innocent he certainly acted in a way likely to cause suspicion, yet, on the other hand, if he were guilty, as I began to believe, he was crafty enough not to commit himself in any way. As he very truly observed, it was an impossibility to trace the owner of the bouquet, and until such a result was achieved, there was no chance of Mazzucata's assassin being brought to justice.

Without doubt, judging from his conversation and demeanor, he might have thrown the bouquet which contained the explosive, and I myself saw him throw Mazzucata some flowers but, as I said before, I am not prepared to say whether it was Dallas' bouquet she picked up, and so brought destruction on herself. Dallas denied his guilt, and taking everything into consideration, there was no chance of proving anything against him so, having thus failed in one interview, I lost no time in seeking another with Tressinger, in the hope that I would be more successful in finding a clue.

At this moment I recollected that I had already a clue, for the mention by Dallas of "A Black Carnation," suggested a starting point, from whence one could hope to advance with a considerable degree of certainty. For myself, I was puzzled to know what was meant by a Black Carnation, as I had never heard of such a flower; and unless it were the password of some secret society, I was completely bewildered as to what it could be. As to the term "secret society," I argued it out in this way:

Mazzucata was destroyed by an infernal machine on a small scale, hidden in a bouquet of innocent looking flowers. Such a mode of death suggests Nihilism, Anarchism, Communism, and these three words separately and collectively at once suggest a secret society. Now what was more likely than that Mazzucata was mixed up in some way with conspirators, and belonged to a secret society entitled The Black Carnation. As is usual with such leagues, the members are bound to secrecy by oath, the breaking of which entails death. Mazzucata had cried out in alarm the moment before her death, and in the light of the above argument I could now understand her cry, for she had seen in the centre of the bouquet a Black Carnation, which was to her the symbol of a violent end.

"Yes," said I, exultingly, on coming to this conclusion, "there is no doubt now in my mind that this is the true explanation of the mystery. Dallas cannot be guilty of her death, nor was the cause of such death a love affair. Mazzucata, doubtless, belonged to a secret society whose sign of death was a Black Carnation, and having betrayed the secrets of such a society was condemned to die. The black flower—an artificial flower, I suppose, since no natural flower is black—was placed in the bouquet to warn her she must die, hence her cry of horror, and before she could throw away the dangerous flowers the explosion took place which killed her. Yes, I am right this time—she was a Nihilist and suffered the death of a traitress."

I could see all this plainly enough, but still it did not solve the riddle as to who threw the flowers. Dallas knew about the Black Carnation, so perhaps he also was a member of the society and had been appointed by the association to carry out the fatal order. Then again, he denied that he had killed Mazzucata and had referred me to Tressinger for information regarding the Black Carnation. Could it be possible that Gilbert had killed her? Was he also a member of this Nihilistic club? Had the carrying out of the death sentence devolved on him? Impossible, for he loved this woman, and no orders, no oaths would have led him to commit such a crime. Love that laughs at locksmiths would also laugh at Nihilism, and had it come to Gilbert's knowledge that Mazzucata had been condemned to death, he would have at once warned her to fly, and not been base enough to carry out the vile commands of a parcel of villains.

All these arguments were truly admirable, but as yet they had no very solid basis of fact. The Nihilistic idea might be true and it might not. All I know was that Dallas had told me to question Tressinger about a Black Carnation, and as this at least was a starting point, I determined to call on Gilbert at once and demand an explanation of this mysterious flower.

In addition to the title and the income, Gilbert possessed a very pleasant little house in Curzon street, admirably fitted up in a bachelor fashion. The late Sir Ralph having been a misogamist, had remained single all his life, and being extremely well off had made himself very comfortable in a selfish male fashion. Indeed, I often envied him that perfect establishment in Curzon street, which would have suited me excellently, for I have the tastes of a duke and the income, if not of a pauper, at least of a city clerk. It is true I have my half pay, and this, in conjunction with a few thousands invested in consols, is all I have to live on. Fortunately, however, I know a great many people and dine out nearly every night, while on other nights I enjoy myself at the O. F. club, which possesses an excellent cook.

The O. F. Club to us who frequent it—the Old Friends' Club to the world, and the Old Fogies' Club to graceless young men—is situated in St. James' street, and is very select. No one under forty years of age is admitted, and we prefer bachelors to married men, so that our club consists of men of experience, you can guess that everything is conducted in the most admirable manner. We are all good judges of wine, of dinners, and of cigars, so that when we insist upon the cellar and the cuisine being perfect, as it is—if it were not, the Old Friends would dissolve, as a desire for good living holds us together. Sometimes a member will introduce a young man into the sacred dining-room of the Old Friends as a treat, but modern youths do not appreciate the triumphs of our Vatel as they should do, and we generally discourage these introductions. I myself on one occasion took Gilbert Tressinger to dine there, and, in contrast to the rest of his compeers, he appreciated our menu so much, and complimented us so highly that he was invited again, and became quite a favorite with our members. In fact, we were very indulgent to him, and were always glad to see his merry face in the smoking room, therefore, when I called in at the Old Friends' on my way to Curzon street, I was not at all astonished to find Gilbert ensconced in a large arm-chair in the writing-room.

(To Be Continued).

The Egg Boycott.

Let the subject not be broached:
I refuse to eat them poached.

'Tis in vain the hen has toiled,
I decline to eat them boiled.

Any weakening I spurn;
From an omelet I turn.

Till the prices downward slide
I shall scorn to eat them fried.

Till they grow more circumspect
Any scramble I reject.

Though I take my stand alone
I shall not receive them thrown.

But it might be—well ahem!
I perhaps may weasel them.

—McLandburgh Wilson in New York Sun.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson IX. March 4, 1914.

Jesus Feeds the Five Thousand.—John 6: 1-21.

Commentary.—I. Many to be fed (vs. 1-4.) 1. After these things—What John now records took place about a year after what is given in the preceding chapter. He does not write with close regard to chronological sequence, but with the main purpose of establishing the doctrine of Christ's deity. Went over the Sea of Galilee—From the west side of the plain near Bethsaida Julias on the northeast shore. Tiberias—This name was applied to this sea later than the name Galilee, having been given to it by the Romans. Two other names, Gennesaret and Chinnereth, are applied to the Sea of Galilee. 2. A great multitude followed him—They followed Jesus, either going across the sea or on foot around the northern end. It is probable that the multitude was made up in part of residents of Galilee and in part of those who were on their way from other districts to attend the Passover at Jerusalem. They had seen his miracles of healing and were interested to see more of his work and hear his teachings. 3. Went up into a mountain—The other evangelists speak of the retirement of Jesus and his disciples into a "desert place" for a period of rest, but they were followed by the crowds. He sat with his disciples—It is natural to suppose that he was giving them instruction. 4. The passover ....was nigh—This verse gives us information regarding the time of year. The Passover was observed early in April.

II. A small supply (vs. 5-9.) 5. Jesus then lifted up his eyes—It was "when the day began to speak of feeding the multitude. A great company—Their interest in the mission and power of Jesus was great. There were five thousand men in the company besides women and children. He "was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd" (Mark 6. 34.) He saith unto Philip—Philip was apparently a matter of fact man (John 14: 8), a quick reckoner and a good man of business, and, therefore, perhaps more ready to rely on his own shrewd calculations than on unseen resources.—Dods. This is suggested as the reason why Jesus put this question to Philip, for it was intended as a test. Whence shall we buy bread—It was a "desert place" at a distance from villages where food could be purchased. 6. To prove him—[illegible] Knew what he would do—The miracle which he was about to perform was different from the miracles of healing and others already wrought, in that it involved a creative act. It was wrought not only for the relief of the multitude, but for the further instruction of the disciples and to confirm them more fully in their faith in his Messiahship. 7. Two hundred pennyworth .... is not sufficient—Philip must have cast his eye over the assembly and quickly made his estimate. The sum mentioned was equivalent to about thirty-two dollars, but it would buy much more then than the same amount would now. This would not buy enough to satisfy the thousands of hungry people. 8. Andrew—One of the first two disciples when Jesus called. He was less calculating and more believing than Philip. 9. Five barley loaves—The loaves were round, flat cakes, about an inch thick. One loaf would not be sufficient for a meal for one person. They were barley loaves, the food of the poorest classes. Jesus had asked, "How many loaves have ye? go and see" (Mark 6. 38), and Andrew brought the answer, but asked, "What are they among so many?" Two small fishes—They were probably dried or pickled fishes to be eaten as a relish with the bread. The supply was too small, for one who reasoned from a merely human standpoint, to consider for such a multitude but the Master accepted and multiplied it.

